Shakespeare's works are a library in themselves. A poor lad, possessing no other book, might, on this single one, make himself a gentleman and a scholar. A poor girl, studying no other volume, might become a lady in heart and soul. Knowledge, refinement, experience in men and manners, are to be gathered from his pages in plenitude and abundance. An illustrious patriot, in exile, learned to plead for the rights of his country, and to urge her wrongs, in a tongue which should interpret his teeming ideas through eloquent words to those nations that might aid her, from diligent study of those nations' poet—Shakespeare. The noble Hungarian—whom nature had gifted with oratorical powers—made them available in urging upon British and American hearts the bleeding cause of his native land, by assiduous culture of Shakespeare's language, taking him as his text-book and sole instructor. Shakespeare's words were the vocabulary, Shakespeare's diction was the rhetoric, which sent forth from the Kutayah prison one of the most accomplished orators that ever addressed hearers in their British mother-tongue. To cite another instance: the most brilliant wit, the most sparkling writer, the most spirited reparteeist of our own day adopted Shakespeare as his chief author while a youth: and to the admiring devotion with which he imbued himself with the poet's productions, may be attributed that fine intellectual strength which gave "Black-eyed Susan" and the "Rent-Day" to the world, from the pen of a lad under age; and the "Chronicles of Clovernook" and "St Giles and St James," as the efforts of his vigorous maturity.

Shakespeare may be taken as a standard for language; it is manly, expressive, and purely English. The revival of many of Shakespeare's words—pronounced by Dr Johnson in his dictionary to be "wholly obsolete"—would be a valuable renovation of the English language. In the present rage for fineries of epithet and fopperies of phraseology, when French terms and Greek titles are so much in vogue, it would be a wholesome return to indigenous form of speech were we to abide by Shakespeare's integrity. Instead of framing new-fangled and alien nomenclature, let us maintain the use of Shakespeare's right and true words, and we shall preserve our language in its purity. His is genuine Saxon English: his classical adoptions are sparingly introduced, and only with strictest propriety to the occasion.

Shakespeare affords a good standard for taste—a standard by which to gauge true taste, and estimate false taste. Much is said about this being "bad taste," and that being "too sentimental;"—and so, people—especially young people, in their honest eagerness—rush into the opposite extreme, and, in striving to escape from these, abjure really tasteful things, and things of pure sentiment. Shakespeare will always remain an accurate test for true feeling and taste. His book of human character forms a grand standard by which men may measure themselves. It will prevent—duly consulted—the rank overgrowth of mercenariness, meanness, selfishness: it will check the hard gallop of the "fast school." It will teach men to beware of believing that sneering at good impulses and holy aspirations constitutes superiority; and will show them that faith in excellence is strength, not weakness.

Shakespeare's works contain a standard for morals. It is not so much that he was the greatest intellect that ever wrote, as that he was the greatest moralist; and not moralist in the way of set moral teaching,—cut-and-dry moralizing—didactic model morality,—but as presenting those grand ethical lessons to be drawn from broad expansive delineating, like the face of nature herself, laying open large legible indices from which commonest sagacity may read truth and wisdom. As one instance of his moral teaching—deducible more than preceptive—witness the influence of his good people upon his bad people;—witness the fine strain of his poetical justice, not merely doling out success to the virtuous, defeat to the vicious, prosperity to the good, punishment to the wicked, meted in strict, yet most unnatural proportion—but that higher moral retribution which instills the unvarying impression: better, far better be those who do well through evil fortune, than be those who do evil though crowned with apparent triumph. The inseparable happiness and preferableness of right, he never fails to inculcate by subtlest truth of demonstration.

Some of the finest brains have thought their best, and uttered their best, upon the subject of Shakespeare's writing; and it seems little less than absolute presumption to offer an additional remark. Yet so imperative is the desire to express—however consciously inadequate the power—a portion of that grateful reverence and admiration which fills the heart in thinking of his transcendent excellence, that, at all risks, the attempt must be made. It has been well said:—"We are glad to listen to every one who has travelled through the kingdoms of Shakespeare;" and perhaps the long and loving denizenship which it has been our privilege to enjoy in his glorious realm,—naturalized there, and permitted to become humble but diligent labourers on his rich soil—gives us some claim to the honour of yielding homage, and bearing testimony to our "liege's sovereignty." One of us may be allowed to take pride in the thought that she was the first of his female subjects selected to edit his works; and it is one of the myriad delights we owe to him, that she should be the woman upon whom so great a distinction was conferred.

No other theme in literature will bear such constant reverting to without satiety, no other theme will bear recurring to at all seasons without untimeliness; no other theme will endure allusion to upon all topics with so little fear of irrelevance. Shakespeare is ever welcome, for he is ever fresh and new; as he is ever welcome, because he is pertinent, familiar, home-telling.

It has been resolved that the present edition of his works shall have no notes. The reader is to enjoy the comfort of reading Shakespeare's text undisturbed by comment; and even uninterrupted by those marks of (a) (b) (c) or (1) (2) (3) which occur in annotated editions. The squabbles of commentators will be escaped from; the tedium of discussion will be avoided. Other editions may be consulted for every variety of information, and for reference; but this is intended for purely enjoyable reading—Shakespeare's book itself, and nothing else.
To this end, the utmost pains have been taken to collate the several readings adopted by the best authorities; to carefully weigh their reasons for adopting them, while abiding by or rejecting the sanction of the original copies where these are obviously misprinted; to examine every doubtful or disputed passage; to scrutinize line by line, and word for word, every iota of the work, so as to give the pure text of Shakespeare as far as our judgment and long study of him enable us to discern what it really is. The absence of explanatory notes will afford no opportunity of giving our reasons for the various decisions arrived at; but the reader may rest assured that no decision will have been made without conscientious deliberation, at the same time that he is spared perusal of the Editors' debated motives. There being neither note nor commentary to mark the editorial labour, will serve merely to save the reader's toil, while that of the Editors shall be none the less for being unseen. As a means of supplying the needful information upon words and phrases of antique usage, occurring in the text, or upon bygone customs and manners therein alluded to,—a Glossary is appended, with references of Act and Scene to each passage; which will afford a condensed compendium of such requisite explanation as is usually contained in diffuse notes. The comfort of having interpretative help snugly packed away in a corner by itself, for use only when absolutely wanted, can be well appreciated by those who have suffered from the perpetual worry of foot-notes, or the torment of notes that are frequently mere vehicles for abuse, spite, and arrogance. Many of these seem written for the sole purpose—not of farthering a knowledge of Shakespeare, or ascertaining his text, but,—of proving that other editors are wholly wrong. When we read the scorn that is heaped on their hapless brethren by these writers, the only conclusion is, that they are actuated by malice or envy; and we feel tempted to wonder that they should have learned no better lesson from the teaching of a poet who was magnanimity itself.

When we feel regret at the meagreness of the fact-matter to be gathered respecting Shakespeare's life, we must remember what he himself says in bequeathing us his book:—"My spirit is thine, the better part of me." We must accept this "better part of him" as his best and truest relic. He lives to us still, and for ever, in his works. To know that he was born in that sweet English village; that he went to the metropolis, and earned his fame unto all time, as well as a fortune enabling him to purchase a house and garden in his own native place; that he had the sense and taste to retire thither; that he lived there in the respect and esteem of his neighbours; that his honoured remains lie enshrined in the quiet village church on the banks of his own river Avon, with its silver stream and green trees, holy, bland-shining, and tranquil, as his own spirit,—seems fully enough to know of one of the greatest as well as simplest of God's human beings. After reading all that research has collected respecting his career, we feel that the doubt existing in every particular leaves us unsatisfied, and that on the whole we scarce want these vague records. On the other hand,—every, the minutest particular relative to him being precious,—men have been content to catch at even apocryphal anecdotes, such as the deer-stealing, the horse-holding, the thousand pounds given by the Earl of Southampton to the poet, &c., rather than possess no traces of Shakespeare's existence upon earth. With zealous care have these scattered accounts and dubious circumstances been accumulated, sifted and garnered by venerating editors, and embodied in such biographical form as their scanty nature would allow; while we are compelled to appease our craving to know more by again reflecting that we have the better part of him—his spirit—his genius—his intellect—his own immortal book.

But, indeed, we possess much, fitly considered, in the few ascertained facts of Shakespeare's life;* they suffice to show us that he attained a degree of literary renown and social repute rarely achieved by a man of his station at that period; and, moreover, they serve to manifest that he was precisely the being whom circumstances happily combined to mould as well as to produce. He was no less made a genius than born a genius, by the events that providentially succeeded to his original creation. His birth was propitious; (he was born on the 23d April, St George's day,—the patron saint of England;) it was of good parentage—"good" in the widest sense of the large-embracing word; it took place in a lovely, quiet village, where pure air, simple habits, free exercise, nurtured the infant frame. His breeding was propitious; country-bred, so long as out-door sports and childish pursuits were best for boyish need, and for cultivating innocent affections and home associations,—town-bred, when youthful manhood demanded more active sphere for mental as well as moral energies. We see him,—with the vision lent us by these few recorded facts, together with what traces may be gathered from his own writings,—fidgeting at his mother's knee, like the little Mamilius beside Hermione, with his child's restlessness and eager eyes upturned towards her face, telling one of those wondrous Winter tales that bewitched his young imagination even then; and which, in his after-telling, became unfading summer stories for mankind: or led by Mary Shakespeare's hand—as little (namesake) William, by Mistress Page's—to school, where Sir Hugh Evans, in the living prototype shape of Thomas Jenkins, (master of the Stratford Grammar-school,) stood to question him of those "articles" which "be thus declined," &c., and which, in their faulty repetition, with subsequent, yet hardly more guilty lapse, brought forth the Jonsonian fling at the "little Latin and less Greek."

There are three years in Shakespeare's life, 1579, 1580, and 1581, when he was a youth of fifteen, sixteen, and seventeen years of age, which admit of the possibility that he was a student at one of the universities,—more probably Oxford,—and subsequently at one of the Inns of Court. The arguments in favour of this supposition are, his classical knowledge and tastes, his mythological colouring and allusions, more particularly as evinced in his earlier-written plays, where they appear with just so much tincture of scholarly mannerism as might be supposed to mark the productions of a young collegian fresh from the learned haunts where he had "walked gowned." The "Two Gentlemen of Verona," with its prodigality of young-man friendship,—the "Comedy of Errors," with its Plautus plot and origin,—the "Love's Labour's Lost," with its revelry in pedantic affectations and gentlemanly gallantries,—seem to be the very plays for first essays in student-authorship. The "Venus and Adonis"—professedly "the first heir of his invention"—and the "Lucrece," bear palpable tokens of college elegance and predilection, both in story and in treatment. The air of niceness and stiffness almost peculiar to the schools invests these efforts of his youthful genius with almost unmistakable signs of having been written by a schoolman. Then, his

* Collected into a chronological table, and subjoined; for the convenience of referring, at a glance, to either or all of them in corroboration of these remarks upon Shakespeare's career. This table has been chiefly compiled from the "Life" by Mr Payne Collier—alltogether the best biography of the poet that has been produced.
familiar acquaintance with college terms and usages, makes for the conclusion that he had enjoyed the privileges of a university education. The arguments against it are, that no record has yet been found to exist at either Oxford or Cambridge of such being the case; whereas, had they ever numbered such a member among their body, the fact could hardly have failed to be well known; and another point that militates against the assumption is, that John Shakespeare’s circumstances during those three years were less prosperous, and therefore the sum requisite for sending his son to college, and maintaining him there, was not likely to have been at command. Still William Shakespeare may have been a scholar upon the foundation,—a sizer, or servitor,—in which case, his collegiateship would have been no expense to the father. There is a passage in the second part of “Henry IV.” which shows how sending a young man to one of the Inns of Court was a customary sequent step to sending him to college. Justice Shallow says:—

“I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar:
he is at Oxford still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shal. He must then to the Inns of Court shortly.”

So strong was our impression that Shakespeare must have been a student at Oxford, and afterwards kept terms at one of the Inns of Court, that we besought some friends to interest themselves in the prosecution of inquiries tending to produce evidence on this point; but hitherto research has proved unavailing. The Reverend N. J. Halpin entertained a similar persuasion respecting Shakespeare’s having been a collegian; supporting it by a quotation from a tract entitled “Polimanteia;” wherein England addresses “her three Daughters, Cambridge, Oxford, Inns of Court,” &c., and which contains a marginal mention of Shakespeare, as if he were among those of their offspring to be proudly enumerated. Were the fact to be established that he had been a law-student, sufficient clue would be obtained to the marvellous intimacy which Shakespeare has manifested with legal terms, his frequent adoption of them in illustration, and his curiously technical knowledge of their form and force; thereby giving rise to the belief that he had at one time served in an office as an attorney’s clerk. Several attempts have been made to substantiate this belief; which probably originated with a supposed sneering allusion to Shakespeare in a contemporary assertion by Thomas Nash, that “Hamlet” was written by a person who had followed “the trade of noverint,” meaning a scrivener or lawyer’s clerk, and borne out by other appearances of evidence. The Thomas Greene who acted as clerk of the corporation in Shakespeare’s native town, and was sent up to London on parliamentary business by them in 1614, was apparently son to an attorney of Stratford-upon-Avon, whose burial is recorded in the parish register there, thus:—“Thomas Greene, alias Shakespeare, March 6, 1596.” Thomas Greene, the younger, emissary from Stratford, who wrote the note in 1614, mentions his townsman in these words:—“My cosen Shakespeare comyng yesterday, I went to see him, how he did.” What was the relationship between the Greenes and the Poet, which gave the father a right to his registered “alias,” and authorised the son in using the title “cousin,” is unknown; it may have been a mere nominal kinship, some playful “adoptious” cousinship, denoting the intimate terms of friendship which united the two families in a closeness like that of consanguinity; but it serves to show Shakespeare’s near connexion with professional lawyers, which alone would suffice to account for his legal knowledge. With such faculties as his, an occasional hour in Greene's office, conversing gaily,—idly, it might seem, with his young "cousin" on what mainly interested the attorney aspirant, would endow him with a degree of proficiency that would demand of another long and studious application. Nevertheless, it is by no means impossible that he may have pursued the legal profession with a view to emolument, in the same way that he may have been assistant-master, or usher, at the grammar-school, as a means of gaining a livelihood, when it became absolutely necessary that he should earn something towards his own support. Aubrey's manuscript, in the Ashmolean Museum, states that, "in his younger years Shakespeare had been a schoolmaster in the country;" and, if so, it was in all probability at the period when his father's diminished income, together with his own youthful act of independence in taking a wife, rendered some source of gain absolutely indispensable.

Shakespeare's early marriage,—he was but eighteen,—in all its circumstances, affords a signal proof of his poetic and ardent temperament. There exists a tradition that Anne Hathaway was very beautiful; however that may be, she was assuredly so in his eyes. She was in the full bloom of womanhood,—five-and-twenty,—the very period of ripened charms and developed character to win a lad's devoted admiration. From the uniformly noble way in which Shakespeare drew the amply character, we may feel certain of the esteem as well as affection with which his own wife had inspired him; and the advantage in generosity which he has always assigned to women over men when drawing them in their mutual relations with regard to love, gives us excellent warrant for supposing that he had had reason to know this truth respecting her sex from the mother of his children. The very slenderness of what is known concerning her is one tacit but significant proof of the worth of Shakespeare's wife, and of the integrity of the feeling which bound him to her,—for those women of whom least is heard, are oftentimes the best of their sex,—while the Poet's silence respecting his affection, witnesses its wealth, by his own lines—

"That love is merchandize'd, whose rich esteeming
The owner's tongue doth publish everywhere."

In the Sonnets—which afford so remarkable a specimen of an autobiographical outpouring, where nothing is told of circumstance or event, but where the internal nature of the man himself is strikingly revealed, where the artist-soul,—in its struggles of alternate feeling, its humility of conscious imperfection with regality of conscious power, its dejected sense of human frailty with towering aspirations, its noble candours, its affected generosities, its passionate homage, its self-confession,—stands bare to view, while no jot of incident is related:—in these sonnets may be traced tokens that Shakespeare could fully rely on the forbearance of his wife, and upon the unpreachful loving reception which she had ever ready for her Poet-husband. Were a crowning testimony wanting, of the warm attachment between Shakespeare and the woman who was the bride of his youth, as well as the wife to whom he constantly returned amid the excitement of his metropolitan life, it would be amply furnished in the nature of the bequest he left her in his will. The sacredness of the sentiment that united them is mute but eloquently expressed in that simple legacy. Things that seem all but meaningless to the eyes of lookers-on are full of dearest intention to married lovers.

It was when Shakespeare had been a husband but bare four years, that, finding himself the father of three children, the means of his parents less prosperous, and his family demanding more lucrative exertion on his part than his native town afforded scope for, that he resolved to go up to London and seek employment there. Many circumstances concurred to render this step one of promising prospect. His acquaintance with the members of those companies of actors who had frequently performed at Stratford,—several of whom were natives of Warwickshire,—and his own dominant tastes for poetry and the theatre, led him to adopt this course, as offering an immediate source of profitable as well as delightful occupation. With his MS. poems, and a few plays already written, besides sketches and floating plans of others innumerable, we behold Shakespeare setting forth—in homely story-book phrase—"to seek his fortune." And what a fortune! One surpassing all that has been recorded of wandering princes or fairy heroes. He achieved the fortune of commanding men's admiring fealty to the end of time, and becoming lord of a boundless realm that shall never know decay or decadence.

It is pleasant to observe how the loving reminiscences of his native village clung perpetually to him, softening and ameliorating with their gentle rural influence the harder urban polishings and experiences. We find him giving the names of neighbour villagers—Fluellen, Bardolph, Audrey—to certain of his written character creations. Anne was the name of one of his sisters, as well as his wife's name; and how well it becomes the pretty yeoman's daughter—"Sweet Anne Page!" His money-help to his parents; his obtaining a grant of arms for his father; his solicitude to support the family-name, to advance its social position and privilege to rank with the gentry, at a time when the profession of actor was held to be incompatible with claims to the title of "Gentleman;" his constant investment of his well-earned gains in landed property on the spot of his birth,—all demonstrate the honourable ambition and fond home-attachment of Shakespeare's nature. In their old age, he brought his father and mother to share the dwelling ("New Place") which his genius had enabled him to purchase; he associated one brother (Edmund) with him in his profitable town avocations; and to another (Gilbert) he intrusted the management of his pecuniary affairs in their native place: all that Shakespeare did in this respect, serves to vindicate the noble privileges attained by well-earned money, and to rescue it from the vulgar supposition of its being a source of low and degrading consideration. Prudence in money-matters gives the right and the ability to indulge in a profuse generosity. He was as practical and provident, as he was poetical, and admirably showed how false is the notion, that the greatest genius is "irregular"—in any way. He was business-like, orderly, and methodical; and, how truly these are consistent with bounty, is avouched in the letter extant (the only one addressed to him known to be in existence) from Richard Quiney, applying to the Poet for a loan of L.30, (then equal to about L.150 of sterling money now,) showing that his character stood well for liberality, in the likelihood entertained of a favourable reply—a belief confirmed by the result. While maintaining these strong links of sentiment with his native Stratford, he entered into all the vicissitudes of London life no less strenuously. It is this mingling of country charm with metropolitan vigour and refinement throughout his sojourn upon earth that so grandly concurred to make Shakespeare the consummately-perfected genius that he was born to be. At the same time that he continued to visit Stratford regularly every year, he freely led a town life while in town. He enjoyed royal favour, had court popularity, possessed the friendship of the worthiest and most distinguished noblemen, was honoured among his brother wits and writers, and was beloved by his fellow-actors. Pre-impresed with the beautiful and pure-joyed images of his country boyhood, he spent his prime of manly reflection amid scenes of intellectual culture and exercise. Everything afforded food to his observation, and faculty for turning it to immortal advantage. His keen perception beheld at once what others gather by studious and lengthened examination. His comradeship with actors—who are a genial, cheerful people—was conducive to good; his intimacies with men of rank, gave ease and familiarity of admission to high-bred associations: his frequenting the company of author-friends was promotive of rapid interchange and expression of thought. How vividly is Shakespeare's manner painted to us by those fervent words of Ben Jonson, [ever blessed be his memory for putting them down for posterity!] "I loved the man, and do honour his memory (on this side idolatry) as much as any. He was indeed honest, and of an open and free nature; had an excellent fancy, brave notions, and gentle expressions, wherein he flowed with that facility, that sometimes it was necessary he should be stopped." What a complete picture of our Poet's fertile outpouring of thought in speech is conveyed in that last sentence! And think of "stopping" him! "Stopping" Shakespeare while he talked!! It precisely confirms the description given by Fuller of the two men, Shakespeare and Ben Jonson, in their "witcombats:" "which two," he says, "I behold like a Spanish great galleon, and an English man-of-war. Master Jonson, like the former, was built far higher in learning; solid, but slow in his performances. Shakespeare, with the English man-of-war, lesser in bulk, but lighter in sailing, could turn with all tides, tack about, and take advantage of all winds, by the quickness of his wit and invention." These concentrated accounts—containing so much in so small space—give us ample information of the social bearing of Shakespeare.

With regard to his acting powers, we can hardly have better pledge than the enthusiastically asserted belief of such a man as Coleridge; who said:—"It is my persuasion—indeed my firm conviction—so firm that nothing can shake it—the rising of Shakespeare's spirit from the grave modestly confessing his own deficiencies could not alter my opinion—that Shakespeare, in the best sense of the word, was a very great actor; nothing can exceed the judgment he displays upon that subject. He may not have had the physical advantages of Burbage or Field; but they would never have become what they were without his most able and sagacious instructions; and what would either of them have been without Shakespeare's plays? Great dramatists make great actors. But looking at him merely as a performer, I am certain that he was greater as Adam, in As You Like It, than Burbage as Hamlet or Richard III. Think of the scene between him and Orlando; and think again, that the actor of that part had to carry the author of that play in his arms! Think of having had Shakespeare in one's arms! It is worth having died two hundred years ago to have heard Shakespeare deliver a single line. He must have been a great actor." We heartily subscribe to this "absolute must," and then, what more than music must have been Shakespeare's voice, as the Ghost in Hamlet! It thrills the soul only to think of the tones in which he doubtless uttered those accents from the grave of a dead king and father. Conceived by his brain, breathed by his lips, how ineffably sublime must they have been!

No less strong is our impression of the mode in which Shakespeare composed. Not only when he was seated, with paper before him, and pen in hand, but while he was journeying, as he went along, on horseback, passing through the open air, in his visits to his native place and back, we behold him revolving the thoughts which became pages. When strolling through the green lanes of Stratford, or pleasant Shottery, by Avon's banks, or along the wooded glades of Charlecote, he may have meditated those sylvan beauties that illumine the "Midsummer Night's Dream," or "As You Like It;" (in the latter play he has enshrined his mother's maiden name of "Arden," giving it to the forest which is the beau-ideal of poetical forests; the old British word, "Arden" signified "woodiness;") or when treading the mazes of London streets, he might have mused upon those great labyrinths of human passion, the throbbing heart of Lear, the "betossed soul" of Romeo, or the chaos of Othello's agony. Minds like Shakespeare's work spontaneously, and wait not for the formality of mechanical appliances. Many were the scenes on the road, between Middlesex and Warwickshire,—picturesque or grotesque, graceful or homely, pathetic or humorous,—that suggested hints to the poet's fancy, and set it working. At the Crown Inn, Oxford, where we are told he halted, when travelling between London and Stratford, he surely beheld, by lamplight, just such a group of carriers as figure in the Rochester Inn-yard of "Henry IV.," Part I.; which he there and then recorded in his brain, to be transferred to paper at leisure, with its accompaniment of "Charles's wain over the new stack of chimneys," and the reminiscence of "Robin Ostler, who never joyed since the price of oats rose."

His retirement into the country, to enjoy the remainder of his life with his family in his native place, at a period when men are usually still intent upon the pursuit of wealth and fame, gives another proof of Shakespeare's superior sense and feeling. He enjoyed the respect and liking of his neighbours, with whom he lived in friendly intercourse; and the monumental bust which surmounts his tomb in the chancel of Stratford-upon-Avon church, witnessing the honour in which his memory was held at his birth-place, gives us an excellent representation of him as he must have appeared at this epoch of retired ease. The bland, expansive forehead, the eyes full of mingled thought and cheerfulness, the rounded cheeks, the tranquil-smiling mouth, the person full, manly, and reposeful, combine to give a delightful embodiment of the poet in his quiet, enjoying mood. The portrait by Droeshout (prefixed to the folio 1623, and forming the frontispiece to this edition) presents him to our view at the height of his mental activity. The face is full of blended spirit and sweetness, of intellectual vigour and sensibility; while the person is spare and close-knit, as if in the eagerness and impulse of energetic purpose. It thoroughly responds to our impression of Shakespeare, the dramatist and actor. The portrait we possess in the monumental bust has something of genial with exalted, that is unspeakably encouraging to look upon,—it is the impersonation of England's greatest genius in simple manly serenity of self-earned comfort.

The way in which Shakespeare drew up his will and saw his second daughter's marriage solemnized within a short time previous to his death, again bears testimony to the poet's wise and provident conduct. His calm and prudence in thus preparing for death, illustrates his own fine words: "If it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all." Finally, he closed his mortal existence on the same day which saw its commencement. And here again, his very words singularly pre-herald his own appointed course. It is as if, in a strain of inspired prescience, he had penned them:
"This day I breathed first; time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end;
My life is run his compass."

The only thing we could have wished Shakespeare to have done differently, of all that he did do, was, that he should have devoted the last few years of his life, his period of retired leisure, to the editing of his own works.* What a priceless edition would that have been! Instead of which, his Dramas were left at the Globe Theatre when he quitted London; they were playhouse copies—in manuscript—probably in separate parts, for actors' use; and a few of them found their way into print, by single plays, published in quarto, filched by unscrupulous booksellers, or purloined for them—as slovenly brought forth as unfairly procured.

The first appearance of Shakespeare's plays, in a collected form, was the folio edition of 1623, given to the world by Heminge and Condell, his fellow-actors, seven years after the poet's death. They were scarcely fitted to be editors, inasmuch as they allowed the publication to go forth unrevised, so that the most glaring misprints stand uncorrected; and the worst of this neglect is, that some of these typographical errors are so wildly blundering, as to throw at fault the most discriminating judges in their attempts to guess at Shakespeare's originally-written words or phrases. Nevertheless, defective as this first edition is, we cannot be too grateful for it, when we reflect upon the irreparable loss the world would have sustained had it never appeared at all. It at least preserved in an assembled volume those scattered treasures which lay dispersed in stray manuscript sheets, and a few single quarto copies; and it formed a source where diligence and patient investigation might pursue their labours with best chance of discovering Shakespeare's whole wealth of brain-production. Three editions, repetitions of the first, in folio, were successively published in 1632, 1664, and 1685; and at the commencement of the century following the one in which Shakespeare died, Nicholas Rowe brought out two successive editions in the years 1709 and 1714, with "Some Account of the Life of William Shakespeare" accompanying each. Here are first collected such traditionary anecdotes and known particulars as could be gleaned concerning the dramatist; and ample acknowledgment is due to these earlier investigators, Rowe and his followers, since much that seems at present superfluous, as already known, was then new information, owed to their diligence. Each fact, or legend, would have become more and more difficult to be traced as time went on; while thus brought together, they admit of inquiry, and can either be accredited or rejected at pleasure. The contested points, too, of meaning and interpretation, with which the notes of early editors abound, while dealing in mere word-hunting, serve to help clearer and larger perceptions into forming veritable conclusions. While we smile at the occasional bowings and compliments to each other of the variorum editors, and their restless desire to claim the epithet "ingenious," we quietly avail ourselves of their more sensible suggestions, and derive what solid assistance we may from them in our search for truth. When we marvel at the wrath and venom, the almost personal acrimony of their bickerings over a disputed word, or a conjectural reading, we remember that those very animosities are one sort of tribute to Shakespeare's pre-eminence,—from persons of irritable temper or vehement nature, who can show their partiality in no other way than by violence of defence.

* As an elucidation of Shakespeare's possible motive in neglecting to edit his own plays, may be cited a passage from Thomas Heywood's preface to "The English Traveller." After stating that this tragi-comedy is one among two hundred and twenty in which he had "either an entire hand, or at the least a main finger," (which testifies the then prevailing custom of dramatic authors adding to or altering the productions of others,) Heywood explains why his plays have not been collectively printed; and says, "One reason is, that many of them, by shifting and changing of companies, have been negligently lost. Others of them are still retained in the hands of some actors, who think it against their peculiar profit to have them come in print; and a third, that it never was any great ambition in me to be in this kind voluminously read."

The impugners of Shakespeare have this vast advantage: their reprehensions stand as finger-posts for ground of admiration. It may with tolerable safety be concluded, that wherever they blame, they afford a clue to some peculiar merit. When they point out a defect, follow the hint, and you are pretty sure to discover a beauty. When they censure Shakespeare's blunders, prepare to observe fresh charms in the poet that have never before struck you. The oft-repeated fallacy, for instance, relative to Shakespeare's want of learning, has opened the way to discernment of his stores of knowledge; and the cuckoo-song of his disregard of the unities led to the discovery of his improved system of unity.

If Shakespeare's impugners have their value, his partizans have sometimes been to be deprecated. The zeal with which they have vindicated him has occasionally led them into the strangest and most unjust admissions. They take up curiously-based grounds of defence, and make the awkwardest and unfairest allowances. They err from want of judgment, not from ill intention; or we might be inclined to say to them, on behalf of Shakespeare, as Sir Peter Teazle says, "When I tell you, Mrs Candour, that the lady they are abusing is a particular friend of mine, I hope you'll not take her part." We cannot believe Mrs Montague to have been actuated by Mrs Candour's motives, when she took the part of Shakespeare against Crabtree Voltaire; then how else, but from want of judgment, can we account for her saying of Shakespeare's plots, "It must be allowed that they are often exceptionable;"—or of his beauties, as a set-off against his assumed defects, "Thus it is that Shakespeare redeems the nonsense, the indecorums, the irregularities of his plays!" It would be well if, upon such occasions, these rash allowers could be called to account, as they do intemperate speakers in Parliament, by forcing them to "Name! name!"

Dr Johnson, in that extraordinary compound of turgid contradictions, his "Preface to Shakespeare's Works," while admitting that "the stream of time, which is continually washing the dissoluble fabrics of other poets, passes without injury by the adaman of Shakespeare," assures us that "in tragedy he often writes with great appearance of toil and study, what is written at last with little felicity;" adding, "in his tragic scenes there is always something wanting." What a pity he had not told us what that "something" was. Was it the "something" that is to be found in "Irene!"—He goes on to inform us that Shakespeare "sacrifices virtue to convenience, and is so much more careful to please than to instruct, that he seems to write without any moral purpose." (!) It really looks like irony where he observes—"Whenever he solicits his invention, or strains his faculties, the offspring of his throes is tumour, meanness, tediousness, and obscurity." (!) And again—"When he endeavoured, like other tragic writers, to catch opportunities of amplification, and instead of inquiring what the occasion demanded, to show how much his stores of knowledge could supply, he seldom escapes without the pity or resentment of the reader." (!) It is lamentable to see a man of Johnson's undoubted power so mistaken, when writing upon a genius he could not appreciate. A writer of conventional form and rule like Johnson could no more comprehend the nobly bold and original forms and rules of an author like Shakespeare, than he could himself conceive them. This incapacity for compassing the altitudes and sounding the depths of a poet like Shakespeare, rendered Johnson, if not dishonest, at least uncandid—which is a sort of fraud, or misprision of truth, that amounts to dishonesty in a critic. He is guilty of unfairness; showing partiality where his sympathies incline him, and prejudice where his antipathies warp him. Witness his critical injustice to Milton, whom he hated as a republican, in addition to not being able properly to estimate him as a poet. This sense of inability to value such transcendent geniuses as Shakespeare's and Milton's ariegh, goads a critic like Johnson into undervaluing them in token of his superior judgment.

Johnson's edition of Shakespeare had been preceded by Pope's, Theobald's, Hamburger's and Warburton's; and was succeeded by Steevens's, Capell's, Reed's, and others, within the eighteenth century. Pope's was the first that appeared with annotations, explanatory and emendatory; the office of emendator being exercised with so much licence as to make the text a wide departure from that of the original folios. Pope's preface is an elegant piece of writing, but in its very first paragraph it makes allusion twice to Shakespeare's "faults"; and, after awarding the highest praise for intuitive and innate powers, remarks—"It must be owned that, with all these great excellences, he has also as great defects; and that as he has certainly written better, so he has perhaps written worse, than any other." (!)

It would be amusing to see all the censure cast upon Shakespeare by his champions; it could hardly be surpassed, in comprehensive force, by the accusations of his maligers. The fact is, these pseudo-champions have but half faith in him; they first assume certain premises not proved, and then they attempt to argue upon them, and vainly seek to reconcile irreconcilable points. For instance, Pope says—"His sentiments are not only in general the most pertinent and judicious upon every subject; but, by a talent very peculiar, something between penetration and felicity, he hits upon that particular point on which the bent of each argument turns, or the force of each motive depends. This is perfectly amazing, from a man of no education or experience in those great and public scenes of life which are usually the subject of his thoughts." But why, because the precise traces of Shakespeare's educational course and social advantages happen not to be known, must we therefore assume that he had neither? Pope, taking this for granted, is compelled into the vague attribution of a "talent very peculiar, something between penetration and felicity;" and accounts for his "perfectly amazing success," by saying that he seemed to "have looked through human nature at one glance." This is disposing of his mind's force as hap-hazard,—a kind of hit-or-miss good fortune; and making out his "so potent art" to be a trick of legerdemain.

Certain it is, that people are apt to reason of Shakespeare's powers as of other writers' powers,—forgetting that he had genius "richer than all his tribe." When they say that it was a wonder he could depict so learnedly, having so little learning, they should remember (setting apart the question of his scholastic acquirements) that he knew of his own knowledge, what other men can never know; that his insight was beyond reasoning upon from ordinary rule and measure, inasmuch as in itself it exceeded all usual limit of human faculty.—When, too, critics complain that Shakespeare had no system, that he wanted method, and that he violated laws of art, they should perceive that he does not follow their preconceived ideas of all these things, but that, in his wealth of invention, he invented system, method, and laws of his own, and upon these he worked. Shakespeare was an incarnation of creative power; he not only created a world of beings, their sphere of existence and action, but created the ordination and framework by which they lived and moved true to nature herself.

As an instance of his substituting his own admirable devices for the clumsier ones of previous dramatic legislators, see how he but occasionally introduces set choruses to animadvert upon the passing pageant; instead of which, in order to explain the argument, to note the progress of time, to mark the state of popular feeling, or other accompanying circumstances needful to be borne in mind by the spectator, he often gives short scenes, that naturally and unformally announce these points, while subtly impressing them on the minds of the audience or reader. Witness that scene in "Richard III.," the third in the second Act, where two citizens meeting are joined by another, and the three talking together of current events, bring these easily, yet forcibly, to the apprehension of the looker-on. The short scene in the "Merchant of Venice,"—ordinarily omitted in the acting, (so little perception of the dramatist's general intention have the players shown!)* where Shylock follows his victim through the streets, bidding the gaoler look to him; how well it serves to keep in mind the Jew's unrelenting malice, his persecution of the imprisoned merchant fallen within his power, and to sustain the interest as well as to time the progress of the drama. The character and soliloquies of Faulconbridge, in the play of "King John," serve the purpose of a moral chorus throughout; while the three gentlemen in "Henry VIII.," and the two young lords in "All's Well that Ends Well," are used by the dramatist with the same artistic intention.

One of Shakespeare's greatest powers in drawing character is his might of gradual development. Most writers describe moral growth too abruptly. In this one point lay the secret of much of Shakespeare's wondrous art. Another, is his force in un-stated effects, subtly conveyed to the spectator's mind; he causes us to feel, instead of bidding us feel. Another, is his miraculous gift in writing silence. This seems paradoxical unto absurdity; but if the reader will carefully observe the ingenuity with which the silence of such characters as Virgilia, Celia, Hermione, and others, is indicated, they will perceive that this dramatist's skill in writing silence is among his most extraordinary powers. In his hands, silence becomes one of the most eloquent of interpreters; it reveals the presence of the beating heart, the unspeakable emotions that surge there,—suspense, agitation, or the muffled throbs of mute agony. Even in comic instances, see how irresistibly humorous Shakespeare has made silence; as in Goodman Dull, and Justice Shallow’s delectably dumb cousin, Master Silence himself—only moved to speech by drunken inspiration.

* This scene was retained by Mr Macready, who, during his management, promoted the due representation of Shakespeare's plays on the stage, with a spirit and good taste that laid the foundation of much that is at present effected in the way of appropriately producing his dramas. Witness the revivals of "King Lear," "Richard III.," "The Tempest," "As You Like It," "Henry V.," "King John," and others, where not only the text was correctly given, and his own careful acting evinced William Macready's respect for the intellectual supremacy of the dramatist; but where the artistic powers of a Clarkson Stanfield were enlisted, together with all the scenic splendours usually lavished on an Easter piece or a Christmas pantomime, in order to lead popular taste into fuller appreciation of the poet's works.

One of the strongest proofs—were proof wanting—of Shakespeare’s intrinsic excellence, is that the editions of his works have multiplied with each successive century; and that in proportion with the number of his critics, has been their increased praise. The better he is understood, the more highly will he be rated; the better he is known, the more dearly will he be loved. During the present century, editors have brought out versions in every variety of size and shape, and distinguished by every possible care in collating, printing, and publishing. The names of Campbell, Collier, Dyce, Halliwell, Hudson, Knight, Singer, Staunton, and Verplank, stand pre-eminent as editors of Shakespeare. Armitage Brown, Coleridge, Halpin, Hazlitt, Mrs Jameson, Charles Lamb, Maurice Morgan, B. W. Proctor, (Barr Cornwell,) and Professor Wilson, have exercised their critical faculty in finest appreciation of the poet’s transcendent beauties. The brothers Schlegel, Wieland, Eschenburg, Lessing, Voss, Herder, Schiller, Goethe, Tieck, and Ulrici, have proved Germany’s estimation of our dramatist; Peter Foersom, in his devotion to Shakespeare, persevering, when he earned scarcely dry bread by translating his plays,—proclaimed at least one Danish heart’s veneration for the author of “Hamlet.” The author of “Doctor Antonio” spoke an eloquent word on behalf of Italy’s holding that “Shakespeare is not the poet of any age or country, but of mankind,”—while Dumas, Guizot, Le Tourneur, Villemain, and Victor Hugo, have redeemed France from the reproach which Voltaire’s prejudiced view of Shakespeare’s genius left upon their country. The testimony borne by Alexandre Dumas to our great dramatist’s merits is characteristically vehement; it is in his essay entitled, “How I Became a Dramatic Author,” and runs thus:—“I read, I devoured the foreign drama, and I found that in the dramatic world all emanated from Shakespeare, as in the actual world all emanates from the sun; that none could compare with him, for that he was as dramatic as Corneille, as comic as Molière, as original as Calderon, as reflective as Goethe, as passionate as Schiller. I found that his works, in themselves, contained as many types as the works of all the others put together.”

Victor Hugo also awards the palm of pre-eminence to Shakespeare in these words:

“The dramatic poet’s aim—whatever otherwise may form the amount of his ideas on Art—should always be, above all, to seek the Great, like Corneille, or the True, like Molière; or still better—and this is the highest summit to which genius can soar—to attain at once the Great and the True, the Great in the True, the True in the Great, like Shakespeare. It was given to Shakespeare—and it is that which causes the sovereignty of his genius—to reconcile, to unite, to amalgamate unceasingly in his productions these two qualities—Truth and Greatness; qualities which are almost opposed, or, at the least, so distinct, that the defect of each one constitutes the reverse of the other. The rock-ahead of Truth, is the Little; the rock-ahead of Greatness, is the False. In all the works of Shakespeare, there is Greatness which is True, and Truth which is Great.”

This is expressed with the antithetical play, akin to wit, which is a feature in French definition; and it is also characteristically French in its creed—that Truth in Art is perilously near to Littleness. This was the belief which so long blinded Frenchmen to Shakespeare's supremacy; but they are gaining clearer insight into the fallacy of their former idea,—that naturalness compromises sublimity, and that unadorned Truth is poor, bare, and small.

The observations of another French writer, Villemain, convey amusingly this sense of Shakespeare's dangerous approximation to the ungentilities of truth. Speaking of the American people, he says:—"The popular good sense of these men, so industrious and so occupied, seizes with ardour the profound thoughts, the sagacious maxims with which Shakespeare is filled; his gigantic images please minds accustomed to the most magnificent spectacles of nature, and the immensity of the forests and rivers of the New World. His rudeness and inequality, his strange familiarities, offend not a society which is formed of so many different elements, which knows neither an aristocracy nor a court, and which has rather the strength and arms of civilisation than its elegance and politeness." The same idea is broached with characteristic British bluntness, as contrasted with French conventional refinement, in Morgann's admirable "Essay on the Character of Falstaff," where he says:—"When the hand of time shall have brushed off his present editors and commentators, and when the very name of Voltaire, and even the memory of the language in which he has written, shall be no more, the Apalachian mountains, the banks of the Ohio, and the plains of Sciotia shall resound with the accents of this 'barbarian.'"

It is because Voltaire's successors have come to reverse his verdict upon our poet's genius, and because it is interesting to note the improved appreciation of Shakespeare in France, that we have taken pleasure in quoting chiefly French opinions upon his transcendent merit. Another reason has influenced us in rather citing from French critics than from those who have hitherto been esteemed his best trainers—the Germans. The chief among these latter—Augustus Schlegel—has been so frequently quoted, that his animadversions are known to every one; but while admitting the validity and beauty of most of his Shakespearian dicta, we venture to think some of them may have been overrated. In the first place, certain of them, accredited as original, really emanated from our own great poetical critic as well as great poet, Coleridge;* and secondly, Schlegel's own critical judgment was too much biased by manifest prejudice to be worthy of the implicit faith hitherto placed in his awards. Witness, for instance, the sentence he passes on three of the doubtful plays, ("Thomas Lord Cromwell," "Sir John Oldcastle," and "A Yorkshire Tragedy;") declaring them to be "not only unquestionably Shakespeare's," but affirming that, in his opinion, "they deserve to be classed among his best and maturest works." (!) But the strongest cause for questioning Schlegel's claim to be considered an infallible critic, is his glaring injustice to that fine genius, Molière,—who was only second to Shakespeare himself as a comic dramatist,—when he stigmatises him as a court "buffoon," whose aim in writing was to make Louis XIV. laugh; when he disputes his claim to originality on the score of his borrowing his plots from foreign sources, although finding no diminution of the same claim in other authors for the same act; and when he can find no higher praise for such noble dramas as the immortal "École des Femmes," "Tartuffe," "Misanthrope," and "Femmes Savantes," than, that they are "pieces which are finished with great diligence." (!) When we see a critic thus grossly unjust to one Milton," p. 103.

author, we feel almost inclined to resent—assuredly to receive with less respect—his encomiums on another; and it is on this account that Schlegel's laudation of Shakespere comes with abated force, when we behold his incapability of attributing due merit to the thrice-admirable Molière.

Professor Wilson, besides some acutely discriminative observations upon certain of Shakespeare's chief plays and characters, made a profound discovery relative to the dramatist's principle in the observance of the unities. Under his literary title of Christopher North, the professor broached this discovery in Blackwood's Magazine for November 1849; and during the same month, the Reverend N. J. Halpin put forth a small pamphlet laying claim to having already made the same discovery. It seems clear, from the evidence adduced, that both gentlemen are equally entitled to the honour of having discerned this invaluable clue to Shakespeare's system of the unities—more especially that of Time. It leads to the revelation of the real and beautifully artistic intention of many of the poet's apparent discrepancies; which, so far from being erroneously, or even inadvertently made, are purposely introduced with a view to harmony of plan, reconcilement of obstacles, and ascertainment of progress. Professor Wilson takes the tragedies of "Macbeth" and "Othello" in illustration of his theory; while Mr Halpin adopts "The Merchant of Venice" by which to demonstrate his view of the same system. The former showed how "two clocks," as it were, of dramatic Time, were going on simultaneously throughout Shakespeare's dramas; one pointing to "long time," the other to "short time," and that this concurrent indication of the "two clocks" produced the desired impression of the drama's duration upon the mind of the spectator. The latter (Mr Halpin) says, "He contrived what one may term a chronometer consisting of a double series of time or dates; the one illusory, suggestive, and natural; the other artistical, visible, and dramatic; the first of which may be called the protractive series, the latter the accelerating; and out of the impressions thus unequally created, he constructed a dramatic system unknown to the world before his time, and unpractised ever since." The way in which each theorist has made out his case, and arrived at a similar conclusion, by illustration adduced from the above-mentioned plays, is extremely interesting, and establishes their point with the most satisfactory and triumphant effect. In "Othello," Professor Wilson shows how the "long time" necessary to produce upon the spectator's mind the effect of a sufficing period of wedded union between Othello and Desdemona to enhance the impression of tragic naturalness in their fate, concurrent with the actual "short time" stated in the one day and night that are occupied with the arrival in Cyprus, the celebration of the Moor's nuptials, the disgrace of Cassio, the following morning's suit to be restored to favour, Iago's immediate machinations, and the next night's catastrophe, are blended into one magic Time-unity by the subtle art of Shakespeare. In the "Merchant of Venice," Mr Halpin makes manifest how the "long time" required by the conditions of the bond between Shylock and Antonio,—three months,—is produced upon the reader, while the absolute "short time" needful for passing to and from Belmont, with Portia's appearance at the Venice tribunal instantly upon her marriage with Bassanio, are in the same way made to tally in skilful contrivance of impression.

It is pleasant to see how critics have gradually grown to touch upon points which bear the superficial appearance of error in Shakespeare with respect;—prepared rather to think their own discernment may be at fault, than prematurely to impeach his merit, and to scan patiently, instead of reprobating hastily. His infallibility has—of its own power—exacted this altered treatment on the part of his annotators. As an instance in point, observe the mode in which the first commentators dealt with what they called his faults and blemishes—summarily judging, trenchantly blaming. Then Mr Campbell—with that tone of petulance which occasionally mars his otherwise delightful commentary on Shakespeare’s genius—adverted to the poet’s deviation from the old classic rules of Time-unity, with a sarcasm instead of an investigation into its true meaning and merit. While lastly, the Boston editor, Mr Hudson, and the enthusiastic Armitage Brown, (in his “Shakespeare’s Autobiographical Poems,”) have both perceived the apparent discrepancies in Time, during the course of “Othello;” yet while discerning them, they pronounce no rash censure upon points which the disquisitions of Mr Halpin and Mr Wilson have since proved to be systematic provisions in Shakespeare’s Dramatic Art of Time-unity.

Some of the best things said by Dr Johnson in his, in many respects, fine Preface, are upon the “unities.” He seems to have felt the superiority of Shakespeare’s art in their conduct, although unable to define the system upon which the poet treated them. He claims the true privilege of the dramatist’s power over the spectator’s imagination, when he says, “There is no reason why an hour should not be a century in that calendar of the brains that can make the stage a field.”

It is curious that those who lay so much stress on unity of place, as enhancing probability, should not perceive the gross improbabilities it necessarily involves. The Classical French school of Dramatic Art, while inviolably preserving certain rules of the stage, perpetually violates our impressions of natural event. In being called upon to admire the strictness with which the unities are observed, calls are made upon our belief and allowance that outrage every impression of verisimilitude. The magic power of the true dramatist transports us to what scene he chooses, and we sit there to witness what he presents to our imagination. While his spell lasts, we submit ourselves to its influence, and lose sight of all but that which he immediately places before our view. There is no difficulty, no strain upon our sense of fitness, no wrenching of our credulity, to believe that we see what he wills us to see, so long as his art of representation is sufficiently potent to conjure up the scene he describes visibly to our imagination. It is quite as great a demand upon our faith to suppose that we behold people coming out of their houses to hold converse on their private affairs in a public street, or place, or square; that they issue forth from their separate apartments into one especial antechamber of a palace or mansion—a sort of general talking-place,—a social Exchange—where they may hold conferences, repose confidences, or indulge soliloquies; that they should go out and come in just when convenient to the story; that they should meet at exact moments, or remain absent at appropriate junctures,—as to fancy that we follow them from spot to spot in thought, and are enabled to observe their procedure with the eyes of our spirit—that spirit, that intelligence, which is put into activity by the dramatist’s skill. Shakespeare himself (in his Chorus to “Henry V.”) tells us the amount of credence he demands for his dramatic universe:—

“Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts,
And make imaginary puissance.”

That “imaginary puissance,” taken in the sense of power to imagine, it is, which he evokes, and which his art elicits. The sticklers for the classical unities ask that we shall believe improbabilities, because they invest them with certain rational conventionalities; Shakespeare asks us to 'entertain conjecture' of beautiful ideal-realities by scope and strength of fancy. The strict unity-mongers require the faith of reason; Shakespeare, the faith of imagination. But the former require the faith of reason while impairing belief by the very adherences to rationality they preserve; Shakespeare requires the faith of imagination while inspiring belief by the appeal he makes to our poetic creed.

Shakespeare's comprehensive might was large in his treatment of the unities, as in all else. His plans were as vast as his details were accurate. Not only will he bear the minutest analytical inspection and dissection, but he sustains the widest synthetical survey. His characters are not only susceptible of the closest investigation,—each smallest part being as carefully finished in individuality of structure as the organs of animalcule in their exquisite formation and inexhaustible variety,—but his dramas, as wholes, are wonders of consistent art. Every play in itself possesses a grand moral unity of design. Thus 'Hamlet' may be said to depict the relations of the human soul with divine order; 'Macbeth,' the struggles and tortures of ambition; 'Lear,' the principle of Will; 'Othello,' cendour and virtue victims to deception and malignity, but triumphant in their immortal intrinsic natures; 'Romeo and Juliet,' Love in its beauty, Hate in its ugliness and misery. Even his comedies contain this moral unity of design: for instance, 'As You Like It' exhibits the cheerfulness of goodness, the sunshine and out-door freedom of the spirit in those who are pure-hearted and innocent; 'Twelfth-Night,' the romance of enamoured fancy, the sickness of self-love, the health of geniality; 'All's Well,' the superior worth of nature's aristocracy and natural rights to feudal and conventional assumptions and exactions; 'Much Ado,' brilliancy of wit at fault in discernment, while obtuseness of folly blunders upon revelation; 'The Merchant of Venice,' the several operations of injustice, injustice, and chance; and so on, through all his fine plays, serious or comic,—for in Shakespeare's gayest mirth there is ever earnest purpose, as in his severest tragedy there is ever divinely tender feeling. Guizot, with excellent acumen, makes Unity of Impression the great law of Shakespeare's Dramatic Art. He says:—'We must never forget, that unity, in Shakespeare's view, consists in one dominant idea, which, reproducing itself under various forms, incessantly produces, continues, and redoubles the impression.'

In tracing the career of his characters we are affected as we are in watching the progress of real beings; we feel that deep and sympathetic commiseration,—that compassion unmixed with contempt,—with which we observe the mistakes of our fellow-creatures, our mortal brethren; he teaches us that large toleration for human imperfection, while revealing to us its shortcomings, by showing at the same time its innate yearnings after good. In proof of the intense reality with which he invests his creations, and the thorough way in which he penetrates us with a sense of their actuality—we find ourselves speaking of Shakespeare's people's souls; we say the soul of Hamlet, or the soul of Macbeth, is thus or thus affected.

His productions afford ever-fresh field for speculation; in reading them we are always conscious of a something beyond our fathoming—as in contemplating Nature herself. It is not that Shakespeare—any more than Nature—is dark to our perusal;
but that there is a high-reaching elevation of idea suggested in his page, as in hers, that lifts the spirit into more than earthly soarings.

Complaint has been made that Shakespeare is occasionally obscure; but sentences that present difficulties to some minds, offer none to others. For our own part, we are unable to find incomprehensibilities in many of Shakespeare's phrases that seem to have proved stumblingblocks with some of the commentators. The reason may be this: literal and matter-of-fact judges, who require all to be clearly made out, thoroughly explained and stated, cannot make sufficient allowance for Shakespeare's style, which is often of large scope in condensed form. He frequently uses a curiously elliptical style; and his phrases then wear (to the literal-minded) somewhat the effect of that peculiarly occult meaning couched beneath superficial appearance of mistake, which constitutes the "Irish Ball." For instance, Ben Jonson ridiculed Shakespeare's having made Julius Caesar say, "Cesar did never wrong but with just cause." In the first place, Ben Jonson quotes the passage falsely,* like many a fault-finder, warping the point he picks out for blame; and, in the next place, it requires little perception to discern the real gist of the phrase, allowing for elliptical expression. This is the exact quotation:—

"Know, Caesar doth not wrong; nor without cause
Will he be satisfied."

It is perfectly comprehensible,—and most characteristic. The tone of self-assertion and irresponsible autocratic will in the sentence is precisely that which a despotic-minded man, like "mightiest Julius," would use. In considering Shakespeare's words, it is all-important to bear in thought into whose mouth he puts them;—characteristic utterance is everything with him. Differently from every other writer,—in this, as in all other respects,—Shakespeare himself cannot be known through his principal writings; his own individuality of nature is so completely merged in the characters he draws, that it cannot be deduced with any satisfactory correctness. Precisely because he was the greatest of all dramatists, and drew other men's characters with such consummate discrimination, he revealed nothing of his own identity. While he wrote, he was the person he delineated; and while perfectly defining every touch that characterised them, he necessarily excluded every point that might have coloured it with his own peculiarities. No writer, perhaps, ever so thoroughly got rid of self in writing; and this is one of the reasons of his excellence in dramatic composition. His very indifference to having his productions carefully put forth to the world in print, originates in this absence of self in what he did. He thought more of making his works good, than of letting them appear good. He himself says for himself in one of his sonnets—

"In so profound abyss I throw all care
Of others' voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are."

* Exculpation has been attempted, by suggesting that possibly the words originally stood as Jonson gave them, and that Shakespeare may have altered them on hearing that Jonson had ridiculed the phrase as it at first stood; but how comes it that Ben Jonson not only quoted the sentence itself differently from what it now is, but that he made it the reply to a speech which does not occur at all there? The above endeavour to excuse Jonson is made by Mr Craik, whose "English of Shakespeare, Illustrated in a Philosophical Commentary on his Julius Caesar," is a book of much value to the Shakespearian student. Though so verbally precise, Mr Craik has none of the formality often accompanying precision. Together with his discernment in literality, he possesses poetical appreciation; as when, in citing and defending one of Shakespeare's bold beauties of diction, he observes, "These audacities of language are of the very soul of poetry."
This absence of self-consciousness it was which gifted Shakespeare with his amazing power of appropriateness and forbearance in writing, amidst all his luxuriance and exuberance of imagination. In painting a scene, he was never anxious to put forth the whole of his resources,—to show how abundantly he could depict it; he was intent only on depicting it faithfully, truly, naturally. This is why he never overdoes anything; this is why he has no exaggeration, no pedantry. Where Ben Jonson, for instance, is laboured, diffuse, and prolix, Shakespeare is correct, concise, forcible. Where other authors are verbal, he is vital; his words are warm life-blood, pulsing from the very hearts of his speakers. If Shakespeare wished to paint a parting, he did not heap up all the most extravagant phrases of passionate regret—parting in abstract; but he painted each particular parting with just the amount of tenderness and pathos proper to the character and individuality of those taking leave: witness the several partings of Romeo and Juliet, Troilus and Cressida, Posthumus and Imogen, Proteus and Julia,—all lovers' partings, yet how exquisitely distinguished one from the other. From the sentences uttered in these four little scenes, we might clearly gather the respective characters of the four couples who figure in them. This is why there is no rant in Shakespeare. He was not bent on displaying his own ability and mastery of language,—which anxiety leads to the overcharged tirades of other writers; but he was solely occupied with the mode of speech of those beings he made talk; he thought of their diction, not his capability of penning it. In his moderation and discretion, Shakespeare is as effective as in his energy and elaboration,—for they are each always meekly employed. This absence of self-impression accounts, too, for the magical insight into the desires of others—his spectators or readers—which Shakespeare possessed. He seemed always to know how much they wished revealed, how much they wished shown, to satisfy their interest in his stories. Many of his closing scenes are long—though never tedious—on this principle; they seem adapted to the contenting of that craving to know all about the personages in whom the spectators have been feeling interested, which grown spectators share with children, who are never contented without explanatory windings-up to the tales they have been listening to. Witness his last scenes of "Cymbeline," of "As You Like It," of "Merchant of Venice," and others; which linger on with the exquisite sense of mutual pleasure in satisfactory explanation in conclusion that subsists between the finest authors and their readers.

Shakespeare, though the most concentrated of writers, was also the most ample;—where condensed expression, or where copiousness was respectively needed.

There are three passages in the last scene of "Cymbeline" which afford instances of those peculiarly elliptical sentences used by Shakespeare,—especially at the close of his dramas, where he avoids diffuseness on those points which are known to the spectators, but which require explanation to the characters of the story. The first of these passages is—

"One sand another
Not more resembles that sweet rosy lad
Who died, and was Fidele."

The second is—

"Our wicked queen;
Whom heavens, in justice, both on her and hers,
Have laid most heavy hand."

—Here the word "on" serves for "justice on," and "hand on." The third is—
"This most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air,"

—in the last passage "were" is governed by "who," the relative to "wife," but "who" serves a double purpose in the sentence,—representing the person addressed (Posthumus), and the person referred to (Imogen.) This mode of making one word do double service (in sense, if not in strict grammar) is among the poetical licences used with his own felicitous daring by Shakespeare. Such construction—conveying condensedly the spirit and sense of a meaning, rather than expressing it according to correct rule,—we feel to be preferable to mere grammatical nicety and accuracy; although only in such a master-hand as Shakespeare's is it safe. The way in which that passage has passed unchallenged by the critics aptest to stickle for constructional precision, attests its right to stand on its own ground of superior law in diction.

A kind of era in Shakespearian literature occurred in the year 1852, from the publication of a volume by Mr. J. Payne Collier, containing an account of a copy of the 1632 Folio of Shakespeare, which exhibited numerous manuscript emendations and corrections. The majority of these were then given to the world; thus affording an opportunity for passing judgment on their merit, and accepting or rejecting them accordingly. It were reasonable to expect that this Manuscript Corrector's suggestions might have been received with at least the sufferance and quiet examination that other conjectural emendations have met with from time to time; but the appearance of this volume was a signal for scorn and virulence the most disgraceful, not merely heaped upon the nameless Corrector himself, but upon his introducer. Surely, even had the proposed readings been pronounced erroneous, they were entitled to that amount of respect which any attempt to ascertain the exact text of the poet may claim; and which he himself set the example of according to the most wrong-headed absurdities belonging to mankind, purely on that simple ground of brotherhood and human fallibility. No mortal folly that Shakespeare has playfully dealt with, contains more ludicrous points than the exhibitions of rancor and intolerance among his various partizans; their dogmatical decisions and venomous attacks, their violent assertions of "undoubted," "unequivocal," "irrefragable," and "indisputable" upon questions, touching which they themselves are perpetually disputing with the most unseemly heat, or even retracting with the most amusing coolness, would have drawn a smile from none more surely than the great object himself of all their hubbub. Had the unfortunate MS. Corrector robbed an orchard or an orphan he could scarcely have been more contumaciously or more roughly treated than he was by the Shakespearian beadle. Nevertheless, they adopted some of his proposed emendations; and a more temperate consideration of his claims to attention has succeeded to the first opposition. One or two of his corrections find place in the present edition. These, and some from other sources, the scope of our appointed course affords no opportunity to particularise; but we are bound to name those emendations which originate with ourselves; and as the absence of notes precludes our giving reasons at length for inserting them, we must entreat our readers' belief that we have done so only upon carefullest and faithfulest consideration. These are the instances alluded to, wherein we have ventured to print what appeared to us needful corrections:—"Dromio, thou Dromio;" for "Dromio, thou Dromio," (altered in some editions, to "thou drone,"
Com. of E. ii. 2.—"Make friends invited;" for "Make friends invite," Tam. of Sh. iii.
2.—The speech in Act iv. Sc. 2 of "Love's L. L.," hitherto given in all editions to Jaquenetta, and which (in her mouth) has puzzled the commentators from its presentning a direct contradiction to her previous one, (stating that the letter is from Don Armado,) has now been assigned to Sir Nathaniel; who,—having just read the letter, and seen the signature it contains, takes the answer out of her mouth, saying:—"Ay, Sir, from one Mousieur Biron, one of the strange queen's lords." Holofernes corrects him for this mistake in the next speech:—"Sir Nathaniel, this Biron is one of the votaries with the king;"—thereby showing who it is that has made the wrong assertion.
In the opening scene of "Romeo and Juliet," Citizens has been placed as a prefix, instead of First Cit., to the speech commencing "Clubs, bills, and partizans!" which seems to be a collection of exclamations uttered by several persons, rather than the words of one person. In the same play (Act i. Sc. 5) the entrances and several prefixes of the various servants have been somewhat differently arranged from the ordinary method, which has been confessed to be unsatisfactory. In the last scene of "Antony and Cleopatra" the stage directions have been remodelled with an attempt at supplying a clearer idea of the disposal, situation, and procedure in the monument, than has till now been given; and there is the less scruple in making this alteration, since the stage directions are modern additions founded upon Plutarch's account of the incidents which take place in that scene.

Among the particular punctuations which we have adopted in variance with other Editors' views of certain passages, one may be cited, where Bellario says (Cymb. v. 5),
"We will die all three but I will prove," &c. Most Editors print a colon after "three:" whereas we take the phrase to be an idiom, in which "but I will" is equivalent to—"if I do not." The words, too, in Lear v. 3, "Nor no man else," which are usually somewhat linked to what follows by a shorter stop, we put a period to, by a full stop and dash; assuming them to be a following up of Kent's previous attempt to explain to his old master his identity. "I am the very man,—that from your first of difference and decay, have followed your sad steps,—nor no man else."—The irrelevant interruptions of the wandering-minded old king, the perseverance of his faithful follower, with at length his despairing ejaculation when he ceases:—"All's cheerless, dark, and deadly," strike us as the true version of the passage; and not that "Nor no man else" is a rejoinder to Lear's vacant: "You are welcome hither,"—as some have explained it.

The orthography of certain proper names and foreign words occurring in the text has been retained in accordance with the mode of spelling them in the original editions.
For instance, "Petruchio" has been retained, instead of altering it to Petruccio; which would be the true Italian spelling, and not Petruccio, as those modern Editors print it, who wish to correct the old form of the word. But Shakespeare Englished the hero's name for his own purpose, as he did that of the heroine,—Katharina; which, in Italian spelling, would be Catarina. Consistently, therefore, "honorato," instead of "onorato, "coraggio," instead of "coraggio," and other similar words, have been preserved in the form which Shakespeare used,—possibly for the sake of rendering them more intelligible to the actors who were to commit them to memory and pronounce them.

The First Folio has been of course adopted as the main guide in ascertaining the text for the present edition; but though used as a guide, it is not to be followed implicitly, still less exclusively. It contains so many instances of evident errors in transcription and printing, together with so many cases of curtailment for mere stage purposes, that the early Quarto copies are of almost incalculable advantage in verifying and fully establishing the text where they exist; of such plays, for example, as "Romeo and Juliet," "Hamlet," "Lear," and others. In the last-named tragedy, were it not for the Quarto copy, we should have lost a large portion of those vigorous things in the second scene of the fourth Act between the indignant Albany and his tiger-natured wife; also, the whole of that beautiful following scene, between Kent and a gentleman, descriptive of Cordelia's receiving the news of her father's ill-treatment by her sisters, is wanting in the Folio. The manager Shakespeare might have cut them out, (if his own doing at all,) not the author Shakespeare. For acting, they might be too long; but for reading, they are inestimable, as completing the dramatic (dramatic, not theatrical) art and beauty of the production. The time may come, when every reader of Shakespere will be, to a certain extent, his own editor; and the difficulties arising out of the early and original copies almost demand this: meantime, the best thing that an appointed Editor can do, is honestly and conscientiously to set forth the text according to his own belief of what it is, as gathered from such (in many respects imperfect) materials as exist to found it upon. To ascertain, is in some points impossible; the utmost that can be done is earnestly to examine and weigh,—and then decide as nearly accurately as judgment will enable. The immense difficulty of making up one's mind upon disputed passages,—where frequently so much is to be said on both sides of the question, and where such cogent arguments arise in favour of each different reading,—can only be estimated by those who undertake the task of decision. This difficulty amounts in some cases to the actual retaining of what has been formerly rejected, or rejecting what has been formerly retained; for frequently, that which has struck the mind as bearing an opposite sense, an incompatible sense, or even no sense at all, at one time of consideration, will, at another period, assume a consistent and perfectly distinct meaning, and will therefore be ultimately adopted in preference to the sentence previously taken. As a single instance of what we mean, we would refer to the word "love-feat" in Love's L. L., v. 2; for which we at one time substituted the suggested alteration of "love-suit;" but now we perceive the congruity of the term
"feat," with the preceding line:

"Their purpose is, to press, to court, and dance;"

and, accordingly, we retain the original Folio expression, "love-feat."

These anxious deliberations, these conscientious cares on the part of Editors in selecting what they conceive to be the genuine Shakespearian reading in disputed passages,—leading to occasional variance even in their own individual opinions, and to differing actually with themselves,—ought surely to teach diffidence in maintaining their own decisions, and temperance in censuring those of others. Let Shakespeare-Editors but take to heart what is taught in every page of the great master they serve, and they will become more and more worthy to be his ushers and exponents.

To read Shakespeare's works even superficially, is entertainment; to linger over them lovingly and admiringly, is enjoyment; to study them profoundly, is wisdom moral and intellectual.
CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF SHAKESPEARE'S LIFE.

1564. William Shakespeare born April 23. Eldest son of John Shakespeare, and Mary Arden his wife. The father was of yeoman rank, and held various offices in the corporation: the mother inherited a small landed estate called Asbyes, and some property in land at Snitterfield. Plague in Stratford from June to December.

1 year old, 1565. John Shakespeare elected one of the fourteen aldermen of Stratford-upon-Avon.

2 1566. William's brother Gilbert baptized October 13. Here was an early-sent object to awaken ideas of protecting love in the two-year-old child.

3 1567. John Shakespeare in good circumstances; owner of a copyhold tenement in Henley Street since 1556. Contributed, with others of his borough, towards the relief of the poor during the visitation of the plague in Stratford in 1564.

4 1568. John Shakespeare received the highest distinction in the power of his fellow-townsmen to bestow; being elected Bailiff of Stratford-upon-Avon. He held the office, as was usual, from Michaelmas to Michaelmas; and was, ex officio, a magistrate.

5 1569. William's sister Joan baptized April 15; an aunt Joan standing godmother. This was a sister of Mary (Arden) Shakespeare; and had married Edward Lambert. Theatrical performances in Stratford by "the Queen's Players."

6 1570. John Shakespeare was in possession of a field called Ingon Meadow. Here may Shakespeare have first run about to gather "daisies pied and violets blue,"—a "boy pursuing summer butterflies."

7 1571. William's sister Anne baptized September 28. Probably his commencement as "schoolboy, with satchel and shining morning face;" but hardly "creeping like snail unwillingly to school."

8 1572. The masters of the free grammar-school at Stratford between 1570 and 1578, were, successively, Walter Roche, Thomas Hunt, and Thomas Jenkins. The two former may have been the prototypes of Finch and Holofernes; the latter, of Sir Hugh Evans.

9 1573. William's brother Richard baptized March 11. As his family increased, so increased John Shakespeare's means of supporting them, up to this time.

10 1574. John Shakespeare purchased of Edmund and Emma Hall, two freehold houses, with gardens and orchards, in Henley Street, Stratford-upon-Avon, for the sum of £40.

11 1575. Gradual declension of John Shakespeare's circumstances in the course of these three years.

12 1576. 1577. John Shakespeare, at a borough hall meeting, permitted to pay but 3s. 4d. as his share of a levied contribution. Mortgaged his wife's estate of Asbyes. Unable to afford poor-rates; and was left untaxed.
15 years old, 1579. John and Mary Shakespeare sold their landed property at Snitterfield for the small sum of £4. William’s sister Anne was buried April 4.

16 1580. William’s brother Edmund baptized May 3.

17 1581. Theatrical performances in Stratford-upon-Avon by two companies of players.

18 1582. A “preliminary bond” to the solemnization of matrimony between William Shakespeare and Anne Hathaway was dated November 28. The seal used on the bond bore the initials R. H.,—those of the bride’s father, Richard Hathaway. These three years are the period when Shakespeare might have been a student at either of the universities, or one of the inns of court.

20 1584. Three companies of actors performed at Stratford. Burbage, Greene, Slye, Heminge, and Tooley, were players who came of Warwickshire families; and were probably acquaintances of Shakespeare’s at this time.

21 1585. William’s twin boy and girl, Hamnet and Judith, baptized February 2. His desire to provide for his increasing family, his own tastes and talents, and his friends’ instances, probably combined to turn his thoughts towards the stage.

23 1587. No record of these two years. Probably engaged in qualifying himself for his profession of actor; and in altering and adapting plays for the theatre of which he became part proprietor.

24 1588. William Shakespeare a sharer in the Blackfriars Theatre. His name occurs twelfth on the list of sixteen sharers.

26 1590. Spenser’s laudatory allusion to Shakespeare as a dramatist, appeared in the “Tears of the Muses;” that poem being then first printed.

27 1592. Plague in London. Suspension of dramatic performances. Probable period of Shakespeare’s possible visit to Italy. Robert Greene’s attack upon Shakespeare, posthumously produced by Henry Chettle; who subsequently made apologue in his “Kind-heart’s Dream.”

28 1593. First edition of “Venus and Adonis” published under the Author’s direction by a printer named Richard Field,—said to have been a Stratford man. Building of the Globe Theatre commenced by the leader of the company of actors, Richard Burbage, December 22.

30 1595. Probable period of Lord Southampton’s alleged gift of £1000 to Shakespeare.

31 1596. Probable period of the opening of the Globe Theatre on the Bankside, the spring of this year. The performances usually took place at three o’clock in the afternoon; and, being open to the air, the theatre served for summer representations.

32 1596. Petition of the Player-sharers (Shakespeare’s name fifth on the list) to repair and enlarge their Blackfriars’ Theatre for winter performances. William’s son Hamnet buried August 11. Help to his parents. Applied for grant of arms to his father.

33 1597. John and Mary Shakespeare filed a bill in Chancery to recover their mortgaged estate of Ashby; the mortgagee’s son refusing to yield it. William’s aid in redeeming his mother’s inheritance. His purchase of “New Place,” also at the “Great House,” at Stratford; bringing his father and mother home there.

DEDICATION PREFIXED TO THE FOLIO OF 1623.

To the most noble and incomparable pair of brethren, William Earl of Pembroke, &c., Lord Chamberlain to the King's most excellent majesty, and Philip Earl of Montgomery, &c., Gentleman of his majesty's bedchamber; both Knights of the most noble Order of the Garter, and our singular good lords.

RIGHT HONOURABLE,

Whilst we study to be thankful in our particular for the many favours we have received from your L.L., we are fallen upon the ill fortune, to mingle two the most diverse things that can be, fear and rashness,—rashness in the enterprise, and fear of the success. For when we value the places your H.H. sustain, we cannot but know their dignity greater than to descend to the reading of these trifles; and while we name them trifles, we have deprived ourselves of the defence of our dedication. But since your L.L. have been pleased to think these trifles something heretofore, and have prosecuted both them and their author living with so much favour, we hope that (they outliving him, and he not having the fate, common with some, to be executor to his own writings) you will use the like indulgence toward them you have done unto their parent. There is a great difference whether any book choose his patrons, or find them: this hath done both. For so much were your L.L. likings of the several parts when they were acted, as before they were published, the volume asked to be yours. We have but collected them, and done an office to the dead, to procure his orphans guardians; without ambition either of self-profit or fame; only to keep the memory of so worthy a friend and fellow alive as was our Shakespeare, by humble offer of his plays to your most noble patronage. Wherein, as we have jàstly observed no man to come near your L.L. but with a kind of religious address, it hath been the height of our care, who are the presenters, to make the present worthy of your H.H. by the perfection. But there we must also crave our abilities to be considered, my lords. We cannot go beyond our own powers. Country hands reach forth milk, cream, fruits, or what they have; and many nations, we have heard, that had not gums and incense, obtained their requests with a leavened cake. It was no fault to approach their gods by what means they could: and the most, though meanest, of things are made more precious when they are dedicated to temples. In that name, therefore, we most humbly consecrate to your H.H. these remains of your servant Shakespeare, that what delight is in them may be ever your L.L., the reputation his, and the faults ours, if any be committed by a pair so careful to show their gratitude both to the living and the dead as is

Your Lordships' most bounden,

John Heminge,
Henry Condell.
ADDRESS PREFixed TO THE FOLIO OF 1623.

To the great variety of Readers.

From the most able to him that can but spell: there you are numbered. We had rather you were weighed: especially when the fate of all books depends upon your capacities; and not of your heads alone, but of your purses. Well, it is now public; and you will stand for your privileges, we know,—to read and censure. Do so, but buy it first: that doth best commend a book, the stationer says. Then how odd soever your brains be or your wisdoms, make your license the same, and spare not. Judge your six-pen'orth, your shilling's-worth, your five-shillings'-worth at a time, or higher, so you rise to the just rates, and welcome. But, whatever you do, buy. Censure will not drive a trade, or make the jack go. And though you be a magistrate of wit, and sit on the stage at Blackfriars or the Cock-pit, to arraign plays daily, know, these plays have had their trial already, and stood out all appeals, and do now come forth quitted rather by a decree of court than any purchased letters of commendation.

It had been a thing, we confess, worthy to have been wished, that the author himself had lived to have set forth and overseen his own writings. But, since it hath been ordained otherwise, and he by death departed from that right, we pray you do not envy his friends the office of their care and pain, to have collected and published them; and so to have published them as where (before) you were abused with divers stolen and surreptitious copies, maimed and deformed by the frauds and stealths of injurious impostors that exposed them, even those are now offered to your view cured and perfect of their limbs, and all the rest absolute in their numbers as he conceived them; who, as he was a happy imitator of nature, was a most gentle expresser of it: his mind and hand went together; and what he thought, he uttered with that easiness, that we have scarce received from him a blot in his papers. But it is not our province, who only gather his works and give them you, to praise him. It is yours that read him: and there we hope, to your divers capacities, you will find enough both to draw and hold you; for his wit can no more lie hid than it could be lost. Read him, therefore; and again and again: and if then you do not like him, surely you are in some manifest danger not to understand him. And so we leave you to other of his friends, whom if you need, can be your guides: if you need them not, you can lead yourselves and others. And such readers we wish him.

Henry Condell.
ON THE PORTRAIT OF SHAKESPEARE.

PREFIXED AS A FRONTISPICE TO THE FIRST EDITION OF
HIS WORKS IN FOLIO, 1623.

TO THE READER.

This figure that thou here seest put,
It was for gentle Shakespeare cut,
Wherein the graver had a strife
With nature, to outdo the life:
O could he but have drawn his wit
As well in brass as he hath hit
His face; the print would then surpass
All that was ever writ in brass:
But since he cannot, reader, look
Not on his picture, but his book.

Ben Jonson.

ADRIAN, Lords.
FRANCISCO.
CALIBAN, a savage and deformed Slave.
TRINCULO, a Servant.
STEPHANO, a drunken Butler.
Master of a Ship, Boatswain, and Mariners.

MIRANDA, daughter to PROSPERO.
ABRIS, an airy Spirit.
IRIS, CREES, JUNO, Nymphs, Reapers.

Other Spirits attending on PROSPERO.

SCENE,—The Sea, with a Ship; afterwards an uninhabited Island.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—On a Ship at Sea.—A Storm with Thunder and Lightning.

Enter a Ship-master and a Boatswain.

Master. Boatswain!

Boats. Here, master: what cheer?

Mast. Good, speak to the mariners: fall to't yarely, or we run ourselves aground: bestir, bestir.

[Exit. Enter Mariner.

Boats. Heigh, my hearts! cheerly, cheerly, my hearts! yare, yare: take in the topsail; tend to the master's whistle.—Blow, till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

[Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand, Gonzalo, and Others.

Alon. Good boatswain, have care. Where's the master? Play the men.

Boats. I pray now, keep below.

Ant. Where is the master, boatswain?

Boats. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour: keep your cabins; you do assist the storm.

Gon. Nay, good, be patient.

Boats. When the sea is. Hence! What care these roarer's names for the king? To cabin: silence! trouble us not.

Gon. Good; yet remember whom thou hast aboard.

Boats. None that I more love than myself. You are a counsellor; if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more; use your authority: if you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap.—Cheerly, good hearts!—Out of our way, I say.

[Exit. Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow: me-thinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallowes. Stand fast, good fate, to his hanging! make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage! If he be not born to be hanged, our case is miserable.

Re-enter Boatswain.

[Exeunt. Boats. Down with the topmast: yare; lower! Bring her to try with main-course. [A cry within.] A plague upon this howling! they are louder than the weather, or our office.

Re-enter Sebastian, Antonio, and Gonzalo.

Yet again! what do you here? Shall we give o'er, and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

Seb. A pos o' your throat; you bawling, blasphemous, inharitable dog!

Boats. Work you, then.

Ant. Hang, cur, hang! you whoreson, insolent noise-maker, we are less afraid to be drowned than thou art.

Gon. I'll warrant him for drowning; though the ship were no stronger than a nutshell, and as leaky as an unstained wench.

Boats. Lay her a-hold, a-hold! Set her two courses: off to sea again; lay her off.

Re-enter Mariner, wet.

Mar. All lost! to prayers, to prayers! all lost! [Exeunt.

Boats. What, must our mouths be cold?

Gon. The king and prince at prayers? let us assist For our case is as theirs.

Seb. I am out of patience.

Ant. We are merely cheated of our lives by drunkards.—This wide-chapp'd rascal,—would thou might'st lie drowning,

The washing of ten tides! [Exit Boatswain. Gon. He'll be hanged yet, Though every drop of water swear against it, And gape at wid'st to glut him. [A confused noise within.—"Mercy on us!"—"We split, we split!"—"Farewell, my wife and children!"—"Farewell, brother!"—"We split, we split, we split!"—]

Ant. Let's all sink with the king. [Exit. Seb. Let's take leave of him. [Exit. Gon. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground; long heath, brown furze, anything. The wills above be done! but I would fain die a dry death.

Mira. If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this rear, allay them.
The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch,
But that the sea, mounting to the welkin's cheek,
Dashes the fire out. O, I have suffer'd
With those that I saw suffer! a brave vessel,
Who had, no doubt, some noble creatures in her,
Dash'd all to pieces. O, the cry did knock Against my very heart! Poor souls! they perish'd.
Had I been any god of power, I would
Have sunk the sea within the earth, or e'er
It should the good ship so have swallowed, and
The fraughting souls within her.

Mira. More to know.

Pro. No more amazement. Tell your piteous heart,
There's no harm done.

Mira. O, woe the day!

Pro. I have done nothing but in care of thee,
(If thee, my dear one! thee, my daughter!) who Art ignorant of what thou art, naught knowing
Of whence I am; nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.

Mira. Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Pro. 'Tis time
I should inform thee farther. Lead thy hand,
And pluck my magic garment from me.—So:

Lay down his robe.

Lie there, my art.—Wipe thou thine eyes; have Comfort.
The direful spectacle of the wreck, which touch'd,
The very virtue of compassion in thee,
I have with such provision in mine art
So safely order'd, that there is no soul—
No, not so much perdition as a hair,
Beid to any creature in the vessel
Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink.

For thou must now know farther.

Mira. You have often
Begun to tell me what I am; but stopp'd,
And left me to a doubt of mission,
Concluding, "Stay, not yet,"

Pro. The hour's now come;
The very minute bids thee open thine ear:
Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came unto this cell?
I do not think thou canst, for then thou wast not
Out three years old.

Mira. Certainly, Sir, I can.

Pro. By what? by any other house, or person?
Of anything the image tell me, that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Mira. 'Tis far off;
And rather like a dream, than an assurance
That my remembrance warrants. Had I not
For a five women once, that tended me? [is it,

Pro. Thou hastad, and more, Miranda. But how
That this lives in thy mind? what seest thou else
In the dark backward and abysm of time?
If thou rememberst aught, ere thou canst here, how Thou canst or here, thou mayst.

Mira. But that I do not.
SCENE II.

THE TEMPEST.

Here in this island we arriv'd; and here
Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit
Than other princes can, that have more time
For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

Mira. Heavens thank you for't! And now, I pray you, Sir,—
For still 'tis beating in my mind,—your reason
For raising this sea-storm?

Pro. Know thus far forth.
By accident most strange, bountiful fortune—
Now my dear lady—bath mine enemies
Brought to this shore; and by my presence
I find my zeality doth depend upon
A most suspicious star, whose influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop. Here cease more questions!
Thou art inclined to sleep; 'tis a good dunce,
And give it way:—I know thou canst not choose.—

[MIRANDA sleeps.]

Come away, servant, come! I am ready now:
Approach, my Ariel! come!

Enter Ariel.

Ari. All hail, great master! Grave Sir, hail! I come
To answer thy best pleasure; be 't to fly,
To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride
On the curd'd clouds: to thy strong bidding task
Ariel, and all his quality.

Pro. Hast thou, spirit,
Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade thee?

Ari. To every article.
I boarded the king's ship; now on the heak,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
I flam'd amazement: sometime I'd divide,
And burn in many places; on the topmast,
The yards, and bowspriet, would I flame distinctly,
Then meet, and join. Jove's lightnings, the precursors
O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary
And sight-outrunning were not: the fire, and cracks
Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune
Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves tremble,
Yes, his dread trident shake.

Pro. My brave spirit!
Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil
Would not infect his reason?

Ari. Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd
Some tricks of desperation. All, but mariners,
Plung'd in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel,
Then all a fire with me: the king's son, Ferdinand,
With hair up-staring (then like reeds, not hair)
Was the first man that leap'd; cried, "'Hell is
And all the devils are here."

[empty]

Pro. Why, that's my spirit!
But was not this nigh shore?

Ari. Close by, my master.

Pro. But are they, Ariel, safe?

Ari. Not a hair perish'd;
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before: and, as thou bad'st me,
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle.
The king's son have I landed by himself;
Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.

Pro. Of the king's ship
The mariners, say how thou hast dispos'd;
And all the rest o' the fleet.

The dukedom, yet unbow'd, (as, poor Milan)
To most ignoble stooping.

Mira. O the heavens!

Pro. Mark his condition, and th' event; then tell
If this might be a brother. [Inc

Mira. I should say
To think but nobly of my grandmother:
Good worms have borne bad sons.

Pro. Now the condition.
This king of Naples, being an enemy
To me invertebrate, hearken my brother's suit;
Which was, that he, in lieu o' the premises,—
Of homage, and I know not how much tribute,—
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the dukedom, and confer fair Milan,
With all the honours, on my brother: wherein.
A treacherous army levied, one midnight
Fated to the purpose, did Antonio open
The gates of Milan; and, ’t the dead of darkness,
The ministers for the purpose hurried thence
Me, and thy crying self.

Mira. Alack, for pity!
I, not remembering how I cried out then,
Will cry it o'er again; it is a blast
That wrings mine eyes to'rt.

Pro. Hear a little farther,
And then I'll bring thee to the present business
Which now's upon us; without the which, this story
Were most impertinent.

Mira. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy us?

Pro. Well demanded, wench:
My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst
So dear the love my people bore me,—nor set not,—
A mark so bloody on the business; but
With colours fairer painted their foul ends.
In few, they hurried us aboard a bark,
Bore us some leagues to sea; where they prepar'd
A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigid,
Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats
Instinctively have quit it: there they hoist us,
To cry to the sea that roar'd to us; to sigh
To the winds, whose pity, sighing back again,
Did us but loving wrong.

Mira. Was I then to you!

Pro. O, a cherubin
Thou wast, that did preserve me! Thou didst smile,
Infused with a fortitude from heaven,
When I have deck'd the sea with drops full salt,
Under my burden groan'd; which mind'd in me
An undergoing stomach, to bear up Against what should ensue.

Mira. How came we ahore?

Pro. By Providence divine.
Some food we had, and some fresh water, that
A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
Out of his charity, (who being then appointed Master of this design,) did give us; with Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessaries,
Which since have steaded much: so, of his gentleness,
Knowing I lov'd his books, he furnish'd me,
From mine own library, with volumes that
I prize above my dukedom.

Mira. Would I might
But ever see that man?

Pro. Now I arise:

[Putts on his robe again.

Sit still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow.
THE TEMPEST:  [ACT I.]

_Ari._
Safely in harbour
Is the king's ship; in the deep nook, where once
Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vest'd Bermoothea, there she's hid:
The mariners all under hatches stow'd;
Whom, with a charm join'd to their suffer'd labour,
I have left asleep: and for the rest o' the fleet
Which I dispens'd, they all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean flote,
Bound sadly home for Naples;
Supposing that they saw the king's ship wreck'd,
And his great person perish.

_Pro._
_Ari._
Exactly is perform'd: but there's more work.
What is the time o' the day?

_Pro._
At least two glasses. The time 'twixt six and now
Must by us both be spent most preciously.

_Ari._
Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pain,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd of me.

_Pro._
What isn't thou caus'd demand?

_Ari._
My liberty.

_Pro._
Before the time be out? no more!

_Ari._
I prithee,
Remember I have done thee worthy service;
Told thee no lies, made no mistakings, serv'd
Without or grudge or grumblings: thou didst pro-
To bate me a full year. [misl.

_Pro._
Dost thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee?

_Ari._
No.

_Pro._
Thou dost; and think'st it much, to tread
Of the salt deep, [the core
To run upon the sharp wind of the north,
To do me business in the veins o' th' earth,
When it is bak'd with frost.

_Ari._
I do not, Sir. [got

_Pro._
The foul witch Sycorax, who, with age and envy,
Was grown into a hoop: hast thou forgot her?

_Ari._
No, Sir.

_Pro._
Thou last: Where was she born?

_Ari._
Sic, in Argier.

_Pro._
O, was she so? I must,
Once in a month, recount what thou hast been,
Which thou forget'st. This damn'd witch, Sycorax,
For mischiefes manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier,
Thou know'st, was I vanisht: for one thing she did,
They would not take her life. Is not this true?

_Ari._
Ay, Sir. [child

_Pro._
This blue-eyed hag was hither brought with
And here was left by the sailors. Thou, my slave,
As thou report'st thyself, wast then her servant:
And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthly and abhor'd commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine the,
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine; within which rift
Imprison'd, thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years; within which space she died.
And left thee there: where thou didst vest thy groans
As fast as mill-wheels strike. Then was this island (Save for the son that she did litter here,
A fickled whoelp, hag-born) not honour'd with
A human shape.

_Ari._
Yes; Caliban, her son.

_Pro._
Dull thing, I say so; be, that Caliban,
Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in; thy groans
Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry bears: it was a torment
To lay upon the damned, which Sycorax
Could not again undo. It was mine art,
When I arriv'd and heard thee, that gade gape
The pine, and let thee out.

_Ari._
I thank thee, master.

_Pro._
Thou more murmurs, I will rend an oak,
And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till
Thou hast how'd it away twelwe winters.

_Ari._
Pardon, master: I will be correspondent to command,
And do my spriting gently.

_Pro._
I will discharge thee.

_Ari._
That's my noble master!

_Pro._
What shall I do? say what; what shall I do?

_Pro._
Go make thyself like a nymph o' the sea: be subject
To no sight but thine and mine; invisible
To every eyeball else. Go take this shape,
And hither come in! go, hence with diligence.

_Ari._
Awake, dear heart, awake! thou last slept well;
Awake!

_Mir._
[Waking.] The strangeness of thy story
Heaviness in me. [put

_Pro._
Shake it off. Come on;
We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never Yields us kind answer. 'Tis a villain, Sir,
I do not love to look on.

_Pro._
But, as 'tis,
We cannot miss him: he does make our fire,
Fetch in our wood, and serves in offices
That profit us.—What ho! slave! Caliban!
Thou erst, thou dost speak.

_Mir._ [Within.] There's wood enough within.

_Pro._
Come forth, I say; there's other business for thee;
Come, thou tortoise! when?

_Reader Ariel like a water-symph._
Fine apparition! My quaint Ariel,
Hark in thine ear.

_Ari._
My lord, it shall be done. [Exit.

_Pro._
Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil himself;
Upon thy wicked dam, come forth! [self

_Enter Caliban.

_Cal._ As wicked daw as e'er my mother brush'd
With raven's feather from unwholesome fen,
Drop on you both! a south-west blow on ye,
And blister you all o'er.

_Pro._ For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps,
Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up; urchins
Shall, for that vast of night that they may work,
All exercise on thee: thou shalt be pinch'd
As thick as honey-comb, each pinch more stingin
Than bees that made them.

_Cal._ I must eat my dinner.

This island's mine, by Sycorax my mother,
THE TEMPEST.

Which thou tak'st 'st from me. When thou camest first, Thou strok'dst me, and mad'st much of me; would'st give me
Water with berries in 't; and teach me how
To name the bigger light, and how the less,
That burn by day and night: and then I lov'd thee,
And show'd thee all the qualities of th' isle,
The fresh springs, brine-pits, barren place and fertile:
Cursed be I that did so!—All the charms
Of Syracorx, toads, beetles, bats, light on you! For
I am all the subjects that you have,
Which first was mine own king; and here you stay me
In this hard rock, whiles you do keep from me
The rest of th' island.

Pro. Thou most lying slave,
Whom stripes may move, not kindness: I have us'd thee,
Filth as thou art, with human care; and lodged thee
In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate
The honour of my child.

Cat. O ho, O ho!—would it had been done!
Thou didst prevent me; I had peopled else
This isle with Calibans.

Pro. Abhorred slave, which any print of goodness will not take,
Being capable of all ill! I pitied thee, [hour
Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each
One thing or other; when thou didst not, savage,
Know thine own meaning, but would'st gallable like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
With words that made them known: but thy vile race, [shaped
Though thou didst learn, had that in't which could
Could not abide to be with; therefore wast thou Deservedly confin'd into this rock,
Who hadst deserv'd more than a prison.

Cat. You taught me language; and my profit on 't
Is, I know how to curse. The red plague rid you,
For learning me your language!

Pro. Hag-seed, hence! Fetch us in fuel; and be quick, thou 'rt best,
To answer other business. Shrug'st thou, malicious? If thou neglect'st,
What I command, I 'll rack thee with old cramps,
Fill all thy bones with ashes, make thee roar,
That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

Cat. No, pray thee!—[Aside.] I must obey: his art is of such power,
It would control my dam's god, Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.

Pro. So, slave; hence! [Exit Caliban.

Re-enter ARIEL, invisible, playing and singing: FEORDER, following him.

ARIEL'S SONG.

Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:
Court'd as when you have, and kiss'd
The wild waves whist,
Foot it faintly here and there;
And, sweet sprites, the burden bear.
Har! har!

[Pro. [Aside.] The watch-dogs bark;
Har, har! I hear
The strain of strutting chasteicleer
Cry, Lock-a-doodle-doo.

For. Where should this music be? i' th' air, or
' th' earth?—

It sounds no more; and sure, it waits upon
Some god o' th' island. Sitting on a bank,
Weeping against the king my father's wreck,
This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury, and my passion,
With its sweet air: thence have I follow'd it,
Or it hath drawn me rather:—but 'tis gone.—
No, it begins again.

ARIEL sings.

Full fathom five thy father lies;
Of his bones are coral made;
Those are pearls that were his eyes:
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange;
Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell:
[Chorus: ding-dong.]
Har! now I bear them,—ding-dong, bell.

For. The ditty does remember my drown'd fa-
This is no mortal business, nor no sound [ther.—
That the earth owes:—I hear it now above me.

Pro. The fringed curtains of thine eye advance,
And say, what thou seest yond'.

Miri. What is 't? a spirit? Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, Sir,
It carries a brave form:—but 'tis a spirit.

Pro. No, wench; it eats, and sleeps, and hath such senses
As we have; such. This gallant, which thou seest,
Was in the wreck; and, but he's something stain'd
With grief, that's beauty's canker, thou might'st
call him
A goodly person. He hath lost his fellows,
And strays about to find them.

Miri. I might call him
A thing divine; for nothing natural
I ever saw so noble.

Pro. [Aside.] It goes on, I see, [thee
As my soul prompts it.——Spirit, fine spirit! I'll free Within two days for this.

For. Most sure, the goddess
On whom these airs attend!—Vouchsafe, my prayer
May know if you remain upon this island;
And that you will some good instruction give,
How I may bear me here: my prime request,
Which I do last pronounce, is,—O you wonder!—
If you be maid, or no?

Miri. No wonder, Sir;
But certainly a maid.

For. My language! heavens!—
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.

Pro. How! the best?
What worth thee, if the king of Naples heard thee?
For. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
'To hear thee speak of Naples. He doth hear me;
And, that he doth, I warrant: myself am Naples;
Who with mine eyes, ne'er since at ebb, beheld
The king, my father, wreck'd.

Miri. Alack, for mercy! For. Yes, faith, and all his lords; the duke of Milan,
And his brave son, being twain.

Pro. [Aside.] The duke of Milan,
And his more braver daughter, could control thee,
If now 'twere fit to do 't.——At the first sight
They have chang'd eyes:—delicate Ariel,
I'll set thee free for this!—[To Fera.] A word, good
Sir; I fear you have done yourself some wrong: a word.
Mira. Why speaks my father so urgently? This is the third man that e'er I saw; the first that e'er I sighed for: pity move my father to be inclin'd my way! —

Fer. O! if a virgin, And your affections not gone forth, I'll make you the queen of Naples.

Pro. [Aside.] They are both in either's powers: but this swift business I must uneasy make, lest too light winning Make the prize light. — [To Fer.] One word more: I charge thee, That thou attend me. Thou dost here usurp The name thou owst not; and hast put thyself Upon this island as a spy, to win it From me, the lord on't.

Pro. No; as I am a man. Mira. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple: If the ill spirit have so fair a house, Good things will strive to dwell with't.

Pro. [To Fer.] Follow me. — [To Mira.] Speak not to him; he's a traitor. — [To Fer.] Come; I'll manage thy neck and feet together: Sea-water shall thou drink; that food shall be The fresh-brook muscles, wither'd roots, and husks Wherein the snow cradled. — Follow.

Fer. No; I will resist such entertainment, till Mine enemy has more power. — [He draws, and is charmed from moving.

Mira. Make not too rash a trial of him, for He's gentle, and not fearful.

Pro. What? I say: My foot my tutor? — Put thy sword up, traitor; Who mak'st a show, but dost not strike, thy conscience Is so possess'd with guilt: come from thy ward; For I can here disarm thee with this stick, And make thy weapon drop.

Mira. Beseech you, father! —

Pro. Hence! hang not on my garments.

Mira. Sir, have pity: I'll be his surety.

Pro. Silence! one word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. What! An advocate for an impostor! hush! Thou think'st there are no more such shapes as he, Having seen but him and Caliban: foolish wench! To the most of men this is a Caliban, And they to him are angels.

Mira. My affections Are then most humble: I have no ambition To see a goddier man.

Pro. [To Fer.] Come on; obey: Thy nerves are in their infancy again, And have no vigour in them.

Fer. So they are: My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up. My father's loss, the weakness which I feel, The wreck of all my friends, nor this man's threats, To whom I am subdue, are but light to me, Might I but through my prison once a day Behold this maid: all corners else o' th' earth Let liberty make use of; space enough Have I in such a prison.

Pro. [Aside.] It works. — [To Fer.] Come on. Thou hast done well, fine Ariel! — [To Fer.] Follow me. —

[To Ariel.] Hark, what thou else shalt do me. Mira. Be of comfort: My father's a better nature, Sir, Than he appears by speech: this is unwonted, Which now came from him.

Pro. Thou shalt be as free As mountain winds; but then, exactly do All points of my command. Ari. To the syllable.

Pro. [To Fer.] Come, follow. — [To Mira.] Speak not for him. [Exit.] ACT II.

SCENE I. — Another part of the Island.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, and Others.

Gon. Beseech you, Sir, be merry: you have cause (So have we all) of joy; for our escape Is much beyond our loss. Our hint of woe Is common: every day, some sailor's wife, The masters of some merchant, and the merchant, Have just our theme of woe; but for the miracle, I mean our preservation, few in millions Can speak like us: then, wisely, good Sir, weigh Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alon. Pr'ythee, peace. Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.

Ant. The visitor will not give him o'er so. Seb. Look, he's winding up the watch of his wit; by and by it will strike.

Gon. Sir,—

Seb. One.— tell.

Gon. When every grief is entertain'd that's offer'd, Comes to the entertainer—

Seb. A dollar.

Gon. Dolour comes to him, indeed; you have spoken truer than you purposed.

Seb. You have taken it wiser than I meant you should.

Gon. Therefore, my lord,—

Ant. Fie, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue!

Alon. I pr'ythee, spare.

Gon. Well, I have done; but yet—

Seb. He will be talking.

Ant. Which, of he or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow?

Seb. The old cock.

Ant. The cockrel.

Seb. Done. The wager?

Ant. A laughter.

Seb. A match.

Ant. Though this island seem to be desert,—

Seb. Ha, ha, ha!

Seb. So, you're paid.

Adr. Uninhabitable, and almost inaccessible,—

Seb. Yet—

Adr. Yet—

Ant. He could not miss it.

Adr. It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.

Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.

Seb. Ay, and a subtle; as he most learnedly delivered.
SCENE I.

THE TEMPEST.

Fra. Sir, he may live.
I saw him beat the surges under him,
And ride upon their backs: he trod the water,
Whose eminence he flung aside, and breathed
The surge most swelling that met him: his bold head
'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oar'd
Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke
To the shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis bow'd,
As stooping to relieve him. I not doubt;
He came alive to land.

Ali°. No, no; he's gone.

Sed. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss,
That would not bless our Europe with your daughter,
But rather lose her to an African;
Where she, at least, is banish'd from your eye,
Who hath cause to wet the grief on't.

Prythee, peace.

Sed. You were kneel'd to, and importun'd other-
By all of us; and the fair soul herself
[wise
Weigh'd, between loathness and obedience, at Which end o' the beam she'd bow. We have lost
I fear, for ever: Milan and Naples have your son,
More widows in them, of this business' making,
Than we bring men to comfort them: the fault's
Your own.

Ali°. So is the dearest of the loss.

Gon. My lord Sebastian,
The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness,
And time to speak it in; you rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaster.

Very well.

Sed. And most chirurgically.

Gon. It is foul weather in us all, good Sir,
When you are cloudy.

Foul weather!

Gon. Had I plantation of this isle, my lord,—
He'd sow't with nettle-seed.

Sed. Or docks, or mallows.

Gon. And were the king on 't, what would I do?

Sed. 'Scape being drunk, for want of wine.

Gon. I' the commonwealth I would by contraries
Execute all things; for no kind of traffic
Would I admit; no name of magistrate;
Letters should not be known; riches, poverty,
And use of service, none; contract, succession,
Hound, bound of land, tillth, vineyard, none;
No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil;
No occupation; all men idle, all;
And women too, but innocent and pure;
No sovereignty,—

Yet he would be king on't.

Sed. The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.

Gon. All things in common nature should produce,
Without sweat or endeavour: treasun, felony,
Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine,
Would I not have; but nature should bring forth,
Of its own kind, all poison, all abundance,
To feed my innocent people.

Gon. No marrying mong his subjects?

Sed. None, man; all idle; whomes and knaves.

Gon. I would with such perfection govern, Sir,
To excel the golden age.

Save his majesty!

Gon. Long live Gonzalo!

Ali°. And, do you mark me, Sir?—

Prythee, no more: thou dost talk nothing to me.
THE TEMPEST.

[ACT II]

Gon. I do well believe your highness; and did it to minister occasion to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble lungs, that they always use to laugh at nothing.

Ant. 'Twas you we laugh'd at.

Gon. Who, in this kind of merry fooling, am nothing to you; so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.

Ant. What a blow was there given!

Gon. You are gentlemen of brave mettle: you would lift the moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter ANGEL. invisible, playing solemn music.

Sch. We would so, and then go a-bat-fowling.

Ant. Nay, good my lord, be not angry.

Gon. No, I warrant you; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy?

Ant. Go sleep, and hear us.

[All sleep but ALON. SER. and ANT.]

Alon. What! all so soon asleep? I wish mine eyes would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts: I am inclin'd to do so.

[find Sch.]

Ant. Please you, Sir, do not omit the heavy offer of it: It seldom visits sorrow; when it doth, it is a comforter.

Ant. We two, my lord, will guard your person while you take your rest, and watch your safety.

Alon. Thank you. — Wondrous heavy.

[ALONSO sleeps. Exit ANGEL.

Sch. What a strange drowsiness possesses them!

Ant. It is the quality o' the climate.

Sch. Why doth it not then, our eyelids sink? I find not myself dispos'd to sleep.

Ant. Nor I: my spirits are nimble.

They fell together all, as by consent;

They dropp'd, as by a thunder-stroke. What might,

Worthy Sebastian? — O! what might? — No more:

And yet, methinks, I see it in thy face,

What thou shouldst be. 'Th occasion speaks thee;

My strong imagination sees a crown [and Dropping upon thy head.

Sch. What! art thou waking?

Ant. Do not you hear me speak?

Sch. I do; and surely,

It is a sleepy language, and thou speakest Out of thy sleep. What is it thou didst say?

This is a strange repose, to be asleep

With eyes wide open; standing, speaking, moving,

And yet so fast asleep.

Ant. Noble Sebastian,

Thou lost'st thy fortune sleep,—die, rather; wink'st

Whilest thou art waking.

Sch. Thou dost now distinctly: There's meaning in thy snores.

Ant. I am more serious than my custom: you Must be so too, if need me; which to do,

Trebles thee o'er.

Sch. Well; I am standing water.

Ant. I'll teach you how to flow.

Sch. Do so: to ebb

Hereditary sloth instructs me.

Ant. O,

If you but knew, how you the purpose cherish,

Whilest thus you mock it! how, in stripping it, You more invest it! Ebbing men, indeed,

Most often do so near the bottom run

By their own fear, or sloth.

Pr'ythee, say on:

The setting of thine eye, and cheek, proclaim

A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed,

Which throes thee much to yield.

Ant. Thus, Sir:

Although this lord of weak remembrance, this

(Who shall be of as little memory,

When he is earth'd) hath here almost persuaded (For he's a spirit of persuasion, only Professes to persuade) the king, his son's alive,—

'Tis as impossible that he's undrown'd,

As he that sleeps here, swims.

Sch. I have no hope

That he's undrown'd.

Ant. O, out of that no hope,

What great hope have you! no hope, that way, is Another way so high a hope, that even

Ambition cannot pierce a wick beyond,

But doubts discovery there. Will you grant me with

That Ferdinand is drown'd?

Sch. He's gone.

Ant. Then, tell me,

Who's the next heir of Naples?

Sch. Claribel.

Ant. She that is queen of Tunis; she that dwells

Ten leagues beyond man's life: she that from Naples

Can have no note, unless the sun were post,

(The man i' the moon's too slow,) till new-born chins

Be rough and razorable; she, from whom

We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast again;

And, by that destiny, to perform an act,

Whereof what's past is prologue; what to come,

In yours and my discharge.

Sch. What stuff is this! — How say you?

'Tis true, my brother's daughter's queen of Tunis;

So is she heir of Naples; (twixt which regions

There is some space.

Ant. A space whose every cubit

Seems to cry out, "How shall that Claribel

Measure us back to Naples?" — Keep in Tunis,

And let Sebastian wake! — Say, this were death

That now hath seiz'd them; why, they were no worse

Than now they are. There be, that can rule Naples

As well as he that sleeps; lords that can prate

As amply, and unnecessarily,

As this Gonzalo; I myself could make

A cough of as deep chat. O, that you bore

The mind that I do! what a sleep were this

For your advancement! Do you understand me?

Sch. Methinks I do.

Ant. And how does your content

Tender your own good fortune?

Sch. I remember,

You did entreat your brother Prospero.

Ant. True:

And look how well my garments sit upon me;

Much fester than before. My brother's servants

Were then my fellows; now they are my men.

Sch. But, for your conscience,

Ant. Ay, Sir; where lies that? if it were a kibe,

' Twould put me to my slipper; but I feel not

This deity in my bosom: twenty consciences,

That stand 'twixt me and Milan, candied be they,

And melt, ere they molest! Here lies your brother,

No better than the earth he lies upon,
If he were that which now he’s like, that’s dead,
Whom I, with this obedient steel, three inches of it,
Can lay to bed for ever; whiles you, doing thus,
To the perpetual wink for eye might put,
This ancient monrel, this Sir Prudence, who Should not upbraid our course. For all the rest,
They’ll take suggestion as a cat laps milk;
They’ll tell the clock to any business that
We say betis the hour.

Soh. Thy case, dear friend,
Shall be my precedent: as thou go’rt Milan,
I’ll come by Naples. Draw thy sword: one stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou pay’st;
And I the king shall love thee.

Ant. Draw together:
And when I rear my hand, do you the like,
To fall it on Gonzalo.

Soh. O, but one word. [They converse apart.

Music. Recent Annis, invisible.

Art. My master through his art foresee the danger
That you, his friend, are in: and sends me forth
[For else his project dies] to keep thee living.

[Sings in Gonzalo’s ear.

While you here do mornin lie,
Open ey’d conspiracy
His time doth take.
If of life you keep a care,
Shake off slumber, and beware:
Awake! Awake!

Ant. Then let us both be sudden.

Gon. Now, good angels, preserve the king!

[They take.

Alou. Why, how now! ho, awake! Why are you
Wherefore this ghostly looking? [drawn?

Soh. Whiles we stood here securing your repose,
Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like bulls, or rather lions: did it not wake you?
It struck mine ear very terribly.

Alou. I heard nothing.

Soh. O, ’twas a din to fright a monster’s ear,
To make an earthquake! sure, it was the roar
Of a whole herd of lions.

Alou. Heard you this, Gonzalo?

Gon. Upon mine honour, Sir, I heard a humming,
And that a strange one too, which did awake me.
I shak’d you, Sir, and cry’d; as mine eyes open’d,
I saw their weapons drawn:—there was a noise,
That’s verity. ’Tis best we stand upon our guard,
Or that we quit this place: let’s draw our weapons.

Alou. Lead off this ground, and let’s make fast.

For my poor son. [ther search

Gon. Heavens keep him from these beasts!
For he is, sure, ’tis the island.

Alou. Lead away. [Exit with the others.

Arti. Prospero, my lord, shall know what I have done.

So, king, go safely on to seek thy son. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Another part of the Island.

Enter Caliban, with a burden of wood.

A noise of thunder heard.

Cal. All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and make him
By inch-meal a disease! His spirits hear me,
And yet I needs must curse. But they’ll nor pinch,
Fright me with urchin shows, pitch me I the mire,
Nor lead me, like a fire-brand, in the dark

Out of my way, unless he bid ’em; but
For every tripe are they set upon me:
Sometimes like apes, that moe and chatter at me,
And after, bite me; then like hedge-hogs, which Lie tumbling in my hatr foot way, and mount
Their pricks at my footsole: sometime am I
All wound with adders, who with cloven tongues
Do hiss me into madness.—Lo, now! lo!
Here comes a spirit up high, and to torment me
For bringing wood in slowly: I’ll fall flat;
Perchance, he will not mind me.

Enter Trinculo.

Trin. Here’s neither bush nor shrub to bear off Any weather at all, and another storm brewing: I hear it sing! the wind: yond’ same black cloud, yond’ huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would Shed his liquor. If it should thunder, as it did before,
I know not where to hide my head: yond’ same cloud cannot choose but fall by pavilions.—What Have we here? a man or a fish? Dead or alive? A fish: he smells like a fish; a very ancient and fish-lke smell; a kind of, not of the newest, Poor John.
A strange fish! Were I in England now, (as once I was,) and had but this fish painted, not a holiday foul there but would give a piece of silver: there would this monster make a man: any strange beast there makes a man. When they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legg’d like a man, and his fins like arms! Warm’d in the sun? I do now my opinion, hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunder-bolt.

[Thunder.] Alas! the storm is come again: my best way is to creep under his subterfuge; there is no other shelter hereabout: misery acquaints a man with strange befellows. I will here shrud, till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter Stephano, singing: a bottle in his hand.

Str. I shall no more to sea, to sea,
Here shall I die a-shore:—
This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man’s funeral:
Well, here’s my comfort.

[Drinks.

The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I,
The gunner, and his mate,
Lov’d Mall, Meg, and Marian, and Margery,
But none of us card for Kate;
For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a sailor, Go hang!
She lov’d not the savour of tar nor of pitch,
Yet a sailor might scratch her where’er she did itch:
Then, to sea, boys, and let her go hang.

This is a scurvy tune too; but here’s my comfort.

[Drinks.

Cal. Do not torment me: O!

Str. What’s the matter? Have we devils here?
Do you put tricks upon us with savages, and men of Inde? ’At! I have not scaped drowning, to be afraid now of your four legs; for it hath been said, as proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground; and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at nostrils.

Cal. The spirit torments me: O!

Str. This is some monster of the isle, with four legs, who hath got, as I take it, an age. Where the devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief, if it be but for that. If I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he’s a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat’s-leather.
Cal. Do not torment me, pr'ythee: I'll bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He's in his fit now, and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle: if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit. If I can recover him, and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him: he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Cal. Thou dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: now Prosper works upon thee.

Ste. Come on your ways: open your mouth; here is that which will give language to you, cat. Open your mouth: this will shake your slacking, I can tell you, and that soundly: you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps again.

Trin. I should know that voice: it should be—

Cal. But he is drowned, and these are devils. O! defend me!

Ste. Four legs, and two voices,—a most delicate monster! His forward voice, now, is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is to utter foul speeches, and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague. Come, —Amen! I will pour some in thy other throat.

Trin. Stephano! Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy!

Trin. I mercy! This is a devil, and no monster: I will leave him; I have no long-spoon.

Trin. Stephano!—if thou best Stephano, touch me, and speak to me; for I am Trinculo;—be not afraid,—thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth. I'll pull thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. Thou art very Trinculo, indeed! How cam'st thou to be the siege of this moon-call? Can he vent Trinculo?

Trin. I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke.—But art thou not drowned, Stephano? I hope now, thou art not drowned. Is the storm overthrown? I hid me under the dead moon-call's gable-ding for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano! two Neapolitans escaped!

Ste. Pr'ythee, do not turn me about: my stomach is not constant.

Cal. [Aside.] These be fine things, an if they be: That's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor: I will kneel to him.

Ste. How didst thou escape? How cam'st thou hither? swear by this bottle, how thou cam'st hither. I escaped upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved overboard, by this bottle! Which I made of the bark of a tree, with mine own hands, since I was cast a-shore.

Cal. I'll swear, upon that bottle, to be thy true sultan; for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here, kiss the book. Though thou canst swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

Cal. Here, kiss the book. Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Trin. O Stephano! hast any more of this? Ste. The whole butt, man: my cellar is in a rock by the sea-side, where my wine is hid. How now, moon-call! how does thine ague?

Cal. Hast thou not dropped from heaven?

Ste. Out o' the moon, I do assure thee: I was the man in the moon, when time was.

Cal. I have seen thee in her, and I do adore thee: my mistress showed me thee, and thy dog, and thy bush.

Ste. Come, swear to that; kiss the book. I will furnish it anon with new contents. Swear.

Trin. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster,—I afraid of him,—a very weak monster. —The man i' the moon!—a most poor credulous monster!—Well drawn, monster, in good sooth.

Cal. I'll show thee every fertile inch o' the island; and I will kiss thy foot. I pr'ythee, be my god.

Trin. By this light, a most peridious and drunken monster: when his god's asleep, he'll rob his bottle. Cal. I'll kiss thy foot: I'll swear myself thy subject.

Ste. Come on, then; down, and swear.

Trin. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster. A most scurvy monster! I could find in my heart to beat him,—

Ste. Come, kiss.

Trin. —But that the poor monster's in drink.

An abominable monster! —[teeth berries;

Cal. I'll show thee the best springs; I'll pluck I'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough. A plague upon the tyrant that I serve! I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee,

Ste. Thou wondrous man.

Trin. A most ridiculous monster, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard!

[grow;

Cal. I pr'ythee, let me bring thee where crabs And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts; Show thee a jay's nest, and instruct thee how To snare the nimble marmozet; I'll bring thee To clustering filberts, and sometimes I'll get thee Young sea-nells from the rock. Wilt thou go with me?

Ste. I pr'ythee now, lead the way, without any more talking.—Trinculo, the king and all our company else being drowned, we will inherit here.—

[To CAL. Here; bear my bottle. —Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again.

Cal. Farewell, master; farewell, farewell.

[Sings drunkenly.

Trin. A howling monster; a drunken monster.

Cal. No more damn'd I'll make for fish;

Nor fetch in fishing At requiring.
Nor scrape trenches, nor wash dish;

'Tis a Cup of Caliban,
Has a new master—Get a new man.

Freedom, hey-day! hey-day, freedom! freedom!

[hey-day, freedom!

Ste. O brave monster! lead the way. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter Ferdinand, bearing a leg.

Fer. There be some sports are painful, and their labour Delight in them sets off: some kinds of baseness Are nobly undergone; and most poor matters Point to rich ends. This my mean task Would be as heavy to me, as odious; but The mistress which I serve quickens what's dead, And makes my labours pleasures: O! she is Ten times more gentle than her father's crabbit;
And he's composed of harshness. I must remove
Some thousands of these logs, and pile them up,
Upon a sore injunction: my sweet mistress
Weeps when she sees me work; and says such base-
Had never like executor. I forget: [near
But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my labours;
Most busy, least when I do it.

Enter MIRANDA; and PROSPERO at a distance.

Mira. Alas! now, pray you,
Work not so hard: I would the lightning had Burnt up those logs that you are enjoin'd to pile.
Pray, set it down, and rest you: when this burns,
'Twill weep for having wearied you. My father
Is hard at study; pray now, rest yourself;
He's safe for these three hours.

Far. O, most dear mistress! The sun will set, before I shall discharge
What I must strive to do.

Mira. If you'll sit down, I'll bear your logs the while. Pray, give me that: I'll carry it to the pile.

Far. No, precious creature: I had rather crack my spine, than break my back, Than you should such dishonour undergo,
While I sit lazy by.

Mira. It would become me As well as it does you: and I should do it With much more ease; for my good will is to it, And yours is against it. Poor worm! thou art infected;
This visitation shows it.

Mira. You look wearily. [Near
Far. No, noble mistress, 'tis fresh morning with When you are by at night. I do beseech you,— Chieflly that I might set it in my prayer,— What is your name?

Mira. Miranda.—O my father! I have broke your best to say so.

Far. Adim'd Miranda! Indeed, the top of admiration; worth What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady I have e'er had with best regard; and many a time The harmony of their tongues hath into bondage Brought my too diligent car: for several virtues Have I liked several women; never any With so fall soul, but some defect in her Did quarrel with the noblest grace she ow'd, And put it to the foil: but you, O you! So perfect, and so peerless, are created Of every creature's best. I do not know

Mira. One of my sex; no woman's face remember, Save, from my glass, mine own; nor have I seen More that I may call men, than you, good friend, And my dear father: how features are abroad, I am skill-lesse of; but, by my modesty, (The jewel in my down) I would not wish Any companion in the world but you; Nor can imagination form a shape, Besides yourself, to like of. But I prattle Something too wildly, and my father's precepts I then do forget.

Far. I am, in my condition, A prince, Miranda; I do think, a king; (I would, not so) and would no more endure This wooden slavery, than to suffer The flesh-fly blow my mouth. —Hear my soul speak: The very instant that I saw you, did My heart fly to your service; there resides, To make me slave to it; and for your sake, Am I this patient log-man.

Mira. Do you love me?

Far. O heaven! O earth! bear witness to this And crown what I profess with kind event, [sound, If I speak true: if hollowly, invert What best is boded me to mischief! I, Beyond all limit of what else i' the world, Do love, prize, honour you.

Mira. I am a fool To weep at what I'm glad of.

Pro. [Aside.] Fair encounter Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain grace On that which breeds between them!

Far. Wherefore weep you?

Mira. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer What I desire to give; and much less take What I shall die to want. But this is trifling; And all the more it seeks to hide itself, The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cunning! And prompt me, plain and holy innocence! I am your wife, if you will marry me; If not, I'll die your maid: to be your fellow You may deny me; but I'll be your servant, Whether you will or no.

Far. My mistress, dearest,
And I thus humble ever.

Mira. My husband, then?

Far. Ay, with a heart as willing As bondage e'er of freedom: here's my hand. And mine, with my heart in't: and now Till half-an-hour hence. [farewell, Far. A thousand thousand! [Excite FER. and MIR. Pro. So glad of this as they, I cannot be. Who are surpris'd with all; but my rejoicing At nothing can be more. I'll to my book; For yet, ere supper time, must I perform Much business appertaining.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Another part of the Island. Enter CALIBAN, with a bottle, STEFANIO, and TRINCULO.

Ste. Tell not me:—when the butt is out, we will drink water; not a drop before: therefore bear up, and board 'er—Servant-monster, drink to me.

Trin. Servant-monster? the folly of this island! they say, there's but five upon this isle: we are three of them; if the other two be brained like us, the state totters.

Ste. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee: thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trin. Where should they be set else? he were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tail.

Ste. My man-monster hath drowned his tongue in sack: for my part, the sea cannot drown me; I swim, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues, off and on, by this light.—Thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.

Trin. Your lieutenant, if you list; he's no stand- Ste. We'll not run, monsieur monster. [ard.

Trin. Nor go neither: but you'll lie, like dogs, and yet say nothing neither.

Ste. Moon-call, speak once in thy life, if thou boast a good moon-call. Cal. How does thy honour? Let me lick thy shoe. I'll not serve him, he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou liest, most ignorant monster: I am in case to justle a constable. Why, thou debased fish thou, was there ever man a coward that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day? Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish, and half a monster?

Cal. Lo, how he mocks me! wilt thou let him, my lord?

Trin. Lord, quoth he!—that a monster should be such a natural!

Cal. Lo, lo, again! bite him to death, I pr’ythee.

Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in thy head: if you prove a mutineer, the next tree—The poor monster’s my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity.

Cal. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleas’d to hearken once again to the suit I made to thee?

Ste. Marry, will I; kneel and repeat it: I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariel, invisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant; a sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me of the island.

Ari. Thou liest.

[thou;

Cal. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, I would my valiant master would destroy thee: I do not lie.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in his tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trin. Why, I said nothing.

Ste. Mum then, and no more.—[To CALIBAN.] Proceed.

Cal. I say by sorcery he got this isle; From me he got it: if thy greatness will, Revenge it on him—for, I know, thou dost; But this thing dare not.

Ste. That’s most certain.

Cal. Thou shalt be lord of it, and I’ll serve thee.

Ste. How now, shall this be compassed? Canst thou bring me to the party?

Cal. Yes, yes, my lord: I’ll yield him thee asleep, Where thou mayst knock a nail into his head.

Ari. Thou liest; thou canst not. [patch!—

Cal. What a pied ninny’s this! Thou scurvy old beech thee greatness, give him blows, And take his bottle from him: when that’s gone, He shall drink naught but brine; for I’ll not show Where the quick freshes are.

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger: intercept the monster one word farther, and, by this hand, I’ll turn my mercies out of doors, and make a stock-fish of thee.

Ste. Didst thou not say he lied?

Ari. Thou liest.

Ste. Do I so? take thou that. [Strikes him.] As you like this, give me the lie another time.

Trin. I did not give the lie. Out o’ your wits, and hearing too!—A pox o’ your bottle! this can sack and drinking do.—A murrain on your monster, and the devil take your fingers!

Cal. Ha, ha, ha!

Ste. Now, forward with your tale.—Pr’ythee stand farther off.

Cal. Beat him enough; after a little time, I’ll beat him too.

Ste. Stand farther.—Come, proceed.

Cal. Why, as I told thee, ’tis a custom with him I the afternoon to sleep: there thou mayst’brain Having first seiz’d his books; or with a log [him, Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake, Or cut his beard with thy knife. Remember, First to possess his books; for without them He’s but a sot, as I am, nor hath not One spirit to command: they all do hate him, As rootedly as I. Burn but his books. He has brave steatina, (for so he calls them,) Which, when he has a house, he’ll deck withal: And that most deeply to consider is The beauty of his daughter; he himself Calls her a nonpareil: I never saw a woman, But only Syracuse my dam, and she; But she as far surpasseth Syracuse, As great’st does least.

Ste. Is it so brave a last?

Cal. Ay, lord; she will become thy bed, I warrant, And bring thee forth brave brood.

Ste. Monster, I will kill this man: his daughter and I will be king and queen, (save our graces!) and Trinculo and thyself shall be viceroy.—Dost thou like the plot, Trinculo?

Trin. Excellent.

Ste. Give me thy hand: I am sorry I best thee; but, while thou livest, keep a good tongue in thy head.

Cal. Within this half hour wilt he asleep; Wilt thou destroy him then?

Ste. Ay, on mine honour.

Ari. This will I tell my master.

Cal. Thou mak’st me merry: I am full of pleasure. Let us be jocund; will you troll the catch You taught me but while-ere?

Ste. At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason. Come on, Trinculo, let us sing. [Sings.

Flout ’em, and skout ’em; and skout ’em, and Flout ’em: Thought is free.

Cal. That’s not the tune. [ARIEL plays the tune on a Tabor and Pips.

Ste. What is this same?

Cal. This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of Nobody.

Ste. If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy like- ness: if thou beest a devil, take ’t as thou list.

Trin. O, forgive me my sins!

Ste. He that dies, pays all debts: I defy thee.— Mercy upon us!

Cal. Art thou afraid?

Ste. No, no, master, not I.

Cal. Be not afraid: the isle is full of noises, Sounds, and sweet airs, that give delight, and hurt Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments [not. Will hum about mine ears; and sometimes voices, That, if I then had wak’d after long sleep, Will make me sleep again: and then, in dreaming, The clouds, methought, would open, and show riches Ready to drop upon me; that, when I wak’d, I cried to dream again.

Ste. This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroyed.

Ste. That shall be by and by: I remember the story.

Trin. The sound is going away: let’s follow it, and after do our work.

Ste. Lead, monster; we’ll follow.—I would I could see this taborer! he lays it on.

SCENE III.—Another part of the Island.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adria, Francisco, and Others.

Gon. By 't la'kin', I can go no farther, Sir; My old bones ache; here's a maze trod, indeed, Through forth-rights, and meanders; by your pa- I needs must rest me. [Gonzalo enters.

Alon. Old lord, I cannot blame thee, Who am myself attach'd with weariness, To the dulling of my spirits: sit down, and rest. Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it No longer for my flattering: he is drown'd, Whom thus we stray to find; and the sea mocks Our frustrate search on land. Well, let him go.

Ant. [Aside to Seb.] I am right glad that he's so out of hope. Do not, for one repulse, forego the purpose That you resolv'd to effect.

Seb. [Aside to Ant.] The next advance Will we take throughly.

Ant. [Aside to Seb.] Let it be to-night: For, now they are oppress'd with travel, they Will not, nor cannot, use such vigilance, As when they are fresh.

Enter several strange Shapes, bringing in a banqueting table: they dance about it with gentle actions of salutation: and, inviting the King, &c., to eat, they depart.

Alon. What harmony is this? my good friends, Gon. Marvelous sweet music! [Bark!

Alon. Give us kind keepers, heavens! What were these?

Seb. A living drollery. Now I will believe That there are unicorns; that in Arabia There is one tree, the phoenix' throne; one phoenix

At this hour reign ing there.

Ant. I'll believe both; And what does else want credit, come to me, And I' ll be sworn 'tis true: travellers ne'er did lie, Though fools at home condemn them.

Gon. [Aside.] If in Naples I should report this now, would they believe me? If I should say, I saw such islands, (For, certes, these are people of the island,) Who, though they are of monstrous shape, yet, note, Their manners are more gentle-kind, than of Our human generation you shall find Many, nay, almost any.

Pro. [Aside.] Honest lord, Thou hast said well; for some of you there present Are worse than devils.

Alon. I cannot too much muse, Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound, express (Although they want the use of tongue) a kind [ing Of excellent dumb discourse.

Frau. They vanish'd strangely.

Seb. No matter, since They have left their viands behind; for we have Will's you please you taste of what is here?

Alon. Faith, Sir, you need not fear. When we were boys, Who would believe that there were mountaineers Dew-lapp'd like bulls, whose throats had hanging at them Wallets of flesh? or that there were such men, Whose heads stood in their breasts? which now we find, Each puret out of five for one will bring us Good warrant of.

Alon. I will stand to, and feed, Although my last; no matter, since I feel The best is past.—Brother, my lord the duke, Stand to, and do as we.

Thunder and lightning. Enter patricians, like a harpy: close their wings upon the table: and, with a quaint device, the banquet vanishes.

Ari. You are three men of sin, whom destiny (That hath to instrument this lower world, And what is in 't) the never-surfeited sea Hath caused to belch up; and on this island, Where man doth not inhabit; you 'mongst men Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad; [Seeing Alon., Seb., &c., draw their swords.

And even with such like valour men hang and drown Their proper selves. You fools! I and my fellows Are ministers of death and elements. Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish One dowle that's in my plume: my fellow-ministers Are like invulnerable. If you could hurt, Your swords are now too many for your strengths, And will not be uplifted. But, remember, (For that's my business to you) you three From Milan did supplant good Prospero; Expos'd unto the sea, (which hath requir'd it,) Him, and his innocent child: for which foul deed The powers, delaying, not forgetting, have Incend'd the seas and shores, yes, all the creatures, Against your peace. Thee, of thy son, Alonso, They have bereft; and do pronounce, by me, Lingering perdition (worse than any death) Can be at once) shall step by step attend [from You, and your ways; whose wrath's to guard you (Which here in this most desolate isle, else falls Upon your head) is nothing, but heart's sorrow, And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in thunder: then, to soft music, enter the shrieks again, and dance with masks and capers, and carry out the table.

Pro. [Aside.] Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou

Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had, devouring. Of my instruction hast thou nothing 'bated, In what thou hast to say: so with good life And observation strange, my master ministers Their several kinds have done. My high charms And these, mine enemies, are all knit up [work, In their distractions: they now are in my power; And in these fits I leave them, while I visit Young Ferdinand, (whom they suppose is drown'd,) And his and my lov'd darling. [Exit above.

Gon. I' the name of something holy, Sir, why In this strange stare?

Alon. [stand you] O, it is monstrous! monstrous! Methought the billows spoke, and told me of it; The winds did sing it to me; and the thunder, That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounc'd The name of Prosper: it did lase my trespass. Therefore my son I' the oze is bedded; and I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded, And with him there lie moulder. [Exit.
THE TEMPEST.

[ACT IV.]

Scene I.—Before Prospero’s Cell.

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pro. If I have too austere a purpose, you, your compensation makes amends for it. I have given you here a thread of mine own life, or that for which I live; whom once again I tender to thy hand. All thy vexations were but my trials of thy love, and thou Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore Heaven, I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand! Do not smile at me that I boast her off. For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise, and make it halt behind her.

Pro. Against an oracle.

Pro. Then, as my gift, and thine own acquisition, Worthily purchase’d, take my daughter: but, if thou dost break her virgin knot before All sanctimonious ceremonies may With full and holy rite be minister’d, No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall To make this contract grow; but barren hate, Sour-ery’d disdain, and discord, shall bewray The union of your bed with weeds so loathly, That you shall hate it both: therefore, take heed, As Hymen’s lamps shall light you.

Pro. As I hope for quiet days, fair issue, and long life, With such love as ’tis now, the murkiesst den, The most opportune place, the strong’st suggestion Our unwrung genius can, shall never melt Mine honour into lust, to take away The edge of that day’s celebration, When I shall think, or Phoebus’ steeds are founder’d, Or night keep chain’d below.

Pro. Fairly spoke, sit then, and talk with her; she is thine own.

What, Ariel! my industrious servant, Ariel! Enter Ariel.

Ari. What would my potent master? here I am.

Pro. Thou and thy meener fellow your last service willingly perform, and I must use you in such another trick. Go, bring the rabble, o’er whom I give thee power, here, to this place; incite them to quick motion; for I must bestow upon the eyes of this young couple some vanity of mine art: it is my promise, and they expect it from me.

Ari. Presently?

Pro. Ay, with a twinkle.

Ari. Before you can say, “Come,” and “Go,” and breathe twice, and cry, “So so,” each one, tripping on his toe, will be here with mop and mop. Do you love me, master? no?

Pro. Deary, my delicate Ariel. Do not approach till thou dost hear me call.

Ari. Well I conceive. [Exit.]

Pro. Look, thou be true. Do not give dalliance till much the reign; the strongest oaths are straw to the fire: be more abominable, or else, good night, your vow.

Fre. I warrant you, Sir; the white-cold virgin snow upon my heart abates the ardor of my liver.

Iri. Well. Now come, my Ariel! bring a corollary, rather than want a spirit: appear, and pertly. No tongue, all eyes; be silent.

A Masque. Enter Iria.

Iri. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich leases of wheat, yea, barley, vetches, oats, and peas; Thy turnips, onions, where lie nibbling sheep, And flat meads thatch’d with stover, to keep them; Thy banks with peonied and lilled brims, Which spunge April at thy best betroth, To make cold nymphs chasten crowns; and thy brawn groves, Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves, Being less-bora; thy pôle-dipt vineyard; And thy sea-marine, sterile, and rocky-hard, Where thou thyself dost air: the queen o’ the sky, Whose watery arch and messenger am I, Bids thee leave these; and with her sovereign grace, Here on this grass-plot, in this very place, To come and sport. Her peacocks fly amain: Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter Ceres.

Cer. Hall, many-colour’d messenger, that ne’er Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter; Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers Diffusest honey-drops, refreshing showers; And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown My bosky acres, and my unshrub’d down, Rich scarf to my proud earth; why hast thy queen Summon’d me hither, to this short-guards green? Iri. A contract of true love to celebrate, And some donation freely to estate On the bland’s lovers.

Cer. Tell me, heavenly bow, if Venus, or her son, as thou dost know, now doth attend the queen; since they did plot The means that dusky Dis my daughter got, Her and her blind boy’s scandal’d company I have forsworn.

Ari. Of her society.

Be not afraid: I met her deity cutting the clouds towards Paphos, and her son Dove-drawn with her. Here thought they to have done Some wanton charm upon this man and maid, whose vows are, that no bed-rite shall be paid Till Hymen’s torch be lighted; but in vain: Mars’s hot minion in return’d again: her wapish-head’d son has broke his arrows, swears he will shoot no more, but play with spar- And be a boy right out. [row.

Cer. Highest queen of state, Great Juno comes: I know her by her gait, Enter Juno.

Juno. How does my bounteous sister? Go with
To bless this train, that they may prosper be, [inc
And honour'd in their issue.

SONG.

Juno. Honour, riches, marriage-blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hursly joys be still upon you!
Juno sings her blessings on you.

Ceres. Earth's increase, foison plenty,
Bread and gardens never empty;
Wines, with clare-ring branches growing;
Plants, with goodly bursber bowing;
Spring come to you, at the farthest,
Is the very end of harvest!
Scarcity and want shall shun you;
Ceres' blessing so is on you.

Ferr. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly. May I be bold
To think these spirits?

Pro. Spirits, which by mine art
I have from their confines call'd to enact
My present fancies. [Exit]

Ferr. Let me live here ever:
So rare a wonder'd father, and a wife,
Make this place Paradise;
Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris
On employment.

Pro. Sweet now, silence!
Juno and Ceres whisper seriously;
There's something else to do: hush, and be mute,
Or else our spell is mar't.d.
Iris. You nymphs, calld Naiaids, of the winding Brooks,
With your sedg'd crowns, and ever-harmless looks,
Leave your crisp channels, and on this green land
Answer your summons: Juno does command.
Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
A contract of true love: be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.

You sun-burn'd sicklemen, of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow, and be merry;
Make holiday: your eye-strain hats put on,
And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
In country footing.

Enter certain Reapers, properly habited; they join with
The nymphs in a graceful dance: towards the end
Whereof Prospero starts suddenly, and speaks: after Which, to a strange, hollow, and confused noise, they Rush hasty.

Pro. [Aside.] I had forgot that foul conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban, and his confederates,
Against my life: the minute of their plot
Is almost come.—[To the Spirits.] Well done;—
avoid,—no more.

Ferr. This is strange: your father's in some pass
That works him strongly. [sion

Mira. Never till this day.

Saw I him touch'd with anger so distemper'd.

Pro. You do look, my son, in a mov'd sort,
As if you were dismay'd: be cheerful, Sir.
Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air:
And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloth-carp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yet, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
I cease not a rack behind. We are such stuff

As dreams are made of, and our little life
Is round'd with a sleep.—Sir, I am writ'd:
Bear with my weakness; my old brain is troubled:
Be not disturb'd with my infirmity.
If you be pleas'd, retire into my cell,
And there repose: a turn or two I'll walk,
To still my beating mind.

Ferr. Mira. We wish your peace.

Pro. Come with a thought!—[To them.] I thank you.—Ariel, come!

Enter Ariel.

Ariel. Thy thoughts I cleave to:
What's thy pleasure?

Pro. Spirit,
We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ari. Ay, my commander: when I presented Ceres,
I thought I had told thee of it; but I fear'd,
Lest I might anger thee.

Pro. Say again, where didst thou leave these var-

Ari. I told you, Sir, they were red-hot with drink-
So full of valour, that they smote the air
For breathing in their faces; beat the ground
For kissing of their feet; yet always boding Towards their project. Then I beat my tabor;
At which, like unback'd colts, they prick'd their ears,
Advanc'd their eye-ids, lifted up their noses,
As they smelt music: so I charmed their ears.
That, calf-like, they my lowing follow'd through Tooth'd briers, sharp furzes, prickling goss, and thorns,
Which enter'd their frail shins: at last I left them
I the filthy mantled pool beyond your cell,
There dancing up to the chins, that the foul lake
O'errunk their feet.

Pro. This was well done, my bird.
Thy shape invisible retain thou still:
The trumpery in my house, go, bring it hither,
For state to catch these thieves.

Ari. I go, I go. [Exit]

Pro. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
Nurture can never stick; on whom my pains,
Humaneuly taken, all, all lost, quite lost;
And as with age his body uglier grows,
So his mind canker: I will plague them all,
Even to roaring;

Re-enter Ariel, loaded with glittering apparel, &c.

Prosp. and Ariel remain unseen. Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all set.

Cal. Pray you, tred softly, that the blind mole may not
Hear a foot fall: we now are near his cell.

Ste. Monster, your fairy, which you say is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack with us.

Trin. Monster, I do smell all horse-piss; at which my nose is in great indignation.

Ste. So is mine.—Do you hear, monster? If I should take a displeasure against you, look you,—

Trin. Thou wert but a lost monster.

Cal. Good my lord, give me thy favour still.
Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to Shall hoodwink this mischance: therefore speak
All's hush'd as midnight yet.

[softly]

Trin. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool.—

Ste. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.
Trin. That's more to me than my wetting: yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

Ste. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o'er ears for my labour.

Cal. Pr'ythee, my king, be quiet. Seest thou here,

This is the mouth o' the cell: no noise, and enter.

Do that good mischief, which may make this island
Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban,

For aye thy foot-ticker.

Sir. Give me thy hand. I do begin to have bloody thoughts.

Trin. O king Stephano! O peer! O worthy Stephano! Look, what a wardrobe here is for thee!

Cal. Let it alone, thou fool; it is but trash.

Trin. O, ho, monster! we know what belongs to a frippery.—O king Stephano!

Sir. Put off that gown, Trinculo; by this hand, I'll have that gown.

Trin. Thy grace shall have it.

Cal. The dropsy drowns this fool! what do you mean,

To do thus on such luggage? Let's set on,

And do the murder first: if he awake,

From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with pinches,

Make us strange stuff.

Ste. Be quiet, monster.—Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line: now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair, and prove a bald jerkin.

Trin. Do, do we steal by line and level, and't like your grace.

Sir. I thank thee for that jest; here's a garment for't; wit shall not go unrewarded, while I am king of this country. "Stead by line and level," is an excellent pass of pot; there's another garment for't.

Trin. Monster, come, put some lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will have none on't; we shall lose our time,

And all be turn'd to barnacles, or to apes

With foreheads villainous low.

Ste. Monster, lay to your fingers: help to bear this away, where my hoghead of wine is, or I'll turn you out of my kingdom. Go to; carry this.

Trin. And this.

Sir. Ay, and this.

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers Spirits, in shape of hounds, and hunt them about: Prospero and Ariel setting them on.

Pros. Hey, Mountain, hey!

Ari. Silver! there it goes! Silver!

Pros. Fury, Fury! there Tyrant, there! hark, hark!

[Cal, Ste., and Trin. are driven out.

Go, charge my goblins that they grind their joints

With dry convulsions; shorten up their sinews

With aged cramps; and more pinch-spotted make them

Than pard, or cat o' mountain.

Ari. Hark! they roar.

Pros. Let them be hunted soundly. At this hour

Lie at my mercy all mine enemies:

Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou

Shalt have the air at freedom: for a little,

Follow, and do me service.

[Exeunt.
THE TEMPEST.

And, deeper than did ever plummet sound,
I'll drown my book. [Solemn music.

Re-enter ARIEL: after him, ALONSO, with a frantic gesture, attended by GONZALO and ANTONIO in the same manner, attended by ADRIAN and FRANCISCO: they all enter the circle which PROSPERO had made, and there stand'd charmed: which PROSPERO observing, speaks.

A solemn air, and the best comforter
To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains,
Now useless, boil'd within thy skull! There stand,
For you are spell-stopp'd.

Hoy Gonzalo, honourable man,
Mine eyes, even sociable to the show of thine,
Fall fellow drops.—The charm dissolves space;
And as the morning steals upon the night,
Melting the darkness, so their rising senses
Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason.—O good Gonzalo!
My true preserver, and a loyal Sir
To him thou follow'st, I will pay thy graces
Home, both in word and deed.—Most cruelly
Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter:
Thy brother was a fartherer in the act;
Thou'rt pinch'd for't now, Sebastian.—Flesh and blood,
You brother mine, that entertain'd ambition,
Expell'd remorse and nature; who, with Sebastian,
(Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong,)
Would here have kill'd thy king; I do forgive thee,
Unnatural though thou art.—Their understanding
Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shores,
That now lie foul and muddy. Not one of them
That yet looks on me, or would know me.—Ariel,
Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell:—

[Exit ARIEL.

I will dis-case me, and myself present;
As I was sometime Milan.—Quickly, spirit;
Thou shalt ere long be free.

ARIEL re-enters, singing, and helps to attire PROSPERO. ARIEL. Where the bee sucks, there suck I:
In a cowslip's bell I lie;
There I conch when owls do cry.
On the hea'ts back I do fly
After summer, merrily,
Merrily, merrily shall I live now,
Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

PROSPERO. Why, that's my dainty Ariel! I shall miss thee;
But yet thou shalt have freedom;—so, so, so,
To the king's ship, invisible as thou art:
There shalt thou find the mariners asleep
Under the hatches; the master and the boatswain
Being awake, enforce them to this place,
And presently, I pr'ythee.

ARIEL. I drink the air before me, and return
Or 'er thy pulse twice beat. [Exit.

GONZALO. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabit here; some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country!

PROSPERO. Behold, Sir king,
The wronged duke of Milan, Prospero.
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body;
And thee and thy company, I bid
A hearty welcome.

ALONSO. Wher' thou beatest, he, or no,
Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me,
As late I have been, I know not: thy pulse
Beats, as of flesh and blood; and, since I saw thee,
Th' affliction of my mind amends, with which,
I fear, a madness held me. This must crave
(An if this be at all) a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign; and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs. —But how should be Living, and be here? [Prospero

PROSPERO. First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honour cannot Be measured or confin'd. Whether this be,
Or be not, I'll not swear.

PROSPERO. You do yet taste
Some subtleties o' the isle, that will not let you Believe things certain.—Welcome, my friends all;—
[Aside to SER. and ANT. But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded,
I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you,
And justify you traitors; at this time
I will tell no tales.

SER. [Aside.] The devil speaks in him.

PROSPERO. No.

PROSPERO. For you, most wicked Sir, whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy rankest fault; all of them; and require
My dukedom of thee, which, perforce, I know,
Thou must restore.

ALONSO. If thou beest Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation:
How thou hast met us here, who three hours since
Were wreck'd upon this shore; where I have lost, (How sharp the point of this remembrance is!) My dear son Ferdinand.

PROSPERO. I am woé for't, Sir.

ALONSO. Irreparable is the loss; and patience
Says it is past her curc.

PROSPERO. I rather think,
You have not sought her help; of whose soft grace,
For the like loss I have her sovereign aid,
And rest myself content.

ALONSO. You the like loss?

PROSPERO. As great to me, as late; and, supportable
To make the dear loss, have I means much weaker Than you may call to comfort you; for
I have lost my daughter.

ALONSO. A daughter? O heavens! that they were living both in Naples,
The king and queen there! that they were, I wish Myself were muddied in that oozy bed
Where my son lies. When did you lose your daughter?

PROSPERO. In this last tempest. I perceive, these lords
At this encounter do so much admire,
That they devour their reason, and scarce think
Their eyes do offices of truth, their words
Are natural breath: but, howso'er ye have Been justled from your senses, know for certain,
That I am Prospero, and that very duke
Which was thrust forth of Milan; who most strangely Upon this shore, where you were wreck'd, was
To be the lord on't. No more yet of this; [larded,
For 'tis a chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a breakfast, nor Befitting this first meeting. Welcome, Sir;
This cell's my court: here have I few attendants,
And subjects none abroad: pray you, look in.
My dukedom since you have given me again,
I will requite you with as good a thing;
At least, bring forth a wonder, to content ye
As much as me my dukedom.
The entrance of the Cell open, and discover Ferdinand and Miranda playing at chess.

Mira. Sweet lord, you play me false.
Fer. No, my dearest love, I would not for the world. [wryangle.
Mira. Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should
And I would call it fair play.
Alon. If this prove
A vision of the island, one dear son
Shall I twice lose.
Seth. A most high miracle!
Fer. Though the sea threaten, they are merciful:
I have cured them without cause.

[FER. kneels to ALON.

Alon. Now, all the blessings
Of a glad father compass thee about!
Art, and say how thou canst be here
Mira. O, wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there here!
How beauteous mankind is! O, brave new world,
That has such people in’t!

Pro. ’Tis new to thee.

Alon. What is this maid, with whom thou wast at play?
Your eld’s acquaintance cannot be three hours:
Is she the goddess that hath sever’d us,
And brought us thus together?
Fer. Sir, she is mortal;
But, by immortal providence, she’s mine:
I chose her, when I could not ask my father
For his advice, nor thought I had one. She
Is daughter to this famous duke of Milan,
Of whom so often I have heard renown,
But never saw before; of whom I have Received a second life; and second father
This lady makes him to me.

Alon. I am here.
And O! how oddly will it sound, that I
Must ask my child forgiveness.

Pro. There, Sir, stop:
Let us not burden our remembrances
With a heaviness that’s gone.
Gen. I have inly wept.
Or should have spoke. ere this.—Look down, you
And on this couple drop a blessed crown! [gods,
For it is you that have chalk’d forth the way,
Which brought us hither.

Alon. I say, Amen, Gonzalo!

Gen. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue
Should become kings of Naples? O! rejoice
Beyond a common joy, and set it down
With gold on lasting pillars: in one voyage
Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis;
And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife
Where he himself was lost; Prospero, his dukedom
In a poor isle; and all of us, ourselves
When no man was his own.

Alon. [To Fer. and Mir.] Give me your hands:
Love, grief and sorrow still embrace his heart
That doth not wish you joy!

Gen. Be it so: Amen!

Re-enter Ariel, with the Master and Boatswain amassedly following.

O look, Sir! look, Sir! here are more of us.
I prayed blessed, if a gallows were on land,
This fellow could not drown.—Now, blaspheomy,
Cal. I shall be pinch'd to death.
AIon. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler?
SOb. He is drunk now: where had he wine?
AIon. And Trinculo is reeling ripe: where should they Find this grand liquor that hath gilded them?—

How camest thou in this pickle?

Trin. I have been in such a pickle, since I saw you last, that, I fear me, will never out of my bones:
I shall not fear fly-blowing.
SOb. Why, how now, Stephano!
SOb. O! touch me not: I am not Stephano, but a cramp.

Pro. You’d be king of the isle, sirrah?
SOb. I should have been a sore one, then.
AIon. This is a strange thing as ever I looked on.
[Pointing to Caliban.

Pro. He is as disproportion’d in his manners,
As in his shape.—Go, sirrah, to my cell;
Take with you your companions: as you look
To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.
Cal. Ay, that I will; and I’ll be wise hereafter,
And seek for grace.
AIon. What a thrice-double ass
Was I, to take this drunkard for a god,
And worship this dull fool!

Pro. Go to; away!

Alon. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you
SOb. Or stole it, rather.
[Exeunt Cal, Ste, and Trin.

Pro. Sir, I invite your highness, and your train,
To my poor cell, where you shall take your rest
For this one night; which, part of it, I’ll waste
With such discourse, as, I not doubt, shall make it
Go quick away; the story of my life,
And the particular accidents gone by,
Since I came to this isle: and in the morn
I’ll bring you to your ship, and so to Naples,
Where I have hope to see the nuptial
Of these our dear-beloved solemn’d;
And thence retire me to my Milan, where Every third thought shall be my grave.

Alon. I long
To hear the story of your life, which must Take the ear strangely.

Pro. I’ll deliver all;
And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales,
And sail so expeditious, that shall catch
Your royal fleet far off.—[Aside to Ari.] My Ariel; Achick,
That is thy charge: then to the elements
Itc free, and fare thou well!—Please you, draw near.
[Exeunt.

EPILOGUE. Spoken by Prospero.
Now my charms are all o’erthrown,
And what strength I have’s mine own,
Which is most faint: now, ’tis true,
I must be here confin’d by you,
Or sent to Naples. Let me not,
Since I have my dukedom got,
And pardon’d the deceiver, dwell
In this bare island, by your spell;
But release me from my bands,
With the help of your good hands.

Gentle breath of yours my sails
Must fill, or else my project fails,
Which was to please. Now I want
Spirits to enforce, art to enchant;
And my ending is despair,
Unless I be relieved by prayer;
Which pierces so, that it assaults
Mercy itself, and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon’d be,
Let your indulgence set me free.
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

Scene II.

Pro. Indeed a sheep doth very often stray, An if the shepherd be a while away.

Speed. You conclude, that my master is a shepherd, then, and I a sheep? Pro. I do.

Speed. Why then, my horns are as his horns, whether I wake or sleep.

Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.

Speed. This proves me still a sheep.

Pro. True; and thy master a shepherd.

Speed. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Pro. It shall go hard, but I'll prove it by another.

Speed. The shepherd seeks the sheep, and not the sheep the shepherd; but I seek my master, and my master seeks not me: therefore, I am no sheep.

Pro. The sheep for fodder follow the shepherd, the shepherd for food follows not the sheep; thou for wages followest thy master, thy master for wages follows not thee: therefore thou art a sheep.

Speed. Such another proof will make me cry "Baa."

Pro. But, dost thou hear? gavest thou my letter to Julia?

Speed. Ay, Sir: I, a lost mutton, gave your letter to her, a laced mutton; and she, a laced mutton, gave me, a lost mutton, nothing for my labour.

Pro. Here's too small a pasture for such store of muttons.

Speed. If the ground be overcharged, you were soon sick her.

Pro. Nay, in that you are astray: 'twere best pound you.

Speed. Nay, Sir, less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

Pro. You mistake: I mean the pound, a pinfold.

Speed. From a pound to a pin? fold it over and over,

'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to your lover.

Pro. But what said she? [Speed nods.] Did she nod?

Speed. I.

Speed. You mistake, Sir: I say she did nod; and you ask me, if she did nod? and I say I.

Pro. And that set together, is—noddy.

Speed. Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.

Pro. No, no; you shall have it for bearing the letter.

Speed. Well, I perceive I must be fain to bear with you.

Pro. Why, Sir, how do you bear with me?

Speed. Marry, Sir, the letter is orderly; having nothing but the word "noddy" for my pains.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.

Speed. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.

Pro. Come, come; open the matter in brief: what said she?

Speed. Open your purse, that the money and the matter, may be both at once deliver'd.

Pro. Well, Sir, here is for your pains. [Giving him money.] What said she?

Speed. Truly, Sir, I think you 'll hardly win her.

Pro. Why, couldst thou perceive so much from her?

Speed. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her; no, not so much as a ducat for delivering your letter: and being so hard to me that brought your mind, I fear she'll prove as hard to you in telling your mind. Give her no token but stones; for she's as hard as steel.

Pro. What? said she nothing?

Speed. No, not so much as—"Take this for thy pains." To testify thy bounty, I thank you, she hast terved me; in requital whereof, henceforth carry your letters yourself: and so, Sir, I'll commend you to my master.

Pro. Go, go, be gone, to save your ship from Which cannot perish, having thee aboard. [wreck. Being destin'd to a drier death on shore.—][Exit Speed.

I must go send some better messenger: I fear my Julia would not deign my lines, Receiving them from such a worthless post. [Exit.]

Scene II.—Verona. Garden of Julia's House.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. But say, Lucetta, now we are alone, Wouldst thou, then, counsel me in love?

Luc. Ay, Madam; so you stumble not unheeded.

Jul. Of all the fair resort of gentlemen, [fully.

That every day with parle encounter me, In thy opinion which is worthiest love?

Luc. Please you, repeat their names, I'll show my According to my shallow simple skill. [mind

Jul. What think'st thou of the fair Sir Eglamour?

Luc. As of a knight well-spoken, neat, and fine; But, were I you, he never should be mine.

Jul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio?

Luc. Well of his wealth; but of himself, so so.

Jul. What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus?

Luc. Lord, lord! to see what folly reigned in us!

Jul. How now! what means this passion at his name?

Luc. Pardon, dear Madam: 'tis a passing shame, That I, unworthy body as I am, Should censure thus on lovely gentleman.

Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest?

Luc. Then thus,—of many good I think him best.

Jul. Your reason?

Luc. I have no other but a woman's reason: I think him so, because I think him so. [him?

Jul. And what thou have me cast my love on

Luc. Ay, if you thought your love not cast away.

Jul. Why, he, of all the rest, hath never mov'd me.

Luc. To be, of all the rest, I think, best loves ye.

Jul. His little speaking shows his love but small.

Luc. Fire that's closest kept burns most of all.

Jul. They do not love, that do not show their love.

Luc. O, they love least, that let men know their [love.

Jul. I would I knew his mind.

Luc. Peruse this paper, Madam. [Gives a letter.

Jul. "To Julia."—Say from whom?

Luc. That the contents will show.

Jul. Say, say, who gave it thee?

Luc. Sir Valentine's page; and sent, I think,

He would have given it you; but I, being in the way, Did in your name receive it: pardon the fault, I pray.

Jul. Now, by my moesty, a godly broker! Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines? To whisper and conspire against my youth?

Now, trust me, 'tis an office of great worth, And you an officer fit for the place.
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—MILAN. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Valentine and Speed.

Sed. Sir, your glove.

Val. Not mine; my gloves are on.

Sed. Why then this may be yours, for this is but one.

Val. Ha! let me see: ay, give it me, it's mine.—

Sweet ornament that deck's a thing divine!

Ah, Silvia, Silvia!

Sed. [Calling.] Madam Silvia! Madam Silvia!

Val. How now, sirrah!

Sed. She is not within hearing, Sir.

Val. Why, Sir, who late ye call her?

Sed. Your worship, Sir; or else I mistook.

Val. Well, you'll still be too forward. [slow.

Sed. And yet I was last chidden for being too

Val. Go to, Sir. Tell me, do you know Madam Silvia?

Sed. She that your worship loves?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in love?

Sed. Marry, by these special marks: first, you have learned, like Sir Proteus, to wreath your arms, like a matron; to relish a love-song, like a robin-redbreast; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence; to sigh, like a schoolboy that had lost his A B C; to weep, like a young wench that had buried her grandmother; to fast, like one that takes diet; to watch, like one that fears robbing; to speak paling, like a beggar at Hallowmass. You were wont, when you laughed, to crow like a cock; when you walked, to walk like one of the lions; when you fasted, it was presently after dinner; when you looked sadly, it was for want of money: and now you are metamorphosed with a mistress, that, when I look on you, I can hardly think you my master.

Val. Are all these things perceived in me?

Sed. They are all perceived without ye.

Val. Without me! they cannot.

Sed. Without you! may, that's certain; for, without you were so simple, none else would: but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in a utensil, that not an eye that sees you, but is a physician to comment on your malady.

Val. But tell me, dost thou know my lady Silvia?

Sed. She that you gaze on so, as she sits at supper?

Val. Hast thou observed that? even she I mean.

Sed. Why, Sir, I know her not.

Val. Dost thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet knowest her not?

Sed. Is she not hard-favoured, Sir?

Val. Not so fair, boy, as well-favoured.

Sed. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What dost thou know?

Sed. That she is not so fair, as (of you) well-favoured.

Val. I mean, that her beauty is exquisite, but her favour infinite.

Sed. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Sed. Marry, Sir, so painted to make her fair, that no man 'counts' her beauty.

Val. How esteemest thou me? I account of her beauty.
Val. Please you, I'll write your ladyship another.
Sil. And, when it's writ, for my sake read it
And, if it please you, so; if not, why, so; [over:
Val. If it please me, Madam! what then?
Sil. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour:
And so, good-morrow, servant. [Exit.
Speed. O jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible,
As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeple!
My master sues to her; and she hath taught her
He being her pupil, to become her tutor. [sitter,
O excellent device! was there ever heard a better,
That my master, being scribe, to himself should write the letter?
Val. How now, Sir! what, are you reasoning with yourself?
Speed. Nay, I was ryming: 'tis you that have the reason.
Val. To do what?
Speed. To be a spokesman from Madam Silvia.
Val. To whom?
Speed. To yourself. Why, she wooes you by a figure.
Val. What figure?
Speed. By a letter, I should say.
Val. Why, she hath not writ to me?
Speed. What need she, when she hath made you write to yourself? Why, do you not perceive the jest?
Val. No, believe me.
Speed. No believing you, indeed, Sir. But did you perceive her earnest?
Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.
Speed. Why, she hath given you a letter.
Val. That's the letter I writ to her friend.
Speed. And that letter hath she delivered, and there an end.
Val. I would it were no worse.
Speed. I'll warrant you, 'tis as well:
"For often have you writ to her; and she, in modesty,
Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply;
Or fearing else some messenger that might her mind discover,
Her self hath taught her love himself to write unto her lover."—
All this I speak in print, for in print I found it.—
Why muse you, Sir? 'tis dinner-time.
Val. I have dined.
Pro. Ay, but hearken, Sir; though the chameleon Love can feed on the air, I am one that am nourished by my victuals, and would fain have meat.
O, be not like your mistress; be moved, be moved.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—VERONA. A Room in JULIA'S House.

Enter PROTEUS and JULIA.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.
JUL. I must, where is no remedy.
Pro. When possibly I can, I will return.
JUL. If you turn not, you will return the sooner.
Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake.

[Give him a ring.

Pro. Why, then, we'll make exchange: here, take you this. [Gives her another.

JUL. And seal the bargain with a holy kiss.
Pro. Here is my hand for my true constancy;
And when that hour o'er-slips me in the day
Wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake,
The next ensuing hour some foul miscanee
Torment me for my love's forgetfulness!
My father stays my coming; answer not.
The tide is now: nay, not thy tide of tears;
That tide will stay me longer than I should.
Julia, farewell! [Exit Julia.] What, gone without word?
Ay, so true love should do: it cannot speak;
For truth hath better deeds than words, to grace it.

Enter Pantino.

Pant. Sir Proteus, you are stay'd for.
Pro. Go; I come, I come.—
Alas, this parting strikes poor lovers dumb!
[Exeunt.

Scene III.—Verona. A Street.

Enter Launce, leading a dog.

Launce. Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have done wheedling: all the kind of the Launces have this very fault. I have received my proportion, like the prodigious son, and am going with Sir Proteus to the imperial's court. I think Crab, my dog, be the sourest-natured dog that lives: my mother wheeping, my father wailing, my sister crying, our maid howling, our cat wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexity, yet did not this cruell-hearted cur shed one tear. He is a stone, a very pebble-stone, and has no more pity in him than a dog: a Jew would have wept to have seen our parting: why, your grandson, having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind at my parting. Nay, I'll show you the manner of it. This shoe is my father:—no, this left shoe is my father:—no, so, this left shoe is my mother:—nay, that cannot be so, neither:— yes, it is so, it is so; it hath the worser sole. This shoe, with the hole in it, is my mother, and this my father. A vengeance on't! there 'tis: now, Sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she is as white as a lily, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan, our maid: I am the dog:—no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog,—O, the dog is me, and I am myself: ay, so, so. Now come I to my father:
"Father, your blessing:" now should not the shoe speak a word for weeping; now should I kiss my father; well, he weeps on. Now come I to my mother:—O, that she could speak now! like a wood-woman! well, I kiss her;—why there 'tis, her and my mother's breath up and down. Now come I to my sister; mark the moan she makes.
Now, the dog all this while sheds not a tear, nor speaks a word; but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Enter Pantino.

Pant. Launce, away, away, aboard! thy master is shipped, and thou art to post after with oars.
What's the matter? Why wepest thou, man?
Away, ass! you'll lose the tide, if you tarry any longer.

Launce. It is no matter if the tied were lost; for it is the unkindest tied that ever any man tied.

Pant. What's the unkindest tide?

Launce. Why, he that's tied here; Crab, my dog.

Pant. Tut, man, I mean thou 'lt lose the flood; and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage; and, in losing thy voyage, lose thy master; and, in losing your master, lose thy service; and, in losing thy service,—Why dost thou stop my mouth?

Launce. For fear thou shouldst lose thy tongue.

Pant. Where should I lose my tongue?

Launce. In thy tale.

Pant. In thy tail?

Launce. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and the master, and the service, and the tide! Why, man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; if the wind were down, I could drive the boat:
with my sighs.

Pant. Come, come away, man; I was sent to call thee.

Launce. Sir, call me what thou dar'st.

Pant. Will thou go?

Launce. Well, I will go. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Milan. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, and Speed.

Sil. Servant,—

Val. Mistress?

Speed. Master, Sir Thurio frown's on you.

Val. Ay, boy, it's for love.

Speed. Not of you.

Val. Of my mistress, then.

Speed. 'Twere good you knock'd him.

Sil. Servant, you are sald.

Val. Indeed, Madam, I seem so.

Thir. Seem you that you are not?

Val. Harpy, I do.

Thir. So do counterfeit.

Val. So do you.

Thir. What seem I that I am not?

Val. Wise.

Val. What instance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Thir. And how quote you my folly?

Val. I quote it in your jerkin.

Thir. My jerkin is a doublet.

Val. Well, then, I'll double your folly.

Thir. How?

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio! do you change colour?

Val. Give him leave, Madam: he is a kind of chameleon.

Thir. That hath more mind to feed on your blood, than live in your air.

Val. You have said, Sir.

Thir. Ay, Sir, and done too, for this time.

Val. I know it well, Sir: you always end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, Madam; we thank the giver.

Sil. Who is that, servant?

Val. Yourself, sweet lady; for you gave the fire.

Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows kindly in your company.

Thir. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well, Sir: you have an exchequer of words, and, I think, no other treasure to give your followers; for it appears by their bare fiveries, that they live by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more: here comes my father.

Enter the Duke.

Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset.—
Sir Valentine, your father's in good health:
What say you to a letter from your friends
Of much good news?

Val. My lord, I will be thankful
To any happy messenger from thence.

Duke. Know you Don Antonio, your countryman?
Val. Ay, my good lord; I know the gentleman
To be of worth, and worthy estimation.
And not without desert so well reputed.

Duke. Hath he not a son?
Val. Ay, my good lord; a son, that well deserves
The honour and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well?
Val. I know him as myself; for from our infancy
We have convers'd, and spent our hours together:
And though myself have been an idle truant,
Omitting the sweet benefit of time.
To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection,
Yet hath Sir Proteus,—for that's his name,—
Made use and fair advantage of his days:
His years but young, but his experience old;
His head unmellow'd, but his judgment ripe;
And, in a word, (for far behind his worth Come all the praises that I now bestow,)—
He is complete in feature and in mind,
With all good grace to grace a gentleman.

Duke. I bless you, Sir, but if he make this good,
He is as worthy for an empress' love,
As meet to be an emperor's counsellor.
Well, Sir, this gentleman is come to me
With commendation from great potentates;
And here he means to spend his time a while:
I think, 'tis no unwelcome news to you.

Val. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been he.

Duke. Welcome him, then, according to his worth.

Silvia. I speak to you; and you, Sir Thurio——
For Valentine, I need not cite him to it.
I'll send him hither to you presently. [Exit]

Val. This is the gentleman, I told your ladyship,
Had come along with me, but that his mistress
Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks.

Sil. Be like that now she hath entranch'd them,
Upon some other pawn for fealty.

Val. Nay, sure, I think she holds them prisoners still.

Sil. Nay, then he should be blind; and, being
How could he see his way to seek out you? [blind,
Val. Why, lady, love hath twenty pair of eyes.
Thu. They see, that love hath not an eye at all.
Queen. To eyes such as these, Thurio, as yourself;
Upon a homely object love can wink.

Sil. Have done, have done: here comes the gentleman.

Enter Proteus.

Val. Welcome, dear Proteus!—Mistress, I beseech you,
Confirm his welcome with some special favour.

Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome bither,
If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from.

Val. Mistress, it is: sweet lady, entertain him
To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship.

Sil. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.

Pro. Not so, sweet lady; but too mean a servant
To have a look of such a worthy mistress.

Val. Leave off discourse of disability;—
Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant.

Pro. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.

Sil. And duty never yet did want his meed.
Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.

Pro. I'll die on him that says so, but yourself.

Sil. That you are welcome?

Pro. That you are worthless.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. Madam, my lord your father would speak with you.

Sil. I wait upon his pleasure. [Exit Att.] Come, Sir Thurio,
Go with me.—Once more, new servant, welcome:
I'll leave you to confer of home-affairs;
When you have done, we look to hear from you.

Pro. We'll both attend upon your ladyship.
[Exeunt Silvia and Thurio.

Val. Now, tell me, how do all from whence you came?

Pro. Your friends are well, and have them much commended.

Val. And how do yours?

Pro. I left them all in health.

Val. How does your lady? and how thrives your love?

Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary you:
I know, you joy not in a love-discourse.

Att. Ay, Proteus, but that life is alter'd now:
I have done penance for contemning love;
Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd me
With bitter ills, with penitential groans,
With nightly tears, and daily heart-sore sighs;
For, in revenge of my contempt of love,
Love hath char'd sleep from my enthrall'd eyes,
And made them watchers of mine own heart's sorrow.

O gentle Proteus! love's a mighty lord,
And hath so humbled me, as, I confess,
There is no woe to his correction,
Nor, to his service, no such joy on earth!
Now, no discourse, except it be of love;
Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep,
Upon the very naked name of love.

Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye.
Was this the idol that you worship so?

Val. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint?

Pro. No; but she is an earthly paragon,
Queen. Call her divine.

Pro. I will not flatter her.

Val. O, flatter me; for love delights in praises.

Pro. When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills;
And I must minister the like to you.

Val. Then speak the truth by her: if not divine,
Yet let her be a principality,
Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth.

Pro. Except my mistress.

Val. Sweet, except not any;
Except thou wilt except against my love.

Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?

Val. And I will help thee to prefer her, too:
She shall be dignified with this high honour,—
To bear my lady's train, lest the base earth
Should from her vesture chance to steal a kiss,
And, of so great a favour growing proud,
Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower,
And make rough winter everlasting.

Pro. Why, Valentine, what bragardism is this?

Val. Pardon me, Proteus; all I can, is nothing
To her, whose worth makes other worthies nothing;
She is alone.

Pro. Then, let her alone.

Val. Not for the world; why, man, she is mine
And I as rich in having such a jewel,
As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl,
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold.
Forgive me, that I do not dream on thee,
Because thou see'st me dote upon my love.
My foolish rival, that her father likes
Only for his possessions are so huge,
Is gone with her along; and I must after,
For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.

Pro. But she loves you?

Val. Ay, and we are betroth'd: say, more, our marriage hour,
With all the cunning manner of our flight
Determined of; how I must climb her window,
The ladder made of cords, and all the means
Plotted, and 'greed on for my happiness,
Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber,
In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel.

Pro. Go on before; I shall inquire you forth:
I must unto the road, to disembark
Some necessaries that I needs must use;
And then I'll presently attend you.

Val. Will you make haste?

Pro. I will. [Exeunt Valentine and Speed.

Even one heat another heat expels,
Or as one nail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love
Is by a newer object quite forgotten.
Is it her merit, or Valentine's praise,
Her true perfection, or my false transgression,
That makes me, reasonless, to reason thus?
She's fair; and so is Julia that I love.—
That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd:
Which, like a waxen image 'gainst a fire,
Bears no impression of the thing it was.
Methinks, my seal to Valentine is cold,
And that I love him not as I was wont:
O, but I love his lady too much;
And that's the reason I love him so little.
How shall I dote on her with more advice,
That thus without advice begin to love her?
'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazzled my reason's light;
But when I look on her perfections,
There is no reason but I shall be blind.
If I can check my erring love, I will;
If not, tocompass her I'll use my skill. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—MILAN. A Street.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Speed. Launce! by mine honesty, welcome to Milan.

Launce. Forswear not thyself, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this always—that a man is never undone, till he be hang'd; nor never welcome to a place, till some certain shot be paid, and the hostess say, “Welcome.”

Speed. Come on, you must cap, I'll to the ale-house with you presently; where, for one shot of five pence, thou shalt have five thousand welcomes. But, sirrah, how did thy master part with Madam Julia?

Launce. Marry, after they closed in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

Speed. But shall she marry him?

Launce. No.

Speed. How then? Shall he marry her?

Launce. No, neither.

Speed. What, are they broken?

Launce. No, they are both as whole as a fish.

Speed. Why then, how stands the matter with them?

Launce. Marry, thus; when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Speed. What an ass art thou! I understand thee not.

Launce. What a block art thou, that thou canst not! My staff understands me.

Speed. What thou sayest?

Launce. Ay, and what I do too: look thee; I'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

Speed. It stands under thee, indeed.

Launce. Why, stand-under and under-stand is all one.

Speed. But tell me true, will't be a match?

Launce. Ask my dog; if he say ay, it will; if he say no, it will; if he shake his tail and say nothing, it will.

Speed. The conclusion is, then, that it will.

Launce. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me, but by a parable.

Speed. 'Tis well that I get it so. But, Launce, how sayest thou, that my master is become a notable lover?

Launce. I never knew him otherwise.

Speed. Than how?

Launce. A notable lubber, as thou reportest him to be.

Speed. Why, thou whoreson ass, thou mistakest me.

Launce. Why, fool, I meant not thee; I meant thy master.

Speed. I tell thee, my master is become a hot lover.

Launce. Why, I tell thee, I care not though he burn himself in love. If thou wilt, go with me to the ale-house; if not, thou art a Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Christian.

Speed. Why?

Launce. Because thou hast not so much charity in thee as to go to the ale with a Christian. Wilt thou go?

Speed. At thy service. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—MILAN. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Proclus.

Pro. To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn?
To love fair Silvia, shall I be forsworn?
To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn;
And even that power, which gave me first my oath,
Provokes me to this threefold perjury:
Love bade me swear, and Love bids me forswear.
O sweet-suggesting Love, if thou hast sinn'd,
Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it!
At first I did adore a twinkling star,
But now I worship a celestial sun.
Unheedful vows may heedfully be broken;
And he who wanteth, that wants resolved will
To learn his wit to exchange the bad for better.
Fie, fie, unreverend tongue! to call her bad,
Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast preferred!
With twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths
I cannot leave to love, and yet I do;
But there I leave to love, where I should love.
Julia I lose, and Valentine I lose:
If I keep them, I needs must lose myself;
If I lose them, thus find I, by their loss,—
For Valentine, myself; for Julia, Silvia.
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

ACT III.

I to myself am dearer than a friend,
For love is still most precious in itself;
And Silvia, (witness Heaven, that made her so!) Shows Julia but a swarthly Ethiop.
I will forget that Julia is alive,
Remembering that my love to her is dead;
And Valentine I'll hold an enemy,
Aiming at Silvia as a sweeter friend.
I cannot now prove constant to myself,
Without some treachery used to Valentine.
This night he meaneth, with a corded ladder,
To climb celestial Silvia's chamber-window;
Myself in counsel, his competitor.
Now, presently, I'll give her father notice
Of their disputing, and pretended flight;
Who, all enrag'd, will banish Valentine,
For Thurio, he intends, shall wed his daughter:
But, Valentine being gone, I'll quickly cross,
By some sly trick, blunt Thurio's dull proceeding.
Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift,
As thou hast lent me wit to plot this drift! [Exit.

SCENE VII.—VERONA. A Room in JULIA'S House.

Enter JULIET and LUCETTA.

Jul. Counsel, Lucetta; gentle girl, assist me:
And, even in kind love, I do conjure thee,—
Who art the table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly character'd and engrav'd,—
To lesson me; and tell me some good mean,
How, with my honour, I may undertake
A journey to my loving Proteus.
Luc. Alas! the way is wearisome and long.
Jul. A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary
To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps:
Much less shall she, that hath Love's wings to fly;
And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfection, as Sir Proteus.
Luc. Better forbear, till Proteus make return.
Jul. O, know'st thou not, his looks are my soul's
Pity the dearth that I have pin'd in, [food?
By longing for that food so long a time.
Didst thou but know the inly touch of love,
Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow,
As seek to quench the fire of love with words.
Luc. I do not seek to quench your love's hot fire,
But qualify the fire's extreme rage,
Let it should burn above the bounds of reason.
Jul. The more thou damm'st it up, the more it burns.
The current that with gentle murmur glides,
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth rage;
But when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet music with the enamell'd stones,
Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage;
And so by many winding nooks he strays,
With willing sport, to the wild ocean.
Then let me go, and hinder not my course:
I'll be as patient as a gentle stream,
And make a pastime of each way step,
Till the last step have brought me to my love;
And there I'll rest, as, after much turmoil,
A blessed soul doth in Elysium.
Luc. But in what habit will you go along?
Jul. Not like a woman; for I would prevent
The loose encounters of lascivious men.
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds
As may becast some well-reputed page.

Luc. Why then, your ladyship must cut your hair.
Jul. No, girl; I'll knit it up in silken strings,
With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots:
To be fantastic, may become a youth
Of greater time than I shall show to be.
Luc. What fashion, Madam, shall I make your breeches?
Jul. That fits as well as—"Tell me, good my lord,
What compass will you wear your farthingale?"
Why, even what fashion thou best lik'st, Lucetta.
Luc. You must needs have them with a copedpiece, Madam.
Jul. Out, out, Lucetta! that will be ill-favour'd.
Luc. A round hose, Madam, now's not worth a
Unless you have a copedpiece to stick pins on. [pin
Jul. Lucetta, as thou lovest me, let me have What thou think'st meet, and is most mannerly.
But tell me, wench, how will the world repute me
For undertaking so unstaide a journey?
I fear me, it will make me scandalis'd.
Luc. If you think so, then stay at home, and go
Jul. Nay, that I will not. [not
Luc. Then never dream on infamy, but go.
If Proteus like your journey when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd when you are gone:
I fear me, he will scarce be pleas'd withal.
Jul. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear:
A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears,
And instances as infinite of love,
Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.
Luc. All these are servants to deceitful men.
Jul. Base men, that use them to so base effect;
But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth:
His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles;
His love sincere, his thoughts immaterial;
His tears, pure messengers sent from his heart;
His heart as far from fraud, as heaven from earth.
Luc. Pray heaven, he prove so, when you come to him!
Jul. Now, as thou lovest me, do him not that
To bear a hard opinion of his truth: [wrong
Only desire my love by loving him;
And presently go with me to my chamber,
To take a note of what I stand in need of,
To furnish me upon my longed journey.
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my lands, my reputation;
Only, in lieu thereof, despatch me hence.
Come; answer not, but to it presently:
I am impatient of my tarryance. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Duke, Thurio, and Proteus.

Duke. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray, a while;
We have some secrets to confer about. [Exit Thurio.

Pro. My gracious lord, that which I would dis-
The law of friendship bids me to conceal; [cover,
But when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me, undeserving as I am,
My duty pricks me on to utter that,
Which else no worldly good should draw from me.
Scene 1

The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Know, worthy prince, Sir Valentine, my friend,
This night intends to steal away your daughter;
Myself am one made privy to the plot.
I know you have determined to bestow her
On Thurtio, whom your gentle daughter hates;
And should she thus be stoln away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.
Thus, for my duty’s sake, I rather chose
To cross my friend in his intended drift,
Than, by concealing it, heap on your head
A pack of sorrows, which would press you down,
Being unexpected, to your timeless grave.

Duke. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care;
Which to requite, command me while I live.
This love of theirs myself have often seen,
Happily, when they have judg’d me fast asleep;
And oftentimes have purpos’d to forbid
Sir Valentine her company, and my court;
But, fearing lest my jealous aim might err,
And so, unworthily disgrace the man,
(A rashness that I ever Yet have shunn’d,)
I gave him gentle looks; thereby to find
That which myself hast now disclos’d to me.
And, that thou mayst perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested,
I nightly lodge her in an upper tower,
The key whereof myself have ever kept;
And hence she cannot be convey’d away.

Proc. Know, noble lord, they have devis’d a mean
How he her chamber-window will ascend,
And with a couled ladder fetch her down;
For which the youthful lover now is gone,
And this way comes he with it presently;
Where, if it please you, you may intercept him.
But, good my lord, do it so cunningly,
That my discovery be not aimed at;
For love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publish this of the pretense.

Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never know
That I had any light from thee of this.

Proc. Adieu, my lord: Sir Valentine is coming.

Exit Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast?
Val. Please it your grace, there is a messenger
That stays to bear my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duke. Be they of much import?
Val. The tenor of them doth but signify
My health, and happy being at your court.

Duke. Nay, then no matter: stay with me a while;
I am to break with thee of some affairs
That touch me near, wherein thou must be secret.
’Tis not unknown to thee that I have sought
To match my friend, Sir Thurtio, to my daughter.
Val. I know it well, my lord; and, sure, the match
Were rich and honourable: besides, the gentleman
Is full of virtue, bounty, worth, and qualities
Beseeching such a wife as your fair daughter.
Cannot your grace win her to fancy him?

Duke. No, trust me: she is peevish, sullen, frolicr
Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty;
Neither regarding that she is my child,
Nor fearing as if I were her father.

And, may I say to thee, this price of hers,
Upon advice, hath drawn my love from her;
And, where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have been cherish’d by her child-like duty,
I now am full resolv’d to take a wife,
And turn her out to who will take her in:
Then, let her beauty be her wedding-dower;
For me and my possessions she esteems not.

Val. What would your grace have me to do in Duke. There is a lady in Milano here, [Esteem. Thurn?
Whom I affect; but she is nice, and coy,
And naught esteem my aged eloquence:
Now, therefore, would I have thee to my tutor,
(For long ago I have forgot to court;
Besides, the fashion of the time is chang’d.)

How, and which way, I may bestow myself,
To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.

Val. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words:
Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind,
More than quick words, do move a woman’s mind.

Duke. But she did scorn a present that I sent her.

Val. A woman sometimes scorcs what best con-
Send her another; never give her oer;
[here;
For scorn at first makes after-love the more.
If she do frown, ’tis not in hate of you,
But rather to begot more love in you;
If she do chide, ’tis not to have you gone;
For why the fools are mad, if left alone.
Take no repulse, whatever she doth say;
For, “Get you gone,” she doth not mean, “Away!”
Flatter and praise, commend, extoll their graces;
Though ne’er so black, say they have angels’ faces.
That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.

Duke. But she I mean is promis’d by her friends
Unto a youthful gentleman of worth;
And kept severely from resort of men,
That no man hath access by day to her.

Val. Why then, I would resort to her by night.

Duke. Ay, but the doors be lock’d, and keys kept safe.
That no man hath recourse to her by night.

Val. What lets, but one may enter at her window?

Duke. Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground,
And but so shufing, that one cannot climb it
Without apparent hazard of his life.

Val. Why then, a ladder quaintly made of cords,
To cast up, with a pair of anchoring hooks,
Would serve to scale another Hero’s tower,
So bold Leander would adventure it.

Duke. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood,
Advise me where I may have such a ladder.

Val. When would you use it? pray, Sir, tell me that.

Duke. This very night; for Love is like a child,
That longs for everything that he can have by.

Val. By seven o’clock I’ll get you such a ladder.

Duke. But hark thee; I will go to her alone:
How shall I best convey the ladder thither?

Val. It will be light, my lord, that you may bear it
Under a cloak that is of any length.

Duke. A cloak as long as thine will serve the turn?

Val. Ay, my good lord.

Duke. Then, let me see thy cloak:
I’ll get me one of such another length.

Val. Why, any cloak will serve the turn, my lord.

Duke. How shall I fashion me to wear a cloak?—
I pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me.

What letter is this same? What’s here?—
“To Silvia!”
Val. My ears are stopp'd, and cannot hear good news, So much of bad already hath possess'd them.
Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine, For they are harsh, untuneable, and bad.
Val. Is Silvia dead?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia!—
Hast she forsworn me?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me!—
What is your news? [vanished.
Launce. Sir, there is a proclamation that you are Pro. That thou art banish'd—O, that's the news!—
From hence, from Silvia, and from me, thy friend.
Val. O, I have fed upon this woe already, And now excess of it will make me surfeit.
Doth Silvia know that I am banish'd?
Pro. Ay, ay; and she hath offer'd to the doom
(Which, unrev'rs'd, stands in effectual force)
A sea of melting pearl, which some call tears:
Those at her father's churlish feet she tender'd;
With them, upon her knees, her humble self;
Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became
As if but now they waxed pale for woe:
[They, But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,
Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding tears,
Could penetrate her uncompassionate sIRE;
But Valentine, if he be ta'en, must die.
Besides, her intercession chaft him so,
When she for thy repeal was suppliant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of bidding there.
Val. No more; unless the next word that thou
Have some malignant power upon my life: [speak'st
If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine ear,
As ending anthem of my endless doleour.
Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,
And study help for that which thou lament'st.
Time is the nurse and breeder of all good.
Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love;
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life.
Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that,
And manage it against despairing thoughts.
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence;
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd
Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love.
The time now serve, I cannot to expostulate:
Come, I'll convey thee through the city gate;
And, ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love-affairs.
As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself,
Regard thy danger, and along with me.
Val. I pray thee, Launce, an if thou seest my boy,
Bid him make haste, and meet me at the north gate.
Val. O my dear Silvia! Hapless Valentine!
[Exeunt Valentine and Proteus.
Launce. I am but a fool, look you; and yet I have the wit to think, my master is a kind of a knave: but that's all one, if he be but one knave.
He lives not now, that knows me to be in love; yet
I am in love; but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me, nor who 'tis I love; and yet 'tis a woman: but what woman, I will not tell myself; and yet 'tis a milkmaid; yet 'tis not a maid, for she hath had goseips: yet 'tis a maid, for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities than a water-spaniel,—which is much in a bare Christian. [Pulling out a paper.] Here is the cat-log of her conditions. [Reads.] "Im-primis. She can fetch and carry." Why, a horse can do no more; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry; therefore, is she better than a jade. "Item,
She can milk;" look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Enter Speed.

Speed. How now, Signior Launce! what news with your mastership?
Launce. With my master's ship? why, it is at sea.
Speed. Well, your old vice still; mistake the word.
What news, then, in your paper?
Launce. The blackest news that ever thou heard-
Speed. Why, man, how black? [est.
Launce. Why, as black as ink.
Speed. Let me read them.
Launce. Oh, none on't! thou canst not read.
Speed. Thou liest; I can.
Launce. I will try thee. 'Twill tell me this: who begot the thee?
Speed. Marry, the son of my grandfather.
Launce. O, illiterate loiterer! it was the son of thy grandmother. This proves, that thou canst not read.
Speed. Come, fool, come: try me in thy paper.
Launce. There; and Saint Nicholas be thy speed!!
Speed. [Reads.] "Item, She can milk."
Launce. Ay, that she can.
Speed. "Item, She brews good ale."
Launce. And thereof comes the proverb,—Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.
Speed. "Item, She can sew."
Launce. That's as much as to say, Can she so?
Speed. "Item, She can knit."
Launce. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock?"-
Speed. "Item, She can wash and scour."
Launce. A special virtue; for then she need not be washed and scour'd.
Speed. "Item, She can spin."
Launce. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.
Speed. "Item, She hath many nameless virtues."
Launce. That's as much as to say, bastard virtues; that, indeed, know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.
Speed. "Here follow her vices."
Launce. Close at the heels of her virtues.
Speed. "Item, She is not to be kissed fastening, in respect of her breath."- Launce. Well, that may be mended with a breakfast. Read on.
Speed. "Item, She hath a sweet mouth."
Launce. That makes amends for her sour breath.
Speed. "Item, She doth talk in her sleep."
Launce. 'Tis no matter for that; so she sleep not in her talk.
Speed. "Item, She is slow in words."
Launce. O villain, that set this down among her vices! To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue:
I pray thee, out with 't, and place it for her chief virtue.
Speed. "Item, She is proud."
Launce. Out with that too: it was Eve's legacy, and cannot be ta'en from her.
Speed. "Item, She hath no teeth."

Launce. I care not for that neither, because I love crusts.
Speed. "Item, She is curt."
Launce. Well; the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.
Speed. "Item, She will often praise her liquor."
Launce. If her liquor be good, she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.
Speed. "Item, She is too liberal."
Launce. Of her tongue she cannot, for that's what down she is slow of: of her purse she shall not, for that I'll keep shut: now, of another thing she may,
and that cannot I help. Well, proceed.
Speed. "Item, She hath more hair than wit, and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults."
Launce. Stop there; I'll have her: she was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last article.
Rehearse that once more.
Speed. "Item, She hath more hair than wit,—" Launce. More hair than wit,—it may be; I'll prove it; to our proclamation that the salt hides the salt, and therefore it is more than the salt; the hair, that covers the wit, is more than the wit, for the greater hides the less. What's next?
Speed. "And more faults than hairs.—"
Launce. That's monstrous: O, that that were out!
Speed. "And more wealth than faults."
Launce. Why, that word makes the faults gracious.
Well, I'll have her; and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible,—
Speed. What then?
Launce. Why, then will I tell thee,—that thy master stays for thee at the north gate.
Speed. For me!
Launce. For thee! ay; who art thou? he hath stayed for a better man than thee.
Speed. And must I go to him?
Launce. Thou must run to him, for thou hast stayed so long, that going will scarce serve the turn.
Speed. Why didst not tell me sooner? box of your love-letters. [Exit.
Launce. Now will he be swing'd for reading my letter: an unmannerly slave, that will thrust himself into secrets.—I'll alter, to rejoice in the boy's correction. [Exit.

SCENE II.—MILAN. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke and Thurio.

Duke. Sir Thurio, fear not but that she will love
Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight. [you, Thurio. Since his exile she hath despis'd me most,
Forsworn my company, and rail'd at me,
That I am desperate of obtaining her.
Duke. This weak impress of love is as a figure Trenched in ice, which with an hour's heat
Dissolves to water, and doth lose his form.
A little time will melt her frozen thoughts,
And worthless Valentine shall be forgot.—

Enter Proteus.

How now, Sir Proteus! Is your countryman,
According to the oration, came? [you,
Pro. Gone, my good lord,
Duke. My daughter takes his going grievously.
Pro. A little time, my lord, will kill that grief.
Duke. So I believe; but Thurio thinks not so.
Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee,
(For thou hast shown some sign of good desert,)
Makes me the better to confer with thee.
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA. [ACT IV.

Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver,
Let us into the city presently.
To sort some gentlemen well skil’d in music.
I have a sonnet that will serve the turn
To give the onset to thy good advice.
Pro. About it, gentlemen.
Prov. We’ll wait upon your grace till after supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.
Duke. Even now about it: I will pardon you.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Frontiers of Mantua. A Forest.
Enter certain Outlaws.

1 Out. Follows, stand fast; I see a passenger.
2 Out. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with ’em.

Enter Valentine and Speed.

3 Out. Stand, Sir, and throw us that you have about you;
If not, we’ll make you sit, and rifle you.
Speed. Sir, we are undone: these are the villains
That all the travellers do fear so much.
Val. My friends,—
1 Out. That’s not so, Sir; we are your enemies.
2 Out. Peace! we’ll hear him.
3 Out. Ay, by my beard, will we; for he is a proper man.
Val. Then know, that I have little wealth to lose.
A man I am, cross’d with adversity:
My riches are these poor habits,
Of which if you should here disturb me,
You take the sum and substance that I have.
2 Out. Whither travel you?
Val. To Verona.
1 Out. Whence came you?
Val. From Milan.
3 Out. Have you long sojourn’d there?
Val. Some sixteen months; and longer might have stay’d,
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.
2 Out. What, were you banish’d thence?
Val. I was.
3 Out. For what offence?
Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse:—
I kill’d a man, whose death I much repent;
But yet I slew him manfully, in fight,
Without false vantage or base treachery.
1 Out. Why, ne’er repent it, if it were done so.
But were you banish’d for so small a fault?
Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doom.
2 Out. Have you the tongue?
Val. My youthful travel therein made me happy,
Or else I often had been miserable.
3 Out. By the bare scalp of Robin Hood’s fat
This fellow were a king for our wild faction! [friar,
1 Out. We’ll have him—Sir, a word.
Speed. Master, be one of them;
It is an honourable kind of thiery.
Val. Peace, villain!
2 Out. Tell us this: have you anything to take
Val. Nothing, but my fortune. [to?
3 Out. Know then, that some of us are gentle-
Such as the fury of ungovern’d youth [men,
Thrust from the company of awful men;
SCENE II.—MILAN.  THE Court of the DUKE'S PalacE.

ENTER PROTEUS.

PRO. Already have I been false to Valentine, And now I must be as unjust to Thurio. Under the colour of commending him, I have access my own love to prefer; But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy, To be corrupted with my worthless gifts. When I protest true loyalty to her, She twits me with my falsehood to my friend; When I commend my vows, She bids me think how I have been forsworn, In breaking faith with Julia whom I lov'd: And, notwithstanding all her sudden quirks, The least whereof would quell a lover's hope, Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love, The more it grows, and fawneth on her still. But here comes Thurio: now must we to her win, And give some evening music to her ear. [dow, Enter Thurio and Musicians.

THU. How now, Sir Proteus! are you crept before us?

PRO. Ay, gentle Thurio; for you know that love Will creep in service where it cannot go.

THU. Ay; but I hope, Sir, that you love her not here.

PRO. Sir, but I do; or else I would be hence.

THU. Whom? Silvia?

PRO. Ay, Silvia,—for your sake.

THU. I thank you for your own.—Now, gentle- Let's tune, and to it lustily a while. [men, Enter, at a distance. Host, and Jollia in boy's clothes.

Now, the young guest, methinks you're allycholyly: I pray you, why is it?

JOLL. Marry, mine host, because I cannot be merry.
To be suckfcd by thy flattery,
That hast deceiv'd so many with thy vows?
Return, return, and make thy love amends.
For me,—by this pale queen of night I swear,
I am so far from granting thy request,
That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit;
And by and by intend to chide myself,
Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.

Pro. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a lady;
But she is dead.

Ful. [Aside.] 'Twere false, if I should speak it;
For, I am sure, she is not buried.

Sil. Say, that she be; yet Valentine, thy friend,
Survives to whom thyself art witness
I am betroth'd: and art thou not asham'd
To wrong him with thy importunity?

Pro. I likewise hear, that Valentine is dead.

Sil. And so, suppose, am I; for in his grave,
Assure thyself, my love is buried.

Pro. Sweet lady, let me rako it from the earth.

Sil. Go to thy lady's grave, and call hers thence;
Or, at the least, in hers sepulchre shine.

Ful. [Aside.] He heard not that.

Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate,
Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love,
The picture that is hanging in your chamber:
'To that I will speak, to that I'll sigh and weep;
For, since the substance of your perfect self
Is else devoted, I am but a shadow,
And to your shadow will I make true amends.

Ful. [Aside.] If 'twere a substance, you would,
sure, deceive it.
And make it but a shadow, as I am.

Sil. I am very loath to be your idol, Sir;
But, since your falsehood shall become you well
To worship shadows, and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning, and I'll send it:
And so, good rest.

Pro.

As wretches have o'er night,
That wait for execution in the morn.

[Exeunt Proteus, and Silvia, above.

Ful. Host, will you go?

Host. By my halidom, I was fast asleep.

Ful. Pray you, where lies Sir Proteus?

Host. Marry, at my house. Trust me, I think 'tis most true.

Ful. Not so; but it hath been the longest night
That e'er I watch'd, and the most heaviest.

[Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same.

Enter Eg amore.

Egl. This is the hour that Madam Silvia
Entreated me to call, and know her mind:
There's some great matter she'd employ me in.—
Madam, Madam!

[Exeunt Silvia above, at her window.

Sil. Who calls?

Egl. Your servant, and your friend;
One that attends your ladyship's command.

Sil. Sir Eg amore, a thousand times good-mori.
Egl. As many, worthy lady, to yourself. [Bow.
According to your ladyship's impose,
I am thus early come, to know what service
It is your pleasure to command me in.

Sil. O Eg amore, thou art a gentleman,—
Think not I flatter, for I swear I do not,— Valiant, wise, remorseful, well accomplish'd.
Thou art not ignorant what dear good will
I bear unto the banish'd Valentine;
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vain Thurio, whom my very soul abhor'd.
Thyself hast lov'd; and I have heard thee say,
No grief did ever come so near thy heart,
As when thy lady and thy true love died,
Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity.
Sir Eg amore, I would to Valentine
To Mantua, where, I hear, he makes abode;
And, for the ways are dangerous to pass,
I do desire thy worthy company,
Upon whose faith and honour I repose.
Urge not my father's anger, Eg amore,
But think upon my grief,—a lady's grief,—
And on the justice of my flying hence,
To keep me from a most unholy match,
Which heaven and fortune still reward with plagues.
I do desire thee, even from a heart
As full of sorrow as the sea of sands,
To bear me company, and go with me:
If not, to hide what I have said to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your grievances;
Which since I know they virtuously are plac'd,
I give consent to go along with you;
Kecking as little what betideth me,
As much as I wish good for your fortune.
When will you go?

Sil. This evening coming.

Egl. Where shall I meet you?

Sil. At friar Patrick's cell,
Where I intend holy confession.
Egl. I will not fail your ladyship. Good morrow,
Gentle lady.

Sil. Good morrow, kind Sir Eg amore.

[Exeunt Eg amore, and Silvia, above.

Scene IV.—The Same.

Enter Launc with his dog.

Launc. When a man's servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy; one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it. I have taught him, even as one would say precisely. Thus I would teach a dog. I was sent to deliver him as a present to mistress Silvia from my master; and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber, but he steps me to her trencher, and steals her capon's leg. O, 'tis a fool thing, when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies! I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily, he had been hanged for't: sure as I live, he had suffered for't. You shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentileman-like dogs under the duke's table: he had not been there (bless the mark!) a pissing while, but all the chamber smelt him. "Out with the dog!" says one; "What cur is that?" says another; "Whip him out," says the third; "Hang him up," says the duke. I, having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogs: "Friend," quoth I, "you mean to whip the dog?" "Ay, marry, do I," quoth he. "You do him the more wrong," quoth I; "twas I did the thing you wot of." He makes me no more ado, but whips me out of the chamber. How many masters would do this for his ser vant? Nay, I'll be sworn, I have sat in the stocks for puddings he hath stolen, otherwise he had been executed: I have stood on the pillory for geege he hath killed, otherwise he had suffered for't. Thou thinkest not of this now!—Nay, I remember the trick you served me when, I took my leave of Madam Silvia: did not I bid thee still mark me, and do as I do? When didst thou see me heave up my leg, and make water against a gentlewoman's farthingale? Didst thou ever see me do such a trick?

Enter Proteus and Julia.

Pro. Sebastian is thy name? I like thee well, And will employ thee in some service presently.

Jul. In what you please: I will do what I can.

Pro. I hope thou wilt.—[To LAUNCE.] How, now, you whoreson peasant! Where have you been these two days loitering?

Launce. Marry, Sir, I carried mistress Silvia the dog you bade me.

Pro. And what says she to my little jewel?

Launce. Marry, say, your dog was a cur; and tells you, currish thanks is good enough for such a present.

Pro. But she received my dog?

Launce. No, indeed, did she not: here have I brought him back again.

Pro. What! didst thou offer her this from me?

Launce. Ay, Sir; the other squirel was stolen from me by the hangman boys in the market-place; and then I offered her mine own, who is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Go, get thee hence, and find my dog again; Or ne'er return again into my sight. Away, I say! Stay'st thou to vex me here? A slave that still an end turns me to shame.

[Exit LAUNCE.

Sebastian, I have entertained thee,
Partly, that I have need of such a youth, That can with some discretion do my business, For 'tis no trusting to you foolish lest; But chiefly for thy face, and thy behaviour, Which (if my augury deceive me not) Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth: Therefore, know thou, for this I entertain thee. Go presently, and take this ring with thee; Deliver it to Madam Silvia:

She lov'd me well deliver'd it to me.

Jul. It seems, you lov'd not her, to leave her to—

She's dead, belike?

[ken.

Pro.

Jul. How many women would do such a message? Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd

A fox to be the shepherd of thy lambs.

Alas, poor fool! why do I pity him, That with his very heart despiseth me? Because he loves me, he despiseth me; Because I love him, I must pity him.

This ring I gave him when he parted from me, To bind him to remember my good will: And now am I (unhappy messenger!) To plead for that which I would not obtain; To carry that which I would have refuse'd; To praise his faith which I would have disparis'd.

I am my master's true confirmed love, But cannot be true servant to my master, Unless I prove false traitor to myself. Yet will I woo for him; but yet so coldly, As heaven it knows, I would not have him speed.

Enter Silvia, attended.

Gentlewoman, good day! I pray you, be my mean To bring me where to speak with Madam Silvia.

Sil. What would you with her, if that I be she?

Jul. If you be she, I do entreat your patience

To hear me speak the message I am sent on.

Sil. From whom?

Jul. From my master, Sir Proteus, Madam.

Sil. O—he sends you for a picture?

Sil. Ursula, bring my picture there.—

Go give your master this: tell him from me,
One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget, Would better fit his chamber, than this shadow.

Jul. Madam, please you peruse this letter.—

[Gives a letter.

Pardon me, Madam; I have unadvised. Deliver'd you a paper that I should not: This is the letter to your ladyship.

[Sil. I pray thee, let me look on that again.

Jul. It may not be; good Madam, pardon me.

Sil. There, hold.

[Gives back the first letter.

I will not look upon your master's lines: I know, they are stuff'd with protestations, And full of new-found oaths, which he will break, As easily as I do tear his paper.

[Uses the second letter.

Jul. Madam, he sends you your ladyship this ring.

Sil. The more shame for him that he sends me it; For, I have heard him say, a thousand times, His Julia gave it him at his departure.

Though his false finger have profan'd the ring, Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.

Jul. She thanks you.

Sil. What say'st thou?

Jul. I thank you, Madam, that you tender her.

Poor gentlewoman! my master wrongs her much.

Sil. Dost thou know her?

Jul. Almost as well as I do know myself: To think upon her woes, I do protest, That I have wept a hundred several times.

Sil. Belike, she thinks, that Proteus hath forsook

Jul. I think she doth; and that's her cause of Sil. Is she not passing fair?

Jul. She hath been fairest, Madam, than she is.

When she did think my master lov'd her well, She, in my judgment, was as fair as you; But since she did neglect her looking glass, And threw her sun-expelling mask away,
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

ACT V.

SCENE II.—MILAN. A Room in the Duke’s Palace.

Enter Tusnie, Proteus, and Julia.

Thu. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?

Pro. O, Sir, I find her milder than she was;
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.

Thu. What, that my leg is too long?

Pro. No; that it is too little.

Thu. I’ll wear a boot to make it somewhat rounder.

Jul. [Aside.] But love will not be spurr’d to

What it loathes.

Thu. What says she to my face?

Pro. She says it is a fair one.

Thu. Nay then, the wanton lies; my face is black.

But pearls are fair; and the old saying is,

Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies’ eyes.

Jul. [Aside.] ’Tis true, such pearls as put out ladies’ eyes;

For I had rather wink than look on them.

Thu. How likes she my discourse?

Pro. Ill, when you talk of war.

Thu. But well, when I discourse of love and peace.

Jul. [Aside.] But better, indeed, when you hold your peace.

Thu. What says she to my valour?

Pro. O, Sir, she makes no doubt of that.

Jul. [Aside.] She needs not, when she knows it cowardice.

Thu. What says she to my birth?

Pro. That you are well deriv’d.

Jul. [Aside.] True; from a gentleman to a fool.

Thu. Considers she my possessions?

Pro. O, ay; and pities them.

Thu. Wherefore?

Jul. [Aside.] That such an ass should owe them.

Pro. That they are out by lease.

Jul. Here comes the duke.

Enter Duke.

Duke. How now, Sir Proteus! how now, Thurio!

Which of you saw Silvia Egloamour of late?

Thu. Not I.

Pro. Nor I.

Duke. Saw you my daughter?

Pro. Neither.

Duke. Why then,

She’s fled unto that peasant Valentine;
And Egloamour is in her company.
’Tis true; for friar Laurence met them both,
As he in penance wander’d through the forest:
Him he knew well; and guess’d that it was she.
But, being mask’d, he was not sure of it:
Besides, she did intend concealion
At Patrick’s cell this even; and there she was not.
These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence:
Therefore, I pray you, stand not to discourse,
But mount you presently; and meet with me
Upon the rising of the mountain-foot,
That leads towards Mantua, whither they are fled:
Dispatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me.

[Exit.}
SCENE IV.

THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

Thu. Why, this it is to be a peevish girl, That flies her fortune when it follows her. I'll alter, more to be revenged on Eglamour Than for the love of reckless Silvia. [Exit. Prod. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love Than hate of Eglamour, that goes with her. [Exit. Jul. And I will follow, more to cross that love Than hate for Silvia, that is gone for love. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Frontiers of Mantua. The Forest.

Enter Outlaws with Silvia.

Out. Come, come; be patient; we must bring you to our captain.

Sil. A thousand more mischances than this one Have leant'd me how to brook this patiently.

Out. Come, bring her away.

Out. Where is the gentleman that was with her?

Out. Being nimble-footed, he hath outrun us; But Moyes, and Valerian, follow him.

Go thou with her to the west end of the wood; There is our captain. We'll follow him that's fled: The thicket is best; he cannot escape. [Exeunt all the First Outlaw and Silvia.

Out. Come, I must bring you to our captain's Fear not; he bears an honourable mind, [cave. And will not use a woman wantonly.

Sil. O Valentine! this I endure for thee. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Valentine.

Val. How use doth breed a halit in a man! These shalowy, desert, unfrequented woods, I better brook than flourishing populous towns. Here can I sit alone, unseen of any, And to the nightingale's complaining notes Tune my distresses, and record my woe. O thou, that dost inhabit in my breast, Leave not the mansion so long tenantless, Ext. growing ruinous, the building tall, And leave no memory of what it was! Repair me with thy presence, Silvia! Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn slave! [Noise heard.

What halloing, and what stir, is this to-day? These are my mates, that make their wills their law, Have some unhappy passenger in chase. They love me well; yet I have much to do, To keep them from uncivil outrages. Withdraw thee, Valentine: who's this comes here? [Retire.

Enter Proteus, Silvia, and Julia.

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you, (Though you respect not aught your servant doth,) To hazard life, and rescue you from him That would have forc'd your honour and your love: Vouchsafe me, for my meed, but one fair look; A smaller boon than this I cannot beg. And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give. Val. [Aside.] How like a dream is this I see and Love, lend me patience to forbear a while. [heart. Sil. O, miserable, unhappy that I am! Pro. Unhappy were you, Madam, ere I came; But by my coming I have made you happy. Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most undesirous of presence. [Exit. Jul. [Aside.] And me, when he approacheth to

Sil. Had I been seiz'd by a hungry lion, I would have been a breakfast to the beast, Rather than have false Proteus rescue me. O, heaven be judge, how I love Valentine, Whose life's as tender to me as my soul; And full as much (for more there cannot be) I do detest false perjur'd Proteus! Therefore be gone, solicit me no more. Pro. What dangerous action, stoo'd it next to Would I not undergo for one calm look? [death, O, 'tis the curse in love, and still approv'd, When women cannot love, where they're beloved! Sil. When Proteus cannot love where he's spent over Julia's heart, thy first best love, [love'd. For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith Into a thousand oaths; and all those oaths Descended into perjury, to love me. Thou hast falsify'd me now, unless thou dost two, And that's far worse than none: better have none Than plural faith, which is too much by one. Thou counterfeit to thy true friend! [Pro. In love Who respects friend?

Sil. Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words Can no way change you to a milker form, I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end, And love you 'gainst the nature of love,—force you. Sil. O heaven! [Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire. Val. [Coming forward.]uffian, let go that rude uncivil touch: Thou friend of an ill fashion! [Pro. Valentine! Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love; (For such is a friend now) treach'rous man! Thou hast beguil'd my hopes: naught but mine eye Could have persuaded me. Now I dare not say, I have one friend alive: thou wouldst disprove me. Who should be trusted now, when one's right hand Is perjur'd to the bosom? Proteus, I am sorry I must never trust thee more, But count the world a stranger for thy sake.

The private wound is deepest. 0 time most cruel! 'Mongst all foes, that a friend should be the worst! [Pro. My shame and guilt confound me. Forgive me, Valentine. If hearty sorrow Be a sufficient ransom for offence, I tender'd here; I do as truly suffer, As e'er I did commit. Val. Then, I am paid;

And once again do receive thee honest.— Who by repentance is not satisfied, Is nor of heaven, nor earth; for these are pleas'd. By penitence th' Eternal's wrath is appease'd.— And, that my love may appear plain and free, All that was mine in Silvia I give thee. Jul. O me unhappy! [Faints. Pro. Look to thy lady. Val. Why, boy! why, wag! how now! what's the matter? look up; speak. Jul. O good Sir, my master charg'd me to deliver a ring to Madam Silvia; which, out of my neglect, was never done. Pro. Where is that ring? boy! Jul. Pro. Here 'tis: this is it. [Gives a ring. Pro. How! let me see!—why, this is the ring I gave to Julia.
Jul. O, cry you mercy, Sir; I have mistook:
This is the ring you sent to Silvia.
[Shews another ring.]
Pro. But how camest thou by this ring?
At my depart I gave this unto Julia.
Jul. And Julia herself did give it me;
And Julia herself hath brought it hither.
Pro. How! Julia!
Jul. Behold her that gave aim to all thy oaths,
And entertain'd them deeply in her heart:
How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root!
O Proteus! let this habit make thee blush:
Be thou ashamed, that I have took upon me
Such an inconstant raiment,—if shame live
In a disguise of love.
It is the lesser blot, modesty finds, [minds.
Women to change their shapes, than men their Pro. Than men their minds! 'tis true. O heaven!
were man
But constant, he were perfect: that one error
Fills him with faults; makes him run through all Inconstancy falls off, ere it begins.
[the sins:
What is in Silvia's face, but I may spy
More fresh in Julia's, with a constant eye?
Val. Come, come, a hand from either.
Let me be blest to make this happy close:
'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.
Pro. Bear witness, heaven, I have thou wish for Val. And I mine.
[ever.

Enter Outlaws with Duke and Thursto.
Out. A prize! a prize! a prize! [duke.—
Val. Forbear, forbear, I say! it is my lord the
Your grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd, Banished Valentine.
Duke. Sir Valentine!
Thur. Yonder is Silvia; and Silvia's mine.
Val. Thurio, give back, or else embrace thy death.
Come not within the measure of my wrath:
Do not name Silvia thine; if once again,
Milano shall not hold thee. Here she stands:
Take but possession of her with a touch;—
I dare thee but to yields upon my love.
Thur. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I:
I hold him but a fool, that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not:
I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.
Duke. The more degenerate and base art thou,
To make such means for her as thou hast done,
And leave her on such slight conditions. —
Now, by the honour of my ancestry,
I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine,
And think thee worthy of an empress' love:
Know then, I here forget all former griefs,
Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again;
Plead a new state in thy unrival'd merit,
To which I thus subscribe,—Sir Valentine,
Thou art a gentleman, and well deriv'd;
Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserved her.
Duke. I thank thy grace; the gift hath made me happy.
I now beseech you, for your daughter's sake,
To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.
Duke. I grant it, for thine own, whatever it be.
Val. Those banish'd men, that I have kept withal,
Are men endur'd with worthy qualities:
Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their exile:
They are reformed, civil, full of good,
And fit for great employment, worthy lord. [thee:
Duke. Thou hast prevail'd; I pardon them, and Dispose of them, as thou know'st their deserts. —
Come; let us go: we will include all jars
With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.
Val. And as we walk along, I dare be bold
With our discourses to make your grace to smile.
What think you of this page, my lord?
Duke. I think the boy hath grace in him: he blushes.
Val. I warrant you, my lord,—more grace than Duke. What mean you by that saying? [boy.
Val. Please you, I'll tell you as we pass along;
That you will wonder what hath fortune.—
Come, Proteus; 'tis your penance, but to hear
The story of your loves discovered:
That done, our day of marriage shall be yours;
One feast, one house, one mutual happiness.
[Exeunt.
good do it your good heart! I wished your venison better; it was ill kill'd.—How doth good mistress Page?—and I thank you always with my heart, Sir; with my heart.

Page. Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you; by yea and no, I do.

Page. I am glad to see you, good master Slender.

Slen. How does your fawlow greyhound, Sir? I heard say, he was outrun on Cotsill.

Page. It could not be judged, Sir.

Slen. You'll not confess, you'll not confess.

Shal. That he will not:—'tis your fault, 'tis your fault—'tis a good dog.

Page. A cur, Sir.

Shal. Sir, he's a good dog, and a fair dog; can there be more said? he is good, and fair.—Is Sir John Falstaff here?

Page. Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

Eva. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speak.

Shal. He hath wronged me, master Page.

Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.

Shal. If it be confessed, it is not confessed; is not that so, master Page? He hath wronged me; indeed, he hath;—at a word, he hath;—believe me:

Robert Shallow, Esquire, saith, he is wronged.

Page. Here comes Sir John.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol.

Pist. Now, master Shallow,—you'll complain of me to the king?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodge.

Fal. But not kissed your keeper's daughter?

Shal. Tut, a pin! this shall be answered.

Fal. I will answer it straight.—I have done all this.—That is now answered.

Shal. The council shall know this.

Fal. 'Twere better for you, if it were known in counsel: you'll be laughed at.

Eva. Pauca verbis, Sir John; goot worts.

Pist. Good worts! good cabbage. — Sledger, I broke your head; what matter have you against me?

Slen. Marry, Sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against your coney-catching rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol: they carried me to the tavern, and made me drunk, and afterwards picked my pocket.

Bard. You Hanbury cheese!

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Pist. How now, Mephostophilus?

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Nym. Sice, I say! pauca, pauca; alike! that's my humour.

Slen. Where's Simple, my man?—can you tell, cousin?

Eva. Peace, I pray you. Now let us understand: there is three umpires in this matter, as I understand; that is—master Page, fidelict, master Page; and there is myself, fidelict, myself; and the three party is, lastly and finally, mine host of the Garder.

Page. We three, to hear it, and end it between them.

Eva. Fery goot: I will make a brief of it in my note-book; and we will afterwards 'ork upon the cause, with as great discreetly as we can.

Pist. Pistol——
MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

SCENE III.

Slen. So I do, Sir.

Eva. Give ear to his motions, master Slender: I will description the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

Slen. Nay, I will do as my cousin Shallow says: I pray you pardon me; he's a justice of peace in his country, simple though I stand here.

Eva. But that is not the question: the question is concerning your marriage.

Shal. Ay, there's the point, Sir.

Eva. Marry, is it; the very point of it; to mistress Anne Page.

Slen. Why, if it be so, I will marry her upon any reasonable demands.

Eva. But can you affection the 'oman? Let us command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips; for divers philosophiers hold, that the lips is parcel of the mouth: therefore, precisely, can you carry your good will to the maid?

Shal. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her? I hope, Sir, I will do as it shall become one that would do reason.

Eva. Nay, God's lords and his ladies, you must speak possible, if you can carry her your desires towards her.

Shal. That you must. Will you, upon good dowry, marry her?

Slen. I will do a greater thing than that, upon your request, cousin, in any reason.

Shal. Nay, conceal me, conceal me, sweet coz: what I do, is to please you, coz. Can you love the maid?

Slen. I will marry her, Sir, at your request; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married, and have more occasion to know one another: I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt: but if you say, "Marry her," I will marry her; that I am freely dissolved, and absolutely.

Eva. It is a ferry discretion answer; save, the fault is in the word "absolutely:" the word is, according to our meaning, "resolutely."—His meaning is got.

Shal. Ay, I think my cousin meant well.

Slen. Ay, or else I would I might be hanged, la.

Shal. Here comes fair mistress Anne. [Re-enter ANNE PAGE.] Would I were young for your sake, mistress Anne.

Anne. [Aside.] The dinner is on the table; my father desires your worship's company.

Shal. I will wait on him, fair mistress Anne.

Eva. Od's plesed will! I will not be! absence at the grace. [Exeunt SHALLOW and Sir H. EVANS.

Anne. Will't please your worship to come in, Sir?

Slen. No, I thank you, forsooth, heartily; I am very ill.

Anne. The dinner attends you, Sir.

Slen. I am not a-hungry, I thank you, forsooth.—Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go, wait upon my cousin Shallow. [Exit SIMPLE.] A justice of peace sometime may be beholden to his friend for a man.—I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my mother be dead; but what though? yet I live like a poor gentleman born.

Anne. I may not go in without your worship: they will not sit, till you come.

Slen. I' faith, I' ll eat nothing; I thank you as much as though I did.

Anne. I pray you, Sir, walk in.

Slen. I had rather walk here, I thank you. I bruised my shin the other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence,—three venoms for a dish of stewed prunes;—and, by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since.—Why do your dogs bark so? be there bears in the town?

Anne. I think there are, Sir, I heard them talked of.

Slen. I love the sport well; but I shall as soon quarrel at it as any man in England.—You are afraid, if you see the bear loose, are you not?

Anne. Ay, indeed, Sir.

Slen. That's meat and drink to me; now: I have seen Stackerson loose twenty times, and have taken him by the chain; but, I warrant you, the women have so cried and shriek'd at it, that it passed: but women, indeed, cannot abide 'em; they are very ill-favoured rough things.

Re-enter Page.

Page. Come, gentle master Slender, come; we stay for you.

Slen. I'll eat nothing, I thank you, Sir.

Page. By cock and pye, you shall not choose, Sir: come, come.

Slen. Nay, pray you, lead the way.

Slen. Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first.

Anne. Not I, Sir; pray you, keep on.

Slen. Truly, I will not go first; truly, la; I will not do you that wrong.

Anne. I pray you, Sir. [some.

Slen. I'll rather be unmannerly, than trouble You do yourself wrong, indeed, la. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — The Same.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Eva. Go your ways, and ask of Doctor Caius' house, which is the way; and there dwells one mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his nurse, or his dry nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, his washer, and his wringer.

Sim. Well, Sir.

Eva. Nay, it is better yet.—Give her this letter; for it is an 'oman that altogether's acquaintance with mistress Anne Page: and the letter is, to desire and require her to solicit your master's desires to mistress Anne Page. I pray you, be gone. I will make an end of my dinner; there's pippins and cheese to come. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff, Host, Bardolph, Nym, Pistol, and Robin.

Fal. Mine host of the Garter, —

Host. What says my bully-roeek? Speak scholarly and wisely.

Fal. Truly, mine host, I must turn away some of my followers.

Host. Discard, bully Hercules; cashier: let them wag; trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a week.

Host. Thou'rt an emperor, Cesar, Kesar, and Phizzar. I will entertain Bardolph; he shall draw, he shall tap: said I well, bully Hector?

Fal. Do so, good mine host.

Host. I have spoke; let him follow. —Let me see the froth and lime: I am at a word; follow. [Exit.
Fal. Bardolph, follow him. A tapster is a good trade: an old cloak makes a new jerkin; a withered serving-man, a fresh tapster. Go; adieu. [thrive.

Bard. It is a life that I have desired; I will

Nym. He was gotten in drink; is not the humour concocted? His mind is not heroic, and there’s the humour of it.

Fal. I am glad I am so acquit of this tinder-box: his thefts were too open; his fencing was like an unskilful singer,—he kept not time.

Nym. The good humour is to steal at a minim’s rest.

Pist. “Convey,” the wise it call. “Steal!” foh! a face for the phrase!

Fal. Well, Sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pist. Why, then, let lilies ensue.

Fal. There is no remedy; I must coney-catch; I must shift.

Pist. Young ravens must have food.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this town?

Pist. I ken the wight; he is of substance good.

Fal. My honest lads, I will tell you what I am

Pist. Two yards, and more. [about.

Fal. No quips now, Pistol: indeed, I am in the waist two yards about; but I am now about no waste; I am about thrift. Briefly, I do mean to make love to Ford’s wife: I spy entertainment in her; she discourses, she carves, she gives the leer of invitation: I can construe the action of her familiar style; and the hardest voice of her behaviour, to be English rightly, is, “I am Sir John Falstaff’s.”

Pist. He hath studied her well, and translated her well,—out of honesty into English.

Nym. The anchor is deep; will that humour pass?

Fal. Now, the report goes, she has all the rule of her husband’s purse; he hath a legion of angels.

Pist. As many devils entertain; and “To her, boy,” say I.

Nym. The humour rises; it is good: humour me the angels.

Fal. I have writ me here a letter to her; and here another to Page’s wife, who even now gave me good eyes too, examined my parts with most judicious eyelids: sometimes the beam of her view gilded my foot, sometimes my portly belly.

Pist. Then did the sun on dunghill shine.

Nym. I thank thee for this humour.

Fal. 0, she did so course o’er my extremities with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glass! Here’s another letter to her: she bears the purse too; she is a region in Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be cheater to them both, and they shall be exchequer to me: they shall be my East and West ladies, and I will trade to them both. Go, bear thou this letter to mistress Page; and thou this to mistress Ford. We will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

Pist. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become,

And by my side wear steel? then, Lucifer take all!

Nym. I will run no base humour: here, take the humour-letter. I will keep the ‘haviour of reputation.

Fal. [To Robin.] Hold, sirrah, bear you these letters tightly:

Sail like my pinnae to these golden shores.— [Exit Robin.

Rogues, hence! awaunt! vanish like hailstones, go; Trudge, plod away o’ the hoof; seek shelter, pack! Falstaff will learn the humour of this age, French thrift, you rogues; myself, and skirted page. [Exit.

Pist. Let vultures gripe thy guts! for gourd and fullam holds.

And high and low beguile the rich and poor.

Testor I’ll have in pouch, when thou shalt lack,

Base Phrygian Turk!

Nym. I have operations in my head, which be humours of revenge.

Pist. Wilt thou revenge?

Nym. By welkin, and her stars!

Pist. With wit, or steel?

Nym. With both the humours, I;

I will discuss the humour of this love to Page.

Pist. And I to Ford shall eke unfold,

How Falstaff, varlet vile,

His head we will prove, his gold will hold,

And his soft couch defile.

Nym. My humour shall not cool: I will incense Page to deal with poison; I will possess him with yellowness, for the revolt of men is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Pist. Thou art the Mars of malcontents: I second thee; troop on. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Dr. Caius’s House.

Enter Mistress Quickly and Simple.

Quick. What, John Rugby! [Enter Rugby.] I pray thee, go to the casement, and see if you can see my master, master Doctor Caius, coming: if he do, I faith, and find anybody in the house, here will be an old abusing of God’s patience, and the king’s English.

Rug. I’ll go watch.

Quick. Go; and we’ll have a posset for’t soon at night, in faith, at the latter end of a sea-coal fire. [Exit Rugby.] An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and, I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no bred-bite: his worst fault is, that he is given to prayer; he is something peevish that way: but nobody but has his fault; but let that pass.—Peter Simple, you say your name is?

Sim. Ay, for fault of a better.

Quick. And master Slender’s your master?

Sim. Ay, forsooth.

Quick. Does he not wear a great round beard, like a Glover’s paring-knife?

Sim. No, forsooth; he hath but a little wee face, with a little yellow beard,—a cane-coloured beard.

Quick. A softly-sprighted man, is he not?

Sim. Ay, forsooth; but he is as tall a man of his hands, as any is between this and his head: he hath fought with a warrener.

Quick. How say you?—O, I should remember him: does he not hold up his head, as it were, and strut in his gilt?

Sim. Yes, indeed, does he.

Quick. Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune! Tell master parson Evans, I will do what I can for your master: Anne is a good girl, and I wish—

Rug. Enter Rugby.

Rug. Out, alas! here comes my master.

Quick. We shall all be shent.—Run in here, good young man; go into this closet: he will not stay long.—[Shuts SIMPLE in the Closet.] What, John Rugby? John, what, John, I say! Go, John, go inquire for my master; I doubt, he be not well, that he comes not home. [Exit Rugby.] [Sings.] "And down, down, adown-a," &c.

Enter Doctor Caustus.

Caustus. Vat is you sing? I do not like dese toys.

Pray you, go, and vetch me in my closet an better verb; a box, a green-a box: do intend vat I speak? a green-a box.

Quick. Ay, forsooth; I'll fetch it you. [Aside.] I am glad he went not in himself: if he had found the young man, he would have been horn-mad.

Caustus. Fe, fe, fe! ma fe, il fait fort chaud. Je m'en vais à la cour,—la grande affaire.

Quick. Is it this, Sir?

Caustus. Oui; note le au mon pocket; dépêche, quickly.—Vere is dat knave Rugby? What, John Rugby? John!

Re-enter Rugby.

Rug. Here, Sir.

Caustus. You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Rugby: come, take-a your rapier, and come after my heel to de court.

Rug. 'Tis ready, Sir, here in the porch.

Caustus. By my troth, I tarry too long.—Od's me! Qu'ai-je publié? dere is some simples in my closet, dat I will not for de varld I shall leave behind.

Quick. [Aside.] Ah me! he'll find the young man there, and be mad.

Caustus. O diable! diable! vat is in my closet?—Villainy! larrent! [Pulling SIMPLE out.] Rugby, my rapier! Quick. Good master, be content.

Caustus. Vefore shall I be content-a?

Quick. The young man is an honest man.

Caustus. Vat shall de honest man do in my closet?

dere is no honest man dat shall come in my closet.

Quick. I bezeech you, be not so phlegmatic. Hear the truth of it: he came of an errand to me from parson Hugh.

Caustus. Vell.

Sim. Ay, forsooth; to desire her to—

Quick. Peace, I pray you.

Caustus. Peace-a your tongue!—Speak-a your tale.

Sim. To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to mistress Anne Page for my master, in the way of marriage.

Quick. This is all, indeed, la; but I'll never put my finger in the fire, and need not.

Caustus. Sir Hugh send-a you?—Rugby, sallies me some paper.—Tarry you a little-a while. [Writes.

Quick. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had been thoroughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholy.—But, notwithstanding, man, I'll do your master what good I can: and the very yes and the so is, the French doctor, my master,—I may call him my master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, wring, brew, lake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself.—

Sim. 'Tis a great charge to come under one body's hand.

Quick. Are you avis'd o' that? you shall find it a great charge: and to be up early and down late;—but notwithstanding,—to tell you in your ear,—I would have no words of it,—my master himself is in love with mistress Anne Page: but notwithstanding that, I know Anne's mind; that's neither here nor there.

Caustus. You jack'nape, give-a dis letter to Sir Hugh; by gar, it is a challenge: I vill cut his trat in de park; and I vill teach a scavy jack-a-nape priest to meddle or make.—You may be gone; it is not good you tarry here; by gar, I vill cut all his two stones; by gar, he shall not have a stone to trow at his dog. [Exit SIMPLE.

Quick. Alas! he speaks but for his friend.

Caustus. It is no matter-a for dat;—do not you tell-a me, dat I shall have Anne Page for myself.—By gar, I vill kill de Jack priest; and I have appointed mine hout of de Jarretière to measure our weapon.—By gar, I vill myself have Anne Page.

Quick. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well. We must give folks leave to prate: what, the good-je? Caustus. Rugby, come to the court vit me.—By gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door.—Follow my heels, Rugby. [Exeunt Caustus and Rugby.

Quick. You shall have An fool's-head of your own. No, I know Anne's mind for that: never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mind than I do; nor can do more than I do with her, I thank heaven. Fact. [Within.] Who's within there? ho!

Quick. Who's there, I trow? Come near the house, I pray you.

Enter Fenton.

Fact. How now, good woman! how dost thou? Quick. The better, that it pleases your good worship to ask.

Fact. What news? how does pretty mistress Anne?

Quick. In truth, Sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle; and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way; I praise heaven for it.

Fact. Shall I do any good, thinkest thou? Shall I not lose my suit?

Quick. Troth, Sir, all is in his hands above: but notwithstanding, master Fenton, I'll be sworn on a book, she loves you.—Have not your worship a warrant above your eye?

Fact. Yes, marry, have I; what of that?

Quick. Well, thereby hangs a tale.—Good faith, it is such another Nan;—but, I detest, an honest maid as ever broke bread:—we had an hour's talk of that warrant.—I shall never laugh but in that maid's company;—but, indeed, she is given too much to alchohol and musing. But for you,—I'll go to.

Quick. Well, I shall see her to-day. I hold, there's money for thee; let me have thy voice in my behalf: if thou seest her before me, commend me—

Quick. Will I? faith, that we will: and I will tell your worship more of the warrant, the next time we have confidence; and of other wooers.

Fact. Well, farewell; I am in great haste now.

Quick. Farewell to your worship. [Exit Fenton.] Truly, an honest gentleman: but Anne loves him not; for I know Anne's mind as well as another does.—Out upon't! what have I forgot? [Exit.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—Before PAGE’s House.

Enter Mistress PAGE, with a Letter.

Mrs Page. What have I escaped love-letters in the holyday time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? Let me see. [Reads.]—

"Ask me no reason why I love you; for though love use reason for his precision, he admits him not for his counsellor. You are not young, no more am I; go to then, there’s sympathy: you are merry, so am I; ha, ha! then, there’s more sympathy; you love sack, and so do I; would you desire better sympathy? Let it suffice thee, mistress Page.—at the least, if the love of a soldier can suffice.—that I love thee. I will not say, Fie me,—tis not a soldier-like phrase; but I say, Love me. By me, Thine own true knight,

By day or night,

Or any kind of light,

With all his might.

For thee to fight.

JOHN FALSTAFF."

What a Herold of Jewry is this!—O wicked, wicked world!—one that is well-nigh worn to pieces with age, to show himself a young gallant! What an unweighed behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard picked—with the devil’s name—out of my conversation, that he dares in this manner assay me? Why, he hath not been thrice in my company!—What should I say to him?—I was then frugal of my mirth—heaven forgive me!—Why, I’ll exhibit a bill in the parliament for the putting down of men. How shall I be revenged on him? for revenged I will be, as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

Enter Mistress FORD.

Mrs Ford. Mistress Page! trust me, I was going to your house.

Mrs Page. And, trust me, I was coming to you. You look very ill.

Mrs Ford. Nay, I’ll ne’er believe that: I have to show to the contrary.

Mrs Page. Faith, but you do, in my mind.

Mrs Ford. Well, I do then; yet, I say, I could show you to the contrary. O, mistress Page! give me some counsel.

Mrs Page. What’s the matter, woman?

Mrs Ford. O woman! if it were not for one truing respect, I could come to such honour.

Mrs Page. Hang the truie, woman! take the honour. What is it?—dispense with truies—what is it?

Mrs Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal matter or so, I could be knighted.

Mrs Page. What?—you last.—Sir Alice Ford!—These knights will hack; and so, thou shouldst not alter the article of thy gentry.

Mrs Ford. We’ll be in daylight—here, read, read;—perceive how I might be knighted.—I shall think the worse of fat men, as long as I have an eye to make difference of men’s liking; and yet he would not swear, praised women’s modesty, and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproof to all uncomeliness, that I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words; but they do no more adhere and keep place together, than the hundredth psalm to the tune of “Green Sleeves.” What tempest, I trow, threw, this whale, with so many tuns of oil in his belly, ashore at Windsor? How shall I be revenged on him? I think, the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease.—Did you ever hear the like?

Mrs Ford. Letter for letter, but that the name of Page and Ford differs!—To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here’s the twin-brother, of thy letter; but let thine inherit first; for, I protest, mine never shall. I warrant, he hath a thousand of these letters, writ with blank space for different names,—sure, more,—and these are of the second edition. He will print them, out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press, when he would put us two. I had rather be a giantess, and lie under mount Pelion. Well, I will find you twenty lascivious turtles, ere one chaste man.

Mrs Ford. Why, this is the very same; the very hand, the very words. What doth he think of us?

Mrs Page. Nay, I know not: it makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty. I’ll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me, that I know not myself, he would never have boarded me in this fury.

Mrs Ford. Boarding, call you it? I’ll be sure to keep him above deck.

Mrs Page. So will I: if he come under my hatches, I’ll have see again. Let’s be revenged on him; let’s appoint him a meeting; give him a show of comfort in his suit; and lead him on with a fine belated delay, till he hath pawned his horses to mine host of the Garter.

Mrs Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any villany against him, that may not swiftly the chariness of our honesty. O, that my husband saw this letter! it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

Mrs Page. Why, look, where he comes; and my good man too; he’s as far from jealousy, as I am from giving him cause; and that, I hope, is an unmeasurable distance.

Mrs Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mrs Page. Let’s consult together against this greedy knight. Come hither. [They retire.]

Ford. What name, Sir?

Mrs Page. Hang the truie, woman! take the honour. What is it?—dispense with truies—what is it?

Mrs Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal matter or so, I could be knighted.

How shall I be revenged on him? I think, the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease.—Did you ever hear the like?

Ford. He loves the gally-mawry; Ford, perpend.

Mrs Page. staff loves your wife. — Adieu. I love not the humour of bread and cheese; and there’s the humour of it. Adieu. [Exit.
Page. [Aside.] "The humour of it," quoth a’! here’s a fellow frights humour out of his wits.
Ford. [Aside.] I will seek out Falstaff.
Page. [Aside.] I never heard such a drawing, affecting rogue.
Ford. [Aside.] I do find it;—well.
Page. [Aside.] I will not believe such a Catanian, though the priest o’ the town commanded him for a true man.
Ford. [Aside.] ’Twas a good sensible fellow;—well.
Page. How now, Meg?
Mrs. Page. Whither go you, George?—Hark you.
Mrs. Ford. How now, sweet Frank! why art thou melancholy?
Page. I am melancholy! I am not melancholy.—
Get you home, go.
Mrs. Ford. ' Faith, thou hast some crotchets in thy head now.—Will you go, mistress Page?
Mrs. Page. Have with you.—You’ll come to dinner, George?—[Aside to Mrs. Ford.] Look, who comes yonder: she shall be our messenger to this paltry knight.
Ford. [Aside to Mrs. Page.] Trust me, I thought on her: she’ll fit it.
Enter Mrs. Quickly.
Mrs. Page. You are come to see my daughter Anne?
Quick. Ay, forsooth; and, I pray, how does good mistress Anne?
Mrs. Page. Go in with us, and see: we have an hour’s talk with you.
[Exeunt Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Mrs. Quickly.
Ford. You heard what this knave told me, did you not?
Page. Yes; and you heard what the other told me?
Ford. Do you think there is truth in them?
Page. Hang’em, slaves! I do not think the knight would offer it: but these that accuse him in his intent towards our wives, are a yoke of his discarded men; very rogues, now they be out of service.
Ford. Were they his men?
Page. Merry, were they.
Ford. I like it never the better for that.—Does he lie at the Carter?
Page. Ay, marry, does he. If he should intend this voyage towards my wife, I would turn her loose to him; and what he gets more of her than sharp words, let it lie on my head.
Ford. I do not misdoubt my wife; but I would be loth to turn them together. A man may be too confident: I would have nothing lie on my head: I cannot be thus satisfied.
Page. Look, where my ranting host of the Carter comes. There is either liquor in his purse, or money in his purse, when he looks so merrily. —[Enter Host.] How now, mine host!
Host. How now, bully-rook! thou’rt a gentleman. — Cavailer-justice, I say!

Enter Falstaff.

Shal. I follow, mine host, I follow.—Good even, and truly, good master Page! Master Page, will you go with us? we have sport in hand.

Host. Tell him, cavaller-justice; tell him, bully-rook.
Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought between Sir Hugh, the Welsh priest, and Caius, the French doctor.
Ford. Good mine host o’ the Carter, a word with you.
Host. What sayest thou, my bully-rook?
Shal. [To Page.] Will you go with us to behold it? My merry host hath had the measuring of their weapons; and, I think, hath appointed them contrary places; for, believe me, I hear, the person is no jester. Hark, I will tell you what our sport shall be. —[They go aside.
Host. I hast thou no suit against my knight, my guest-cavalier?
Ford. None, I protest: but I’ll give you a potte of burnt sack to give me recourse to him, and tell him my name is Brook; only for a jest.
Host. My hand, bully: thou shalt have egress and regress; said I well? and thy name shall be Brook. It is a merry knight.—Will you go on, hearts?
Shal. Have with you, mine host.
Page. I have heard, the Frenchman hath good skill in his rapier.
Shal. Tut, Sir! I could have told you more. In these times you stand on distance, your passes, stocadoes, and I know not what; ’tis the heart, master Page; ’tis the heart, ’tis here. I have seen the time, with my long sword, I would have made you four tall fellows skip like rats.
Host. Here, boys, here, here! shall we wag?
Page. Have with you.—I had rather hear them scold than fight.
[Exeunt Host, Shallow, and Page.
Ford. Though Page be a secure fool, and stands so firmly on his wife’s frailty, yet I cannot put off my opinion so easily: she was in his company at Page’s house; and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will look farther into ’t; and I have a disguise to sound Falstaff. If I find her honest, I lose not my labour; if she be otherwise, ’tis labour well bestowed. —[Exit.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Carter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Pistol.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.
Pist. Why, then the world’s mine oyster,
Which I with sword will open. —
I will retort the sum in equipage.
Fal. Not a penny. I have been content, Sir, you should lay my countenance to pawn: I have gratted upon my good friends for three reprieves for you and your coach-fellow, Nyms; or else you had looked through the grate, like a gemini of baboons. I am damned in hell for swearing to gentlemen, my friends, you were good soldiers, and tall fellows: and when mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took’t upon mine honour thou hadst it not.
Pist. Didst thou not share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?
Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason: thinkest thou, I’ll endanger my soul gratis? At a word, hang no more about me; I am no gibbet for you:—go.—A short knife and a thong,—to your mayor of Pickthatch, go. —You’ll not bear a letter for me, you rogue!—you stand upon your honour!—Why, thou unconfinable baseness, it is as much as I can do, to keep the terms of my honour precie. If, I, I, myself sometimes, leaving the fear of heaven on the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to lurch; and yet you, rogue, will esconce your rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour! You will not do it, you!

Pist. I do relent: what wouldst thou more of man?

Enter Robin.

Rob. Sir, here's a woman would speak with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Enter Mistress Quickly.

Quick. Give your worship good-morrow.

Fal. Good-morrow, good wife.

Quick. Not so, an't please your worship.

Fal. Good maide, then.

Quick. I'll be sworn; as my mother was, the first hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the swearer. What with me?

Quick. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?

Fal. Two thousand, fair woman; and I'll vouchsafe thee the hearing.

Quick. There is one mistress Ford, Sir:—I pray, come a little nearer this ways,—I myself dwell with master Doctor Caius,——

Fal. Well, on: Mistress Ford, you say——

Quick. Your worship says very true:—I pray your worship, come a little nearer this ways.

Fal. I warrant thee, nobody hears;—mine own people, mine own people.

Quick. Are they so? Heaven bless them, and make them his servants!

Fal. Well: Mistress Ford;—what of her?

Quick. Why, Sir, she's a good creature. Lord, lord! your worship's a wanton! Well, heaven for-give you, and all of us, I pray!

Fal. Mistress Ford;—come, mistress Ford,—

Quick. Marry, this is the short and the long of it: you have brought her into such a canaries, as 's wonderful; the best curriers of them all, when the court lay at Windsor, could never have brought her to such a canary: yet there has been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches; I warrant your coach after coach, letter after letter, gift after gift; smelling so sweetly—all musk—and so rushing; I warrant you, in silk and gold; and in such alligant terms; and in such wine and sugar of the best, and the fairest, that would have won any woman's heart; and, I warrant you, they could never get an eye-wink of her.—I had myself twenty angels given me this morning; but I defy all angels, (in any such sort, as they say,) but in the way of honesty:—and, I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proudest of them all: and yet they have been ears, nay, which is more, pensioners; but, I warrant you, all is one with her.

Fal. But what says she to me? be brief, my good she Mercury.

Quick. Marry, she hath received your letter; for the which she thanks you a thousand times; and she gives you to notify, that her husband will be absence from his house between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten and eleven?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and then you may come and see the picture, she says, that you wot of:—master Ford, her husband, will be from home. Alas! the sweet woman leads an ill life with him; he's a very jealous man; she leads a very frumpold life with him, good heart.

Fal. Ten and eleven.—Woman, commend me to her; I will not fail her.

Quick. Why, you say well. But I have another messenger to your worship. Mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you, too:—and let me tell you in your ear, she's as matterful a civil modestwife, and one (I tell you) that will not miss you morning nor evening prayer, as any in Windsor: who'er be the other:—and she bade me tell your worship, that her husband is seldom from home; but, she hopes, there will come a time. I never knew a woman so dote upon a man: surely, I think you have charms, la; yes, in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee: setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charms.

Quick. Blessing on your heart for't!

Fal. But, I pray thee, tell me this: has Ford's wife, and Page's wife, acquainted each other how they love me?

Quick. That were a jest, indeed!—they have not so little grace, I hope:—that were a trick, indeed!—But mistress Page would desire you to send her your little page, of all loves: her husband has a marvellous infection to the little page; and, truly, master Page is an honest man. Never a wife in Windsor lends a better life than she does: do what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will: and, truly, she deserves it; for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one. You must send her your page; no remedy.

Fal. Why, I will.

Quick. Nay, but do so, then: and, look you, he may come and go between you both; and, in any case, have a newword, that you may know one another's mind, and the boy never need to understand anything; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickedness: old folks you know, have discretion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Fare thee well; commend me to them both. There's my purse; I am yet thy debtor.—Boy, go along with this woman.—[Exeunt Quickly and Robin.] This news distracts me.

Pist. This punk is one of Cupid's carriars.—

Chap on more sails; purse up; with your fights; Give fire; she is my prize, or ocean welhim them all!—[Exit.

Fal. Sayest thou so, old Jack! go thy ways; I'll make more of thy old body than I have done. Will they yet look after thee? Wilt thou, after the expense of so much money, be now a gainer? Good body, I thank thee. Let them say, 'tis grossly done; so it be fairly done, no matter.

Enter Bardolph.

Bard. Sir John, there's one master Brook below would fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship a morning's draught of sack.

Fal. Brook, is his name?

Bard. Ay, Sir.

Fal. Call him in. [Exit Bardolph.] Such Brooks as will come to me, that overflow such liquor. —Ah, ha! mistress Ford and mistress Page, have I encompassed you? go to; via!
Bless you, Sir!

And you, Sir! would you speak with me?

Ford. I make bold, to press with so little preparation upon you.

Fal. You’re welcome. What’s your will?—Give us leave, drawer.

Ford. Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much: my name is Brook.

Fal. Good master Brook, I desire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good Sir John, I sue for yours: not to charge you; for I must let you understand, I think myself in better plight for a lender than you are: the which hath something emboldened me to this unseasoned intrusion; for, they say, if money go before, all ways do lie open.

Fal. Money is a good soldier, Sir, and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I have a bag of money here troubles me; if you will help to bear it, Sir John, take all, or half, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your porter.

Ford. I will tell you, Sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Fal. Speak, good master Brook; I shall be glad to be your servant.

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a scholar,—I will be brief with you;—and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means, as desire, to make myself acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection: but, good Sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the register of your own, that I may pass with a reprovd the easier, sith you yourself know how easy it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well, Sir; proceed.

Ford. There is a gentlewoman in this town, her husband’s name is Ford.

Fal. Well, Sir.

Ford. I have long loved her, and, I protest to you, bestowed much on her; followed her with a doting observance; engrossed opportunities to meet her; fee’d every slight occasion that could but niggardly give me sight of her; not only bought masterly presents to give her, but have given largely to many, to know what she would have given. Briefly, I have pursued her as love hath pursued me; which hath been on the wing of all occasions. But whatsoever I have merited, either in my mind, or in my means, meed, I am sure, I have received none; unless experience be a jewel: that I have purchased at an infinite rate; and that hath taught me to say this.

Love like a shadow flies, when substance love pursues;
Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues.

Fal. Have you received no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Have you importuned her to such a purpose?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love, then?

Ford. Like a fair house, built upon another man’s ground; so that I have lost my edifice, by mistaking the place where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all. Some say, that though she appear honest to me, yet in other places she enlargeth her mirth so far, that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now, Sir John, here is the heart of my purpose: you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentic in your place and person, generally allowed for your many war-like, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O, Sir!

Ford. Believe it, for you know it.—There is money; spend it, spend it; spend more; spend all I have; only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford’s wife: use your art of wooing; win her to consent to you; if any man may, you may as soon as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks, you prescribe to yourself very preposterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift. She dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul desires not present itself: she is too bright to be looked against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves: I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too strongly embellished against me. What say you to’t, Sir John?

Fal. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand; and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford’s wife.

Ford. O good Sir!

Fal. I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money, Sir John; you shall want none.

Fal. Want no mistress Ford, master Brook; you shall want none. I shall be with her (I may tell you) by her own appointment; even as you came in to me, her servant, or go-between, parted from me: I say, I shall be with her between ten and eleven; for at that time the jealous rascally knave, her husband, will be forth. Come you to me at night; you shall know I speak true.

Ford. I am lost in your acquaintance. Do you know Ford, Sir?

Fal. Hang him, poor cuckoldly knave! I know him not.—Yet I wrong him, to call him poor: they say, the jealous wittily knave hath masses of money; for which, his wife seems to me well-favoured. I will use her as the key of the cuckoldly rogue’s coffer; and there’s my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, Sir, that you might avoid him, if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanical salt-butter rogue! I will stare him out of his wits: I will awe him with my cudgel,—it shall hang like a meteor o’er the cuckold’s horns. Master Brook, thou shalt know I will predominate over the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife.—Come to me soon at night.—Ford’s a knave, and I will aggravate his style; thou, master Brook, shalt know him for knave and cuckold.—Come to me soon at night.

[Exit Ford.]

Fal. What a damned Epicurean rascal is this!
MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

ACT II.

My heart is ready to crack with impatience.—Who says this is provident jealousy? my wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixed, the match is made. Would any man have thought this?—See the hell of having a false woman! My bed shall be abused, my coffer ranacked, my reputation gnawn at; and I shall not only receive this villainous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me this wrong. Terms! names!—Amaimon sounds well; Lucifer, well; Barbason, well; yet they are devils' additions, the names of fiends: but cuckold! wittol cuckold! the devil himself hath not such a name. Page is an ass, a secure ass: he will trust his wife; he will not be jealous. I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, parson Hugh the Welshman with my cheese, an Irishman with my aqua-vite bottle, or a thief to walk my ambling gelding, than my wife with herself: then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises; and what they think in their hearts they may effect, they will break their hearts but they will effect. Heaven be praised for my jealousy!—Eleven o'clock the hour:—I will prevent this, detect my wife, be revenged on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. I will about it; better three hours too soon, than a minute too late. Fie, fie, fie! cuckold! cuckold! cuckold!

SCENE III.—Field near WINDSOR.

Enter CAIUS and RUGBY.

CAIUS. Jack Rugby,—
RUG. Sir?
CAIUS. Vat is de clock, Jack?
RUG. 'Ts past the hour, Sir, that Sir Hugh promised to meet.
CAIUS. By gar, he has save his soul, dat he is no come: but pray his Pible well, dat he is no come. By gar, Jack Rugby, he is dead already, if he be come.
RUG. He is wise, Sir; he knew your worship would kill him, if he came.
CAIUS. By gar, de herring is no dead, so as I will kill him. Take your rapier, Jack; I will tell you how I will kill him.
RUG. Alas, Sir! I cannot fence.
CAIUS. Villainy! take your rapier.
RUG. Forbear; here's company.

Enter Host, SHALLOW, SLENDER, and PAGE.

HOST. Bless thee, bully doctor!
SHAL. Save you, master Doctor Caius!
PAGE. Now, good master doctor!
SLEN. Give you good-morrow, Sir.
CAIUS. Vat be all you, one, two, tree, fowr, come for?
HOST. To see thee fight, to see thee foin, to see thee traverse; to see thee here, to see thee there; to see thee pass thy panto, thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance, thy Montant. Is he dead, my Ethiopian? is he dead, my Francisco? ha, bully! What says my Asculapius? my Galen? my heart of elder? ha! is he dead, bully Stale? is he dead?
CAIUS. By gar, he is de coward Jack priest de world; he is not show his face.
HOST. Thou art a Castalian King Urinal! Hector of Greece, my boy!

CAIUS. I pray you, bear witness that I have stay six or seven, two, tree hours for him, and he is no come.
SHAL. He is the wiser man, master doctor: he is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies; if you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions.—Is it not true, master Page?
PAGE. Master Shallow, you have yourself been a great fighter, though now a man of peace.
SHAL. Bodykins, master Page, though I now be old, and of the peace, if I see a sword out, my finger titches to make one. Though we are justices, and doctors, and churchmen, master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us; we are the sons of women, master Page.
PAGE. 'Tis true, master Shallow.
SHAL. It will be found so, master Page.—Master doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home. I am sworn of the peace: you have showed yourself a wise physician, and Sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient churchman. You must go with me, master doctor.
HOST. Fardon, guest-justice.—A word, monsieur Mock-water.
CAIUS. Mock-water! vat is dat?
HOST. Mock-water, in our English tongue, is valour, bully.
CAIUS. By gar, den, I have as much mock-water as de Englishman.—Scruby jack-dog priest! by gar, me vill cut his ears.
HOST. He will clapper-claw thee tightly, bully.
CAIUS. Clapper-de-claw! vat is dat?
HOST. That is, he will make thee amends.
CAIUS. By gar, me do look, he shall clapper-de-claw me; for, by gar, me will have it.
HOST. And I will provoke him to't, or let him wag.
CAIUS. Me tank you for dat.
HOST. And moreover, bully.—But first, master guest, and master Page, and eke cavalero Slanders, [aside to them.] go you through the town tofrogmore.
PAGE. Sir Hugh is there, is he?
HOST. He is there: see what humour he is in; and I will bring the doctor about by the fields. Will it do well?
SHAL. We will do it.

Page, Shal., and Slen. Adieu, good master doctor. [Exeunt Page, Shallow, and SLENDER.

CAIUS. By gar, me vill kill de priest; for he speak for a jack-knife to Anne Page.
HOST. Let him die: sheath the impatience; throw cold water on thy choler: go about the fields with me through frogmore: I will bring thee where mistress Anne Page is, at a farm-house a-feasting; and thou shalt woo her. Cried I aim? said I well?
CAIUS. By gar, me tank you for dat: by gar, I love you; and I shall procure a you de good gues'; de earl, de knight, de lords, de gentlemen, de patients.
HOST. For the which I will be thy adversary toward Anne Page. Said I well?
CAIUS. By gar, 'tis good; vell said.
HOST. Let us wag, then.
CAIUS. Come at my heels, Jack Rugby. [Exeunt.
ACT III.

MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

SCENE I.—A Field near FROGMORE.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and SIMPLE.

Eve. I pray you now, good master Slender's serving-man, and friend Simple by your name, which way have you looked for master Caius, that calls himself Doctor of Physick?

Sim. Marry, Sir, the pittle-ward, the park-ward, every way; old Windsor way, and every way but the town way.

Eve. I most vehemently desire you, you will also look that way.

Sim. I will, Sir. [Retiring. Eve. Pleas my soul! how full of choler I am, and trembling of mind!—I shall be glad, if he have deceived me.—How melancholy I am!—I will knock his urinals about his knave's costard, when I have good opportunities for the 'ork—pleas my soul!—

To shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals;
There will we make our peels of roses,
And a thousand fragrant posies.

To shallow—

[Enter Host, CAIUS, and RUGBY. Eve. I pray you, let-a me speak a word vit you: ear: verefore vill you not meet-a me?

Eve. Pray you, use your patience: in good time.

Caius. By gar, you are de coward, de Jack dog, John ape.

Eve. Pray you, let us not be laughing-stogs to other men's humours; I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amends:—I will knock your urinals about your knave's cogcomb for missing your meetings and appointments.

Caius. Diable!—Jack Rugby,—mine host de

"Tarretize, have I not stay for him to kill him? have I not, at de place I did appoint?

Eve. As I am a Christians soul, now, look you, this is the place appointed: 'll be judgment by mine host of the Garter.

Host. Peace, I say, Gallia and Guilia; French and Welsh; soul-curer and body-curer!

Host. Peace, I say! hear mine host of the Garter. Am I politic? am I subtle? am I a Machiavel? Shall I lose my doctor? no; he gives me the potions, and the motions. Shall I lose my parson, my priest, my Sir Hugh? no; he gives me the provers and the novelties. Give me thy hand, terrestrial; so:—give me thy hand, celestial; so:—Boys of art, I have deceived you both; I have directed you to wrong places: your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burst suck be the issue.—Come, lay their swords to pawn.—Follow me, lad of peace; follow, follow, follow.

Skal. Trust me a mad host!—Follow, gentlemen, follow.

Sten. O, sweet Anne Page!

[Exeunt SHALLOW, SLENDER, PAGE, and Host.

Caius. Ha, do I perceive dat? have you make-a de sort of us; ha, ha?

Eve. This is well; he has made us his vlogging-stog.—I desire you, that we may be friends; and let us knog our prains together to be revenge on this same scall, scourvy, coggging companion, the host of the Garter.

Caius. By gar, vit all my heart. He promise to bring me vere is Anne Page: by gar, he deceive me too.

Eve. Well, I will smite his noddles.—pray you, follow. [Exeunt.
SCENE II.—A Street in WINDSOR.

Enter Mistress Pack and Robin.

Mrs. Page. Nay, keep your way, little gallant: you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader. Whether you had rather, lead mine eyes, or eye your master’s heels? Rob. I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man, than follow him like a dwarf.

Mrs. Page. O, you are a flattering boy: now I see you’ll be a courier.

Enter Ford.

Ford. Well met, mistress Page. Whither go you?

Mrs. Page. Truly, Sir, to see your wife: is she at home?

Ford. Ay; and as idle as she may hang together, for want of company. I think, if your husbands were dead, you two would e’er rather.

Mrs. Page. Be sure of that,—two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weathercock?

Mrs. Page. I cannot tell what the dickens his name was; nor his husband had him of,—What do you call your knight’s name, sirrah?

Rob. Sir John Falstaff.

Ford. Sir John Falstaff!

Mrs. Page. He, he; I can never hit on ‘name.’—There is such a league between my good man and he!—Is your wife at home, indeed?

Ford. Indeed, she is.

Mrs. Page. By your leave, Sir; I am sick, till I see her. [Exeunt Mrs. PAGE and ROBIN.

Ford. Has Page any brains? hath he any eyes? hath he any thinking? Sure, they sleep; he hath no use of them. Why, this boy will carry a letter twenty miles, as easy as a cannon will shoot point-blank twelve score. He pieces-out his wife’s imagination; he gives her folly and advantage; and now she’s going to my wife, and Falstaff’s boy with her—a man may hear this singer in the wind;—and Falstaff’s boy with her!—Good plots!—they are laid; and our revolted wives share damnation together. Well, I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed veil of modesty from the so-seeming Mrs. Page, divulse Page himself for a secure and willful Acton; and to these violent proceedings all my neighbours shall cry aim. [Clock strikes.] The clock gives me my cue, and my assurance bids me search: there I shall find Falstaff. I shall be rather praised for this, than mocked; for it is as positive as the earth is firm, that Falstaff is there: I will go.

Enter PAGE, SLOWARD, SLENDER, HOMI, SIR HUGH EVANS, CAUS, and RUGBY.

Ford. Trust me, a good knight. I have good cheer at home; and I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse myself, master Ford.

Slender. And so must I, Sir: we have appointed to dine with a Anne, and I would not break with her for more money than I’ll speak of.

Shal. We have lingered about a match between Anne Page and my cousin Sland, and this day we shall have an answer.

Slender. I hope I have your good-will, father Page.

Page. You have, master Slender; I stand wholly for you: but my wife, master doctor, is for you altogether.

Caius. Ay, by gar; and de maid is love-a me: my nurs-a Quickell tell me so much.

Host. What say you to young master Fenton, he capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes verses, he speaks holiday, he smells April and May: he will carry’s, he will carry’s; ‘tis in his buttons; he will carry’s.

Page. Not by my consent, I promise you. The gentleman is of no having: he kept company with the wild Prince and Pains; he is of too high a region; he knows too much. No, he shal not knit a knot in his fortunes with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simply; the wealth I have waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you, heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner: besides your cheer, you shall have sport; I will show you a monster.—Master Ford, you shall go:—so shall you, master Page;—and you, Sir Hugh.

Shal. Well, fare you well:—we shall have the freer wooing at master Page’s.

[Exeunt SLOWARD, SLENDER, and PAGE.

Caius. Go home, John Rugby: I come anon.

[Exit Rugby.

Host. Farewell, my hearts: I will to my honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him.

[Exit Host.

Ford. [Aside.] I think, I shall drink in pipe-wine first with him; I’ll make him dance.—Will you go, gentlemen?

All. Have with you, to see this monster.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in FORD’S House.

Enter Mistress Ford and Mistress Page.

Mrs. Ford. What, John! what, Robert?

Mrs. Page. Quickly, quickly:—Is the buck-basket—

Mrs. Ford. I warrant.—What, Robin, I say!

[Enter Servants with a large Basket.

Mrs. Page. Come, come, come.

Mrs. Ford. Here, set it down.

Mrs. Page. Give your men the charge: we must be brief.

Mrs. Ford. Marry, as I told you before, John, and Robert, be ready here hard by in the brew-house; and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and, without any pause or staggering, take this basket on your shoulders; that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the whistlers in Datchet-mead, and there empty it in the muddy ditch, close by the Thames side.

Mrs. Page. You will do it?

Mrs. Ford. I have told them over and over; they lack no direction.—Be gone, and come when you are called.

[Exeunt Servants.

Mrs. Page. Here comes little Robert.

[Enter ROBIN.

Mrs. Ford. How now, my eyes-masket! what news with you?

Rob. My master, Sir John, is come in at your back-door, mistress Ford, and requests your company.

Mrs. Page. You little Jack-a-lent, have you been true to us?

Rob. Ay, I’ll be sworn. My master knows not of your being here; and hath threatened to put me into everlasting liberty, if I tell you of it; for he swears he'll turn me away.

Mrs. Page. Thou 'st a good boy; this secrecy of things shall be a tailor to thee, and shall make thee a new doublet and hose.—I'll go hide me.

Mrs. Ford. Do so.—Go tell thy master, I am alone.—Mistress Page, remember you our care.

Mrs. Page. I warrant thee; if I do not act it, hiss me. [Exit.]

Mrs. Ford. Go to, then: we'll use this unwholesome humility, this gross and empty pummint; we'll teach him to know turtles from jays.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. "Have I caught my heavenly jewel?" Why, now let me die, for I have lived long enough; this is the period of my ambition: O this blessed hour! Mrs. Ford. Oh, sweet Sir John! Fal. Mistress Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot prate, mistresse Ford. Now shall I sin in my wish: I would thy husband were dead; I'll speak it before the best lord—I would we make thee my lady.

Mrs. Ford. I your lady, Sir John alas, I should be a pitiful lady!

Fal. Let the court of France show me such another. I see how thine eye would emulate the diamond: thou hast the right arched beauty of the brow that becomes the ship-tire, the tire-valiant, or any tire of Venetian admittance.

Mrs. Ford. A plain kerchief, Sir John: my brows become nothing else; nor that well neither.

Fal. By the Lord, thou art a traitor to say so: thou wouldst make an absolute counterfeit; and the firm fixture of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gait, in a semi-circled fairthingale. I see what thou wert, if Fortune thy foe were not, Nature thy friend. Come, thou canst not hide it.

Mrs. Ford. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me love thee? let that persuade thee, there's something extraordinary in thee. Come, I cannot cog, and say thou art this and that, like a many of these lisping hawthorn buds, that come like women in men's apparel, and smell like Bucklersbury in simple-time; I cannot; but I love thee; none but thee; and thou deservest it.

Mrs. Ford. Do not betray me, Sir. I fear you love mistress Page.

Fal. Thou mightst as well say, I love to walk by the Counter-gate, which is as hateful to me as the reek of a lime-kin.

Mrs. Ford. Well, heaven knows how I love thee; and you shall one day find it.

Fal. Keep in that mind; I'll deserve it.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do; or else I could not be in that mind.

[Exit.] Mistress Ford! mistress Ford! here's mistresse Page at the door, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me: I will enconce me behind the arras.

Mrs. Ford. Pray you, do so: she's a very tattling woman.—[FALSTAFF hides himself.]

Enter Mistress Page and Robin.

What's the matter? how now?

Mrs. Page. O mistress Ford! what have you done?

You're shamed, you are overthrown, you're undone for ever!

Mrs. Ford. What's the matter, good mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. O well-a-day, mistress Ford! having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspicion!

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion?—out upon you! how am I mistook in you!

Mrs. Ford. Why, alas, what's the matter?

Mrs. Page. Your husband's coming hither, woman, with all the officers in Windsor, to search for a gentleman, that he says, is here now in the house, by your consent, to take an ill advantage of his absence: you are undone.

Mrs. Ford. 'Tis not so, I hope. Mrs. Page. Pray heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here! but 'tis most certain your husband's coming, with half Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one: I come before to tell you. If you know yourself clear, why, I am glad of it; but if you have a friend here, convey, convey him out. Be not amazed; call all your senses to you: defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever.

Mrs. Ford. What shall I do?—There is a gentleman, my dear friend; and I fear not mine own shame, so much as his peril: I had rather than a thousand pound, he were out of the house.

Mrs. Page. For shame! never stand "you had rather," and "you had rather," your husband's here at hand; bethink you of some conveyance: in the house you cannot hide him.—O, how have you deceived me!—Look, here is a basket: if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here; and throw foul linen upon him, as if it were going to buckling: or, it is whiting-time, send him by your two men to Datchet-mead.

Mrs. Ford. He's too big to go in there.

[Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Let me see's, let me see's! O, let me see's! I'll in, I'll in,—follow your friend's counsel,—I'll in.

Mrs. Page. What, Sir John Falstaff! Are these your letters, knight?

Fal. I love thee, and none but thee; help me away: let me creep in here. I'll never—

Mrs. Page. Help to cover your master, boy.—Call your men, mistress Ford.—You dissembling knight!

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John! [Exit Servant.] Go take up these clothes here quickly:—where's the cowl-staff? look, how you drumlet carry them to the laundress in Datchet-mead; quickly, come.

[Enter Ford, Page, Caio, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. Pray you, come near: if I suspect without cause, why then make sport at me; then let me be your jest; I deserve it.—How now! what goes here? whither bear you this?

Sir Hugh. To the laundress, forsooth.

Mrs. Ford. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Back! I would I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck, back! Ay, buck; I warrant you, buck; and of the season, too, it shall appear. [Ex-curt Servants with the basket.] Gentlemen, I have dreamed to-night; I’ll tell you my dream. Here. Here.
here, here be my keys: ascend my chambers; search,
seek, find out; I’ll warrant we’ll unken nel the fox.
—Let me stop this way first.—So, now unc ape.
Page. Good master Ford, be contented; you wrong yourself too much.
Ford. True, master Page.—Up, gentlemen; you shall see sport anon: follow me, gentlemen. [Exit.
Eva. This is very fantastical humors and jeal-ousies.
Caius. By gar, ’tis no de fashion of France; it is not jealous in France.
Page. Nay, follow him, gentlemen; see the issue of his search. [Exit PAGE, EVANS, and CAIUS.
Mrs Page. Is there not a double excellency in this?
Mrs Ford. I know not which pleases me better, that my husband is deceived, or Sir John.
Mrs Page. What a taking was he in, when your husband asked what was in the basket?
Mrs Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of washing; so, throwing him into the water will do him a benefit.
Mrs Page. Hang him, dishonest rascal! I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.
Mrs Ford. I think, my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff’s being there; for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy till now.
Mrs Page. I will lay a plot to try that; and we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine.
Mrs Ford. Shall we send that foolish carrion, mistress Quickly, to him, and excuse his throwing into the water; and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?
Mrs Page. We will do it: let him be sent for to-morrow eight o’clock, to have amends.
Re-enter FORD, PAGE, CAIUS, and SIR HUGH EVANS.
Ford. I cannot find him: may be, the knave bragged of that he could not compass.
Mrs Page. [Aside to Mrs Ford.] I heard you
that?
Mrs Ford. You use me well, master Ford, do you?
Ford. Ay, I do so.
Mrs Ford. Heaven make you better than your thoughts.
Ford. Amen!
Mrs Page. You do yourself mighty wrong, master
Ford.
Ford. Ay, ay; I must bear it.
Eva. If there be any body in the house, and in the chambers, and in the coopers, and in the presses, heaven forgive my sins at the day of judgement!
Caius. By gar, nor I too; dere is no bodies.
Page. Fine, he, master Ford! are you not ashamed?
What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination?
I would not have your distemper in this kind for the wealth of Windsor Castle.
Ford. ’Tis my fault, master Page: I suffer for it.
Eva. You suffer for a bad conscience: your wife is as honest a ‘omanus as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred too.
Caius. By gar, I see ’tis an honest woman.
Ford. Well; I promised you a dinner.—Come, come, walk in the park: I pray you, pardon me; I will hereafter make known to you, why I have done this.—Come, wife;—come, mistress Page. I pray you, pardon me; pray heartily, pardon me.
Page. Let’s go in, gentlemen; but, trust me, we’ll mock him. I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast: after, we’ll a birding together; I have a fine hawk for the bush. Shall it be so?
Ford. Anything.
Eva. If there is one, I shall make two in the company.
Caius. If dere be one or two, I shall make-a de turd.
Ford. Pray you go, master Page.
Eva. I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the losey knave, mine host.
Caius. Dat is good; by gar, vit all my heart.
Eva. A lousy knave, to have his gibes, and his mockeries! [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Room in PAGE’s House.

Enter FENTON and ANNE PAGE.

Fent. I see I cannot get thy father’s love;
Therefore no more turn me to him, sweet Nan.
Anne. Alas! how then?
Fent. Why, thou must be thyself.
He doth object, I am too great of birth;
And that my use being gall’d with my expense,
I seek to heal it only by his wealth.
Besides these, other bars he lays before me—
My riots past, my wild societies;
And tells me, ’tis a thing impossible
I should love thee, but as a property.
Anne. May be, he tells you true. [Come!
Fent. No, heaven so speed me in my time to Albeit, I will confess, thy father’s wealth
Was the first motive that I woo’d thee, Anne:
Yet, wooling thee, I found thee of more value
Than stamps in gold, or sums in sealed bags;
And ’tis the very riches of thyself
That now I aim at.

Anne. Gentle master Fenton,
Yet seek my father’s love; still seek it, Sir;
If opportunity and humble suit
Cannot attain it, why then,—Hark you hither.
[They converse apart.

Enter SHALLOW, SLENDER, and Mrs QUICKLY.

Shal. Break their talk, mistress Quickly: my kinsman shall speak for himself.
Slender. I’ll make a shaft or a bolt on’t. ’Sild, ’tis but venturing.
Shal. Be not dismayed.
Slender. No, she shall not dismay me: I care not for that,—but that I am afraid.
Quick. Hark ye; master Slender would speak a word with you.
Anne. I come to him. [Aside.] This is my father’s choice.
O, what a world of vile ill-favour’d faults
Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year!
Quick. And how does good master Fenton? Pray you, a word with you.
Shal. She’s coming; to her, cox. O boy, thou hadst a father!
Slender. I had a father, mistress Anne;—my uncle can tell you good jests of him.—Pray you, uncle, tell mistress Anne the jest, how my father stole two geeze out of a pen, good uncle.
Shal. Mistress Anne, my cousin loves you.
MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Slen. Ay, that I do; as well as I love any woman in Gloucestershire.

Shal. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman.

Slen. Ay, that I will, come cut and long-tail, under the degree of a square.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds' jointure.

Anne. Good master Shallow, let him woo for himself.

Shal. Marry, I thank you for it; I thank you for that good comfort.—She calls you, cost! I'll leave you.

Anne. Now, master Slender,—

Slen. Now, good mistress Anne,—

Anne. What is your will?

Slen. My will! od's heartlings, that's a pretty jest, indeed! I ne'er made my will yet, I thank heaven; I am not such a sickly creature, I give heaven praise.

Anne. I mean, master Slender, what would you with me?

Slen. Truly, for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you. Your father, and my uncle, have made motions: if it be my luck, so; if not, happy man be his dole! They can tell you how things go, better than I can: you may ask your father; here he comes.

Enter Page and Mistress Page.

Page. Now, master Slender,—love him, daughter Anne.—

Why, how now! what does master Fenton here? You wrong me, Sir, thus still to haunt my house: I told you, Sir, my daughter is disposs'd of.

Fent. Nay, master Fage, be not impatient.

Mrs Page. Good master Fenton, come not to my child.

Page. She is no match for you.

Fent. Sir, will you hear me?

Page. No, good master Fenton.—Come, master Shallow,—come, son Slender; in—Knowing my mind, you wrong me, master Fenton. [Exeunt Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Quick. Speak to mistress Page. [daughter

Fent. Good mistress Page, for that I love your In such a righteous fashion as I do, Perforce, against all checks, rebukes, and manners, I must advance the colours of my love, And not retire: let me have your good will. [fool.

Anne. Good mother, do not marry me to yond' Mrs Page. I mean it not; I seek you a better husband.

Quick. That's my master, master doctor,

Anne. Alas! I had rather be set quick i' the earth, And bow'd to death with turnips! Mrs Page. Come, trouble not yourself.—Good master Fenton, I will not be your friend, nor eneny; My daughter will I question how she loves you, And as I find her, so am I affected. Till then, farewell, Sir: she must needs go in; Her father will be angry.

Fent. Farewell, gentle mistress,—farewell, Nan. [Exeunt Mrs Page and Anne.

Quick. This is my doing, now.—"Nay," said I, "will you cast away your child on a fool, and a physician? look on master Fenton:"—this is my doing. [nighth Fent. I thank thee; and I pray thee, once to—Give my sweet Nan this ring. There's for thy pains.

Quick. Now, heaven send thee good fortune! [Exit Fenton.] A kind heart he hath: a woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. But yet I would my master had mistress Anne; or I would master Slender had her; or, in sooth, I would master Fenton had her: I will do what I can for them all three; for so I have promised, and I'll be as good as my word: but speciously for master Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir John Falstaff from my two mistresses: what a beast am I to slack it! [Exit.

SCENE V.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, I say,—

Bard. Here, Sir.

Fal. Go fetch me a quart of sack; put a toast in't. [Exit Bardolph.] Have I lived to be carried in a basket, like a barrow of butcher's offal, and to be thrown in the Thames? Well, if I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'en out, and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new year's gift. The rogues slighted me into the river with as little remorse as they would have drowned a bitch's blind puppies, fifteen i' the litter: and you may know by my size, that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking; if the bottom were as deep as hell, I should drown. I had been drowned, but that the shore was shelvy and shallow; a death that I abhor; for the water swells a man; and what a thing should I have been when I had been swallowed! I should have been a mountain of mummy.

Reenter Bardolph, with the Wine.

Bard. Here's my mistress Quickly, Sir, to speak with you.

Fal. Come, let me pour in some sack to the Thames water; for my belly's as cold as if I had swallowed snow-balls for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.

Bard. Come in, woman.

Enter Mrs Quickly.

Quick. By your leave; I cry you mercy:—give your worship good-morrow.

Fal. Take away these chalices. Go brew me a potte of sack finely. Bardolph. With eggs, Sir? Fal. Simple of itself; I'll no pullet-sperm in my brewage.—[Exit Bardolph.]—How now!

Quick. Marry, Sir, I come to your worship from mistress Ford.

Fal. Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough: I was thrown into the ford; I have my belly full of ford.

Quick. Alas the day! good heart, that was not her fault: she does so take on with her men; they mistook their erection.

Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish woman's promise.

Quick. Well, she laments, Sir, for it, that it would yearn your heart to see it. Her husband goes this morning a birding: she desires you once more to come to her between eight and nine. I must carry her word quickly: she'll make you amend, I warrant you.

Fal. Well, I will visit her: tell her so; and bid her think what a man is: let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.

Quick. I will tell her.

Fal. Do so. Between nine and ten, sayest thou?

Quick. Eight and nine, Sir.

Fal. Well, be gone: I will not miss her.

Quick. Peace be with you, Sir. [Exit.]

Fal. I marvel I hear not of master Brook: he sent me word to stay within. I like his money well.—O! here he comes.

Enter Ford.

Ford. Bless you, Sir.

Fal. Master Brook,—you come to know what hath passed between me and Ford's wife?

Ford. That, indeed, Sir John, is my business.

Fal. Master Brook, I was not lie to you: I was at her house the hour she appointed me.

Ford. And sped you, Sir?

Fal. Very ill-favouredly, master Brook.

Ford. How so, Sir? Did she change her determination?

Fal. No, master Brook; but the pecking corncrake hurled his master, dwelling in a continual larum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embraced, kissed, protested, and, as it were, spoke the prologue of our comedy; and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and, forsooth, to search his house for his wife's love.

Ford. What! while you were there?

Fal. While I was there.

Ford. And did he search for you, and could not find you?

Fal. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one mistress Page; gives intelligence of Ford's approach; and in her invention, and Ford's wife's distraction, they conveyed me into a buck-basket.

Ford. A buck-basket!

Fal. By the Lord, a buck-basket!—rammed me in with foul shirts and smocks, socks, foul stockings, greasy napkins; that, master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril.

Ford. And how long lay you there?

Fal. Nay, you shall hear, master Brook, what I have suffered, to bring this woman to evil for your good. Being thus crammed in the basket, a couple of Ford's knaves, his hinds, were called forth by their mistress, to carry me in the name of foul clothes to Ditchet-lane: they took me on their shoulders; met the jealous knave their master in the door, who asked them once or twice what they had in their basket. I quaked for fear, lest the lunatic knave would have searched it; but fate, ordaining he should be a cuckold, held his hand. Well; went on he for a search, and away went I for foul clothes. But mark the sequel, master Brook: I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten bell-wether: next, to be compassed, like a good bilbo, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point, heel to head: and then, to be stopped in, like a strong distillation, with stinking clothes that fretted in their own grease: think of that,—a man's own kidney,—think of that,—that am as subject to heat, as butter; a man of continual dissolution and thaw; it was a miracle, to 'scape suffocation. And in the height of this bath, when I was more than half stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames, and cooled, glowing hot, in that surge, like a horse-shoe; think of that,—hissing hot,—think of that, master Brook!

Ford. In good sadness, Sir, I am sorry that for my sake you have suffered all this. My suit, then, is desperate; you'll undertake her no more?

Fal. Master Brook, I will be thrown into Aetna, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus. Her husband is this morning gone a birding: I have received from her another embassy of meeting; 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, master Brook.

Ford. 'Tis past eight already, Sir.

Fal. Is it? I will then address me to my appointment. Come to me at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I speed; and the conclusion shall be crowned with your enjoying her: advice. You shall have her, master Brook; master Brook, you shall cuckold Ford.

Ford. H'm,—ha! is this a vision? Is this a dream? do I sleep? Master Ford, awake! awake, master Ford! there's a hole made in your best coat, master Ford. This 'tis to be married! this 'tis to have linen, and buck-baskets!—Well, I will proclaim myself what I am: I will now take the lecher; he is at my house; he cannot 'scape me; 'tis impossible he should; he cannot creep into a half-penny purse, nor into a pepper-box: but, lest the devil that guides him should aid him, I will search impossible places. Though what I am I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would not, shall not make me tame: if I have horns to make me mad, let the proverb go with me, I'll be horn mad. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Street.

Enter Mrs. Page, Mrs. Quickly, and William.

Mrs. Page. Is he at master Ford's already, thinkest thou?

Quick. Sure, he is by this, or will be presently: but truly, he is very courageous mad about his throwing into the water. Mistress Ford desires you to come suddenly.

Mrs. Page. I'll be with her by and by: I'll but bring my young man here to school. Look, where his master comes; 'tis a playing-day, I see.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans.

Evans. How now, Sir Hugh! no school to-day?

Evans. No; master Slender is get the boys leave to Quick. Blessing of his heart! [play.]

Mrs. Page. Sir Hugh, my husband says, my son profits nothing in the world at his book: I pray you, ask him some questions in his accidence.

Evans. Come hither, William: hold up your head; come.

Mrs. Page. Come on, sirrah: hold up your head; answer your master, be not afraid.

Evans. William, how many numbers is in nouns?

William. Two.

Quick. Truly, I thought there had been one number more, because they say, 'od's nouns.
Evans. Peace your tattling.—What is fair, William?

WILL. Fulcher.

Quick. Pole-cats! there are fairer things than pole-cats, sure.

Evans. You are a very simplicity 'oman: I pray you, peace.—What is lapis, William?

WILL. A stone.

Evans. And what is a stone, William?

WILL. A pebble.

Evans. No, it is lapis: I pray you remember in your prayer.

WILL. Lapis.

Evans. That is a good William. What is he, William, that does lend articles?

WILL. Articles are borrowed of the pronoun; and be thus declined, Singulariter, nominatio, hic, hac, hæc.

Evans. Nominativo, hic, hæc, hoc;—pray you, mark: genitivo, hujus. Well, what is your accusative case?

WILL. Accusativo, hunc.

Evans. I pray you, have your remembrance, child; accusativo, hunc, hujus.

Quick. Hunc hog is Latin for bacon, I warrant you.

Evans. Leave your prattles, 'oman.—What is the fossitativo case, William?

WILL. O, fossitativo, O.

Evans. Remember, William; fossitativo, eare.

Quick. And that's a good root.

Evans. 'Oman, forbear.

Mrs. Page. Peace!

Evans. What is your genitativo case plural, William?

WILL. Genitativo case?

Evans. Ay.

WILL. Genitativo,—hurum, harum, harass.

Quick. Vengeance of Jenny's case! lie on her!—Never name her, child, if she be a whore.

Evans. For shame, 'oman!

Quick. You do ill to teach the child such words.—He teaches him to kick and to hack, which they'll do fast enough of themselves; and to call hurum—see upon you!

Evans. 'Oman, art thou lunatic? hast thou no understandings for thy cases, and the numbers, and the genders? Thou art as foolish Christian creatures as I would desires.

Mrs. Page. Pr'ythee hold thy peace.

Evans. Show me now, William, some declensions of your pronouns.

WILL. Fossitativo, I have forgot.

Evans. It is qui, quæ, quod; if you forget your quis, your quaes, and your quæis, you must be preeches. Go your ways, and play; go.

Mrs. Page. He is a better scholar than I thought he was.

Evans. He is a good sprag memory. Farewell, mistress Page!

Mrs. Page. Adieu, good Sir Hugh. [Exeunt Sir Hugh.] Get you home, boy.—Come, we st. a try too long.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Falstaff and Mrs. Ford.

Falstaff. Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my sufferance. I see you are obsequious in your love, and profess requital to a heir's breath; not only, Mrs. Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of it. But are you sure of your husband now?

Mrs. Ford. He's a birding, sweet Sir John.

Mrs. Page. [Within.] What ho, gossip Ford! what ho!

Mrs. Ford. Step into the chamber, Sir John. [Exit Falstaff.

Enter Mrs. Ford.

Mrs. Page. How now, sweetheart! who's at home besides yourself?

Mrs. Ford. Why, none but mine own people.

Mrs. Page. Indeed?

Mrs. Ford. No, certainly.—[Aside to her.] Speak louder.

Mrs. Page. Truly, I am so glad you have nobody here.

Mrs. Ford. Why?

Mrs. Page. Why, woman, your husband is in his old lunes again; he so takes on yonder with my husband; so rails against all married mankind; so curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead, crying, "Peel out! Peel out!" that any madness I ever yet beheld seemed but tameness, civility, and patience, to this his distemper he is in now. I am glad the fat knight is not here.

Mrs. Ford. Why, does he talk of him?

Mrs. Page. Of none but him; and swears he was carried out, the last time he searched for him, in a basket: protests to my husband he is now here; and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion. But I am glad the knight is not here; now he shall see his own foolery.

Mrs. Ford. How near is he, mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. Hard by; at street end: he will be here anon.

Mrs. Ford. I am undone!—the knight is here.

Mrs. Page. Why then, you are utterly shamed, and he's but a dead man. What a woman are you! Away with him, away with him! better shame, than murder.

Mrs. Ford. Which way should he go? how should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

[Re-enter Falstaff.

Falstaff. No, I'll come no more i' the basket. May I not go out ere he come?

Mrs. Page. Alas! three of master Ford's brothers watch the door with pistols, that none shall issue out; otherwise you might slip away ere he came. But what make you here?

Falstaff. What shall I do?—I'll creep up into the chimney.

Mrs. Ford. There they always used to dischare their birling pieces. Creep into the kiln-hole.

Falstaff. Where is it?

Mrs. Ford. He will seek there, on my word. Neither press, coffer, chest, trunk, well, vault, but he hath an obstacle for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his note: there is no hiding you in the house.

Falstaff. I'll go out, then.

Mrs. Page. If you go out in your own semblance, you die, Sir John. Unless you go out disguised,—

Mrs. Ford. How might we disguise him?

Mrs. Page. Alas the day! I know not. There is no woman's gown big enough for him; otherwise, he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchief, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts, devise something; any extremity, rather than a mischief.

Mrs. Ford. My maid's aunt, the fat woman of Brentford, has a gown above.

Mrs. Page. On my word, it will serve him; she's as big as he is: and there's her thrummed hat, and her muffler too.—Run up, Sir John.

Mrs. Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir John: mistress Page and I will look some linen for your head.

Mrs. Page. Quick, quick! we'll come dress you straight: put on the gown the while.

[Exit Falstaff.

Mrs. Ford. I would my husband would meet him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brentford; he swears she's a witch; forbade her my house, and hath threatened to beat her.

Mrs. Page. Heaven guide him to thy husband's cudgel, and the devil guide his cudgel afterwards!

Mrs. Ford. But is my husband coming?

Mrs. Page. Ay, in good sadness, is he; and talks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

Mrs. Ford. We'll try that; for I'll appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did last time.

Mrs. Page. Nay, but he'll be here presently: let's go dress him like the witch of Brentford.

Mrs. Ford. I'll first direct my men what they shall do with the basket. Go up; I'll bring linen for him straight.

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest varlet! we cannot misuse him enough.

We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do, Wives may be merry, and yet honest too: We do not act, that often jest and laugh; 'Tis old, but true,— "Still swine eat all the draft."

Serv. Come, come, take it up.

Mrs. Ford. Go, Sirs, take the basket again on your shoulders: your master is hard at door; if he bid you set it down, obey him: quickly, despatch. [Exit.

Serv. Pray heaven, it be not full of knight again.

Serv. I hope not; I had as lief bear so much

Ford. Ay, but if it prove true, master Ford, have you any way then to unfool me again?—Set down the basket, villains!—Somebody call my wife.—Youth in a basket!—O you panderly rascals! there's a knot, a ging, a pack, a conspiracy against me: now shall the devil be shamed.—What, wife, I say!

—Come, come forth!—Behold what honest clothes you send forth to bleaching.

Page. Why, this passes! Master Ford, you are not to go loose any longer; you must be pinioned.

Evans. Why, this is lunacies! this is mad as a mad dog!

Sal. Indeed, master Ford, this is not well; indeed.

Ford. So say I too, Sir.—[Re-enter Mrs. Ford.]

Come hither, mistress Ford; mistress Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jealous foil to her husband!—I suspect without cause, mistress, do I?

Mrs. Ford. Heaven be my witness, you do, if you suspect me in any dishonesty.

Ford. Well said, brazen-face! hold it out.—Come forth, sirrah.

Mrs. Page. This passes! fallo. Mrs. Ford. Are you not ashamed? let the clothes Ford. I shall find you anon.

Evans. 'Tis unreasonable! Will you take up your wife's clothes? Come away.

Ford. Empty the basket, I say!

Mrs. Ford. Why, man, why,—

Ford. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one conveyed out of my house yesterday in this basket: why may not he be there again? In my house I am sure he is: my intelligence is true; my jealousy is reasonable.—Pluck me out all the linen.

Mrs. Ford. If you find a man there, he shall die a felon's death.

Page. Here's no man.

Shal. Sir John, this is not well, master Ford; this wrongs you.

Evans. Master Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart: this is jealousies.

Ford. Well he's not here I seek for.

Page. No, nor nowhere else, but in your brain.

Ford. Help to search my house this one time: if I find not what I seek, show no colour for my extremity; let me for ever be your table-sport; let them say of me, "As jealous as Ford, that searched a hollow walnut for his wife's lament." Satisfy me once more; once more search with me.

Mrs. Ford. What ho, mistress Page! come you and the old woman down; my husband will come into the chamber.

Mrs. Ford. Why, it is my maid's aunt of Brentford.

Ford. A witch, a queen, an old cozening queen! Have I not forbid her my house? She comes of errands, does she? We are simple men; we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortune-telling. She works by charms, by spells, by the figure, and such daubery as this is; beyond our element: we know nothing.—Come down, you witch, you hag, you; come down, I say!

Mrs. Ford. Nay, good, sweet husband,—good gentleman, let him not strike the old woman.

Ford. Hang her, witch!—Shal. By my faith, you think the 'oman is a witch indeed: I like not when a 'oman has a great peard; I spy a great peard under her muffler.

Ford. Will you follow, gentlemen? I beseech you, follow: see but the issue of my jealousy. If I open again.
SCENE IV.

MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Page. Let's obey his humour a little farther: come, gentlemen.

[Exeunt Ford, Page, Shallow, Caius, and Evans.

Mrs. Page. Trust me, he beat him most pitifully.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, by the mass, that he did not; he beat him most unpitifully, methought.

Mrs. Page. I'll have the cudgel hallowed, and hung o'er the altar: it hath done meritorious service.

Mrs. Ford. What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood, and the witness of any farther revenge?

Mrs. Page. The spirit of wantonness is, sure, scared out of him: if the devil have him not in few-hours, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him?

Mrs. Page. Yes, by all means; if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husband's brains. If they can find in their hearts the poor unvirtuous knight shall be any farther afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

Mrs. Ford. I'll warrant, they'll have him publicly shamed; and methinks there would be no period to the jest should he not be publicly shamed.

Mrs. Page. Come, to the forge with it, then; shape it: I would not have things cool.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Host and Bardolph.

Bard. Sir, the Germans desire to have three of your horses: the duke himself will be to-morrow at court, and they are going to meet him.

Host. What duke should that be, comes so secretly? I hear not of him in the court. Let me speak with the gentlemen: they speak English.

Bard. Ay, Sir; I'll call them to you.

Host. They shall have my horses; but I'll make them pay; I'll sauce them: they have had my house a week at command; I have turned away my other guests: they must come off; I'll sauce them. Come.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Page, Ford, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Eva. 'Tis one of the pest discriminations of an oman as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he send you both these letters at an instant?

Mrs. Page. Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me, wife. Henceforth do what thou wilt;

I rather will suspect the sun with cold,

Than thee with wantonness: now doth thy honour

In him that was of late a heretic, [stand,

As firm as faith.

Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well; no more:

Be not as extreme in submission

As in offence.

but let our plot go forward: let our wives

Yet once again, to make us public sport,

Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow,

Whereat he may take him, and disgrace him for it.

Ford. There is no better way than that they spoke of.

Page. How! to send him word they'll meet him in the park at midnight? fie, fie! he'll never come.

Eva. You say, he has been thrown into the rivers, and has been grievously peaten, as an old oman: methinks there should be terrors in him, that he should not come; methinks his flesh is punished, he shall have no desires.

Page. So think I too.

Mrs. Ford. Devise but how you'll use him when he comes,

And let us two devise to bring him thither.

Mrs. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the hunter,

Sometime a keeper here in Windsor forest,

Doth all the winter time, at still midnight,

Walk round about an oak, with great rag'd horns;

And there he blasts the trees, and takes the cattle,

And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes a

In a most hideous and dreadful manner. [chain

You have heard of such a spirit; and well you know

The superstitious idle-headed eld

Receiv'd, and did deliver to our age,

This tale of Herne the hunter for a truth.

Page. Why, yet there want not many, that do fear

In deep of night to walk by this Herne's oak.

But what of this?

Mrs. Ford. Marry, this is our device;

That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us.

Disguis'd like Herne, with huge horns on his head.

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come,

And in this shape: when you have brought him thither,

What shall be done with him? what is your plot?

Mrs. Page. That likewise have we thought upon,

And thus.

Nan Page my daughter, and my little son,

And three of four more of their growth, we'll dress

Like urchins, urchins, and fairies, green and white,

With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads,

And rattles in their hands. Upon a sudden,

As Falstaff, she, and I, are newly met,

Let them from forth a saw-pit rush at once

With some diffused song: upon their sight,

We two in great amazement will fly:

Then, let them all encircle him about,

And, fairy-like, to pin the unicel knight;

And ask him, why, that hour of fairy revel,

In their so sacred paths he dares to tread

In shape profane.

Mrs. Ford. And till he tell the truth,

Let the supposed fairies pinch him sound,

And burn him with their tapers.

Mrs. Page. The truth being known,

We'll all present ourselves, dis-horn the spirit,

And mock him home to Windsor.

Ford. The children must be practis'd well to this, or they'll ne'er do't.

Eva. I will teach the children their behaviours:

I will be like a jack-an-apex also, to burn the knight with my taber.

Ford. That will be excellent. I'll go buy them vizards.

Mrs. Page. My Nan shall be the queen of all the fairies,

Finely attired in a robe of white.

Page. That silk will I go buy:—[Aside] and in that time

Shall master Slender steal my Nan away,

And marry her at Eton.—[To them.] Go, send to Falstaff straight.

Ford. Nay, I'll tell him again in name of Brook:

He'll tell me all his purpose. Sure, he'll come.
Mrs Page. Fear not you that. Go, get us proper—And tricking for our fairies. [Ies.
Eva. Let us about it; it is admirable pleasures, And very honest knavery.
[Exeunt Page, Ford, and Evans.
Mrs Page. Go, mistress Ford, Send Quickly to Sir John, to know his mind.
[Exit Mrs Ford.
I'll to the doctor: he hath my good will, And none but he, to marry with Nan Page. That Thelwell, though well landed, is an idiot; And him my husband best of all affects. The doctor is well money'd, and his friends Potent at court: he, none but he, shall have her, Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her.
[Exit.

Scene V.—A Room in the Garter Inn.
Enter Host and simple.
Host. What wouldst thou have, boor? what, thick-skinned? speak, breathe, discuss; brief, short, quick, snap.
Sir. MARRY, Sir, I come to speak with Sir John Falstaff from master Slender.
Host. There's his chamber, his house, his castle, his standing-bed, and truckle-bed: 'tis painted about with the story of the prodigal, fresh and new. Go, knock and call: he'll speak like an Anthropophagian unto thee: knock, I say. Sim. There's an old woman, a fat woman, gone up into his chamber: I'll be so bold as stay, Sir, till she come down; I come to speak with her, indeed.
Host. Ha! a fat woman? the knight may be robbed: I'll call.—Bully knight! Bully Sir John! speak from thy lungs military: art thou there? it is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls.
FAL. [Above.] How now, mine host!
Host. Here's a Bohemian Tartar carries the coming down of thy fat woman. Let her descend, bully, let her descend; my chambers are honourable: fie! privacy! fie!

Enter Falstaff.
FAL. There was, mine host, an old fat woman even now with me; but she's gone.
Sim. Pray you, Sir, was 't not the wise woman of Brentford?
FAL. Ay, marry, was it, muscle-shell: what would you with her?
Sim. My master, Sir, master Slender, sent to her, seeing her go through the streets, to know, Sir, whether one Nym, Sir, that beguiled him of a chain, had the chain or no.
FAL. I spake with the old woman about it. Sim. And what says she, I pray, Sir?
FAL. Marry, she says that the very same man, that beguiled master Slender of his chain, cozened him of it.
Sim. I would I could have spoken with the woman herself; I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.
FAL. What are they? let us know.
Host. Ay, come; quick.
Sim. I may not conceal them, Sir.
Host. Conceal them, or thou diest.
Sim. Why, Sir, they were nothing but about mistress Anne Page; to know, if it were my master's fortune to have her, or no.

Fal. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.
Sim. What, Sir?
Fal. To have her,—or no. Go; say the woman told me so.
Sim. May I be bold to say so, Sir?
Fal. Ay, Sir Tike, who more bold?
Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make my master glad with these tidings.
[Exit.
Host. Thou art clerkly, thou art clerkly, Sir John. Was there a wise woman with thee?
FAL. Ay, that there was, mine host; one that hath taught me more wit than ever I learned before in my life; and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Enter Bardolph.
Bard. Out, alas, Sir! cozenage, mere cozenage!
Host. Where be my horses? speak well of them, varietto.
Bard. Run away, with the cozeners: for so soon as I came beyond Eton, they threw me off, from behind one of them, in a slough of mire; and set spurs and away, like three German devils, three Doctor Faustuses.
Host. They are gone but to meet the duke, villain: do not say they be fed; Germans are honest men.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans.
Eva. Where is mine host?
Host. What is the matter, Sir?
Eva. Have a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to town, tells me, there is three cousin germans, that has cozened all the hosts of Readings, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses and money. I tell you for good-will, look you: you are wise, and full of gibes and violation-stops; and 'tis not convenient you should be cozened. Fare you well.
[Exit.

Enter Doctor Caius.
Caius. Vere is mine host de farretire?
Host. Here, master doctor, in perplexity, and doubtful dilemma.
Caius. I cannot tell vat is dat; but it is tell-a me, dat you make grand preparation for a duke de Jarmony: by my troth, dere is no duke dat de court is know to come. I tell you for good vill: adieu.
[Exit.
Host. Hue and cry, villain! go. — Assist me, knight.—I am undone!—Fly, run, hue and cry, villain!—I am undone!
[Exeunt Host and Bardolph.
Fal. I would all the world might be cozened; for I have been cozened, and beaten too. If it should come to the ear of the court how I have been transformed, and how my transformation hath been washed and cudgelled, they would melt me out of my fat, drop by drop, and liquor fisherman's boots with me: I warrant, they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as crest-fallen as a dried pear. I never prospered since I foreswore myself at primero. Well, if my wind were but long enough to say my prayers, I would repent.

Enter Mistress Quickly.
Now, whence come you?
Quick. From the two parties, forsooth.
Fal. The devil take one party, and his dam the other! and so they shall be both bestowed. I have suffered more for their sakes, more than the villainous inconsistancy of man's disposition is able to bear.

Quick. And have not they suffered? Yes, I warrant; especially one of them: mistress Ford, good heart, is beaten black and blue, that you cannot see a white spot about her.

Fal. What tellest thou me of black and blue? I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow; and I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Brentford: but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman, delivered me, the knavish constable had set me i' the stocks, i' the common stocks, for a witch.

Quick. Sir, let me speak with you in your chamber: you shall hear how things go; and, I warrant, to your content. Here is a letter will say something. Good hearts, what ado here is to bring you together! Sure, one of you does not serve heaven well, that you are so crossed.

Fal. Come up into my chamber. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Host.

Host. Master Fenton, talk not to me; my mind is heavy: I will give over all.

Fal. Yet hear me speak. Assist me in my purse.

And, as I am a gentleman, I'll give thee [pose, A hundred pound in gold more than your loss.

Host. I will hear you, master Fenton; and I will, at the least, keep your counsel.

Fal. From time to time I have acquainted you With the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page; Who, mutually, hath answer'd my affection (So far forth as herself might be her choicer) Even to my wish. I have a letter from her Of such contents as you will wonder at;
The mirth whereof so larded with my matter, That neither, singly, can be manifested, Without the show of both; wherein fat Falstaff Hath a great scene: the image of the jest.

[Pointing to the Letter.]

I'll show you here at large. Hark, good mine host: To-night at Herne's oak, just 'twixt twelve and one, Must my sweet Nan present the fairy queen; The purpose why, is here: [Pointing to Letter,] in which disguise, While other jests are something rank on foot, Her father hath commanded her to slip Away with Slender, and with him at Eton Immediately to marry: she hath consented. Now, Sir, Her mother, even strong against that match, And firm for Dr. Caius, hath appointed That he shall likewise shuffle her away, While other sports are tasking of their minds, And at the deanery, where a priest attends, Straight marry her: to this her mother's plot She, seemingly obedient, likewise hath Made promise to the doctor. —Now, thus it rests: Her father means she shall be all in white; And in that habit, when Slender sees his time To take her by the hand, and bid her go, She shall go with him: her mother hath intended, The better to denote her to the doctor, (For they must all be mask'd and vizard,) That, quaint in green, she shall be loose enrob'd, With ribbands pendant, flaring 'bout her head; And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe, To pinch her by the hand, and on that token, The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. What means she to deceive, father or mother?

Fal. Both, my good host, to go along with me: And here it rests,—that you'll procure the vicar To stay for me at church 'twixt twelve and one, And, in the lawful name of marrying, To give our hearts united ceremony. [vicar.]

Host. Well, husband your device: I'll to the Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest.

Fal. So shall I evermore be bound to thee; Besides, I'll make a present recompense. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Mrs. Quickly.

Fal. Pr'ythee, no more prattling:—go:—I'll hold.

This is the third time; I hope good luck lies in odd numbers. Away, go. They say there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death. —Away.

Quick. I'll provide you a chain; and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

Fal. Away, I say; time wears: hold up your head, and mince. [Exit Mrs. Quickly.

Enter Ford.

How now, master Brook! master Brook, the matter will be known to-night, or never. Be you in the park about midnight, at Herne's oak, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday, Sir, as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her, master Brook, as you see, like a poor old man: but I came from her, master Brook, like a poor old woman. That same knave Ford, her husband, hath the finest mad devil of jealousy in him, master Brook, that ever governed freacy:—I will tell you;—he beat me grievously, in the shape of a woman; for in the shape of a man, master Brook, I fear not Goliath with a weaver's beam; because I know also, life is a shuttle. I am in haste; go along with me: I'll tell you all, master Brook. Since I plucked grease, played truant, and whipped top, I knew not what it was to be beaten, till lately. Follow me: I'll tell you strange things of this knave Ford; on whom to-night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand. —Follow:—Strange things in hand, master Brook:—follow. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Windsor Park.

Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Page. Come, come: we'll couch i' the castle-ditch, till we see the light of our fairies. —Remember, son Slender, my daughter.

Shal. Ay, forsooth: I have spoke with her, and we have a may-word, how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry, "Mum;" she cries, "Budget;" and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: but what needs either your "mum," or her "budget?" the white will decipher her well enough.—It hath struck ten o'clock.
Scene III.—The Street in Windsor.

Enter Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Dr. Caius.

Mrs. Page. Master Doctor, my daughter is in green! when you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the denery, and despatch it quickly. Go before into the park: we two must go together.

Caius. I know, Sir, I have to do. Adieu.

Mrs. Page. Fare you well, Sir. [Exit Caius.]

My husband will not rejoice so much at the abuse of Falstaff, as he will chafe at the doctor’s marrying my daughter. I dare say he’s no better; better a little chiding, than a great deal of heart-break.

Mrs. Ford. Where is Nan now, and her troop of fairies? and the Welsh devil, Hugh?

Mrs. Page. They come all couched in a pit hard by Herne’s oak, with obscured lights; which, at the very instant of Falstaff’s and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mrs. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mrs. Page. If he be not amazed, he will be mocked; if he be amazed, he will every way be mocked.

Mrs. Ford. We’ll betray him finely.

Mrs. Page. Against such Lewdsters, and their lecheries,

Those that betray them do no treachery.

Mrs. Ford. The hour draws on: to the oak, to the oak.

[Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Windsor Park.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, disguised as a Satyr, with Anne Page and others as Fairies.

Evans. Trib, trib, fairies: come; and remember your parts. Be bold, I pray you; follow me into the pit; and when I give the watch-words, do as I bid you: come, come; trib, trib, trib.

[Exeunt.

Scene V.—Another part of the Park.

Enter Falstaff disguised as Herne, with a Buck’s Head on.

Falstaff. The Windsor bell hath struck twelve; the minute draws on. Now, the hot-blooded gods assist me!—remember, Jove, thou wast a bull for thy Europa; love set on thy horns,—O powerful love! how near the god drew to the complexion of a goose!—A fault done first in the form of a beast,—O Jove, a beastly fault! and then another fault in the semblance of a owl: think on’t, Jove: a foul fault;—When gods have hot backs, what shall poor men do? For me, I am here a Windsor stag; and the fittest, I think, i’ the forest. Send me a cool rut-time, Jove, or who can blame me to pass my tallow?—Who comes here? my doc?

Enter Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Page.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John! art thou there, my dear? my male deer?

Falstaff. My doc with the black scut!—Let the sky min potatoes; let it thunder to the tune of “Green Sleeves;” hail kissing-comfits, and snow eringoes; let there come a tempest of provocation, I will shelter me here. [Embracing her.

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page is come with me, sweet-heart.

Falstaff. Divide me like a bribed buck, each a haunch: I will keep my sides to myself, my shoulders for the fellow of this walk, and my horns I bequest your husbands. Am I a woodman, ha? Speak I like Herne the hunter?—Why, now is Cupid a child of conscience; he makes restitution. As I am a true spirit, welcome! [Noise within.

Mrs. Page. Alas! what noise?

Mrs. Ford. Heaven forgive our sins!

Falstaff. What should this be?

Mrs. Page. Away, away!

Mrs. Ford. They run off.

Falstaff. I think the devil will not have me damned, lest the oil that is in me should set hell on fire; he would never else cross me thus.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, as a Satyr: Pistolet, as Hobgoblin.

Anne Page, as the Fairy Queen, attended by her brother and others, as fairies, with wassail cups on their heads.

Queen. Fairies, black, grey, green, and white,

You moonshine revellers, and shades of night,

You orphan-heirs of fixed destiny,

Attend your office and your quality.—

Crier Hobgoblin, make the fairy o-yes. [Toys! Falstaff. Elves, list your names; silence, you airy Cricket, to Windsor chimneys shall thou leap,

Where fires thou find’st unakin’d and Qurish unswpt,

There pinch the maidams as blue as bilberry:

Our radiant queen hates slats, and stutter.

Falstaff. They are fairies; he that speaks to them, shall die:

I’ll wink and couch: no man their works must eye.

[Dies down upon his face.

Evans. Where’s Bede?—Go you, and where you find a maid.

That, ere the sleep, has thrice her prayers said,

Raise up the organs of her fantasy,

Sleep she as sound as careless infancy:

But those that sleep, and think not on their sins,

Pinch, pinch; arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides, and Queen. About! about!—[Shins.

Search Windsor castle, elves, within and out:

Strew good luck, ouphes, on every sacred room;

That it may stand till the perpetual doom,

In state as wholesome as in state ‘tis fit;

Worthy the owner, and the owner it.

The several chairs of order look you scour

With juice of balm, and every precious flower:

Each fair installment, coat, and several crest,

With loyal blazing, ever more be blest!

And nightly, meadow-fairies, look you sing,

Like to the Garter’s compass, in a ring:

Th’ expressure that it bears, green let it be,

More fertile-fresh than all the field to see;

And, Hunt sol qui soli y pena, write,

In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white;

Like sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery,

Buckled below fair knighthood’s bending knee:

Fairies use flowers for their charACTery.

Away! disperse! But, till ‘tis one o’clock,

Our dance of custom round about the oak.

Of Herne the hunter, let us not forget.
Scene V.

MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Eva. Pray you, lock hand in hand; yourselves in order set; And twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be, To guide our measure round about the tree.— But, stay! I smell a man of middle earth.

Ford. Heavens defend me from that Welsh fairy, lest he transform me to a piece of cheese!

Pist. Vile worm, thou wast o'erlook'd, even in thy birth.

Queen. With trial-fire touch me his finger-end; If he be chaste, the flame will back descend, And turn him to no pain; but if he start, It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Pist. A trial, come.

Eva. Come, will this wood take fire? [They burn him with their taper.

Ford. Oh, oh, oh!

Queen. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire!— About him, fairies; sing a scornful rhyme: And, as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

SONG.

Flie on sinful fantasy!
Flie on lust and luxury!
Lust is but a bloody fire.
Kindled with unchaste desire,
Fed in heart; whose flames aspire,
An thoughts do blow them higher and higher. Pist. Pinch him, fairies, mutually; Pist. Pinch him for his villainy; Pist. Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about, Till candles, and star-light, and moonshine be out.

During this song, the fairies pinch Falstaff. Doctor Caius comes out of wood, and steals away a fairy in green:
SLENDER another way, and takes off a fairy in white;
and FENTON comes, and steals away ANNE PAGE.
I note of hunting is made within. The fairies run away.

Falstaff pulls off his boot's head, and rises.

Enter PAGE, Ford, Mrs Page, and Mrs Ford. They say hold on Falstaff.

Page. Nay, do not fly: I think we have watch'd you now. Will none but Herne the hunter serve you turn?

Mrs Page. I pray you come; hold up the jest no higher.

Now, good Sir John, how like you Windsor wives?— Say you these, honest, true, and good husbands? do not those fair yokes Become the forest better than the town?

Ford. Now Sir, who's a cuckold now!—Master Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave; here are you horns, master Brook; and, master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to master Brook; his horses are arrested for it, master Brook.

Mrs Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never meet. I will never take you for my love again; but I will always count you my deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made an ass.

Ford. Ay, and an ox too; both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And these are not fairies? I was three or four times in the thought, they were not fairies: and yet the guiltiness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the grossness of the folly into a received belief, in despite of the teeth of all rhyme and reason, that they were fairies. See now, how wit may be made a Jack-a-lent, when 'tis upon ill employment!

Eva. Sir John Falstaff, serve God, and leave your desires; and fairies will not choose you.

Ford. Well said, fair lady Hugh.

Ford. And leave you your jealousies too, I pray you.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Ford. Have I laid my brain in the sun, and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross overreaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welsh goat too? shall I have a coxcomb of frize? 'Tis time I were choked with a piece of toasted cheese.

Eva. Seese is not good to give puffer; your pelly is all puffer.

Fal. Seese and puffer! have I lived to stand at the taunt of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust, and late-walking, through the realm.

Mrs Page. Why, Sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust virtue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given ourselves without scruple to Hell, that ever the devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a hodge-pudding? a bag of flax?

Mrs Page. A pulped man?

Page. Old, cold, withered, and of intolerable enthrall.

Ford. And one that is so slanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poor as Job?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Eva. And given to fornications, and to taverns, and sack, and wine, and methinks, and to drinkings, and swearings and starings, prubbles and prables?

Ford. Well, I am your theme: you have the start of me: I am deject; I am not able to answer the Welsh flannel; ignorance, itself is a plummet o'er me: use me as you will.

Ford. marry, Sir, we'll bring you to Windsor, to one master Brook, that you have corner'd of money, to whom you should have been a pander: over and above that you have suffered, I think, to repay that money be a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: thou shalt eat a posset to-night at my house; where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee; tell her, master Slender hath married her daughter.

Mrs Page. [Aside.] Doctors doubt that: if Anne Page be my daughter, she is, by this, doctor Caius' wife.

Enter SLENDER.

Slen. Whoa, ho! ho! father Page!

Page. Son, how now! how now, son! have you despatched?

Slen. Despatched! I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know on 't; would I were hang'd, in.

Page. Of what, son?

Jesu!

Slen. I came yonder at Eton to marry mistress Anne Page, and she's a great luberry boy. If it had not been 't the church, I would have swunged him, or he should have swunged me. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir!—and 'tis a post-master's boy.

Page. Upon my life, then, you took the wrong.

Slen. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl. If I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter by her wits and manners?

Slen. I went to her in white, and cried, "Mum,"

[End of Scene V.]
and she cried "Budget," as Anne and I had appointed; and yet it was not Anne, but a post-master's boy.

Mrs Page. Good George, be not angry: I knew of your purpose; turned my daughter into green; and, indeed, she is now with the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Enter Doctor Cajur.

Caïus. Verie is mistress Page! By gar, I am cozened: I ha' married un garçon, a boy; un fratte, by gar, a boy; it is not Anne Page: by gar, I am cozened.

Mrs Page. Why, did you take her in green?

Caïus. Ay, by gar, and 'tis a boy: by gar, I'll raise all Windsor. [Exit.

Ford. This is strange. Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart misgives me: here comes master Fenton.

Enter Fenton and Anne Page.

How now, master Fenton!

Anne. Pardon, good father!—good my mother, pardon!

Page. Now, mistress,—how chance you went not with master Slender?

Mrs Page. Why went you not with master doctor, maid?

Fent. You do amaze her: hear the truth of it. You would have married her most shamefully, where there was no proportion held in love.

The truth is, she and I, long since contracted, Are now so sure, that nothing can dissolve us. The offence is holy that she hath committed; And this deceit loses the name of craft, Of disobedience, or unduteous title;

Since therein she doth evitate and shun A thousand irreligious cursed hours, Which forc'd marriage would have brought upon her.

Ford. Stand not amazed: here is no remedy.—In love, the heavens themselves do guide the state; Money buys lands, and wives are sold by fate.

Fal. I am glad, though you have taken a special stand to strike at me, that your arrow hath glanced. Page. Well, what remedy?—Fenton, heaven give thee joy!—What cannot be eschew'd, must be embrac'd.

Fal. When night-dogs run, all sorts of deer are chase'd.

Mrs Page. Well, I will muse no farther.—Master Fenton, Heaven give you many, many merry days! Good husband, let us every one go home, And laugh this sport o'er by a country fire; Sir John and all.

Ford. Let it be so.—Sir John, To master Brook you yet shall hold your word; For he, to-night, shall lie with mistress Ford. [Exeunt.
MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

VINCENTIO, Duke of Vienna.

ANGELO, the Deputy in the Duke's absence.

ESCALUS, an ancient Lord, joined with ANGELO in the deputation.

CLAUDIO, a young Gentleman.

LUCIO, a Fool.

Two other like Gentlemen.

VARRIUS, a Gentleman attending on the Duke.

PROVOST.

THOMAS, two Friars.

PETER, a Justice.

ELBOW, a simple Constable.

FROLLO, a fooleish Gentleman.

POMPEY, a Clerke: servant to Mistress OVERDONE.

ABBEDON, an Executioner.

BARNABIS, a distemper Prisoner.

ISABELLA, sister to CLAUDIO.

MARIANA, betrothed to ANGELO.

JULIET, beloved of CLAUDIO.

FRANCISCA, a Nun.

MISTRESS OVERDONE, a Bawd.

Lords, Officers, Citizens, Boy, and Attendants.

SCENE,—VIENNA.

ACT I.

Enter Duke, ESCALUS, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke. Escalus,—

Ecal. My lord?

Duke. Of government the properties to unfold,

Would seem in me t' affect speech and discourse;

Since I am put to know that your own science

Exceeds, in that, the lists of all advice

My strength can give you: then no more remains,

But that to your sufficiency, as your worth is able;

And let them work. The nature of our people,

Our city's institutions, and the terms

For common justice, you're as pregnant in

As art and practice hath enriched any

That we remember. There is our commission, [Giving it.

From which we would not have you warp.—Call hither,

I say, bid come before us Angelo.—

[Exit an Attendant.

What figure of us think you he will bear?

For, you must know, we have with special soul

Elected him our absence to supply;

Lent him our terror, drest him with our love,

And given his deputation all the organs

Of our own power. What think you of it?

Ecal. If any in Vienna be of worth

To undergo such ample grace and honour,

It is lord Angelo.

Duke. Look where he comes.

Ang. Always obedient to your grace's will,

I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Angelo,

There is a kind of character in thy life,

That, to th' observer, doth thy history

Fully unfold. Thyself and thy belongings

Are not thine own so proper, as to waste

Thyself upon thy virtues, them on thee,

Heaven doth with us, as we with torches do,—

Not light them for themselves; for if our virtues

Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike

As if we had them not. Spirits are not finely touch'd,

But to fine issues; nor nature never lends

The smallest scruple of her excellence,

But, like a thirsty goddess, she determines

Herself the glory of a creditor,—

Both thanks and use. But I do bend my speech

To one that can my part in him adviseth;

Hold, therefore, Angelo:

[Offering his commission.

In our remove, be thou at full ourself;

Mortality and mercy in Vienna

Live in thy tongue and heart. Old Escalus,

Though first in question, is thy secondary:

Take thy commission.

[Give it. Ang.

Now, good my lord,

Let there be some more test made of my metal,

Before so noble and so great a figure

Be stamp'd upon it.

Duke. No more evasion:

We have with a heaven'd and prepared choice

Proceeded to you; therefore take your honours.

Our haste from hence is of so quick condition,

That it proceeds itself, and leaves unquestion'd

Matters of needful value. We shall write to you,

As time and our concerns shall importune,

How it goes with us; and do look to know

What doth befell you here. So, fare you well:

To the hopeful execution do I leave you

Of your commissions.

Ang. Yet, give leave, my lord,

That we may bring you something on the way.

Duke. My haste may not admit it;

Nor need you, on mine honour, have to do

With any scruple: your scope is as mine own,

So to enforce or qualify the laws

As to your soul seems good. Give me your hand:

I'll privily away. I love the people,

But do not like to stage me to their eyes:

Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause and over vehement;
Nor do I think the man of safe discretion,
That does affect it. Once more, fare you well.
Ang. The heavens give safety to your purposes!
Escal. Lead forth, and bring you back in happiness!
Duke. I thank you. Fare you well. [Exit.
Escal. I shall desire you, Sir, to give me leave
To have free speech with you; and it concerns me
To look into the bottom of my place:
A power I have, but of what strength and nature
I am not yet instructed.
Ang. 'Tis so with me. Let us withdraw together,
And we may soon our satisfaction have Touching that point.
Escal. I'll wait upon your honour. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Street.
Enter Lucio and two Gentlemen.
Lucio. If the duke, with the other duke, come not to composition with the king of Hungary, why then,
all the dukes fall upon the king.
1 Gent. Heaven grant us its peace, but not the king of Hungary’s!
2 Gent. Amen.
Lucio. Thou concludest like the sanctimonious pirate, that went to sea with the ten commandments,
but scraped one out of the table.
2 Gent. ‘Thou shalt not steal?’
Lucio. Ay, that he razed.
1 Gent. Why, ’twas a commandment to command the captain and all the rest from their functions: they put forth to steal. There’s not a soldier of us all, that, in the thanksgiving before meat, doth relish the petition well that prays for peace.
2 Gent. I never heard any soldier dislike it.
Lucio. I believe thee; for I think thou never wast where grace was said.
2 Gent. Not a dozen times at least.
1 Gent. What, in mete?
Lucio. In any proportion, or in any language.
2 Gent. I think, or in any religion.
Lucio. Ay; why not? Grace is grace, despite of all controversy: as, for example,—thou thyself art a wicked villain, despite of all grace.
1 Gent. Well, there went but a pair of shears between us.
Lucio. I grant; as there may between the lists and the velvet: thou art the list.
1 Gent. And thou the velvet: thou art good velvet; thou art a three-piled piece, I warrant thee.
I had as lief be a list of an English kersey, as be piled, as thou art piled, for a French velvet. Do I speak feelingly now?
Lucio. I think thou dost; and, indeed, with most painful feeling of thy speech; I will, out of thine own confession, learn to begin thy health; but, whilst I live, forget to drink after thee.
1 Gent. I think I have done myself wrong, have I not?
2 Gent. Yes, that thou hast, whether thou art tainted, or free.
Lucio. Behold, behold, where madam Mitigation comes! I have purchased as many diseases under her roof, as come to—
2 Gent. To what, I pray?
Lucio. Judge.

2 Gent. To three thousand dollars a year.
1 Gent. Ay, and more.
Lucio. A French crown more.
1 Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in me;
but thou art full of error: I am sound.
Lucio. Nay, not as one would say, healthy; but sound as things that are hollow: thy bones are hollow; impity has made a feast of thee.

Enter Mistress Overdone.
1 Gent. How now! Which of your hips has the most profound sciatia?
Mrs Ov. Well, well; there’s one yonder arrested and carried to prison, was worth five thousand of you all.
2 Gent. Who’s that, I pray thee?
Mrs Ov. Marry, Sir, that’s Claudio, signior Claudio.
1 Gent. Claudio to prison! ’tis not so.
Mrs Ov. Nay, but I know ’tis so: I saw him arrested; saw him carried away; and, which is more, within these three days his head is to be chopped off.
Lucio. But, after all this foolishing, I would not have it so. Art thou sure of this?
Mrs Ov. I am too sure of it; and it is for getting madam Julietta with child.
Lucio. Believe me, this may be: he promised to meet me two hours since, and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.
2 Gent. Besides, you know, it draws something near to the speech we had to such a purpose.
1 Gent. But most of all, agreeing with the proclamation.
Lucio. Away! let’s go learn the truth of it.
[Exeunt Lucio and Gentlemen.
Mrs Ov. Thus, what with the war, what with the sweat, what with the gallowes, and what with poverty,
i am custom-shrunken.

Enter Clown.
How now! what’s the news with you?
Clo. Yonder man is carried to prison.
Mrs Ov. Well; what has he done?
Clo. A woman.
Mrs Ov. But what’s his offence?
Clo. Groping for trout in a peculiar river.
Mrs Ov. What, is there a maid with child by him?
Clo. No; but there’s a woman with maid by him.
You have not heard of the proclamation, have you?
Mrs Ov. What proclamation, man?
Clo. All houses in the suburbs of Vienna must be plucked down.
Mrs Ov. And what shall become of those in the city?
Clo. They shall stand, for seed: they had gone down too, but that a wise burgher put in for them.
Mrs Ov. But shall all our houses of resort in the suburbs be pulled down?
Clo. To the ground, mistress.
Mrs Ov. Why, here’s a change indeed in the commonwealth! What shall become of me?
Clo. Come; fear not you: good counsellors lack no clients: though you change your place, you need not change your trade; I’ll be your tapster still.
Courage! there will be pitty taken on you: you that have worn your eyes almost out in the service, you will be considered.
Mrs Ov. What's to do here, Thomas Tapster? Let's withdraw.

Clo. Here comes signior Claudio, led by the provost to prison; and there's madam Juliet.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same.

Enter Provost, Claudio, Juliet, and Officers.

Claud. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to the world?

Bear me to prison, where I am committed.

Prov. I do it not in evil disposition,

But from Lord Angelo by special charge.

Claud. on whom the demi-god, Authority,

Make us pay down for our offence by weight.

The words of heaven;—on whom it will, it will;

On whom it will not, so: yet still 'tis just.

Enter Lucio and two Gentlemen.

Lucio. Why, how now, Claudio! whence comes this restraint?

Claud. From too much liberty, my Lucio, liberty:

As surfeit is the father of much fast,

So every scope by the immoderate use

Turns to restraint. Our natures do pursue,

Like rats that ravin down their proper bane,

A thirsty evil; and when we drink, we die.

Lucio. If I could speak so wisely under an arrest, I would send for certain of my creditors: and yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the livery of freedom, as the morality of imprisonment.—What's thy offence Claudio?

Claud. What but to speak of would offend again.

Lucio. What is it? murder?

Claud. No.

Lucio. Lechery?

Claud. Call it so.

Prov. Away, Sir! you must go.

Claud. One word, good friend.—Lucio, a word with you, [aside.]

Lucio. A hundred, if they'll do you any good.—

Is lechery so looked after?

Claud. Thus stands it with me:—Upon a true

I got possession:Juliet's best contract,

You know the lady; she is fast my wife,

Save that we do the denunciation lack

Of outward order: this we came not to,

Ou'd by the presentation of a dower

Remaining in the coffers of her friends;

From whom we thought it meet to hide our love,

Till time had made them for us. But it chances,

The stealth of our most mutual entertainment,

With character too gross, is writ on Juliet.

Lucio. With child, perhaps?

Claud. Unhappily, even so.

And the new deputy now for the duke,—

Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newness,

Or whether that the body public be

A horse wherein the governor doth ride,

Who, newly in the seat, that it may know

He can command, lets it straight feel the spur;

Whether the tyranny be in his place,

Or in his eminance that fills it up,

I stagger in—but this new governor

Awakes me all the enrolled penalties,

Which have, like unscurr'd armour, hung by the wall

So long, that nineteen zodiacs have gone round,

And none of them been worn; and, for a name,

Now puts the drowsy and neglected act

Fresher on me:—'tis surely, for a name.

Lucio. I warrant it is; and thy head stands so

Tickle on thy shoulders, that a milkmaid, if she be

In love, may sigh it off. Send after the duke, and appeal to him.

Claus. I have done so, but he's not to be found.

I pr'ythee, Lucio, do me this kind service.

This day my sister should the cloister enter,

And there receive her approbation:

Acquaint her with the danger of my state;

Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends

To the strict deputy; bid herself assay him:

I have great hope in that; for in her youth

There is a prone and speechless dialect,

Such as moves men: beside, she hath prosperous art

When she will play with reason and discourse,

And well she can persuade.

Lucio. I pray she may; as well for the encourage-ment

Of the like, which else would stand under

Grievous imposition, as for the enjoying of thy life,

Who I would be sorry she be thus foolishly lost

At a game of tick-tack. I'll tell her.

Claud. Thank you, good friend Lucio.

Lucio. Within two hours.

Claud. Come, officer, away! [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Monastery.

Enter Duke and Friar Thomas.

Duke. No, holy father; throw away that thought: Believe not that the driblet dart of love

Can pierce a complete bosom. Why I desire thee

To give me secret harbour, hath a purpose

More grave and wrinkled than the sins and ends

Of burning youth.

Fri. May your grace speak of it?

Duke. My holy Sir, none better knows than you,

How I have ever lov'd the life remov'd;

And held in idle price to haunt assemblies,

Where youth, and cost, and witless bravery keeps.

I have deliver'd to Lord Angelo

(A man of stricture, and firm abstinence)

My absolute power and place here in Vienna,

And he supposes me travell'd to Poland;

For so I have stew'd it in the common ear,

And so it is receiv'd. Now, pious Sir,

Will you deliver me, why I do this?

Fri. Gladly, my lord.

Duke. We have strict statutes, and most biting laws

(The needful bits and curbs to head-strong steeds,) Which for these fourteen years we have let sleep;

Even like an o'ergrown lion in a cave,

That goes not out to prey. Now, as fond fathers,

Having bound up the threatening twigs of birch,

Only to stick it in their children's sight

For terror, not to use, in time the rod

Becomes more mock'd than fear'd; so our decrees,

Dead to infliction, to themselves are dead;

And liberty plucks justice by the nose;

The baby beats the nurse, and quite athwart

Goes all decorum.

Fri. It rested in your grace

T' unscoe this tied-up justice when you pleas'd:

And it in you more dreadful would have seem'd,

Than in Lord Angelo.

Duke. I do fear, too dreadful:

Sith 'twas my fault to give the people scope,
'Would be my tyranny to strike and call them
For what I bid them do: for we bid this be done,
When evil deeds have their permisive pass,
And not the punishment. Therefore, indeed, my father,
I have on Angelo impôd' the office;
Who may, in th' ambush of my name, strike home,
And yet my nature never in the fight,
To do it slander. And to behold his sway,
I will, as twere a brother of your order,
Visit both prince and people: therefore, I pr'ythee,
Supply me with the habit, and instruct me
How I may formally in person bear me
Like a true friar. More reasons for this action
At our more leisure shall I render you;
Only, this one—Lord Angelo is precise;
Stands at a guard with envy; scarce confesses
That his blood flows, or that his appetite
Is more to bread than stone: hence shall we see,
If power change purpose, what our seemers be.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Nunnery.

Enter ISABELLA and FRANCISCA.

Isab. And have you none no farther privileges?
Franc. Are not these large enough?
Isab. Yes, truly: I speak not as desiring more;
But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Upon the sisterhood, the votaries of Saint Clare.
Lucio. [Within.] Ho! Peace be in this place!
Isab. Who's that which calls?
Franc. It is a man's voice. Gentle Isabella,
Turn you the key, and know his business of you:
You may, I may not; you are yet unworn.
When you have vow'd, you must not speak with men,
But in the presence of the priestess:
Then, if you speak, you must not show your face;
Or, if you show your face, you must not speak.
He calls again; I pray you, answer him. [Exit.]
Isab. Peace and prosperity! Who is that calls?

Enter LUCIO.

Lucio. Hail, virgin, if you be,—as those cheek-roses
Proclaim you are no less! Can you so stead me,
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A novice of this place, and the fair sister
To her unhappy brother, Claudio?
Isab. Why her unhappy brother? let me ask;
The rather, for I now must make you know
I am that Isabella, and his sister.
Lucio. Gentle and fair, your brother kindly greets
you.
Not to be weary with you, he's in prison.
Isab. Woe me! for what?
Lucio. For that, which, if myself might be his judge,
He should receive his punishment in thanks:
He hath got his friend with child.
Isab. Sir, make me not your story.
Lucio. 'Tis true. I would not—though 'twas my familiar sin
With maids to seem the lapwing, and to jest,
Tongue far from heart—play with all virgins so:
I hold you as a thing unky'd and stained;
By your renouncement, an immortal spirit;
And to be talk'd with in sincerity,
As with a saint.
Isab. You do blaspheme the good, in mocking me.
Lucio. Do not believe it. Fewnness and truth,
'tis thus:
Your brother and his lover have embrac'd:
As those that feel grow full; as blossoming time,
That from the seedness the bare fellow brings
To teeming foison; even so her plenteous womb
Expresseth his full tith and husbandry.
Isab. Some one with child by him?—My cousin Juliet.
Lucio. Is she your cousin?
Isab. Adoptedly; as school-maids change their names
By vain, though apt, affection.
Lucio. She it is.
Isab. O! let him marry her.
Lucio. This is the point.
The duke is very strangely gone from hence;
Bore many gentlemen, myself being one,
In hand, and hope of action: but we do learn,
By those that know the very nerves of state;
His givings out were of an infinite distance
From his true-meant design. Upon his place,
And with full line of his authority,
Governs lord Angelo; a man whose blood
Is very snow-broth; one who never feels
The wanton stings and motions of the sense,
But doth rebuke and blurt his natural edge
With profits of the mind, study and fast.
He (to give fear to use and liberty,
Which have, for long, run by the hideous law,
As mice by laths) hath pick'd out an act.
Under whose heavy sense your brother's life
Falls into forfeit: he arrest's him on it;
And follows close the rigour of the statute,
To make him an example. All hope is gone,
Unless you have the grace by your fair prayer
To soften Angelo: and that's my pith
Of business 'twixt you and your poor brother.
Isab. Dost he so seek his life?
Lucio. Has censur'd him
Already; and, as I hear, the provost hath
A warrant for his execution.
Isab. Alas! what poor ability's in me
To do him good?
Lucio. Assay the power you have.
Isab. My power! alas, I doubt—
Lucio. Our doubts are traitors,
And make us lose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt. Go to lord Angelo,
And let him learn to know, when maidsens sue,
Men give like gods; but when they weep and kneel,
All their petitions are as freely theirs
As they themselves would owe them.
Isab. I'll see what I can do.
Lucio. But speedily.
Isab. I will about it straight;
No longer staying but to give the mother
Notice of my affair. I humbly thank you:
Commend me to your brother: soon at night
I'll send him certain word of my success.
Lucio. I take my leave of you.
Isab. Good Sir, adieu. [Exeunt.]}
ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Angelo's House.
Enter Angelo, Esclus, a Justice, Provost, Officers, and other Attendants.

Ang. We must not make a scare-crow of the law, Setting it up to fear the birds of prey, And let it keep one shape, till custom make it Their perch, and not their terror.

Escal. Ay, but yet Let us be keen, and rather cut a little, Than fall, and bruise to death. Alas! this gentleman, Whom I would save, had a most noble father. Let but your honour know, (Whom I believe to be most strait in virtue,) That, in the working of your own affections, Had time coher'd with place, or place with wishing, Or that the resolute acting of your blood Could have attain'd the effect of your own purpose, Whether you had not, sometime in your life, Err'd in this point which now you censure him, And pull'd the law upon you.

Ang. Tis one thing to be tempted, Esclus, Another thing to fall. I do not deny, The jury, passing on the prisoner's life, May in the sworn twelve have a thief or two Guiltier than they try. What's open made to justice, That justice seizes: what know the laws, That thieves do pass on thieves? 'Tis very pregnant, The jewel that we find, we stoop and take it, Because we see it; but what we do not see We tread upon, and never think of it. You may not so extenuate his offence, For I have had such faults; but rather tell me, When I, that censure him, do so offend, Let mine own judgment pattern out my death, And nothing come in partial. Sir, he must die.

Escal. Be it as your wisdom will.

Ang. Where is the provost? From Here, if it like your honour.

Escal. Be executed by nine to-morrow morning. Bring him his confessor, let him be prepar'd; For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage. [Exit Provost.]

Escal. Well, heaven forgive him! and forgive us Some rise by sin, and some by virtue fall; [all! Some run from brakes of vice, and answer none; And some condemn'd for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Clown, Officers, &c.

Elbow. Come, bring them away. If these be good people in a common-wealth, that do nothing but use their abuses in common houses, I know no law: bring them away.

Ang. How now, Sir! What's your name? and what's the matter?

Elbow. If it please your honour, I am the poor duke's constable, and my name is Elbow: I do lean upon justice, Sir; and do bring in here before your good honour two notorious benefactors.

Ang. Benefactors! Well; what benefactors are they? are they not malefactors?

Elbow. If it please your honour, I know not well what they are: but precious villains they are, that I am sure of; and void of all profession in the world, that good Christians ought to have.

Escal. This comes off well: here's a wise officer.

Ang. Go to: what quality are they off? Elbow is your name? why dost thou not speak, Elbow?

Elbow. He cannot, Sir; he's out at elbow.

Ang. What are you, Sir?

Elbow. He, Sir? a tapster, Sir; parcel-bawd; one that serves a bad woman; whose house, Sir, was, as they say, plucked down in the suburbs: and now she professes a hot-house, which, I think, is a very ill house too.

Escal. How know you that?

Elbow. My wife, Sir, whom I detest before heaven and your honour.

Escal. How! thy wife?

Elbow. Ay, Sir; whom I thank heaven, is an honest woman.

Escal. Dost thou detest her therefore?

Elbow. I say, Sir, I will detest myself also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a bawd's house, it is pity of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Escal. How dost thou know that, constable?

Elbow. Marry, Sir, by my wife; who, if she had been a woman candidly given, might have been accused in fornication, adultery, and all uncleanness there.

Escal. By the woman's means?

Elbow. Ay, Sir, by mistress Overdone's means: but as she spelt in his face, so she defied him.

Clown. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

Elbow. Prove it before these varlets here, thou honourable man; prove it.

Escal. [To Angelo.] Do you hear how he misplaces?

Elbow. She, Sir, she came in, great with child, and longing (saving your honour's reverence) for stewed prunes, Sir;—we had but two in the house, which at that very distant time stood, as it were, in a fruit-dish, a dish of some three-pence;—your honours have seen such dishes; they are not China dishes, but very good dishes.

Escal. Go to, go to: no matter for the dish, Sir.

Elbow. No, indeed, Sir, not of a pin; you are therein in the right—but to the point. As I say, this mistress Elbow, being, as I say, with child, and being great belly'd, and longing, as I said, for prunes; and having but two in the dish, as I said, master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest, as I said, and, as I say, paying for them very honestly; for, as you know, master Froth, I could not give you three-pence again, Froth. No, indeed.

Elbow. Very well,—you being then, if you be remembered, cracking the stones of the foresaid prunes, Froth. Ay, so I did, indeed.

Elbow. Why, very well!—I telling you then, if you be remembered, that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of; unless they kept very good diet, as I told you,

Froth. All this is true.

Elbow. Why, very well then.

Escal. Come; you are a tedious fool: to the purpose. What was done to Elbow's wife, that he hath cause to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

Elbow. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Escal. No, Sir, nor I mean it not.

Elbow. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honour's leave. And, I beseech you, look into master Froth here, Sir; a man of fourscore pound a-year; whose father died at Hallowmas—wasn't at Hallowmas, master Froth?

Froth. All hallowe'en eve.

Clo. Why, very well; I hope here be truths. He, Sir, sitting, as I say, in a lower chair, Sir;—twas in the Bush of Grapes, where, indeed, you have a delight to sit, have you not?—

Froth. I have so; because it is an open room, and good for winter.

Clo. Why, very well then; I hope here be truths. Ags. This will last out a night in Russia, When nights are longest there: I'll take my leave, And leave you to the hearing of the cause; Hoping you'll find good cause to whip them all.

Exe. I think no less. Good-morrow to your lordship. [Exit Angelo.]

Now, Sir, come on: what was done to Elbow's wife, once more?

Clo. Once, Sir? there was nothing done to her once.

Etb. I beseech you, Sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Clo. I beseech your honour, ask me.

Exe. Well, Sir; what did this gentleman to her?

Clo. I beseech you, Sir, look in this gentleman's face.—Good master Froth, look upon your honour; 'tis for a good purpose.—Doth your honour mark his face?

Exe. Ay, Sir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you, mark it well.

Exe. Well, I do so.

Clo. Doth your honour see any harm in his face?

Exe. Why, no.

Clo. I'll be supposed upon a book, his face is the worst thing about him. Good, then; if his face be the worst thing about him, how could master Froth do the constable's wife any harm? I would know that of your honour.

Exe. He's in the right.—Constable, what say you to it?

Etb. First, an it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his mistress is a respected woman.

Clo. By this hand, Sir, his wife is a more respected person than any of us all.

Etb. Varlet, thou liest; thou liest, wicked varlet. The time is yet to come that she was ever respected with man, woman, or child.

Clo. Sir, she was respected with him, before he married with her.

Exe. Which is the wiser here? Justice, or Iniquity?—Is this true?

Etb. 'Tis truer caffiff! O thou varlet! O thou wicked Hannibal! I respected with her, before I was married to her—If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your worship think me the poor duke's officer.—Prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or I'll have mine action of battery on thee.

Exe. If he took you a box o' th' ear, you might have your action of slander too.

Etb. Marry, I thank your good worship for it. What is't your worship's pleasure I shall do with this wicked caffiff?

Exe. Truly, officer, because he hath some offences in him, that thou wouldst discover if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses, till thou knowest what they are.

Etb. Marry, I thank your worship for it.—Thou seest, thou wicked varlet now, what's come upon thee; thou art to continue now, thou varlet; thou art to continue.

Exe. Where were you born, friend?

Froth. Here in Vienna, Sir.

Exe. Are you of fourscore pounds a-year?

Froth. Yes, an't please you, Sir. [Sir?

Exe. So.—[To Clown.] What trade are you of,

Clo. A tapster; a poor widow's tapster.

Exe. Your mistress' name?

Clo. Mistress Overdone.

Exe. Hath she had any more than one husband?

Clo. Nine, Sir; Overdone by the last.

Exe. Nine!—Come hither to me, master Froth. Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with tapsters; they will draw you, master Froth, and you will hang them. Get you gone, and let me hear no more of you.

Froth. I thank your worship. For mine own part, I never came into any room in a taphouse, but I am drawn in.

Exe. Well, no more of it, master Froth: farewell. [Exit Froth.]—Come you hither to me, master tapster. What's your name, master tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Exe. What else?

Clo. Bun, Sir.

Exe. Froth, and your bun is the greatest thing about you; so that, in the beastliest sense, you are Pompey the great. Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey, howsoever you colour it in being a tapster. Are you not then, come, tell me true: it shall be the better for you.

Clo. Truly, Sir, I am a poor fellow that would live.

Exe. How would you live, Pompey? by being a bawd? What do you think of the trade, Pompey? is it a lawful trade?

Clo. If the law would allow it, Sir.

Exe. But the law will not allow it, Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clo. Does your worship mean to geld and spay all the youth of the city?

Exe. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truly, Sir, in my poor opinion, they will to't then. If your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.

Exe. There are pretty orders beginning, I can tell you: it is but heading and hanging.

Clo. If you head and hang all, that offend that way but for ten year together, you'll be glad to give out a commission for more heads: if this law hold in Vienna ten year, I'll rent the fairest house in it after three-pence a day: if you live to see this come to pass, say, Pompey told you so.

Exe. Thank you, good Pompey; and, in requital of your prophecy, hark you:—I advise you, let me not find you before me again upon any complaint whatsoever; no, not for dwelling where you do: if I do, Pompey, I shall bestow you to your tent, and prove a shrewd Caesar to you; in plain dealing, Pompey, I shall have you whipt: so, for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clo. I thank your worship for your good counsel; but I shall follow it, as the flesh and fortune shall better determine.

Whip me! No, no; let carman whip his jade:—The valiant heart's not whipt out of his trade. [Exit.]
SCENE II.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Escal. Come hither to me, master Elbow; come hither, master constable. How long have you been in this place of constable? Elb. Seven year and a half, Sir.
Escal. I thought, by your readiness in the office, you had continued in it some time. You say, seven years together?
Elb. And a half, Sir.
Escal. Alas, it hath been great pains to you! They do you wrong to put you so oft upon't. Are there not men in your ward sufficient to serve it? Elb. Faith, Sir, few of any wit in such matters: as they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them; I do it for some piece of money, and go through with all.
Escal. Look you bring me in the names of some six or seven, the most sufficient of your parish.
Elb. To your worship’s house, Sir?
Escal. To my house. Fare you well. [Exit Elbow.

What’s o’clock, think you?
Just. Eleven, Sir.
Escal. I pray you home to dinner with me. Just. I humbly thank you.
Escal. It grieves me for the death of Claudio; But there’s no remedy.
Just. Lord Angelo is severe.
Escal. It is but needful; Mercy is not itself, that oft looks so; Pardon is still the nurse of second woe: But yet, poor Claudio!—There is no remedy.
Come, Sir. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Another Room in Angelo’s House.
Enter Provost and a Servant.

Serv. He’s hearing of a cause; he will come straight: I’ll tell him of you.
Prov. Pray you, do. [Exit Servant.] I’ll know His pleasure; may be, he will relent. Alas! He hath but as offended in a dream: All sects, all ages smack of this vice; and he To die for it!—

Enter Angelo.

Prov. Lest I might be too rash: Under your good correction, I have seen, When, after execution, judgment hath Repented o’er his doom.
Ang. Go to; let that be mine: Do you your office, or give up your place, And you shall well be spur’d.
Prov. I crave your honour’s pardon.— What shall be done, Sir, with the mourning Juliet? She’s very near her hour.
Ang. Dispose of her To some more fitter place; and that with speed.
R-enter Servant.

Serv. Here is the sister of the man condemn’d Desires access to you.
Ang. Hath he a sister? Prov. Ay, my good lord; a very virtuous maid, And to be shortly of a sisterhood, If not already.

Ang. Well, let her be admitted. [Exit Servant.

See you the fornicatress be remov’d: Let her have needful, but not lavish, means; There shall be order for it.

Enter Isabella and Lucio.

Proc. Save your honour! [Offering to retire.
Ang. Stay a little while.—[To Isab.] You’re welcome: what’s your will?
Isab. I am a woful suitor to your honour, Please but your honour hear me.
Ang. Well; what’s your suit?
Isab. There is a vice, that most I do abhor, And most desire should meet the blow of justice; For which I would not plead, but that I must; For which I must not plead, but that I am At war ’twixt will and that but not.
Ang. Well; the matter?
Isab. I have a brother is condemn’d to die: I do beseech you, let it be his fault, And not my brother.
Proc. [Aside.] Heaven give thee moving graces! Ang. Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it? Why, every fault’s condemn’d e’er it be done. Mine were the very cipher of a function, To fine the fault, whose fine stands in record, And let go by the actor.
Isab. O just, but severe law! I had a brother, then.—Heaven keep your honour! [Retiring.
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Give ’t not o’er so: to him again, entreat him;
Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown: You are too cold; if you should need a pin, You could not with more tame a tongue desire it: To him, I say.
Isab. Must he needs die?
Ang. Maid’n, no remedy.
Isab. Yes; I do think that you might pardon him, And neither heaven, nor man, grieve at the mercy. Ang. I will not do it.
Isab. But can you, if you would? Ang. Look; what I will not, that I cannot do. Isab. But might you do’t, and do the world no wrong, If so your heart were touch’d with that remorse As mine is to him?
Ang. He’s sentenced; ’tis too late.
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] You are too cold.
Isab. Too late! why, no; I, that do speak a word, May call it back again. Well, believe this, No ceremony that to great ones longs, Not the king’s crown, nor the reputed sword, The marshal’s truncheon, nor the judge’s robe, Become them with one half so good a grace [he, As mercy does. If he had been as you, and you as You would have alipt like him; but he, like you, Would not have been so stern.
Prov. Pray you, be gone.
Ang. I would to heaven I had your potency, And you were Isabe! should it then be thus? No; I would tell what ’twere to be a judge, And what a prisoner. [Vein.
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Ay, touch him; there is the Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the law, And you but waste your words.
Isab. Alas, alas! Why, all the souls that were, were forfeit once;
And He that might the vantage best have took,
Found out the remedy. How would you be,
If He, which is the top of judgment, should
But judge you as you are? O! think on that;
And mercy then will breathe within your lips,
Like man new made.
Ang. Be you content, fair maid;
It is the law, not I, condemns your brother:
Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son,
It should be thus with him: he must die to-morrow.
Isab. To-morrow? O, that's sudden! Spare him, spare him!—
He's not prepar'd for death. Even for our kitchens
We kill the fowl of season: shall we serve heaven
With less respect than we do minister [you]:
To our own selves? Good, good my lord, bethink
Who is it that hath died for this offence?
There's many have committed it.
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Ay, well said.
Ang. The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept:
Those many had not dar'd to do that evil,
If He first, that did the edict infringe,
Had answer'd for his deed: now 'tis awake;
Takes note of what is done; and, like a prophet,
Looks in a glass, that shows what future evils
(Either new, or by remissness new-conceived),
And so in progress to be hatch'd and born,
Are now to have no successive degrees,
But, ere they live, to end.
Isab. Yet show some pity.
Ang. I show it most of all when I show justice;
For then I pity those I do not know,
Which a whim'sd offence would after gall;
And do him right, that, answering one foul wrong,
Lives not to act another. Be satisfied:
Your brother dies to-morrow: be content.
Isab. So you must be the first that gives this sentence,
And he that suffers. O! it is excellent
To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant.
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] That's well said.
Isab. Could great men thunder
As Jove himself does, Jove would ne'er be quiet;
For every pelting, petty officer,
Would use his heaven for thunder,—
Nothing but thunder. Merciful heaven!
Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt
Split'th the unwedgeable and gnarled oak,
Then will the wolf myrph; but man, proud man!
Dread in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
His glassy essence,—like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven,
As make the angels weep; who, with our spleens,
Would all themselves laugh mortal.
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] O, to him, to him, wench!
He's coming; I perceive 't. [He will relent:]
Prov. [Aside.] Pray heaven, she win him!
Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with onself;
Great men may jest with saints; 'tis wit in them,
But, in the less, foul profanation.
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Thou 'rt in the right, girl: more o' that.
Isab. That in the captain's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy. [on't.
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Art advis'd o' that? more
Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon me?
Isab. Because authority, though it err like others,
Hath yet a kind of medicine in itself,
That skins the vice o' the top. Go to your bosom;
Knock there, and ask your heart what it doth know
That's like my brother's fault: if it confess
A natural guiltiness such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brother's life.
Ang. [Aside.] She speaks, and 'tis
Such sense, that my sense breeds with it. [To her.]
Fare you well.
Isab. Gentle, my lord, turn back.
Ang. I will bethink me: come again to-morrow.
Isab. Hark how I'll bribe you: good my lord, turn back.
Ang. How! bribe me! [with you.
Isab. Ay, with such gifts, that heaven shall share
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] You had mar'd all else.
Isab. Not with fond shokels of the tasted gold,
Or stones, whose rates are either rich or poor
As fancy values them; but with true prayers,
That shall be up at heaven, and enter there
Ere sun-rises,—prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting maidens, whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporal.
Ang. Well; come to me to-morrow.
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Go to; 'tis well; away!
Isab. Heaven keep your honour safe!
Ang. [Aside.] Amen:
For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers cross.
Isab. At what hour to-morrow
Shall I attend your lordship?
Ang. At any time 'fore noon.
Isab. Save your honour.
[Exeunt ISABELLA, LUCIO, and Provost.
Ang. From thee; even from thy virtue!—
What's this, what's this? Is this her fault or mine?
The tempter or the tempted, who sins most, ha?
Not she; nor doth she tempt: but it is I,
That lying by the violet in the sun,
Do, as the carion does, not as the flower,
Corrupt with virtuous season. Can it be,
That modesty may more betray our sense
Than woman's lightness! Having waste ground
Shall we desire to raise the sanctuary,
[enough, And pitch our evils there? O, fie, fie, fie! That what dost thou, or what art thou, Angelo?
Dost thou desire her foully for those things
That make her good? O, let her brother live!
Thieves for their robbery have authority,
[her, When judges steal themselves. What! do I love
That I desire to hear her speak again,
And feast upon her eyes? What! 't is I dream on?
O cunning enemy, that to catch a saint,
With saints dost bait thy hook! Most dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth goad us on
To sin in loving virtue. Never could the strumpet,
With all her double vigour, art and nature.
Once stir my temper; but this virtuous maid
Subdues me quite;—ever, till now,
When men were fond, I smil'd, and wonder'd how.

SCENE III.—A Room in a Prison.

Enter Duke, disguised as a Friar, and Provost.

Duke. Hail to you, provost! so I think you are.
Prov. I am the provost. What's your will, good friar?
Scene IV.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Duke. Bound by my charity, and my bless'd order,
I come to visit the afflicted spirits
Here in the prison. Do me the common right
To let me see them, and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly.

Prov. I would do more than that, if more were needed.

Look, here comes one,—a gentlewoman of mine,
Who, falling in the flames of her own youth,
 Hath blister'd her report: she is with child;
And he that got it, sentenc'd—a young man
More fit to do another such offence,
Than die for this.

Enter Juliet.

Duke. When must he die?

Prov. As I do think, to-morrow.—

[To JULIET.] I have provided for you: stay a while,
And you shall be conduct'd.

Duke. Repent you, fair one, of the sin you carry?

Juliet. I do; and bear the shame most patiently.

Duke. I'll teach you how you shall arraign your conscience,
And try your penitence, if it be sound,
Or hollowly put on.

Juliet. I'll gladly learn.

Duke. Love you the man that wrong'd you?

Juliet. Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd him?

Duke. So then, it seems, your most offensive act
Was mutually committed?

Juliet. Mutually.

Duke. Then was your sin of heavier kind than his?

Juliet. I do confess it, and repent it, father.

Duke. 'Tis meet so, daughter: but lest you do repent,
As that the sin hath brought you to this shame,—
Which sorrow is always toward us, not heaven,
Shewing, we would not spare heaven, as we love it,
But as we stand in fear,—

Juliet. I do repent me, as it is an evil,
And take the shame with joy.

Duke. There rest.

Your partner, as I hear, must die to-morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him.

Grace go with you! Benedicite! [Exit.

Juliet. Must die to-morrow? O injurious law,
That despises me a life, whose very comfort
Is still a dying horror?

Prov. 'Tis pity of him. [Excust.

Scene IV.—A Room in Angelo's House.

Enter Angelo.

Ang. When I would pray and think, I think and pray.

To several subjects. Heaven hath my empty words;
Whilst my invention, hearing not my tongue,
Anchors on Isabel; heaven in my mouth,

As if I did but only chew his name;
And in my heart the strong and swelling evil
Of my conception. The state, whereon I studied,
Is like a good thing, being often read,
Grown sweet'd and tedious; yes, my gravity,
Wherein—let no man hear me—I take pride,

Could I, with boot, change for an idle plague,

Which the air beats for vain. O place! O form!

How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit,
Wrench awe from fools, and move the wiser souls
To thy false seeming! Blood, thou art blood:
Let's write good angel on the devil's horn,
'Tis not the devil's crest.

Enter Servant.

How now! who's there?

Serv. One Isabel, a sister,

Desires access to you.

Ang. Teach her the way. [Exit Servant. O heavens!

Why does my blood thus muster to my heart,
Making both it unable for itself,
And dispossessing all my other parts
Of necessary fitness?

So play the foolish throngs with one that swoons;
Come all to help him, and so stop the air
By which he should revive: and even so
The general, subject to a well-wish'd king,
Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondness
Crowd to his presence, where their untaught love
Must needs appear offence.

Enter Isabella.

How now, fair maid!

Isab. I come to know your pleasure.

Ang. That you might know it, would much better Than to demand what 'tis. Your brother cannot live.

Isab. Even so.—Heaven keep your honour!

Ang. Yet may he live a while; and, it may be,

As long as you, or I: yet he must die.

Isab. Under your sentence?

Ang. Yes.

Isab. When, I beseech you? that in his reprieve,

Longer or shorter, he may be so fitted,

That his soul sicken not.

Ang. Ha! Fie, these filthy vices! It were as good

To pardon him, that hath from nature stolen
A man already made, as to remit
Their saucy sweetness, that do coin heaven's image
In stamps that are forbad: 'tis all as easy
Falsely to take away a life true made,

As to put metal in restrained means,

To make a false one.

Isab. 'Tis set down so in heaven, but not in earth.

Ang. Say you so? then I shall pose you quickly.

Which had you rather,—that the most just law
Now took your brother's life; or, to redeem him,

Give up your body to such sweet uncleanness
As she that he hath stain'd?

Isab. Sir, believe this,

I had rather give my body than my soul.

Ang. I talk not of your soul. Our compell'd sins

Stand more for number than for account.

Isab. How say you? Nay, I'll not warrant that; for I can speak Against the thing I say. Answer to this:—

I, now the voice of the recorded law,

Pronounce a sentence on your brother's life:

Might there not be a charity in sin,

To save this brother's life?

Isab. Please you to do 't,
I'll take it as a peril to my soul,
It is no sin at all, but charity.

Ang. Please you do't, at peril of your soul,
Were equal poise of sin and charity,

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be sin,
Heaven let me bear it! you grantng of my suit,
If that be sin, I'll make it my morn-prayer
To have it added to the faults of mine,
And nothing of your answer.

Ang. Nay, but hear me.
Your sense pursues not mine: either you are igno-

Or seem so, craftily; and that's not good.

Isab. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good,
But graciously to know I am no better.

Ang. Thus wisdom wishes to appear most bright,
When it doth tax itself; as these black masks
Proclaim and ensnare beauty ten times louder
Than beauty could, display'd.—But mark me;
To be receiv'd plain, I'll speak more gross:
Your brother is to die.

Isab. So.

Ang. And his offence is so, as it appears,
Accountant to the law upon that pain.

Isab. True.

Ang. Admit no other way to save his life,
(As I subscribe not that, nor any other,
But in the loss of question,) that you, his sister,
Finding yourself desir'd of such a person,
Whose credit with the judge, or own great place,
Could fetch your brother from the manacles
Of the all-binding law; and that there were
No earthly mean to save him, but that either
You must lay down the treasures of your body
To this suppos'd, or else to let him suffer;
What would you do?

Isab. As much for my poor brother, as myself:
Th' impression of keen whips I'd wear as rubies,
And strip myself to death, as to a bed
That, longing, I've been sick for, ere I'd yield
My self up to shame.

Ang. Then must

Your brother die.

Isab. And 'twere the cheaper way:
Better it were a brother die at once,
Than that a sister, by redeeming him,
Should die for ever.

Ang. Were not you, then, as cruel as the sentence
That you have slander'd so?

Isab. Ignomy in ransom, and free pardon,
Are of two houses: lawful mercy is Nothing akin to foul redemption.

Ang. You seem'd of late to make the law a tyrant;
And rather prov'd the sliding of your brother
A meritment, than a vice.

Isab. O, pardon me, my lord; it oft falls out,
To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean;
I something do excuse the thing I hate,
For his advantage that I dearly love.

Ang. We are all frail,

Isab. Else let my brother die,
If not a feedory, but only he,
Owe, and succeed thy weakness.

Ang. Nay, women are frail too.

Isab. Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves;
Which are as easy broke as they make forms.
Women!—Help heaven! men their creation mar
In profiting by them. Nay, call us ten times frail;
For we are soft as our complexions are,
And credulous to false prints.

Ang. I think it well:
And from this testimony of your own sex,
(Since, I suppose, we are made to be no stronger Than faults may shake our frames,) let me be bold;—
I do arrest your words. Be that you are,
That is, a woman; if you be more, you're none;
If you be one, (as you are well express'd
By all external warrants,) show it now,
By putting on the destin'd livery.

Isab. I have no tongue but one: gentle my lord,
Let me entreat you speak the former language.

Ang. Plainly conceive, I love you.

Isab. My brother did love Juliet; and you tell me
That he shall die for 't.

Ang. He shall not, Isabel, if you give me love.

Isab. I know, your virtue hath a licence in 't,
Which seems a little fouler than it is,
To pluck on others.

Ang. Believe me, on mine honour,
My words express my purpose.

Isab. Ha! little honour to be much believ'd,
And most pernicious purpose!—Seeming, seeming!—
I will proclaim thee, Angelo; look for 't;
Sign me a present pardon for my brother,
Or with an outstretch'd throat I'll tell the world
Aloud what man thou art.

Ang. Who will believe thee, Isabel?
My unsoll'd name, the austereness of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place I the state,
Will so your accusation overweigh,
That you shall stifle in your own report,
And smell of calumny. I have begun;
And now I give my sensual race the rein:
Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite;
Lay by all nicety and prolixious blushes,
That banish what they sue for; redeem thy brother
By yielding up thy body to my will;
Or else he must not only die the death,
But thy unkindness shall his death draw out
To lingering suffrance. Answer me to-morrow,
Or, by the affection that now guides me most,
I'll prove a tyrant to him. As for you,
Say what you can, my false o'erweighs your true.

[Exit.]

Isab. To whom should I complain? Did I tell
this,
Who would believe me? O perilous mouths!
That bear in them one and the self-same tongue,
Either of condemnation or approb;
Bidding the law make court'sy to their will;
Hocking both right and wrong to th' appetite,
To follow as it draws. I'll to my brother:
Though he hath fallen by prompture of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a mind of honour,
That, had he twenty heads to tender down
On twenty bloody blocks, he'd yield them up,
Before his sister should her body stoop
To such abhor'd pollution.

Then, Isabel, live chaste, and, brother, die:
More than our brother is our chastity.
I'll tell him yet of Angelo's request,
And fit his mind to death, for his soul's rest. [Exit.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Prison.

Enter Duke, disguised as before, Claudio, and Provost.

Duke. So then, you hope of pardon from Lord Claudio. The miserable have [Angelo?] No other medicine, but only hope: I have hope to live, and am prepar'd to die.

Duke. Be absolute for death; either death or life Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with me: [life:—]

That none but fools would keep; a breath thou art,— Servile to all the slyer influences, That dost this habitation, where thou keep'st, Hourly afflict: merely, thou art death's fool; For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun, And yet runnest toward him still. Thou art not noble; For all th' accommodations that thou bearst Are nurs'd by baseness. Thou art by no means For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork [valiant; Of a poor worm. Thy bane is to conceal'st; And that thou oft provok'st; yet grossly fear'st Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thyself; For thou exist'st on many a thousand grains That issue out of dust. Happy thou art not; For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get, And what thou hast, forget'st. Thou art not certain; For thy compulsion shifts to strange effects, After the moon. If thou art rich, thou art poor; For, like an ass, whose back with ingots bows, Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey, And death unloads thee. Friend hast thou none; For thine own bowels, which do call thee sire, The mere effusion of thy proper loins, Do curse the gout, serpign, and the rheum, For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast nor youth nor But, as it were, an after-dinner's sleep, [laze; Dreaming on both; for all thy blessed youth Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms Of palest eld: and when thou art old and rich, Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty, To make thy riches pleasant. What's yet in this That bears the name of life? Yet in this life Lie hid more thousand deaths: yet death we fear, That makes these odds all even.

Claud. I humbly thank you.

Duke. To sue to live, I find I seek to die.

Prov. As seeking death, find life: let it come on.

Duke. Dear Sir, ere long I'll visit you again.

Claud. Most holy Sir, I thank you.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. My business is a word or two with Claudio.

Prov. And very welcome. Look, signior; here's your sister.

Duke. Provost, a word with you.

Prov. As many as you please.

Duke. [Aside to him.] Bring me to hear them speak, where I may be present. [Exeunt Duke and Provost.

Claud. Now, sister, what's the comfort?

Isab. Why, as all

Claud. Comports are; most good, most good indeed.

Lord Angelo, having affairs to heaven,
Intends you for his swift ambassador,
Claud. Death is a fearful thing.
Isab. And shambld life a hateful.
Claud. Ay, but to die, and go we know not where;
To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot;
This sensible warm motion to become
A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling region of thick-ribbled ice;
To be imprison'd in the viewless winds,
And blown with restless violence round about
The pendent world; or to be worse than worst
Of those that lawless and uncertain thoughts
Imagine bowing!—tis too horrible!
The weariest and most loathed worldly life
That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment
Can lay on nature, is a paradise
To what we fear of death.
Isab. Alas, alas!
Claud. Sweet sister, let me live:
What sin you do to save a brother's life,
Nature dispenses with the deed so far,
That it becomes a virtue.
Isab. O you beast!
O faithless coward! O dishonest wretch!
Wilt thou be made a man out of my vice?
Is't not a kind of incest to take life
From thine own sister's shame? What should I think?
Heaven shield, my mother play'd my father fair!
For such a warped slip of wilderness
Ne'er issu'd from his blood. Take my defiance;
Die, perish! might but my bending down
Reprove thee from thy fate, it should proceed:
I'll pray a thousand prayers for thy death,—
No word to save thee.
Claud. Nay, hear me, Isabel.
Isab. O, fie, fie, fie!
Thy sin's not accidental, but a trade.
Mercy to thee would prove itself a bawd:
'Tis best that thou diest quickly. [Going.
Claud. O, hear me, Isabelia.

Re-enter Duke.

Duke. Vouchsafe a word, young sister; but one word,
Isab. What is your will?
Duke. Might you dispense with your leisure, I would by and by have some speech with you: the satisfaction I would require, is likewise your own benefit.
Isab. I have no superfluous leisure: my stay must be stolen out of other affairs; but I will attend you a while.
Duke. [Aside to Claudio.] Son, I have overheard what hath past between you and your sister. Angelo had never the purpose to corrupt her; only he hath made an enemy of her virtue, to practise his judgment with the disposition of nature: she, having the truth of honour in her, hath made him that gracious denial which he is most glad to receive. I am ambassador to Angelo, and I know this to be true; therefore prepare yourself to death. Do not satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fallible: to-morrow you must die; go to your knees, and make ready.
Claud. Let me ask my sister pardon. I am so out of love with life, that I will sue to be rid of it.
Duke. Hold you there: farewell. [Exit CLAUDIO.

Re-enter Provost.

Provost, a word with you.
Prov. What's your will, father?
Duke. That now you are come, you will be gone.
Leave me a while with the maid: my mind promises with my habit no loss shall touch her by my company.
Prov. In good time.
[Exit.
Duke. The hand that hath made you fair hath made you good: the goodness that is cheap in beauty, makes beauty brief in goodness; but grace, being the soul of your complexion, shall keep the body of it ever fair. The assault that Angelo hath made to you, fortune hath conveyed to my understanding: and, but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo. How will you do to content this substitute, and to save your brother?
Isab. I am now going to resolve him, I had rather my brother die by the law, than my son should be unlawfully born. But O, how much is this good duke deceived in Angelo! If ever he return, and I can speak to him, I will open my lips in vain, or discover his government.
Duke. That shall not be much amiss: yet, as the matter now stands, he will avoid your accusation; he made trial of you only. Therefore, fasten your car on my advisings: to the love I have in doing good, a remedy presents itself. I do make myself believe, that you may most uprightly do a poor wronged lady a merited benefit; redeem your brother from the angry law; do no stain to your own gracious person; and much please the absent duke, if peradventure he shall ever return to have hearing of this business.
Isab. Let me hear you speak farther. I have spirit to do anything that appears not foul in the truth of my spirit.
Duke. Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful. Have you not heard speak of Marianna, the sister of Frederick the great soldier who miscarried at sea?
Isab. I have heard of the lady, and good words went with her name.
Duke. She should this Angelo have married; was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed: between which time of the contract, and limit of the solemnity, her brother Frederick was wrecked at sea, having in that perished vessel the dowry of his sister. But mark how heavily this befall to the poor gentlewoman: there she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her ever most kind and natural; with him, the portion and sweat of her fortune, her marriage-dowry; with both, her comrade husband, this well-seeing Angelo.
Isab. Can this be so? Did Angelo so leave her?
Duke. Left her in her tears, and dried not one of them with his comfort; swallowed his vows whole, pretending in her, discoveries of dishonour: in few, bestowed her on her own lamentation, which she yet wears for his sake; and he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not.
Isab. What a merit were it in death to take this poor man's advice? What corruption in this life, that it will let this man live!—But how out of this can she avail?
Duke. It is a rupture that you may easily heal; and the cure of it not only saves your brothers, but keeps you from dishonour in doing it.
Isab. Show me how, good father.
Duke. This fore-named maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection: his unjust unkindness, that in all reason should have quenched her love, hath, like an impediment in the current, made it more violent and unruly. Go you to Angelo; answer his requiring with a plausible obedience; agree with his demands to the point; only refer yourself to this advantage,—first, that your stay with him may not be long; that the time may have all shadow and silence in it; and the place answer to convenience. This being granted in course, and now follows all:—we shall advise this wronged maid to stay up your appointment, go in your place; if the encounter acknowledge itself hereafter, it may compel him to her recompense: and here, by this, is your brother saved, your honour untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt deputy scaled. The maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt. If you think well to carry this, as you may, the doubleness of the benefit defends the deceit from reproof. What think you of it?

Isab. The image of it gives me content already; and I trust it will grow to a most prosperous perfection.

Duke. It lies much in your holding up. Haste you speedily to Angelo: if for this night he entreat you to his bed, give him promise of satisfaction. I will presently to St Luke's: there, at the moasted grange, resides this dejected Mariana. At that place call upon me; and despatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Isab. I thank you for this comfort. Fare you well, good father. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Street before the Prison.

Enter Duke, disguised as before; to him Elbow, and Officers with Clown.

Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and sell men and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drunk brown and white bastard.

Duke. O heavens! what stuff is here?

Isab. Nay, in merry world, since, of two usuries, the merriest was put down, and the worse allowed by order of law a furled gown to keep him warm; and furled with fox and lamb-skins too, to signify that craft being richer than innocence, stands for the facing.

Elb. Come your way, Sir;—bless you, good father friar.

Duke. And you, good brother father. What offence hath this man made you, Sir?

Elb. Marry, Sir, he hath offended the law: and, Sir, we take him to be a thief too, Sir; for we have found upon him, Sir, a strange pick-lock, which we have sent to the deputy.

Duke. Fie, sirrah! a bawd, a wicked bawd! The evil that thou causest to be done,

That is thy means to live. Do thou but think What 'tis to cram a maw, or clothe a back,

From such a filthy vice: say to thyseil,—

From their abominable and beastly touches I drink, I eat, array myself, and live.

Canst thou believe thy living is a life,

So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Cld. Indeed, it doth stink in some sort, Sir; but yet, Sir, I would prove—

Duke. Nay, if the devil have given thee proofs for sin, stole from the state, and usurp the begging he was never born to. Lord Angelo dukes it well in his absence: he puts transgression to’t.

Duke. He does well in’t.

Lucio. A little more lenity to lechery would do no harm in him: something too crabbed that way, friar.

Duke. It is too general a vice, and severely must cure it.

Lucio. Yes, in good sooth, the vice is of a great kindred; it is well allied: but it is impossible to extirp it quite, friar, till eating and drinking be put down. They say, this Angelo was not made by man and woman, after the downright way of creation: is it true, think you?

Duke. How should he be made, then?

Lucio. Some report, a sea-smaid spawn’d him; some, that he was begot between two stock-fishes. But it is certain, that when he makes water, his urine is congealed ice; that I know to be true: and he is a motion ungenerative, that, infallible.

Duke. You are pleasant, Sir, and speak apace.

Lucio. Why, what a ruthless thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a cod-piece to take away the life of a man! Would the duke that is absent have done this? Ere he would have hanged a man for the getting a hundred bastards, he would have paid for the nunnery a thousand: he had some feeling of the sport; he knew the service, and that instructed him to mercy.

Duke. I never heard the absent duke much detected for women; he was not inclined that way.

Lucio. O, Sir, you are deceived.

Duke. ’Tis not possible.

Lucio. Who? not the duke! yes, your beggar of fifty; and his use was, to put a ducat in her crack-dish: the duke had crotches in him: he would be drunk too; that let me inform you.

Lucio. Sir, I was an inward of his. A shy fellow was the duke: and, I believe, I know the cause of his withdrawing.

Duke. What, I pr’ythee, might be the cause?

Lucio. No,—pardon;—tis a secret must be locked within the teeth and the lips; but this I can let you understand,—the greater file of the subject held the duke to wise.

Duke. Wise? why, no question but he was.

Lucio. A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.

Duke. Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistaking: the very stream of his life, and the business he hath helmed, must, upon a warranted need, give him a better proclamation. Let him be but testimonied in his own bringing forth, and he shall appear to the envious, a scholar, a statesman, and a soldier. Therefore, you speak unskilfully; or, if your knowledge be more, it is much darkened in your malice.

Lucio. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duke. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dearer love.

Lucio. Come, Sir, I know what I know.

Duke. I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speak. But, if ever the duke return, (as our prayers are he may,) let me desire you to make your answer before him: if it be honest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it: I am bound to call upon you; and, I pray you, your name?

Lucio. Sir, my name is Lucio; well known to the Duke. He shall know you better, Sir, if I may live to report you.

Lucio. I fear you not.

Duke. O, you hope the duke will return no more; or you imagine me too unhurtful an opposite. But, indeed, I can do you little harm: you’l forswear this again.

Lucio. I’l be hanged first: thou art deceived in me, friar. But no more of this. Canst thou tell, if Claudio die to-morrow, or not?

Duke. Why should he die, Sir?

Lucio. Why, for filling a bottle with a tun-dish.

Duke. I would the duke we talk of were returned again: this ungenitured agent will unpeople the province with continency; sparsors must not build in his house: he has lachrymose; the duke yet would have dark deeds darkly answered; he would never bring them to light: would he were returned! Marry, this Claudio is condemned for untrustworthiness. Farewell, good friar; I pr’ythee, pray for me. The duke, I say to thee again, would eat mutton on Fridays. He’s now past it: yet, and I say to thee, he would mouth with a beggar, though she smell brown bread and garlic: say that I said so. Farewell.

[Exit.

Duke. No might nor greatness in mortality

Can censure ‘scape: back-wounding calamity

The whitest virtue strikes. What king so strong,

Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?

But who comes here?

[Enter Escalus, Provost, and Officers with Mrs Overdone.

Escal. Go; with away her to prison!

Mrs Ov. Good my lord, be good to me; your honour is accounted a merciful man; good my lord.

Escal. Double and treble admonition, and still forfeit in the same kind! This would make mercy swear, and play the tyrant.

Prov. A bawd of eleven years’ continuance, may it please your honour.

Mrs Ov. My lord, this is one Lucio’s information against me. Mistress Kate Keep-down was with child by him in the duke’s time; he promised her marriage: his child is a year and a quarter old, come Philip and Jacob: I have kept it myself; and see how I know about it to abuse me!

Escal. That fellow is a fellow of much licence: let him be called before us.—Away with her to prison!—Go to; so many words. [Exit Officers with Mrs Overdone.] Provost, my brother Angelo will not be altered; Claudio must die to-morrow; let him be furnished with divines, and have all charitable preparation. If my brother wrought by my pity, it should not be so with him.

Prov. So please you, this friar hath been with him, and advised him for the entertainment of death.

Escal. Good even, good father.

Duke. Bliss and goodness on you!

Escal. Of whence are you?

Duke. Not of this country, though my chance is now.

To use it in my time: I am a brother

Of gracious order, late come from the See,

In special business from his holiness.

Escal. What news abroad in the world?

Duke. None, but there is so great a fever on goodness, that the dissolution of it must cure it: novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is virtuous to be constant in any undertaking: there is scarce truth enough alive to make societies secure; but security enough to make fellowships accrue—much upon this riddle runs the wisdom of the world. This news is old enough, yet it is every day's news. I pray you, Sir, of what disposition was the duke?

Escal. One that, above all other strifes, contended especially to know himself.

Duke. What pleasure was he given to?

Escal. Rather rejoicing to see another merry, than merry at anything which professed to make him rejoice: a gentleman of all temperance. But leave us him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous; and let me desire to know how you find Claudio prepared. I am made to understand, that you have lent him visitation.

Duke. He professes to have received no sinister measure from his judge, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of justice: yet had he framed to himself, by the instruction of his frailty, many deceiving promises of life; which I, by my good leisure, have discredited to him, and now is he resolved to die.

Escal. You have paid the heavens your function, and the prisoner the very debt of your calling. I have laboured for the poor gentleman to the extremest shore of my modesty; but my brother justice have I found so severe, that he hath forced me to tell him, he is indeed—justice.

Duke. If his own life answer the straitness of his proceeding, it shall become him well; wherein if he chance to fail, he hath sentenced himself.

Escal. I am going to visit the prisoner. Fare you well.

Duke. Peace be with you! [Exeunt ESCALUS and PROVOST.

He, who the sword of heaven will bear, Should be as holy as severe; Pattern in himself to know, Grace to stand, and virtue go; More nor less to others paying, Than by self offences weighing. Shame to him, whose cruel striking Kills for faults of his own liking! Twice treble shame on Angelo, To weed my vice, and let his grow! O, what may man within him hide, Though angel on the outward side! How may likeness, made in crimes, Making practice on the times, To draw with idle spider's strings Most pond'rous and substantial things! Craft against vice I must apply, With Angelo to-night shall lie His old betrothed, but despis'd; So disguise shall, by the disguis'd, Pay with falsehood false exacting, And perform an old contracting. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Garden at the moated Grange. Before MARIANA'S House.

MARIANA discovered sitting; a Boy singing.

SONG.

Take, O, take those lips away, That so sweetly were foresworn; And those eyes, the break of day, Lights that do mislead the mourner: But my kisses bring again, bring again; Seals of love, but seal'd in vain, seal'd in vain.

Muri. Break off thy song, and haste thee quick away: Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice Hath often still'd my brawling discontent. [Exit Boy.

Enter Duke, disguised as before.

I cry you mercy, Sir; and well could wish You had not found me here so musical! Let me excuse me, and believe me so,— My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my woe.

Duke. 'Tis good; though music oft hath such a charm To make bad good, and good provoke to harm. I pray you, tell me, hath anybody inquired for me here to-day? much upon this time have I promised here to meet.

Muri. You have not been inquired after: I have sat here all day.

Duke. I do constantly believe you.—The time is come, even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little: may be, I will call upon you anon, for some advantage to yourself.

Muri. I am always bound to you. [Exit into the house.

Enter ISABELLA.

Duke. Very well met, and welcome. What is the news from this good deputy?

Isab. He hath a garden circum'st with brick, Whose western side is with a vineyard back'd; And to that vineyard is a planch'd gate, That makes his opening with this bigger key: This other doth command a little door, Which from the vineyard to the garden leads; There have I made my promise on the heavy Middle of the night to call upon him.

Duke. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?

Isab. I have ta'en a due and wary note upon't: With whispering and most guilty diligence In action all of precept, he did show me The way twice o'er.

Duke. Are there no other tokens Between you 'greed, concerning her observance? Isab. No, none, but only a repair i' the dark; And that I have possess'd him my most stay Can be but brief: for I have made him know, I have a servant comes with me along, That stays upon me; whose persuasion is, I come about your brother.

Duke. 'Tis well borne up. I have not yet made known to Mariana A word of this.—What ho! within! come forth.

Re-enter MARIANA.

I pray you, be acquainted with this maid; She comes to do you good.

Isab. I do desire the like.

Duke. Do you persuade yourself that I respect you? [It.

Mari. Good friar, I know you do, and have found Duke. Take, then, this your companion by the hand, Who hath a story ready for your ear.
I shall attend your leisure: but make haste; The vaporous night approaches.

Mar. Will you please you walk aside?

[Exeunt MARIANA and ISABELLA.

Duke. O place and greatness! millions of false eyes Are stuck upon thee. Volumes of report Run with these false and most contrarious quests Upon thy doings! thousand escapes of wit Make thee the father of their idle dream, And rack thee in their fancies!

Re-enter MARIANA and ISABELLA.

Welcome! How agreed?

Inab. She'll take the enterprise upon her, father, If you advise it.

Duke. It is not my consent, But my entreaty too.

Inab. Little have you to say, When you depart from him, but, soft and low, "Remember now my brother."

Mar. Fear me not.

Duke. Nor, gentle daughter, fear you not at all. He is your husband on a pre-contrat: To bring you thus together, 'tis no sin, Sith that the justice of your title to him Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let us go: Our corn's to reap, for yet our tilth's to sow.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Prison.

Enter Provoost and Clawdus.

Prov. Come hither, sirrah. Can you cut off a man's head?

Clo. If the man be a bachelor, Sir, I can: but if he be a married man, he is his wife's head, and I can never cut off a woman's head.

Prov. Come, Sir; leave me your snatches, and yield me a direct answer. To-morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine. Here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper: if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your gyes; if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an un pityed whipping, for you have been a notorious bawd.

Clo. Sir, I have been an unlawful bawd, time out of mind; but yet I will be content to be a lawful hangman. I would be glad to receive some instruction from my fellow partner.

Prov. What ho, Abhorson! Where's Abhorson, there?

Enter ABHORSON.

Abhor. Do you call me?

Prov. Sirrah, here's a fellow will help you to-morrow in your execution. If you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you; if not, use him for the present, and dismiss him. He cannot plead his estimation with you; he hath been a bawd.

Abhor. A bawd, Sir? Tie upon him! he will discredit our mystery.

Prov. Go to, Sir; you weigh equally; a feather will turn the scale.

Clo. Pray, Sir, by your good favour,—for, surely, Sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look,—do you call, Sir, your occupation a mystery?

Abhor. Ay, Sir; a mystery.

Clo. Painting, Sir, I have heard say, is a mystery; and your whores, Sir, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my occupation a mystery; but what mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hanged, I cannot imagine.

Abhor. Sir, it is a mystery.

Clo. Proof?

Abhor. Every true man's apparel fits your thief—

Clo. If it be too little for your thief, your true man thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your thief, your thief thinks it little enough: so, every true man's apparel fits your thief.

Re-enter Provoost.

Prov. Are you agreed?

Clo. Sir, I will serve him; for I do find, your hangman is a more penitent trade than your bawd,—he doth oftener ask forgiveness.

Prov. You, sirrah, provide your block and your axe to-morrow, fear an o'clock.

Abhor. Come on, bawd; I will instruct thee in my trade; follow.

Clo. I do desire to learn, Sir; and, I hope, if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you shall find me yare; for, truly, Sir, for your kindness I owe you a good turn.

Prov. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio:

[Exeunt Clawdus and ABHORSON.

Th' one has my pity; not a jot the other, Being a murderer, though he were my brother.

Enter CLAUDUS.

Look, here's the warrant, Claudio, for thy death: 'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to-morrow Thou must be made immortal. Where's Barnardine?

Claud. As fast lock'd up in sleep, as guiltless labour, When it lies starkly in the traveller's bones: He will not wake.

Prov. Who can do good on him?

Well, go, prepare yourself. [Knocking within.] But hark, what noise?—

Heaven give your spirits comfort!—[Exit CLAUDUS.]

By and by—

I hope it is some pardon, or reprieve, For the most gentle Claudio. —

Enter Duke, disguised as before.

Welcome, father.

Duke. The best and wholesalers' spirits of the night Envelop you, good provost! Who call'd here of late?

Prov. None, since the curfew rung.

Duke. Not Isabel?

Prov. No.

Duke. They will, then, ere 't be long.

Prov. What comfort is for Claudio?

Duke. There's some in hope.

Prov. It is a bitter deputy.

Duke. Not so, not so; his life is parallel'd

Even with the stroke and line of his great justice: He doth with holy abstension subdue That in himself, which he spurs on his power To qualify in others: were he meal'd with that Which he corrects, then were he tyrannous; But this being so, he's just.—[Knocking within.]

Now are they come.

[Exit Provoost.

This is a gentle provost: seldom-when

The steeled gazer is the friend of men. [Knocking.
How now! What noise? That spirit's possess'd with haste,
That wounds th'unsting postern with these strokes.

_Re-enter Provost._

_prov._ [Speaking to one at the door.] There be must stay until the officer Arise to let him in: he is call'd up.

_Duke._ Have you no countermand for Claudio yet,
But he must die to-morrow?

_prov._ None, Sir, none.

_Duke._ As near the dawning, provost, as it is,
You shall hear more ere morning.

_prov._ Happily.

You something know; yet, I believe, there comes
No countermand; no such example have we:
Besides, upon the very siege of justice,
Lord Angelo hath to the public ear
Profess'd the contrary.

_Enter a Messenger._

This is his lordship's man.

_Duke._ And here comes Claudio's pardon.

_Mess._ [Giving a paper.] My lord hath sent you this note; and by me this further charge,—that you swerve not from the smallest article of it, neither in time, matter, or other circumstance. Good-morrow; for, as I take it, it is almost day.

_prov._ I shall obey him.

_Esc._ This is his pardon, purchased by such sin,
For which the pardonor himself is in.
Hence hath offence his quick celerity,
When it is borne in high authority:
When vice makes mercy, mercy's so extended.
That for the fault's love is th' offender friended.—
Now, Sir, what news?

_prov._ I told you: Lord Angelo, belike thinking me remiss in mine office, awakens me with this un-wonted putting on; methinks strangely, for he hath not used it before.

_Duke._ Pray you, let's hear.

_prov._ [Reads.] "Whatsoever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock; and, in the afternoon, Barnardine. For my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio's head sent me by five. Let this be duly performed; with a thought, you more depends on it than we must yet deliver. Thus fail not to do your office, as you will answer it at your peril."

What say you to this, Sir?

_Duke._ What is this, Barnardine who is to be executed in the afternoon?

_prov._ A Bohemian born; but here nursed up and bred: one that is a prisoner nine years old.

_Duke._ How came it that the absent duke had not either delivered him to his liberty, or executed him?
I have heard it was ever his manner to do so.

_prov._ His friends still wrought reproves for him: and, indeed, his fact, till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubted proof.

_Duke._ It is now apparent?

_prov._ Most manifest, and not denied by himself.

_Duke._ Hath he borne himself penitently in priso-

How seems he to be touched?

_prov._ A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully but as a drunken sleep; careless, reckless, and fearless of what's past, present, or to come; insensitive of mortality, and desperately mortal.

_Duke._ He wants advice.

_prov._ He will hear none: he hath evermore had the liberty of the prison; give him leave to escape hence, he would not: drunk many times a day, if not many days entirely drunk. We have very oft awaked him, as if to carry him to execution, and showed him a seeming warrant for it: it hath not moved him at all.

_Duke._ More of him anon. There is written in your brow, provost, honesty and constancy: if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me; but, in the boldness of my cunning, I will lay myself in hazard. Claudio, whom here you have warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the law than Angelo who hath sentenced him. To make you understand this in a manifested effect, I crave but four days' respite; for the will you are to do me both a present and a dangerous courtesy.

_prov._ Pray, Sir, in what?

_Duke._ In the delaying death.

_prov._ Alack! how may I do it,—having the hour limited, and an express command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my case as Claudio's to cross this in the smallest.

_Duke._ By the vow of mine order I warrant you, if my instructions may be your guide. Let this Barnardine be this morning executed, and his head borne to Angelo.

_prov._ Angelo hath seen them both, and will discover the favour.

_Duke._ O, dear's a great disguiser; and you may add to it. Shave the head, and tie the beard; and say it was the desire of the penitent to be so bared before his death: you know the course is common.
If anything fall to you upon this, more than thanks and good fortune, by the saint whom I profess, I will plead against it with my life.

_prov._ Pardon me, good father; it is against my oath.

_Duke._ Were you sworn to the duke or to the deputy?

_prov._ To him, and to his substitutes.

_Duke._ You will think you have made no offence,
if the duke avouch the justice of your dealing?

_prov._ But what likelihood is in that?

_Duke._ Not a resemblance, but a certainty. Yet since I see you fearful, that neither my coat, integrity, nor persuasion, can with ease attempt you,

I will go farther than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look you, Sir, here is the head and seal of the duke: you know the character, I doubt not;
and the signet is not strange to you.

_prov._ I know them both.

_Duke._ The contents of this is the return of the duke: you shall anon over-read it at your pleasure; where you shall find, within these two days he will be here. This is a thing that Angelo knows not;
for he this very day receives letters of strange tenor;
perchance, of the duke's death; perchance, entering into some monastery; but by chance, nothing of what is writ. Look, the unfoiling star calls up the shepherd. Put not yourself into amazement how these things should be: all difficulties are but easy when they are known. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardine's head: I will give him a present shift, and advise him for a better place. Yet you are amazed; but this shall absolutely resolve you.
Come away; it is almost clear dawn.

_Esc._
SCENE III.—Another Room in the Prison.

Enter Clown.

Clo. I am as well acquainted here, as I was in our house of profession: one would think it were mistress Overdone’s own house; for here be many of her old customers. First, here’s young master Nash; he’s in for a commodity of brown paper and old ginger, ninescore and seventeen pounds; of which he made five marks ready money: marry, then ginger was not much in request, for the old women were all dead. Then is there here one master Capel, at the suit of master Threepile the mercer, for some four suits of peach-colour’d satin, which now peaches him a beggar. Then have we here young Dizy, and young master Deeprow, and master Copper-spar, and master Starve-lackey, the rapiers and dagger-man, and young Drop-heir that kill’d lusty Pulding, and master Forthbright, the tiller, and brave master Shob-nor, the great traveller, and wild Half-Can that stabbed Pots, and I, think, forty more; all great doers in our trade, and are now “for the Lord’s sake.”

Enter Abrhorsn.

Abr. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.

Clo. Master Barnardine! you must rise and be hanged, master Barnardine.

Abr. What ho! Barnardine! [Within] A pos o’ your throats! Who makes that noise there? What are you?

Clo. Your friend, Sir; the hangman. You must be so good, Sir, to rise and be put to death.

Barn. [Within] Away, you rogue, away! I am asleep.

Abr. Tell him he must awake, and that quickly too.

Clo. Pray, master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

Abr. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Clo. He is coming, Sir, he is coming; I hear his straw rattle.

Abr. Is the axe upon the block, sirrah?

Clo. Very ready, Sir.

Enter Barnardine.

Barn. How now, Abrhorsn! what’s the news with you?

Abr. Truly, Sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers; for, look you, the warrant’s come.

Barn. You rogue, I have been drinking all night; I am not fitted for’t.

Abr. O, the better, Sir; for he that drinks all night, and is hang’d betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day.

Abr. Look you, Sir; here comes your ghostly father: do we jest now, think you?

Enter Duke, disguised as before.

Duke. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to advise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Abr. Sir, you, so: I have been drinking hard all night, and I will have more time to prepare me, or they shall beat out my brains with billets: I will not consent to die this day, that’s certain.

Look forward on the journey you shall go.

Barn. I swear I will not die to-day for any man’s persuasion.

Duke. But hear you,—

Barn. Not a word: if you have anything to say to me, come to my ward; for thence will not I to-day. [Exit.

Duke. Unfit to live, or die. O, grave heart!—After him, fellows; bring him to the block.

[Exit Abrhorsn and Clown. Enter Provost.

Prov. Now, Sir, how do you find the prisoner?

Duke. A creature unpard’rd, unmeet for death; and, to transport him in the mind he is, were damnable.

Prov. Here in the prison, father. There died this morning of a cruel fever One Ragzone, a most notorious pirate, A man of Claudio’s years; his beard and Just of his colour. What if we do omit This reprobate till he were well inclined? And satisfy the deputy with the visage Of Ragzone, more like to Claudio?

Duke. O, ’tis an accident that heaven provides! Despatch it presently: the hour draws on Prefix’d by Angelo. See this be done, And sent according to command, whiles I Persuade this rude wretch willingly to die.

Prov. This shall be done, good father, presently. But Barnardine must die this afternoon: And how shall we continue Claudio, To save him from the danger that might come, If he were known alive?

Duke. Let this be done,—put them in secret holds, Both Barnardine and Claudio; Ere twice the sun hath made his journal greeting To th’ under generation, you shall find Your safety manifested.

Prov. I am your free dependant.

Duke. Quick, despatch, and send the head to Angelo. [Exit Provost.

Now will I write letters to Angelo,— The provost, he shall bear them,—whose contents Shall witness to him I am near at home, And that, by great injuctions, I am bound To enter publicly: him I’ll desire To meet me at the consecrated fount, A league below the city; and from thence, By coldgradation, and well-balanced form, We shall proceed with Angelo.

[Exit Provost with Ragzone’s head.

Prov. Here is the head; I’ll carry it myself. Duke. Convenient is it. Make a swift return; For I would communicate with you of such things, That want no ear but yours.

Prov. I’ll make all speed. [Exit. Isab. [Within] Peace, ho, be here!

Duke. The tongue of Isabel. She’s come to know If yet her brother’s pardon be come hither; But I will keep her ignorant of her good, To make her heavenly comforts of despair, When it is least expected.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. Ho, by your leave.

Duke. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter.

Isab. The better, given me by so holy a man. Hath yet the deputy sent my brother’s pardon?

Duke. He hath releas’d him, Isabel, from the His head is off, and sent to Angelo. [world:

Isab. Nay, but it is not so.
Duke. It is no other: Show your wisdom, daughter, in your close patience.
Joan. O, I will to him, and pluck out his eyes!
Duke. You shall not be admitted to his sight.
Joan. Unhappy Claudio! Wretched Isabel! Injurious world! Most damned Angelo!
Duke. This nor hurts him, nor profits you a jot! Forbear it therefore; give your cause to heaven.
Mark what I say, which you shall find By every syllable a faithful verity.
The duke comes home to-morrow;—nay, dry your eyes:
One of our convent, and his confessor,
Gives me this instance: already he hath carried
Notice to Escalus and Angelo;
Who do prepare to meet him at the gates,
There to give up their power. If you can, pace your wisdom
In that good path that I would wish it go;
And you shall have your bosom on this wretch,
Grace of the duke, revenges to your heart,
And general honour.
Joan. I am directed by you.
Duke. This letter, then, to friar Peter give;
'Tis that he sent me of the duke's return:
Say, by this token, I desire his company
At Mariana's house to-night. Her cause, and yours,
I will perfect him withal: and he shall bring you
Before the duke; and to the head of Angelo
Accuse him home and home. For my poor self,
I am combined by a sacred vow,
And shall be absent. Wendi with you this letter.
Command these fretting waters from your eyes
With a light heart: trust not my holy order,
If I pervert your course.—Who's here?

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. Good even!

Duke. Not within, Sir.

Lucio. O pretty Isabella, I am pale at mine heart to see thine eyes so red: thou must be patient. I am faint to dine and sup with water and bran; I dare not for my heart fill my belly; one fruitful meal would set me to't. But they say, the duke will be here to-morrow. By my troth, Isabel, I loved thy brother: if the old fantastical duke of dark corners had held his home, he had lived. [Exit Isabella.

Duke. Sir, the duke is marvellous little beheld in their reports; but the best he, lives not in them.

Lucio. Friar, thou knowest not the duke so well as I do: he be a better woodman than thou takest him for.

Duke. Well, you'll answer this one day. Fare ye well.

Lucio. Nay, tarry; I'll go along with thee: I can tell thee pretty tales of the duke.

Duke. You have told me too many of him already, Sir, if they be true; if not true, none were enough.

Lucio. I was once before him for getting a wench with child.

Duke. Did you such a thing?

Lucio. Yes, marry, did I: but I was fain to forswear it; they would else have married me to the rotten medlar.

Duke. Sir, your company is fairer than honest, Rest you well.

Lucio. By my troth, I'll go with thee to the lane's end: if bawdy talk offend you, we'll have very little of it. Nay, friar, I am a kind of buff; I shall stick.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Room in ANGELO'S House.

Enter ANGELO and ESCALUS.

Escal. Every letter he hath writ hath divouched the other.

Ang. In most uneven and distracted manner. His actions show much like to madness; pray heaven his wisdom be not tainted! And why meet him at the gates, and redeliver our authorities there?

Escal. I guess not.

Ang. And why should we proclaim it in an hour before his entering; that if any cruel redress of injustice, they should exhibit their petitions in the street?

Escal. He shows his reason for that;—to have a despatch of complaints, and to deliver us from devices hereafter, which shall then have no power to stand against us.

Ang. Well, I beseech you, let it be proclaimed: Betimes! the morn I'll call you at your house. Give notice to such men of sort and suit As to meet him.

Escal. I shall, Sir: fare you well.

Ang. Good night.—[Exit ESCALUS. This deed unshapes me quite, makes me unhappy, And duff to all proceedings. A deflower'd maid! And by an eminent body, that enforce! The law against it! But that her tender shame Will not proclaim against her maiden loss, How might she tongue me! Yet reason dares her no; For my authority bears so credent bulk, That no particular scandal once can touch, But it confounds the breather. He should have liv'd, Save that his riotous youth, with dangerous sense, Might in the times to come have ta'en revenge, By so receiving a dishonour'd life [liv'd! With ransom of such shame. Would yet he had Ack! when once our grace we have forgot, [Exit. Nothing goes right: we would, and we would not.

SCENE V.—Fields without the Town.

Enter Duke, in his own habit, and Friar Peter.

Duke. These letters at fit time deliver me.

[Giving letters. The provost knows our purpose, and our plot. The matter being afoot, keep your instruction, And hold you ever to our special dir, Though sometimes you do banch from this to that, As cause doth minister. Go, call at Flavius' house, And tell him where I stay: give the like notice To Valentinus, Rowland, and to Crassus, And bid them bring the trumpets to the gate; But send me Flavius first.

F. Peter.

It shall be speeded well. [Exit.

Duke. Enter VARRIUS.

Duke. I thank thee, Varrius; thou hast made good haste: Come, we will walk. There's other of our friends Will greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Street near the City Gate.

Enter ISABELLA and MARIANA.

Isab. To speak so indirectly, I am loath: I would say the truth; but to accuse him so,

v
That is you part: yet I am advis'd to do it;
He says, to veil full purpose.

Mort. Be rul'd by him.

Isab. Besides, he tells me, that if periladventure
He speak against me on the adverse side,
I should not think it strange; for 'tis a physic
That's bitter to sweet end.

Mort. I would, friar Peter.—

Isab. O, peace! the friar is come.

Enter Friar Peter.

F. Peter. Come; I have found you out a stand most fit;
Where you may have such vantage on the duke,
He shall not pass you. Twice have the trumpets
The generous and gravest citizens [sounded;
Have hent the gates, and very near upon
The duke is entering: therefore hence, away.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A public Place near the City Gate.

MARIA, seised, ISABELLA, and Friar Peter, at a distance. Enter from one side, DUKE, in his own habit.
VARIOUS, Lords; from the other, ANGELO, ESCALUS,
LUCIO, Provost, Officers, and Citizens.

Duke. My very worthy cousin, fairly met:—
Our old and faithful friend, we are glad to see you.

Ang. and Exeunt. Happy return be to your royal grace!

Duke. Many and hearty thankings to you both.
We have made inquiry of you; and we hear
Such goodness of your justice, that our soul
Cannot but yield you forth to public thanks,
For running more requital.

Ang. You make my bonds still greater.

Duke. O, your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it,
To lock it in the wards of covert bosom,
When it deserves, with characters of brass,
A forted residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
And raze of oblivion. Give me your hand,
And let the subject see, to make them know
That outward courtesies would fain proclaim
Favours that keep within.—Come, Escalus;
You must walk by us on our other hand;—
And good supporters are you.

Friar Peter and Isabella come forward.

F. Peter. Now is your time: speak loud, and knell before him.

Isab. Justice, O royal duke! Vail your regard
Upon a wrong'd, I would fain have said, a maid!
O worthy prince, dishonour not your eye
By throwing it on any other object,
Till you have heard me in my true complaint,
And given me justice, justice, justice, justice!

Duke. Relate your wrongs! in what? by whom?
Be brief.
Here is lord Angelo shall give you justice:
Reveal yourself to him.

Isab. O worthy duke,
You bid me seek redemption of the devil:
Hear me yourself; for that which I must speak,
Must either punish me, not being believ'd,
Or wring redress from you: hear me, O, hear me,
here!

Ang. My lord, her wits, I fear me, are not firm;

She hath been a suitor to me for her brother,
Cut off by course of justice,—

Isab. By course of justice!

Ang. And she will speak most bitterly, and strange.

Isab. Most strange, but yet most truly, will I
That Angelo's forsworn; is it not strange? [speak:
That Angelo's a murderer: is it not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous thief,
A hypocrite, a virgin-violator;
Is it not strange, and strange?

Duke. Nay, it is ten times strange.

Isab. It is not truer he is Angelo,
Than this is all as true as it is strange:
Nay, it is ten times true; for truth is truth
To the end of reckoning.

Duke. Away with her,—poor soul,
She speaks this in th' infirmity of sense.

Isab. O prince, I conjure thee, as thou believest
There is another comfort than this world,
That thou neglect me not, with that opinion
That I am touch'd with madness! Make not impos-
That which but seems unlike. 'Tis not impossible,
But one, the wicked'ist caiffath on the ground,
May seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute
As Angelo; even so may Angelo,
In all his dressings, characters, titles, forms,
Be an arch-villain: believe it, royal prince:
If he be less, he's nothing; but he's more,
Had I more name for madness.

Duke. By mine honesty,
If she be mad,—as I believe no other,—
Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense,
Such a dependency of thing on thing,
As 'er I heard in madness.

Isab. O gracious duke,
Harp not on that; nor do not banish reason
For inequality; but let your reason serve
To make the truth appear where it seems hid,
And hide the false seems true.

Duke. Many that are not mad,
Have, more, more lack of reason.—What would you

Isab. I am the sister of one Claudio,
[say]
Condemn'd upon the act of fornication
To lose his head; condemn'd by Angelo.
I, in probation of a sisterhood,
Was sent to by my brother; one Lucio
As then the messenger,—

Lucio. That's he, as isn't like your grace:
I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her
To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo,
For her poor brother's pardon.

Isab. That's he, indeed.

Duke. You were not bid to speak.

Lucio. No, my good lord,
Nor wish'd to hold my peace.

Duke. I wish you now, then;
Pray you, take note of it: and when you have
A business for yourself, pray heaven, you then Be perfect.

Lucio. I warrant your honour.

Duke. The warrant's for yourself; take heed to it.

Isab. This gentleman told somewhat of my tale,—

Lucio. Right.

Duke. It may be right; but you are in the wrong
To speak before your time.—Proceed.

Isab. To this perversive caiffath deputy,—

I want...

Duke. Mended again. The matter—proceed.

Isab. In brief,—to set the needless process by,
How I persuaded, how I pray'd, and kneel'd,
How he refell'd me, and how I replied,—
For this was of much length,—the vile conclusion
I now begin with grief and shame to utter:
He would not, but by gift of my chaste body
To his conceivible intemperate lust,
Release my brother; and, after much detestation,
My sister remorse confutes mine honour,
And I did yield to him: but the next morn betimes,
His purpose surfeiting, he sends a warrant
For my poor brother's head.

Duke. This is most likely!

Isab. O, that it were as like as it is true!

Duke. By heaven, fond wretch! thou know'st not what thou speakest.

Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour
In hateful practice. First, his integrity
Stands without blemish: next, it imports no reason
That with such vehemency he should pursue
Faults proper to himself: if he had so offended,
He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself,
And not have cut him off. Some one hath set you Confess the truth, and say by whose advice [on:
Thou canst here to complain.

Isab. And is this all?

Then, O! you blessed ministers above,
Keep me in patience; and, with ripen'd time,
Unfold the evil which is here wrapt up
In countenance!—Heaven shield your grace from woe,
As I, thus wrong'd, hence unbeliev'd go!

Duke. Know you'd fain be gone.—An officer! To prison with her!—Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall
On him so near us? This needs must be a practice.—
Who knew of your intent, and coming hither?

Isab. One that I would were here, friar Lodowick.

Duke. A ghostly father, belike.—Who knows that Lodowick?

Lucio. My lord, I know him; 'tis a meddling friar;
I do not like the man: had he been lay, my lord,
Would have his words of grace that weigh against your grace
In your retirement, I had swing'd him soundly.

Duke. Words against me! This a good friar, belike!

And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our substitute!—Let this friar be found.

Lucio. But yesternight, my lord, she and that I saw them at the prison: a saucy friar, [friar
A very scurvy fellow.

F. Peter. Bless'd be your royal grace! I have stood by, my lord, and I have heard
Your royal ear abash'd. First, hath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your substitute,
Who is as free from touch or soil with her,
As she from one ungod.

Duke. We did believe no less.

F. Peter. I know him for a man divine and holy:
Not scurvy, nor a temporary meddler,
As he's reported by this gentleman;
And, on my trust, a man that never yet
Did, as he vouches, misreport your grace.

Lucio. My lord, most villainously; believe it.

Duke. Good friar, let's hear it. [ISABELLA IS CARRIED OFF GUARDED; AND MARIANA COMES FORWARD.

Do you not smile at this, lord Angelo?—
O heaven, the vanity of wretched fools!—
Give us some seats.—Come, cousin Angelo; In this I'll be impartial: be you judge
Of your own cause.—Is this the witness, friar? First, let her show her face, and after speak.

MARI. Pardon, my lord; I will not show my face,
Until my husband bid me. What, are you married?

Duke. No, my lord.

MARI. Are you a maid?

Duke. No, my lord.

MARI. Why, you are nothing, then:—neither maid, widow, nor wife.

Lucio. My lord, she may be a punk; for many of them are neither maid, widow, nor wife.

Duke. Silence that fellow: I would he had some
To prattle for himself. [cause

Lucio. Well, my lord.

MARI. My lord, I do confess I ne'er was married; And I confess, besides, I am no maid:
I have known my husband; yet my husband knows
That ever he knew me. [not

Lucio. He was drunk, then, my lord: it can be no better.

Duke. For the benefit of silence, 'would thou welt so too?

Lucio. Well, my lord.

Duke. This is no witness for lord Angelo.

Lucio. Now I come to 't, my lord:
She that accuses him of fornication,
In self-same manner doth accuse my husband;
And charges him, my lord, with such a time,
When, 'll depose, I had him in mine arms,
With all the effect of love.

ANG. Charges she more than me?

MARI. Not that I know.

Duke. No? you say, your husband.

MARI. Why, just, my lord, and that is Angelo,
Who think's he knows that he ne'er knew my body;
But knows he thinks that he knows Isbel's.

ANG. This is a strange abuse.—Let's see thy face.

MARI. My husband bids me; now I will unmask. [Unveiling.

This is that face, thou cruel Angelo,
Which once thou swor'st was worth the looking on
This is the hand, which, with a vow'd contract,
Was fast betock'd in thine; this is the body
That took away the match from Isbel, And did supply thee at the garden-house
In her imag'd person.
Know you this woman?
Carnally, she says.

Duke. Know you this woman?
Lucio. Carnally, she says.

Duke. Enough, my lord.

Ang. My lord, I must confess, I know this woman:
And five years since there was some speech of mar-
Betwixt myself and her; which was broke off, [riple
Partly, for that her promised proportions
 Came short of composition; but, in chief,
For that her reputation was disvalued
In levity: since which time of five years
I never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her,
Upon my faith and honour.

Marti. Noble prince,
As there comes light from heaven, and words from
As there is sense in truth, and truth in virtue,
I am affianced this man’s wife, as strongly
As words could make up vows: and, my good lord,
But Tuesday night last gone, in a garden-house,
He knew me as a wife. As this is true,
Let me in safety raise me from my knees;
Or else for ever be confounded here,
A marble monument!

Ang. I did but smile till now:
Now, good my lord, give me the scope of justice;
My patience here is touch’d. I do perceive,
These poor informal women are no more
But instruments of some more mightier member,
That sets them on. Let me have way, my lord,
To find this practice out.

Duke. Ay, with my heart:
And punish them unto your height of pleasure.—
Thou foolish friar; and thou pernicious woman, Compact with her that’s gone, thinkst thou thy oaths,
Though they would swear down each particular
Were testimonies against his worth and credit,
That’s seal’d in approbation.—You, lord Escalus,
Sit with my cousin; lend him thy kind pains
To find out this abuse, whence this derived.—
There is another friar that set them on;
Let him be sent for.

F. Peter. Would he be here, my lord! for he,
Hath set the women on to this complaint. [indeed,
Your provost knows the place where he abides,
And he may fetch him.

And you, my noble and well-warranted cousin,
Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth,
Do with your injuries as seems you best,
In any chastisement: I for a while
Will leave you; but stir not you, till you have well
Determined upon these slanderers.

Escal. My lord, we’ll do it thoroughly.

[Exit Duke.

Signior Lucio, did not you say you knew that friar Lodowick to be a dishonest person?

Lucio. See this woman?
Lucio. Caecilius non facit monachum; honest in nothing, but in his clothes; and one that hath spoken most villainous speeches of the duke.

Escal. We shall entreat you to come here till he come, and enforce them against him: we shall find this friar a notable fellow.

Lucio. As any in Vienna, on my word.

Escal. [To an Attendant.] Call that same Isabel here once again: I would speak with her. [Exit Attendant.] Pray you, my lord, give me leave to question; you shall see how I’ll handle her.

Lucio. Not better than he, by her own report.

Escal. Say you?
Lucio. Marry, Sir, I think, if you handled her privately, she would sooner confess: perchance, publicly she’ll be ashamed.

Escal. I will go darkly to work with her.

Lucio. That’s the way; for women are light at midnight.

Re-enter Officers with Isabella.

Escal. [To Isab.] Come on, mistress: here’s a gentlewoman denies all that you have said.

Lucio. My lord, here comes the rascal I spoke of;
here, with the provost.

Escal. In very good time:—speak not you to him, till we call upon you.

Lucio. Mum.

Re-enter Duke, disguised as a Friar, and Provost.

Escal. Come, Sir; did you see these women on to slander lord Angelo? they have confounded you did.

Duke. ’Tis false.

Escal. How! know you where you are? [devil Duke. Respect to your great place! and let the
Be sometime honoured for his burning throne!—
Where is the duke? ’tis he should hear me speak.

Escal. The duke’s in us; and we will hear you
Look you speak justly. [speak:

Duke. Boldly, at last.—But, O, poor souls!
Come you to seek the lamb here of the fox?
Good night to your redress. Is the duke gone?
Then is your cause gone too. The duke’s unjust,
Thus to retort your manifest appeal,
And put your trial in the villain’s mouth.

Which here you come to accuse.

Lucio. This is the rascal; this is he I spoke of.

Escal. Why, thou unreverend and unshallow’d friar!

Is’t not an unorthodox, thou hast suborn’d these women
To accuse this worthy man, but, in foul mouth,
And in the witness of his proper ear,
To call him villain? and then to glance from him
To the duke himself, to tax him with injustice?—
Take him hence; to the rack with him!—We’ll

Joint by joint, but we will know his purpose.

What! unjust?

Duke. Be not so hot; the duke dare
No more stretch this finger of mine, than he Dare rack his own: his subject am I not,
Nor here my social. My business in this state
Made me a looker-on here in Vienna,
Where I have seen corruption boil and bubble,
Till it o’re-run the stew: laws for all faults,
But faults so countenance’d, that the strong statutes
Stand like the forfeits in a barber’s shop,
As much in mock as mark.

Escal. Slander to the state!—Away with him to prison!

Ang. What can you vocifer against him, signior Lucio?

Is this the man that you did tell us of?

Lucio. ’Tis he, my lord.—Come hither, good-man bald-pate: do you know me?

Duke. I remember you, Sir, by the sound of your voice: I met you at the prison, in the absence of the duke.

Lucio. O, did you so? and do you remember what you said of the duke?
Duke. Most notably, Sir. Lucio. Do you so, Sir? And was the duke a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be? Duke. You must, Sir, change persons with me, ere you make that my report; you, indeed, spoke so of him; and much more, much worse. Lucio. O thou damnable fellow! Did not I pluck thee by the nose, for thy speeches? Duke. I protest, I love the duke as I love myself. Ang. Hark how the villain would close now, after his treasonable abuses. Enter. Such a fellow is not to be talk'd withal. — Away with him to prison!—Where is the provost?—Away with him to prison! Lay bolts enough upon him: let him speak no more.—Away with those gigots too, and with the other confederate companions! [The Provost lays hands on the Duke. Duke. Stay, Sir; stay awhile. Ang. What! resists he? Help him, Lucio. Lucio. Come, Sir; come, Sir; come, Sir; foh! Sir. Why, you half-pasted, lying rascal! you must be hooded, must you? show your knave's visage, with a pos to you! show your sheep-litting face, and be hanged an hour! Will'nt off! [Exit Lucio, provost, and attendants. Duke. Thou art the first knave that e'er made a duke.— First provost, let me bait these gentle three. — [To Lucio.] Sneak not away, Sir; for the friar and you Must have a word anon.—Lay hold on him. Lucio. This may prove worse than hanging. Duke. [To ESCALUS]. What have you spoke, I pardon; sit you down:— We'll borrow place of him. — [To ANGELO] Sir, by your leave. Hast thou or word, or wit, or impudence, That yet can do thee office? If thou hast, Rely upon it till my tale be heard, And hold no longer out. Ang. O my dread lord, I should be guiltier than my guiltiness, To think I can be undiscernible, When I perceive your grace, like power divine, Hath look'd upon my passes. Then, good prince, No longer session hold upon my shame, But let my trial be mine own confession; Immediate sentence then, andsequent death, Is all the grace I beg. Duke. Come hither, Mariana.— Say, wast thou e'er contracted to this woman? Ang. I was, my lord. [stately. Duke. Go take her hence, and marry her in. Do you the office, friar; which consummate, Return him here again.—Go with him, provost. Exeunt ANGELO, MARIANA, FRIAR PETER, and PROVOST. Enter. My lord, I am more amazed at his dis— Than at the strangeness of it. [Honour, Duke. Come hither, Isabel. Your friar is now your prince: as I was then Advertising and holy to your business, Not changing heart with habit, I am still Attorney'd at your service. Isab. O, give me pardon, That I, your vassal, have employ'd and pain'd Your unknown sovereignty! Duke. You are pardon'd, Isabel: And now, dear maid, be you as free to us. Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart; And you may marvel why I observe'd myself, Labouring to save his life, and would not rather Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power, Than let him so be lost. O most kind maid, It was the swift celerity of his death, Which I did think with slower foot came on, That brain'd my purpose: but, peace be with him! That life is better life, past fearing death, Than that which lives to fear. Make it your com- So happy is your brother. [fort, Isab. I do, my lord. Re-enter ANGELO, MARIANA, FRIAR PETER, and PROVOST. Duke. For this new-married man, approaching Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd [here, Your well-defended honour, you must pardon For Mariana's sake: but, as he adjur'd your brother, (Being criminal, in double violation Of sacred chastity, and of politic breach Thereon dependent, for your brother's life,) The very mercy of the law cries out Most audible, even from his proper tongue: "An Angelo for Claudia, death for death!" Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers leisure; Like doth quit like, and Measure still for Measure. Then, Angelo, thy fault's thus manifested: Which, though thou wouldst deny, denies thee van: We do condemn thee to the very block [stage: Where Claudia stoop'd to death, and with like Away with him! — [haste. — Marri. O, my most gracious lord! I hope you will not mock me with a husband. Duke. It is your husband mock'd you with a husband, Consenting to the safeguard of your honour. [band. I thought your marriage fit; else imputation, For that he knew you, might reproach your life, And choke your good to come. For his possessions, Although by confiscation they are ours, We do instate and widow you withal, To buy you a better husband. Marri. O, my dear lord! I crave no other, nor no better man. Duke. Never crave him: we are definitive. Marri. [Kneeling.] Gentle my liege, — Duke. You do but lose your labour. — [to you. Away with him to death! — [To Lucio.] Now, Sir, Marri. O, my good lord! — Sweet Isabel, take my part: Lend me your knees, and, all my life to come, I'll lend you all my life to do you service. Duke. Against all sense you do importune her: Should she kneel down in mercy of this fact, Her brother's ghost his paved bed would break, And take her hence in horror. — Marri. Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me: Hold up your hands, say nothing, — I'll speak all. They say best men are moulded out of nought; And, for the most, become much more the better For being a little bad: so may my husband. O, Isabel! will you not kneel a knee? Duke. He dies for Claudia's death. Isab. [Kneeling.] Most bounteous Sir, Look, if it please you, on this man condemn'd, As if my brother liv'd. I partly think, A due sincerity govern'd his deeds,
Till he did look on me: since it is so,
Let him not die. My brother had but justice,
In that he did the thing for which he died:
For Angelo,
His act did not o'take his bad intent;
And must be buried but as an intent
That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no subjects;
Intents but merely thoughts.

Duke. Merely, my lord.
Prov. Your suit is unprofitable; stand up, I say.—
I have bethought me of another fault,—
Provost, how came it Claudio was beheaded
At an unusual hour?

It was commanded so.

Duke. Had you a special warrant for the deed?
Prov. No, my good lord; it was by private message.

Duke. For which I do discharge you of your Give up your keys.

Prov. Pardon me, noble lord:
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not;
Yet did repent me, after more advice:
For testimony whereof, one in the prison,
That should by private order else have died,
I have resc'd alive.

Duke. What's he?

Prov. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I would thou hadst done so by Claudio.—
Go, fetch him hither; let me look upon him.

Escal. I am sorry, one so learned and so wise
As you, lord Angelo, have still appear'd,
Should slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood,
And lack of temper'd judgment afterward.

Ang. I am sorry that such sorrow I procure:
And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart,
That I crave death more willingly than mercy;
'Tis my deserving, and I do entreat it.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine?

Prov. This, my lord.

Duke. There was a friar told me of this man.—
Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul,
That apprehends no farther than this world,
And squar'st thy life according. Thou'rt condemned:
But, for those earthly faults, I quit them all;
And pray thee, take this mercy to provide
For better times to come.—Friar, advise him;
I leave him to your hand.—What muffled fellow's
that?

Prov. This is another prisoner that I say'd,
That should have died when Claudio lost his head;
As like almost to Claudio as himself.

[Unmuffles CLAUDIO.

---

Duke. [To ISABELLA.] If he be like your brother, for his sake
Is he pardoned; and, for your lovely sake,
Give me your hand, and say you will be mine,—
He is my brother too;—but faster time for that.
By this, lord Angelo perceives he's safe;
Methinks I see a quick'ning in his eye.—
Well, Angelo, your evil quits you well:
Look that you love your wife; her worth, worth
I find an apt remission in myself; [yours.]
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon.—

[To LUCIO.] You, sirrah, that knew me for a fool,
a coward,
One all of luxury, an ass, a madman;
Wherin have I so deserv'd of you,
That you extol me thus?

Lucio. 'Faith, my lord, I spoke it but according to the trick. If you will hang me for it, you may; but I had rather it would please you I might be whipped.

Duke. Whipp'd first, Sir, and hang'd after.—
Proclaim it, provost, round about the city,
If any woman's wrong'd by this lewd fellow,—
As I have heard him swear, himself, there's one Whom he begot with child,—let her appear,
And he shall marry her: the nuptial finish'd,
Let him be whipp'd and hang'd.

Lucio. I beseech your highness, do not marry me to a whore! Your highness said even now, I made you a duke: good my lord, do not recompense me in making me a cuckold.

Duke. Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry her.
Thy slanders I forgive; and therewithal
Remit thy other forfeits.—Take him to prison;
And see our pleasure herein executed.

Lucio. Marrying a punk, my lord, is pressing to death, whipping, and hanging.

Duke. Slandering a prince deserves it.—

[Exeunt Officers with LUCIO.

She, Claudio, that you wrong'd, look you restore.—
Joy to you, Mariana!—love her, Angelo:
I have confess'd her, and I know her virtue.—
Thanks, good friend Escalus, for thy much goodness:
There's more behind that is more gratulate.—
Thanks, provost, for thy care and secrecy:
We shall employ thee in a worthier place.—
Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's:—
Th' offence pardons itself.—Dear Isabel,
I have a motion much imports your good;
Wherefore if you'll a willing ear incline,
What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine.—
So, bring us to our palace; where we'll show
What's yet behind, that's meet you all should know.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE.—EPHESEUS.

ACT I.

Enter Duke, Ægeron, Gaoler, Officers, and other Attendants.

Ægeron. Proceed, Solinus, to procure my fall,
And by the doom of death end woes and all.

Duke. Merchant of Syracuse, plead no more.

I am not partial to infringe our laws:
The enmity and discord which of late
Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your duke
To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen,—
Who, wanting gilders to redeem their lives,
Have seal'd his rigorous statutes with their bloods,—
Excludes all pity from our threat'ning looks.
For, since the mortal and intestine jags
Twist thy seditious countrymen and us,
It hath in solemn synods been decreed,
Both by the Syracusans and ourselves,
To admit no traffic to our adverse towns:
Nay, more, if any, born at Ephesus,
Be seen at Syracusan marts and fairs;
Again, if any Syracusan born
Come to the isle of Ephesus, he dies,
His goods confiscate to the duke's dispose,
Unless a thousand marks be levied,
To quit the penalty and to ransom him.
Thy substance, valu'd at the highest rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred marks;
Therefore, by law thou art condemn'd to die.

Ægeron. Yet this my comfort,—when your words are done,
My woes end likewise with the evening sun.

Duke. Well, Syracusan, say, in brief, the cause
Why thou departest from thy native home,
And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus.

Ægeron. A heavier task could not have been imposed,
Than I to speak my griefs unspeakable:
Yet, that the world may witness that my end
Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,
I'll utter what my sorrow gives me leave.

In Syracuse was I born; and wed

Unto a woman, happy but for me,
And by me too, had not our hap been bad.
With her I liv'd in joy: our wealth increas'd
By prosperous voyages I often made
To Epidamnum; till my factor's death,
And the great care of goods at random left,
Drew me from kind embracings of my spouse:
From whom my absence was not six months old,
Before herself—almost at fainting under
The pleasing punishment that women bear—
Had made provision for her following me,
And soon and safe arrived where I was.
There had she not been long, but she became
A joyful mother of two goodly sons;
And, which was strange, the one so like the other,
As could not be distinguish'd but by names.
That very hour, and in the self-same inn,
A poor mean woman was delivered
Of such a burden, male twins, both alike.
Those,—for their parents were exceeding poor,—
I bought, and brought up to attend my sons.
My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys,
Made daily motions for our home return:
Unwilling I agreed. Also, too soon we came aboard!
A league from Epidamnum had we sail'd,
Before the always wind-obeying deep
Gave any tragic instance of our harm:
But longer did we not retain much hope;
For what obscured light the heavens did grant,
Did but convey unto our fearful minds
A doubtful warrant of immediate death;
Which, though myself would gladly have embrac'd,
Yet the incessant weepings of my wife,
Weeping before for what she saw must come,
And pitious plainings of the pretty babes,
That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
Forc'd me to seek delays for them and me.
And this it was,—for other means was none.
The sailors sought for safety by our boat,
And left the ship, then sinking-ripe, to us.
My wife, more careful for the latter-born,
Had fasten'd him unto a small spare mast,
THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

[ACT I.]

Such as sea-faring men provide for storms:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whilst I had been like heedful of the other.
The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fix'd,
Fasted ourselves at either end the mast;
And floating straight, obedient to the stream,
Were carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
At length, the sun, gazin upon the earth,
Dispairs'd those vappours that offended us;
And, by the benefit of his wish'd light,
The seas wax'd calm, and we discovered
Two ships from far making amain to us;
Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this:
But ere they came,—O, let me say no more!
Gather the sequel by that went before.

Duke. Nay, forward, old man; do not break off
For we may pity, though not pardon thee. [so;]

Æge. O, had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthy term'd them merciless to us!
For, ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,
We were encounter'd by a mighty rock;
Which being violently borne upon,
Our helpful ship was splitt in the midst;
So that, in this unjust divorce of us,
Fortune had left to both of us alike
What to delight in, what to sorrow for.
Her part, poor soul! seeming as burdens
With lesser weight, but not with lesser woe,
Was carried with more speed before the wind;
And in our sight they three were taken up
By fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length, another ship had seiz'd on us;
And, knowing whom it was their hap to save,
Gave healthful welcome to their shipwreck'd guests;
And would have refit the fishers of their prey,
Had not their bark been very slow of sail,
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.—
Thus have you heard me sever'd from my bliss;
That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
To tell sad stories of my own mishaps.

Duke. And, for the sake of them thou sorrowst for,
Do me the favour to dilate at full
What hath befall'n of them, and thee, till now.

Æge. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest care,
At eighteen years became inquestive
After his brother; and importun'd me,
That his attendant—for his case was like,
Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name—
Might bear him company in the quest of him:
Whom whilst I labour'd of a love to see,
I hazarded the loss of whom I lov'd.
Five summers have I spent in farthest Greece,
Roaming clean through the bounds of Asia;
And, coasting homeward, came to Ephesus,
Hopeless to find, yet loth to leave unsought
Or that, or any place that harbours men.
But here must end the story of my life;
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my travels warrant me they live.

Duke. Hopeless Ægeon, whom the fates have mark'd
To bear the extremity of dire mishap.
Now, trust me, were it not against our laws,
Against my crown, my oath, my dignity,—
Which princes, would they, may not dissuade,—
My soul should sue as advocate for thee.

But though thou art adjudged to the death,
And passed sentence may not be recall'd
But to our honour's great dispensation,
Yet will I favour thee in what I can:—
Therefore, merchant, I'll limit thee this day,
To seek thy help by beneficial help.
Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus;
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sum,
And live; if no, then thou art doom'd to die.
Gaoer, take him to thy custody.

Gal. I will, my lord.

Æge. Hopeless, and helpless, doth Ægeon wend,
But to procrastinate his lifeless end. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A public Place.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse, Dromio of Syracuse, and First Merchant.

First Mer. Therefore, give out you are of Epidamnum.

Lest that your goods too soon be confiscate.
This very day, a Syracusan merchant
Is apprehended for arrival here;
And, not being able to buy out his life,
According to the statute of the town,
Dies ere the weary sun set in the west.
There is your money that I had to keep;

Ant. S. Go bear it to the Centaur, where we host,
And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee.
Within this hour it will be dinner-time;
Till that, I'll view the manners of the town,
Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings,
And then return, and sleep within mine inn;
For with long travel I am still and weary.

Get thee away.

Dro. S. Many a man would take you at your word,
And go indeed, having so good a mean— [Exeit.

Ant. S. A trusty villain, Sir; that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholy,
Lightens my humour with his merry jests.
What, will you walk with me about the town,
And then go to my inn, and dine with me?

First Mer. I am invited, Sir; to certain merchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit;
I crave your pardon. Soon at five o'clock,
Please you, I'll meet with you upon the mart,
And afterward consort you till bed-time:
My present business calls me from you now.

Ant. S. Farewell till then: I will go lose myself,
And wander up and down to view the city.

First Mer. Sir, I commend you to your own content. [Exeit.

Ant. S. He that commends me to mine own con-
Commends me to the thing I cannot get. [tent,
I to the world am like a drop of water,
That in the ocean seeks another drop;
Who, falling there to find his fellow forth,
Unseen, inquestive, confounds himself;
So I, to find a mother, and a brother,
In quest of them, unhappy, lose myself.—
Here comes the almanack of my true date.—

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.

What now? How chance thou art return'd so soon?

Dro. E. Return'd so soon! rather approach'd too late;
The caupon burns, the pig falls from the spit;
The clock hath stricken twelve upon the bell,—
My mistress maded it one upon my cheek;
She is so hot, because the meas cold;
THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

ACT II.

Enter ADONIS and LUCIANA.

Adr. Neither my husband, nor the slave return'd, That in such haste I sent to seek his master! Sure, Luciana, it is two o'clock.

Luc. Perhaps some merchant hath invited him, And from the mart he's somewhere gone to dinner. Good sister, let us dine, and never fret:
A man is master of his liberty:
Time is their master; and, when they see time, They'll go or come: if so be, patient, sister.

Adr. Why should their liberty than ours be more?

Luc. Because their business still lies out o' door.

Adr. Luciana, how wretchedly he carry's his will.

Luc. O, know he is the bridle of your will.

Adr. There's none but asses will be bridled so.

Luc. Why, heartstrong liberty is loath'd with woe.

There's nothing, situate under heaven's eye, But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky:
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowls, Are their males' subjects, and at their controls:
Men, more divine, the masters of all these.

Luc. Lords of the wide world, and wild wat'ry seas, Iniuated with intellectual sense and soul,
Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls,
Are masters to their females and their lords:
Then, let your will attend on their accord.

Adr. This servitude makes you to keep unwed.

Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage-bed.

Adr. But, were you wedded, you would bear some sway?

Luc. Ere I learn love, I'll practise to obey.

Adr. How if your husband start some other where?

Luc. Till he come home again, I would forbear.

Adr. Patience unmoved, no marvel though she pause; They can be nuck, that have no other cause. A wretched soul, bruis'd with adversity, We bid be quiet when we hear it cry; But were we burden'd with like weight of pain, As much, or more, we should ourselves complain: So thou, that hast no unkind mate to grieve thee, With urging helpless patience wouldst relieve me; But, if thou live to see like right bereft, This fool-beeg'd patience in thee will be left.

Luc. Well, I will marry one day, but to try—

Here comes your man; now is your husband high.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesius.

Adr. Say, is your tardy master now at hand?

Dro. E. Nay, he is at two hands with me, and that my two ears can witness.

Adr. Say, didst thou speak with him? Know'st thou his mind?

Dro. E. Ay, ay, he serve him so, he takes it ill.

Adr. But, were you wedded, you would bear some sway?

Luc. Well, I will marry one day, but to try— Here comes your man; now is your husband high.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesius.

Dro. E. What mean you, Sir? for God's sake, hold your hands!

Nay, you will not, Sir, I'll take my heels.

Adr. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too

Dro. E. Why, mistress, sure my master is horned.

Adr. Horn-mad, thou villain!
THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

ACT II.

Dro. E. I mean not cuckold-mad;
But, sure, he is stark mad.
When I desir’d him to come home to dinner,
He ask’d me for a thousand marks in gold:
" ’Tis dinner-time," quoth I; " ’My gold," quoth he;
"Your meat doth burn," quoth I; " ’My gold," quoth he;
"Will you come home?" quoth I; " ’My gold," quoth he;
"Where is the thousand marks I gave thee, villain?"
"The pig," quoth I; " ’Is burn’d;" " ’My gold," quoth he;
"Hang up thy mistres; I know not thy mistres; out on thy mistres!"
Luc. Quoth who?
Dro. E. Quoth my master:
"I know," quoth he, "no house, no wife, no mistres; so that my errand, due unto my tongue, I thank him, I bear home upon my shoulders; for, in conclusion, he did beat me there. Home."
Adr. Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him.
Dro. E. Go back again, and be new beaten home.
For God’s sake, send some other messenger!
Adr. Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.
Luc. And he will bless that cross with other.
Between you, I shall have a holy head. [beating.]
Adr. Hence, prating peasant! fetch thy master home.
Dro. E. Am I so round with you, as you with me, that like a foot-ball you do spurn me thus?
You spurn me hence, and he will spurn me hither:
If I last in this service, you must case me in leather.
[Exeunt.
Luc. Fie, how impatience low’th in your face!
Adr. His company must do his minons grace,
While I at home starve for a merry look.
Hath homely age th’ alluring beauty took
From my poor cheek? then, he hath wasted it: Are my discourses dull? barren my wit?
If volatile and sharp discourse be maerd, Unkindness blunts it more than marble hard: Do their gay vestments his affections bait?
That’s not my fault,—he’s master of my state:
What ruins are in me that can be found?
By him not ruind? then is he the ground
Of my defeatures.
My decayed fair
A sunny look of his would soon repair:
But, too unruly deer, he breaks the pales,
And feeds from home: poor I am but his stale.
Luc. Self-harming jealousy!—fie! beat it hence.
Adr. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dis-
I know his eye doth homage other where, [pense.
Or else, what lets it but he would be here?
Sister, you know he promis’d me a chain:
Would that she, alone he would detain,
So he would keep fair quarter with his bed!
I see, the jewel best enamelled
Will lose his beauty: and though gold hides still, That others touch, yet often touching will Wear gold: and so no man that hath a name, But falsehood and corruption doth it shame.
Since that my beauty cannot please his eye, I’ll take what’s left away, and weep but die.
Luc. How many fond fools serve mad jealousy! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter ANTIPHILUS of Syracuse.

Ant. S. The gold I gave to Dromio is laid up
Safe at the Centaur; and the heculeful slave
Is wander’d forth, in care to seek me out.
By computation and mine host’s report,
I could not speak with Dromio since at first
I sent him from the mart.—See, here he comes.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

How now, Sir? is your merry humour alter’d?
As you love strokes, so jest with me again.
You know no Centaur? You receiv’d no gold?
Your mistres sent to have me home to dinner?
My house was at the Phoenix! Wast thou mad,
That thus so madly thou didst answer me? [word?
Dro. S. What answer, Sir? when spake I such a
Ant. S. Even now, even here, not half-an-hour since.
Dro. S. I did not see you since you sent me hence,
Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.
Ant. S. Villain, thou didst deny the gold’s receipt,
And toldst me of a mistres, and a dinner;
For which, I hope, thou felt’st I was displeas’d.
Dro. S. I am glad to see you in this merry vein:
What means this jest? I pray you, master, tell me.
Ant. S. Yes, dost thou jeer, and flout me in the teeth?
Think’st thou I jest? Hold, take thou that, and that.
[Beating him.
Dro. S. Hold, Sir, for God’s sake! now your jest.
Upon what bargain do you give it me? [is earnest.
Ant. S. Because that I familiarly sometimes
Do use you for my fool, and chat with you,
Your sauciness will jest upon my love,
And make a common of my serious hours.
When the sun shines let foolish gnat make sport,
But creep in crannies when he hides his beams.
If you will jest with me, know my asppest,
And fashion your demeanour to my looks,
Or I will beat this method in your sconce.
Dro. S. Sconce, call you it? so you would leave buttering, I had rather have it a head: an you use these blows long, I must get a sconce for my head, and ensconce it too; or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. But, I pray, Sir, why am I beaten?
Ant. S. Dost thou not know?
Dro. S. Nothing, Sir, but that I am beaten.
Ant. S. Shall I tell you why?
Dro. S. Ay, Sir, and wherefore; for they say every why hath a wherefore.
Ant. S. Why, first,—for flouting me; and then, wherefore,—for urging it the second time to me.
Dro. S. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season.
When in the why and the wherefore is neither rhyme nor reason?—
Well, Sir, I thank you.
Ant. S. Thank me, Sir! for what?
Dro. S. Marry, Sir, for this something that you gave me for nothing.
Ant. S. I’ll make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But say, Sir, is it dinner-time?
Dro. S. No, Sir: I think the meat wants that I have.
Ant. S. In good time, Sir; what’s that?
Dro. S. Basting.
Ant. S. Well, Sir, then ’twill be dry.
Dro. S. If it be, Sir, I pray you eat none of it.
Ant. S. Your reason?
Dro. S. Lest it make you cholerical, and purchase me another dry basting.
SCENE II.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

Ant. S. Well, Sir, learn to jest in good time:
there's a time for all things.

Dro. S. I durst have denied that, before you were so choleric.

Ant. S. By what rule, Sir?

Dro. S. Marry, Sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of father Time himself.

Ant. S. Let's hear it.

Dro. S. There's no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by nature.

Ant. S. May he not do it by fine and recovery?

Dro. S. Yes, to pay a fine for a periwig, and recover the lost hair of another man.

Ant. S. Why is Time such a niggard of hair, being, as if it were a plentiful an excrement?

Dro. S. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts: and what he hath scanned men in hair, he hath given them in wit.

Ant. S. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.

Dro. S. Not a man of those, but he hath the wit to lose his hair.

Ant. S. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers: without wit.

Dro. S. The plainer dealer, the sooner lost: yet he loseth it in a kind of jollity.

Ant. S. For what reason?

Dro. S. For two: and sound ones too.

Ant. S. Nay, not sound, I pray you.

Dro. S. Sure ones, then.

Ant. S. Nay, not sure, in a thing failing.

Dro. S. Certain ones, then.

Ant. S. Name them.

Dro. S. The one, to save the money that he spend-in trimming; the other, that at dinner they should not drop in his porridge.

Ant. S. You would all this time have proved there is no time for all things.

Dro. S. Marry, and did, Sir; namely, no time to recover hair lost by nature.

Ant. S. But your reason was not substantial: why there is no time to recover.

Dro. S. Thus I medit it: Time himself is bald, and therefore, to the world's end, will have bald followers.

Ant. S. I knew 'twould be a bald conclusion.

But soft! who waits us yonder?

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ay, ay, Antipholus, look strange, and frown:
Some other mistress hath thy sweet aspect;
I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.
The time was once, when thou ungr'd wouldst vow
That never words were music to thine ear,
That never object pleasing in thine eye,
That never touch well welcome to thy hand,
That never meat sweet-savour'd in thy taste,
Unless I spake, or look'd, or touch'd, or carv'd to thine.

How comes it now, my husband, O! how comes it,
That thou art then estranged from thyself?
Thyself I call it, being strange to me,
That, undividable, incorporeous,
Am better than thy dear self's better part.
Ah, do not tear away thyself from me!

For know, my love, as easy may'st thou fall
A drop of water in the breaking gulf,
And take unmingled thence that drop again,
Without addition or diminishing,
As take from me thyself, and not me too.
How dearly would it touch thee to the quick,
Shouldst thou but hear I was licentious,
And that this body, consecrate to thee,
By rufian lust should be contaminate!
Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurn at me,
And hurl the name of husband in my face,
And tear the stain'd skin off my harlot-brow,
And from my false hand cut the wedding-ring,
And break it with a deep-divorcing vow?
I know thou canst; and therefore, see thou do it.
I am possess'd with an adulterate blot:
My blood is mingled with the crime of lust:
For if we two be one, and thou play false,
I do digest the poison of thy flesh,
Being strumpetered by thy contagion.
Keep, then, fair league and truce with thy true bed;
I live unclean'd, thou undishonoured.

Ant. S. Plead you to me, fair dame? I know you
In Ephesus I am but two hours old,
[not:
As strange unto your town as to your talk;
Who, every word by all my wit being scannd,'d,
Want wit in all one word to understand.

Luc. Fie, brother: how the world is chang'd with you!

When were you wont to use my sister thus?
She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Ant. S. By Dromio?

Dro. S. By me?

Adr. By thee; and this thou didst return from
That he did buffet thee, and, in his blows, [him,—
Denied my house for his, me for his wife.

Ant. S. Did you converse, Sir, with this gentlewoman?
What is the course and drift of your compact?

Dro. S. I, Sir! I never saw her till this time.

Ant. S. Villain, thou liest; for even her very Didst thou deliver to me on the mart.

[words
Dro. S. I never spake with her in all my life.

Ant. S. How can she thus, then, call us by our Unless it be by inspiration?

Adr. How ill agrees it with your gravity
To counterfeit thus grossly with thy slave,
Abetting him to thwart me in my mood!

Be it me wrong, you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.
Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine:
Thou art an em'lin, my husband,—I a vine,
Whose weakness, married to thy stronger state,
Makes me with thy strength to communicate:
If aught possess thee from me, it is dross,
Usurping ivy, briar, or idle moss;
Who, all for want of pruning, with intrusion
Infest thy sap, and live on thy confusion.

Ant. S. [Aside.] To me she speaks: she moves me for her theme:
What, was I married to her in my dream?
Or sleep I now, and think I hear all this?
What error drives our eyes and ears amiss?
Until I know this sure uncertainty,
I'll entertain the offer'd fallacy.

Luc. Dromio, go bid the servants spread for dinner.

Dro. S. [Aside.] O, for my beard! I cross me for a sinner.

This is the fairy land: O spite of spites!
We talk with goblins, owls, and elvish sprites:
If we obey them not, this will ensue,—
They'll suck our breath, or pinch us black and blue.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter ANTHIPOLUS of Ephesus, DROMIO of Ephesus, ANGELO, and BALTHAZAR.

ANT. E. Good signior Angelo, you must excuse us all;
My wife is a witch, when I keep not hours.
Say that I linger'd with you at your shop
To see the making of her carkanet;
And that to-morrow you will bring it home.
But how a villain, that would face me down;
He met me on the mart, and that I beat him,
And charg'd him with a thousand marks in gold.
And that I did deny my wife and house.—
Thou drunkard, thou, what didst thou mean by this?

DRO. E. Say what you will, Sir, but I know what I know;
That you beat me at the mart, I have your hand to show:
If the skin were parchment, and the blows you gave were ink,
Your own hand-writing would tell you what I think.

ANT. E. I think thou art an ass.

DRO. E. Marry, so doth it appear
By the wrongs I suffer, and the blows I bear.
I should kick, being kick'd; and, being at that pass,
You would keep from my heels, and beware of an ass.

ANT. E. You are sad, signior Balthazar: pray God, our cheer
May answer your good-will, and your good welcome here.

BAL. I hold your dainties cheap, Sir, and your welcome dear.
SCENE II.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

Luc. [Within.] What needs all that, and a pair of stocks in the town?

Adr. [Within.] Who is that at the door, that keeps all this noise?

Dro. S. [Within.] By my troth, your town is troubled with unruly boys.

Ant. E. Are you there, wife? you might have come before.

Adr. [Within.] Your wife, sir knave! go, get you from the door.

Dro. E. If you went in pain, master, this knave would go sore.

Ang. Here is neither cheer, Sir, nor welcome: we would fain have either.

Bal. In debating which was best, we shall part with neither.

Dro. E. They stand at the door, master; bid them welcome hither.

Ant. E. There is something in the wind, that we cannot get in.

Dro. E. You would say so, master, if your garments were thin.

Your cake here is warm within; you stand here in the cold:

It would make a man mad as a buck, to be so bought and sold.

Ant. E. Go fetch me something: I'll break ope the gate.

Dro. S. [Within.] Break any breaking here: and I'll break your knave's pate.

Dro. E. A man may break a word with you, Sir; and words are but wind:

Ay, and break it in your face, so he break it not by.

Dro. S. [Within.] It seems thou want'st break ing: out upon thee, hind?

Dro. E. Here's too much "out upon thee!" I pr'ythee, let me in.

Dro. S. [Within.] Ay, when fowls have no feathers, and fish have no fin.

Ant. E. Well, I'll break in:—go borrow me a crow.

Dro. E. A crow without feather,—master, mean you so?

For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without a feather:

If a crow help us in, sirrah, we'll pluck a crow together.

Ant. E. Go, get thee gone; fetch me an iron crow.

Bal. Have patience, Sir; O, let it not be so! Herein you war against your reputation, and draw within the compass of suspect. Th' undevi loped honour of your wife. Once this,—Your long experience of her wisdom, Her sober virtue, years, and modesty, Plead on her part some cause to you unknown; And doubt not, Sir, but she will well excuse Why at this time the doors are made against you. Be rul'd by me: depart in patience, And let us to the Tiger all to dinner; And about evening come yourself alone To know the reason of this strange restraint. If by strong hand you offer to break in, Now in the stirring passage of the day, A vulgar comment will be made of it; And that supposed by the common rout, Against your too unquenched estimation, That may with foul intrusion enter in, And dwell upon your grave when you are dead:

For slander lives upon succession, For ever housed, where it gets possession.

Ant. E. You have prevail'd: I will depart in quiet, And, in despite of mirth, mean to be merry. I know a wench of excellent discourse, Pretty and witty; wild, and yet too, gentle: There will ye dine. This woman that I mean, My wife—but, I protest, without desert— Hitherto oftentimes upbraided me withal: To her will we to dinner.—Get you home, And fetch the chain; by this, I know, 'tis made: Bring it, I pray you, to the Porcupine; For there's the house: that chain will I bestow —Be it for nothing but to spite my wife— Upon mine hostess there: good Sir, make haste. Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me, I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'll disman me.

Ang. I'll meet you at that place, some hour hence. Ant. E. Do so. This jest shall cost me some expense. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Luciana and Antipholus of Syracuse.

Luc. And may it be that you have quite forgot A husband's office? Shall, Antipholus, Even in the spring of love, thy love-springs rot? Shall love, in building, grow so ruinous? If you did wed my sister for her wealth, Then, for her wealth's sake, use her with more kindness:

Or, if you like elsewhere, do it by stealth; Muffle thy false love with some show of blind-

Let not my sister read it in your eye; [ness:

Be not thy tongue thy own shame's orator; Look sweet, speak fair, become disloyalty; Apparel vice like virtue's harbinger; Bear a fair presence, though your heart be tainted; Teach sin the carriage of a holy saint; Be secret-false; what need she be acquainted? What simple truth brags of his own attain? 'Tis double wrong, to truant with your bed, And let her read it in thy looks at board: Shame hath a bastard fame, well managed; Ill deeds are doubled with an evil word. Alas, poor women! make us but believe, Being compact of credit, that you love us; Though others have the arm, show us the sleeve; We in your motion turn, and you may move us. Then, gentle brother, get you in again; Comfort my lady, cheat her, call her wife: 'Tis holy sport to be a little vain, When the sweet breath of flattery conquers strife. Ant. S. Sweet mistress,—what your name is else, a I know not.

Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine,— Less in your knowledge and your grace you show not Than our earth's wonder; more than earth divine, Teach me, dear creature, how to think and speak; Lay open to my earthy gross conceit, Smoother'd in errors, feeble, shallow, weak, The folded meaning of your words' deceit, Against my soul's pure truth why labour you To make it wander in an unknown field? Are you a god? would you create me new? Transform me, then, and to your power I'll yield, But if that I am I, then well I know Your weeping sister is no wife of mine,
THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

ACT IV.

Norr to her bed no homage do I owe:
Far more, far more, to you do I decline.
O, train me not, sweet mermaid, with thy note,
To drown me in thy sister flood of tears:
Sing, syren, for thyself, and I will dote:
Spread o'er the silver waves thy golden hairs,
And as a bed I'll take thee, and there lie;
And, in that glorious supposition, think
He gains by deaths, that hath such means to die:
Let love, being light, be drowned if she sink!
Luc. What! are you mad, that you do reason so?
Ant. S. Not mad, but mazed; how, I do not know.
Luc. It is a fault that springeth from your eye.
Ant. S. For gazing on your beams, fair sun,
Being by.
Luc. Gaze where you should, and that will clear
Your sight.
Ant. S. As good to wink, sweet love, as look on night.
Luc. Why call you me love? call my sister so.
Ant. S. Thy sister's sister.
Luc. That's my sister.

Ant. S. No;
It is thyself, mine own self's better part,
Mine eye's clear eye, my dear heart's dearer heart,
My food, my fortune, and my sweet hope's aim,
My sole earth's heaven, and my heaven's claim.
Luc. All this my sister is, or else should be.
Ant. S. Call thy sister sister, sweet, for I am thee.
Thee will I love, and with thee lead my life:
Thee hast no husband yet, nor I no wife.
Give me thy hand.
Luc. O, soft, Sir! hold you still;
I'll fetch my sister, to get her good will. [Exit.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse, hastily.

Ant. S. Why, how now, Dromio! where run'st thou so fast?
Dro. S. Do you know me, Sir? am I Dromio? am I your man? am I myself?
Ant. S. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thyself.
Dro. S. I am an ass, I am a woman's man, and besides myself.
Ant. S. What woman's man? and how besides thyself?
Dro. S. Marry, Sir, besides myself, I am due to a woman; one that claims me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.
Ant. S. What claim lays she to thee?
Dro. S. Marry, Sir, such claim as you would lay to your horse; and she would have me as a beast: not that, I being a beast, she would have me; but that she, being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me.
Ant. S. What is she?
Dro. S. A very reverend body; ay, such a one as a man may not speak of; without he say, sir-reverence.
Luc. Have but lean luck in the match, and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.
Ant. S. How dost thou mean,—a fat marriage?
Dro. S. Marry, Sir, she's the kitchen-wench, and all grease; and I know not what use to put her to, but to make a lamp of her, and run from her by her own light. I warrant, her rags, and the tallow in them, will burn a Poland winter: if she lives till doomsday, she'll burn a week longer than the whole world.
Ant. S. What complexion is she of?

Dro. S. Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing like so clean kept: for why she sweats, a man may go over shoes in the grime of it.
Ant. S. That's a fault that water will mend.
Dro. S. No, Sir, 'tis in grain; Noah's flood could not do it.
Ant. S. What's her name?
Dro. S. Nell, Sir; but her name and three quarters,—that is, an ell and three quarters,—will not measure her from hip to hip.
Ant. S. Then she bears some breadth?
Dro. S. No longer from head to foot, than from hip to hip: she is spherical, like a globe; I could find out countries in her.
Ant. S. In what part of her body stands Ireland?
Dro. S. Marry, Sir, in her buttocks: I found it out by the bogs.
Ant. S. Where Scotland?
Dro. S. I found it by the barrenness; hard in the palm of the hand.
Ant. S. Where France?
Dro. S. In her forehead; armed and revolting, making war against her heir.
Ant. S. Where England?
Dro. S. I looked for the chalky cliffs, but I could find no whiteness in them; but I guess, it stood in her chin, by the salt rheum that ran between France and it.
Ant. S. Where Spain?
Dro. S. Faith, I saw it not; but I felt it hot in her breath.
Ant. S. Where America, the Indies?
Dro. S. O, Sir, upon her nose, all o'er embellished with rubies, carbuncles, sapphires, declining their rich aspect to the hot breath of Spain, who sent whole armadas of caracks to be ballast at her nose.
Ant. S. Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?
Dro. S. O, Sir, I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge, or diviner, laid claim to me; call'd me Dromio; swore I was assured to her; told me what privy marks I had about me, as the mark of my shoulder, the mole in my neck, the great wart on my left arm, that I, amazed, ran from her as a witch:
And, I think if my breast had not been made of faith, and my heart of steel,
She had transform'd me to a curtail-dog, and made me turn it the wheel.
Ant. S. Go hie thee presently, post to the royal:
As if the wind blow any way from shore,
I will not harbour in this town to-night:
If any bark put forth, come to the mart,
Where I will walk till thou return to me.
If every one know none, and we know none,
'Tis time, I think, to trudge, pack, and be gone.
Dro. S. As from a bear a man would run for life,
So fly I from her that would be my wife. [Exit.
Ant. S. There's none but witches do inhabit here;
And therefore 'tis high time that I were hence.
She that doth call me husband, even my soul
Doth for a wife abhor: but her fair sister,
Possess'd with such a gentle sovereign grace,
Of such enchanting presence and discourse,
Hath almost made me traitor to myself:
But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong,
I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

Enter Angello.

Ang. Master Antipholus.—
Ant. S. Ay, that's my name.
THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.

_Escape Second Merchant, Angelo, and an Officer._

_Sr. Mer._ You know since Pentecost the sun is
And since I have not much import to you; [يعة,
Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
To Persia, and want gilders for my voyage:
Therefore make present satisfaction,
Or I shall attach you by this officer.
_Ang._ Even just the sum that I do owe to your,
Is growing to me by Antipholus;
And, in the instant that I met with you,
He had of me a chain: at five o'clock
I shall receive the money for the same.
Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house,
I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.
_Off. That's labour may you save: see where he comes._

_Enter ANTHIPOLUS of Ephesus and DROMIO of Ephesus._

_Ant. E._ While I do go to the goldsmith’s house, go
And buy a rope’s end: that will I bestow [Ishu
Among my wife and her confederates,
For locking me out of my doors by day,—
But soft, I see the goldsmith.—Get thee gone;
Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.
_Dro. E._ I buy a thousand pound a-year! I buy a rope! [Exit.

_Ant. E._ A man is well holp up that trusts to
I promised your presence and the chain; [you:
But neither chain nor goldsmith came to me.
Belike, you thought our love would last too long,
If it were chand’l’ger together, and therefore came not.
_Ang._ Saving your merry humour, here’s the note
How much your chain weight to the utmost carrat,
The fineness of the gold, and chargeful fashion,
Which doth amount to three odd ducats more
Than I stand debted to this gentleman;
I pray you, see him presently discharge’d,
For he is bound to sea, and stays but for it.

_Ant. E._ I am not furnish’d with the present money;
Besides, I have some business in the town.
Good signior, take the stranger to my house,
And with you take the chain, and bid my wife
Disburse the sum on the receipt thereof:
Perchance I will be there as soon as you.
_Ang._ Then, you will bring the chain to her yourself?
_Ant. E._ No; hear it with you, lest I come not time enough.
_Ang._ Well, Sir, I will. Have you the chain about you?
_Ant. E._ An if I have not, Sir, I hope you have;
Or else you may return without your money.
_Ang._ Nay, come, I pray you, Sir, give me the chain:
Both wind and tide stay for this gentleman,
And I, to blame, have held him here too long.
_Ant. E._ Good lord! you use this daintiness, to excuse
Your breach of promise to the Porcupine.
I should have chid you for not bringing it,
But, like a swine, you first begin to brawl.
_Sr. Mer._ The hour steals on; I pray you, Sir, despatch.
_Ang._ You hear how he importunes me: the chain—
_Ant. E._ Why, give it to my wife, and fetch your money.
_Ang._ Come, come, you know I gave it you even now.
Either send the chain, or send me some token.
_Ant. E._ Fie! now you run this humour out of breath.
Come, where’s the chain! I pray you, let me see it.
_Sr. Mer._ My business cannot brook this daintiness.
Good Sir, say where you’ll answer me, or no;
If not, I’ll leave him to the officer.
_Ant. E._ I answer you! what should I answer
you?
_Ant. E._ The money that you owe me for the chain.
_Ant. E._ I owe you none till I receive the chain.
_Ang._ You know I gave it you half an hour since.
_Ant. E._ You gave me none: you wrong me much to say so.
_Ang._ You wrong me more, Sir, in denying it:
Consider how it stands upon my credit.
_Sr. Mer._ Well, officer, arrest him at my suit.
_Off._ I do— and charge you in the duke’s name to obey me.
_Ang._ This touches me in reputation.—
Either consent to pay this sum for me,
Or I attach you by this officer.
_Ant. E._ Consent to pay thee that I never had!
 Arrest me, foolish fellow, if thou dar’st.
_Ang._ Here is thy fee; arrest him, officer.—
I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorn me so apparently.
_Off._ I do arrest you, Sir: you hear the suit.
_Ant. E._ I do obey thee till I give thee bail. —
But, sirrah, you shall buy this sport as dear,
As all the mischief in your shop will answer.
_Ang._ Sir, Sir, I shall have law in Ephesus,
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

_Enter DROMIO of Syracuse._

_Dro. S._ Master, there is a bark of Epidamnum
That stays but till her owner comes aboard,
And then, Sir, she bears away. Our fraughtsege, Sir, I have convey'd aboard; and I have bought The oil, the balsamum, and aqua vitae. The ship is in her trim; the merry wind Blows fair from land: they stay for naught at all But for their owner, master, and yourself.

Ant. E. How now! a madman? Why, thou peevish sheep,

What ship of Epidamnum stays for me?

Dro. S. A ship you sent me to, to hire waftage.

Ant. E. Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope;

And told thee to what purpose, and what end.

Dro. S. You sent me for a rope's end as soon:

You sent me to the bay, Sir, for a bark.

Ant. E. I will debate this matter at more leisure,

And teach your ears to list me with more heed.

To Adriana, villain, hire thee straight:

Give her this key, and tell her, in the desk

That's cover'd o'th' with Turkish tapestry,

There is a purse of Ducats; let her send it:

Tell her I am arrested in the street,

And that shall bail me; hire thee, slave, begone.—

On, officer to prison till it come.

[Exeunt Sec. Merchant, Angelo, Officer, and Ant. E.

Dro. S. To Adriana! that is where we din'd,

Where Dowesabel did claim me for her husband:

She is too big, I hope, for me to compass.

Thither I must, although against my will,

For servants must their masters' minds fulfill.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—A Room in the House of ANTIPholus of Ephesus.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ah, Luciana, did he tempt thee so?

Might'st thou perceive austerely in his eye

That he did plead in earnest, yea or no?

Look'd he or red, or pale, or sad, or merry?

What observation mad'st thou, in this case,

Of his heart's meteors tilting in his face?

Luc. First he denied you had in him no right.

Adr. He meant, he did me none; the more my spite.

Luc. Then swore he, that he was a stranger here.

Adr. And true he swore, though yet forsworn he were.

Luc. Then pleaded I for you.

Adr. And what said he?

Luc. That love I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me.

Adr. With what persuasion did he tempt thy well?

Luc. With words, that in an honest suit might move.

First, he did praise my beauty; then, my speech.

Adr. Didst speak him fair?

Luc. Have patience, I beseech.

Adr. I cannot, nor I will not, hold me still;

My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his will.

He is deform'd, crooked, old, and sere,

Ill-fac'd, worse bodied, shapeless everywhere;

Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkind;

Stigmatic in making, worse in mind.

Luc. Who would be jealous, then, of such a one?

No evil lost is wall'd when it is gone.

Adr. Ah, but I think him better than I say,

And yet would herein others' eyes were worse.

Far from her nest the lapwing cries away:

My heart prays for him, though my tongue do curse.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Here, go; the desk, the purse! sweet, now, make haste.

Luc. How hast thou lost thy breath?

Dro. S. By running fast.

Adr. Where is thy master, Dromio? is he well?

Dro. S. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worse than

A devil in an everlasting garment hath him; [hell.

One whose hard heart is button'd up with steel;

A fiend, a fairy, pitiless and rough;

A wolf, nay, worse, a fellow all in buff;

A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that counter-mends

The passages of alleys, creeks, and narrow lands;

A hound that runs counter, and yet draws dry-foot

well;

One that before the judgment, carries poor souls to hell.

Adr. Why, man, what is the matter?

Dro. S. I do not know the matter: he is 'rested on the case.

Adr. What, is he arrested? tell me at whose suit.

Dro. S. I know not at whose suit he is arrested

well;

But he's in a suit of buff which 'rested him, that can

I tell.

Will you send him, mistress, redemption,—the money in his desk?

Adr. Go fetch it, sister.—[Exit Luciana.] This

I wonder at;

That he, unknown to me, should be in debt.—

Tell me, was he arrested on a band?

Dro. S. Not on a band, but on a stronger thing,—

A chain, a chain: do you not hear it ring?

Adr. What, the chain?

Dro. S. No, no, the bell. 'Tis time that I were gone:

It was two ere I left him, and now the clock strikes

one.

Adr. The hours come back! that did I never hear.

Dro. S. O yes; if any hour meet a serjeant, 'a turns back for very fear.

Adr. As if Time were in debt! how fondly dost thou reason!

Dro. S. Time is a very bankrupt, and owes more than he's worth, to season.

Nay, he's a thief too: have you not heard men say,

That Time comes stealing on by night and day?

If Time be in debt and theft, and a serjeant in the way,

Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a day?

Re-enter Luciana.

Adr. Go, Dromio; there's the money, bear it straight;

And bring thy master home immediately.—

Come, sister: I am press'd down with conceit.

Conceit, my comfort and my injury. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A public Place.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Ant. S. There's not a man I meet but doth salute

As if I were their well acquainted friend; [me,

And every one doth call me by my name.
Scene IV.

The Comedy of Errors.

Some tender money to me; some invite me; Some other give me thanks for kindnesses; Some offer me commodities to buy: Even now a tailor call'd me in his shop, And show'd me alks that he had bought for me, And therewithal took measure of my body. Sure, these are but imaginary wiles, And Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, here's the gold you sent me for. What, have you got the picture of old Adam new apparelled?

Ant. S. What gold is this? What Adam dost thou mean?

Dro. S. Not that Adam that kept the paradise, but that Adam that keeps the prison: he that goes in the calf's skin that was kill'd for the prodigal: he that came behind you, Sir, like an evil angel, and bid you forsake your liberty.

Ant. S. I understand thee not.

Dro. S. No? why, 'tis a plain case: he that went, like a base-viol, in a case of leather; the man, Sir, that, when gentlemen are tired, gives them a sob, and 'rests them; he, Sir, that takes pity on decayed men, and gives them suits of durkance; he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his mace than a morris-pike.

Ant. S. What, thou meanest an officer?

Dro. S. Ay, Sir, the serjeant of the band; he that brings any man to answer it, that breaks his band; one that thinks a man always going to bed, and says, "God give you good rest!"

Ant. S. Well, Sir, there rest in your foolery. Is there any ship puts forth to-night? may we be gone?

Dro. S. Why, Sir, I brought you word an hour since, that the bark Expedition put forth to-night; and then were you hindered by the serjeant, to tarry for the hoy Delay. Here are the angels that you sent for, to deliver you.

Ant. S. The fellow is distract, and so am I; And here we wander in illusions: Some blessed power deliver us from hence!

Enter a Courtean.

Cur. Well met, well met, master Antipholus. I see, Sir, you have found the goldsmith now: Is that the chain you promis'd me to-day?

Ant. S. Satan, avoid! I charge thee, tempt me not!

Dro. S. Master, is this mistress Satan?

Ant. S. It is the devil.

Dro. S. Nay, she is worse, she is the devil's dam; and here she comes in the habit of a light wench: and thereof comes that the wenches say, "God damn me;" that's as much as to say, "God make me a light wench." It is written, they appear to men like angels of light: light is an effect of fire, and fire will burn; ergo, light wenches will burn. Come not near her.

Cur. Your man and you are marvellous merry, Sir. Will you go with me? we'll mend our dinner here.

Dro. S. Master, if you do, expect spoon-meat; so bespeak a long spoon.

Ant. S. Why, Dromio?

Dro. S. Marty, he must have a long spoon that must eat with the devil.

Ant. S. Avoid thee, fend! what tell'st thou me of supper?

Thou art, as you are all, a sorcerer: I conjure thee to leave me, and be gone.

Cur. Give me the ring of mine you had at din-ner, for my diamond, the chain you promis'd; [ner, And I'll be gone, Sir, and not trouble you.

Dro. S. Some devils ask but the parings of one's A rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin, [nail, A nut, a cherry-stone;

But she, more covetous, would have a chain. Master, be wise: an if you give it her, The devil will shake her chain, and fright us with it. Cur. I pray you, Sir, my ring, or else the chain: I hope you do not mean to cheat me so.

Ant. S. Avault, thou witch! Come, Dromio, let us go.

Dro. S. "Fly pride," says the peacock: mistress, that you know.

[Exeunt Ant. S. and Dro. S.

Cur. Now, out of doubt, Antipholus is mad, Else would he never so demean himself. A ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats, And for the same he promis'd me a chain: Both one and other he denies me now. The reason that I gather he is mad,— Besides this present instance of his rage,— Is a mad tale he told to-day at dinner, Of his own doors being shut against his entrance. Belike, his wife, acquainted with his fits, On purpose shut the doors against his way. My way is now, to lie home to his house, And tell his wife, that, being lunatic, He rush'd into my house, and took perforce My ring away. This course I fittest choose; For forty ducats is too much to lose. [Exit.

Scene IV.—A Street.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus and an Officer.

Ant. E. Fear me not, man; I will not break away: I'll give thee, ere I leave thee, so much money, To warrant thee, as I am 'rested for. My wife is in a wayward mood to-day, And will not lightly trust the messenger: That I should be attach'd in Ephesus, I tell you, 'twill sound harshly in her ears.— Here comes my man; I think he brings the money.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus with a rope-end.

How now, Sir! have you that I sent you for?

Dro. E. Here's that, I warrant you, will pay them all.

Ant. E. But where's the money?

Dro. E. Why, Sir, I gave the money for the rope.

Ant. E. Five hundred ducats, villain, for a rope? Dro. E. I'll serve you, Sir, five hundred at the rate.

Ant. E. To what end did I bid thee tie thee home?

Dro. E. To a rope's end, Sir; and to that end am I return'd.

Ant. E. And to that end, Sir, I will welcome you. [Beating him.

Dro. E. Nay, 'tis for me to be patient; I am in adversity.

Off. Good now, hold thy tongue.
Dro. E. Nay, rather persuade him to hold his hands.

Ant. E. Thou whoreson, senseless villain!

Dro. E. I would I were senseless, Sir, that I might not feel your blows.

Ant. E. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an ass.

Dro. E. I am an ass, indeed; you may prove it by my long ears. I have served him from the hour of my nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service but blows. When I am cold, he heats me with beating; when I am warm, he carries me off with beating: I am waked with it when I sleep; raised with it when I sit; driven out of doors with it when I go from home; welcomed home with it when I return: nay, I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar won't her brat; and, I think, when he hath lamed me, I shall beg with it from door to door.

Ant. E. Come, go along; my wife is coming yonder.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, the Courtesan, and Pinch.

Dro. E. Mistress, respect females, respect your end; or rather, to prophecy like the parrot, "Beware the rope's end."

Ant. E. Wilt thou still talk? [Beats him.]

Cur. How say you now? is not your husband mad?

Adr. His incivility confirms no less.—Good doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer; Establish him in his true sense again, And I will please you what you will demand.

Luc. Alas, how fiery and how sharp he looks!

Cur. Mark how he trembles in his ecstasy!

Pinch. Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse.

Ant. E. There is my hand, and let it feel your ear. Pinch. I charge thee, Satan, how's within this To yield possession to my holy prayers, [man, And to thy state of darkness he thee straight: I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven!

Ant. E. Peace, doting wizard, peace! I am not mad.

Adr. O, that thou wert not, poor distressed soul!

Ant. E. You minion, you, are these your curses? Did this companion with the saffron face [Toners! Revel and feast it at my house to-day, Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut, And I denied to enter in my house?

Adr. O husband, God doth know, you din' at home; Where 'would you had remain'd until this time, Free from these slanders and this open shame! Ant. E. Din'd at home!—Thou villain, what say'st thou?

Dro. E. Sir, sooth to say, you did not dine at home.

Ant. E. Were not my doors lock'd up, and I shut out?

Dro. E. Perdy, your doors were lock'd, and you shut out.

Ant. E. And did not she herself revile me there?

Dro. E. Sans fable, she herself revil'd you there.

Ant. E. Did not her kitchen-maid rail, taunt, and scorn me?

Dro. E. Curses, she did; the kitchen-vestal scorn'd you.

Ant. E. And did not I in rage depart from thence?

Dro. E. In verity, you did;—my bones bear witness, That since have felt the vigour of his rage.

Adr. Is't good to soothe him in these contrarieties? Pinch. It is no shame; the fellow finds his vein, And, yielding to him, honours well his frenzy.

Ant. E. Thou hast suborn'd the goldsmith to arrest me.

Adr. Alas, I sent you money to redeem you, By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.

Dro. E. Money by me! heart and good-will you might; But surely, master, not a rag of money.

Ant. E. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats?

Adr. He came to me, and I deliver'd it.

Luc. And I am witness with her that she did.

Dro. E. God and the rope-maker bear me witness, That I was sent for nothing but a rope!

Pinch. Mistress, bold man and stranger is poss I know it by their pale and deadly looks:[sea'd; They must be bound, and laid in some dark room.

Ant. E. Say, wherewith dost thou lock me forth to-day?

And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?

Adr. I did not, gentle husband, lock thee forth.

Dro. E. And, gentle master, I receiv'd no gold; But I confess, Sir, that we were lock'd out.

Adr. Dissembling villain! thou speak'st false in both.

Ant. E. Dissembling harlot! thou art false in all; And art confederate with a damned pack To make a loathsome abject scorn of me: But with these nails I'll pluck out those false eyes, That would behold in me this shameful sport.

Adr. O bind him, bind him! let him not come near me.

Pinch. More company!—the fiend is strong with them, in man.

Luc. Ah me, poor man, how pale and wan he looks!

Enter three or four, who help Pinch to bind Ant. E. and Dro. E.

Ant. E. What, will you murder me? Thou gaoler, thou, I am thy prisoner: wilt thou suffer them To make a rescue?

Off. Masters, let him go:

He is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.

Pinch. Go bind this man, for he is frantic too.

Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish officer? Hast thou delight to see a wretched man Do outrage and displeasure to himself?

Off. He is my prisoner: if I let him go, The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.

Adr. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee: Bear me forthwith unto his creditor, And, knowing how the debt grows, I will pay it.— Good master doctor, see him safe convey'd Home to my house.—O most unhappy day!

Ant. E. O most unhappy strumpet!

Dro. E. Master, I am here entered in bond for you.

Ant. E. Out on thee, villain! wherefore dealt thou me such a blow?

Dro. E. Will you be bound for nothing? be mad, good master;

Cry, the devil!
SCENE I.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

Luc. God help, poor souls, how idly do they talk!

Adr. Go bear him hence.—Sister, go you with me.—

[Exeunt Pinch and Assistants with Ant. E. and Dro. E.

Say now, whose suit is he arrested at?

Off. One Angelo, a goldsmith; do you know him?

Adr. I know the man. What is the sum he owes?

Off. Two hundred ducats.

Adr. Say, how grows it due?

Off. Due for a chain your husband had of him.

Adr. He did bespeak a chain for me, but had it not.

Cour. Whenas your husband, all in rage, to-day

Came to my house, and took away my ring,—

The ring I saw upon his finger now,—

Straight after did I meet him with a chain.

Adr. It may be so, but I did never see it.

Come, goaster, bring me where the goldsmith is;

I long to know the truth hereof at large.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse, and Dromio of Syracuse,

with their rapiers drawn.

Luc. God, for thy mercy! they are loose again.

Adr. And come with naked swords. Let’s call more help,

To have them bound again.

Off. Away! they’ll kill us.

[Exeunt Adriana, Luciana, the Courtezan, and Officer.

Ant. S. I see, these witches are afraid of swords.

Dro. S. She, that would be your wife, now ran from you.

Ant. S. Come to the Centaur; fetch our stuff from thence:

I long that we were safe and sound abroad.

Dro. S. Faith, stay here this night; they will surely do us no harm: you saw, they speak us fair, give us gold: methinks they are such a gentle nation, that, but for the mountain of mad flesh that claims marriage of me, I could find in my heart to stay here still, and turn witch.

Ant. S. I will not stay to-night for all the town;

Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Before an Abbey.

Enter Second Merchant and Ancelio.

Ancelio. I am sorry, Sir, that I have hinder’d you;

But, I protest, he had the chain of me,

Though most dishonestly he doth deny it.

Sec. Mer. How is the man esteemed here in the Ang. Of very reverend reputation, Sir, [city?

Of credit infinite, highly belov’d;

Second to none that lives here in the city:

His word might bear my wealth at any time.

Sec. Mer. Speak softly, yonder, as I think, he walks.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse and Dromio of Syracuse.

Ancelio. ’Tis so; and that self chain about his neck,

Which he forswore most monstrously to have.

Good Sir, draw near to me, I’ll speak to him.—

Signior Antipholus, I wonder much.

That you would put me to this shame and trouble;

And, not without some scandal to yourself,

With circumstance and oaths so to deny

This chain, which now you wear so openly:

Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment,

You have done wrong to this my honest friend;

Who, but for staying on our controversy,

Had hoisted sail, and put to sea to-day:

This chain you had of me; can you deny it?

Ant. S. I think I had; I never did deny it.

Sec. Mer. Yes, that you did, Sir, and forswore it too.

Ant. S. Who heard me to deny it or forswear it?

Sec. Mer. These ears of mine, thou know’st, did hear thee.

Fie on thee, wretch! ’tis pity that thou liv’st

To walk where any honest men resort.

Ant. S. Thou art a villain to impeach me thus:

I’ll prove mine honour and mine honesty

Against thee presently, if thou dar’st stand.

Sec. Mer. I dare, and do defy thee for a villain.

[They draw.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtezan, and others.

Ard. Hold! hurt him not, for God’s sake! he is mad.—

Some get within him; take his sword away.

Bind Dromio too, and bear them to my house.

Dro. S. Run, master, run; for God’s sake, take a house!

This is some privity,—in, or we are spoil’d.

[Exeunt Ant. S. and Dro. S. into the Abbey.

Enter the Lady Abbess.

Abb. Be quiet, people. Wherefore throng you hither?

Ard. To fetch my poor distracted husband hence.

Let us come in, that we may bind him fast,

And bear him home for his recovery.

Ang. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.

Sec. Mer. I am sorry now, that I did draw on him.

Abb. How long hath this possession held the man?

Ard. This week he hath been heavy, sour, sad,

And much different from the man he was;

But, till this afternoon, his passion

Ne’er brake into extremity of rage.

Ard. Hath he not lost much wealth by wreck of Buried some dear friend? Hath not else his eye

Stray’d his affection in unlawful love?

A sin prevailing much in youthful men,

Who give their eyes the liberty of gazing.

Which of these sorrows is he subject to?

Ard. To none of these, except it be the last;

Namely, some love that drew him off from home.

Abb. You should for that have reprehended him.

Ard. Why, so I did.

Abb. Ay, but not rough enough.

Ard. As roughly as my modesty would let me.

Abb. Happily, in private.

Ard. And in assemblies too.

Abb. Ay, but not enough.

Ard. It was the copy of our conference:

In bed, he slept not for my urging it;

At board, he fed not for my urging it;

Alone, it was the subject of my theme;

In company, I often gaine’d at it:

Still did I tell him it was vile and bad.

Abb. And thereof came it that the man was mad:

The venom clamours of a jealous woman.
Poison more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.
It seems, his sleeps were hinder'd by thy railing:
And thereof comes it, that his head is light.
Thou say'st his meat was sauc'd with thy upbradings:
Unquiet meals make ill digestions, —
Therof the raging fire of fever bred;
And what's a fever but a fit of madness?
Thou say'st his sports were hinder'd by thy brawls:
Sweet recreation bar'd, what doth ensue,
But moody and dull melancholy,
Kinsman to grim and comfortless despair;
And at her heels a huge infectious troop
Of pale distempers, and foes to life?
In food, in sport, and life-preserving rest
To be disturb'd, would mad or man or beast:
The consequence is, then, thy jealous suits
Have scar'd thy husband from the use of wits.

Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly,
When he deeme'd himself rough, rude, and wildly. —
Why bear you these rebukes, and answer not?
Adr. She did betray me to my own reproof. —
Good people, enter, and lay hold on him.

Abb. No; not a creature enters in my house.
Adr. Then let your servants bring my husband forth,
Nor send him forth, that we may bear him hence.
Therefore, most gracious duke, with thy command
Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for help.

Duke. Long since thy husband serv'd me in my
And I to thee engag'd a prince's word, [wars;
When thou didst make him master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could. —
Go, some of you, knock at the abbey gate,
And bid the lady abbess come to me. —
I will determine this before I stir.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O mistress, mistress! shift and save yourself!
My master and his man are both broke loose,
Beaten the maids a-row, and bound the doctor,
Whose beard they have sing'd off with brands of
And ever as it blaz'd they threw on him [fire;
Great pails of puddled mire to quench the hair.
My master preaches patience to him, and the while
His man with scissors nicks him like a fool;
And sure, unless you send some present help,
Between them they will kill the conjurer.
Adr. Perforce, beat thy master and his man are
And that is false thou dost report to us. [here,
Serv. Mistress, upon my life, I tell you true;
I have not breath'd almost, since I did see it.
He cries for you, and vows, if he can take you,
To scorched your face, and to disfigure you.

(Cry within.

Hark, hark! I hear him, mistress: fly, be gone!

Duke. Come, stand by me; fear nothing. — Guard
With halberds!

Adr. Ah me, it is my husband: Witness you,
That he is borne about so invisible:
Beheaded publicly for his offence.

Ang. See where they come: we will behold his death.

Luc. Kneel to the duke before he pass the abbey.

Enter Duke attended: RICONI here-bleded: with the Headsmen and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publicly,
If any friend will pay the sum for him.
He shall not die, so much we tender him. [bess!
Adr. Justice, most sacred duke, against the ab-
SCENE I.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

ÆGR.  Unless the fear of death doth make me dote,
I see my son Antipholus, and Dromio!

Ant. E.  Justice, sweet prince, against that woman there!
She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife,
That hath abused and dishonour'd me,
Even in the strength and height of injury:
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That she this day hath shameless thrown on me.

Duke.  Discover how, and thou shalt find me just.

Ant. E.  This day, great duke, she shut the doors on me,
While she with harlots feasted in my house.

Duke.  A grievous fault. — Say, woman, didst thou

Adr.  No, my good lord: myself, he, and my sister,
To-day did dine together. So befall all my soul,
As this is false he burdens me withal!

Luc.  Ne'er may I look on day, nor sleep on night,
But she tells to your highness simple truth.

Ægr.  O perjur'd woman! They are both for-in this the madman justly chargeth them. [sown:
Ant. E.  My liege, I am advised what I say;
Neither disturb'd with the effect of wine,
Nor heady-rash, provok'd with raging ire,
And all my wrongs might make one wiser mad.
This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner:
That goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with her,
Could witness it, for he was with me then;
Who parted with me to go fetch a chain,
Promising to bring it to the Porcupine,
Where Balthazar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,
I went to seek him: in the street I met him,
And in his company, that gentleman.
There did this perjur'd goldsmith swear me down,
That I this day of him receiv'd the chain,
Which, God he knows, I saw not: for which the
He did arrest me with an officer.
I did obey; and sent my peasant home
For certain ducats: he with none return'd.
Then fairly I bespoke the officer
To go in person with me to my house.
By the way we met
My wife, her sister, and a rabble more
Of vile confederates. Along with them
They brought one Finch, a hungry lean-fac'd villain,
A mere anatomy, a mountebank,
A thief and beggar, and a fortune-teller,
A needy, hollow-eyed, sharp-looking wretch,
A living dead man. This pernicious slave,
Forsouth, took on him as a conjurer;
And, gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
And with no face, as 'were, out-facing me,
Cries out, I was possess'd. Then, altogether
They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence,
And in a dark and dankish vault at home
There left me and my man, both bound together;
Till, gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder
I gain'd my freedom, and immediately
Ran hither to your grace; whom I beseech
To give me ample satisfaction
For these deep shames and great indignities. [him,

Ang.  My lord, in truth, thus far I witness with
That he dined not at home, but lock'd out.

Duke.  But had he such a chain of thee, or no?

Ang.  He had, my lord; and when he ran in here,
These people saw the chain about his neck.

Else.  Besides, I will be sworn these ears of Heard you confess you had the chain of him, [mine
After you first forswore it on the mart:
And thereupon I drew my sword on you;
And then you fled into this abbey here,
From whence, I think, you are come by miracle.

Ant. E.  I never came within these abbey walls;
Nor ever didst thou draw thy sword on me:
I never saw the chain, so help me heaven!
And this is false you burden me withal.

Duke.  Why, what an intricate impeach is this!
I think you all have drunk of Circe's cup.
If here you hou'd him, here he would have been;
If he were mad, he would not plead so coldly:—
You say he dined at home; the goldsmith here
Denies that saying. — Sirrah, what say you?

Dro. E.  Sir, he dined with her there, at the Porcupine.

Cour.  He did; and from my finger snatch'd that

Ant. E.  'Tis true, my liege; this ring I had of her.

Duke.  Saw'st thou him enter at the abbey here?

Cour.  As sure as my liege, as I do see your grace.

Duke.  Why, this is strange.— Go call the abbes hither,— [Exit an Attendant.

I think you are all mated, or stark mad.

ÆGr.  Most mighty duke, vouchsafe me speak a Haply, I see a friend will save my life, [word:
And pay the sum that may deliver me.

Ægr.  Is not your name, Sir, called Antipholus?
And is not that your bondman Dromio?

Dro. E.  Within this hour I was his bondman, Sir;
But he, I thank him, gnaw'd in two my cords:
Now am I Dromio, and his man, unbound.

Ægr.  I am sure you both of you remember me.

Dro. E.  Ourselves we do remember, Sir, by you;
For lately we were bound, as you are now.
You are not Pinch's patient, are you, Sir?

Ægr.  Why look you strange on met you know me well.

Ant. E.  I never saw you in my life, till now.

Ægr.  O, grief hath chang'd me, since you saw me last;
And careful hours, with Time's deformed hand,
Have written strange defeatures in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?

Ant. E.  Neither.

Ægr.  Dromio, nor thou?

Dro. E.  No, trust me, Sir, nor I.

Ægr.  I am bare thou dost.

Dro. E.  Ay, Sir; but I am sure I do not; and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.

Ægr.  Not know my voice? O, time's extremity!
Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor tongue
In seven short years, that here my only son
Knows not my feeble key of uncut'd cares?
Though now this grained face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming winter's drizzled snow,
And all the conduits of my blood froze up,
Yet hath my night of life some memory,
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left,
My dull deaf ears a little use to hear:
All these old witnesses—I cannot err—
Tell me thou art my son Antipholus.

Ant. E.  I never saw my father in my life.

Ægr.  But seven years since, in Syracuse, boy,
Thou know'st we parted: but perhaps, my son,
Thou shan't to acknowledge me in misery.

Ant. E.  Tho' the duke, and all that know me in the city,
Can witness with me that it is not so:
I ne'er saw Syracuse in my life.

Duke. I tell thee, Syracuse, twenty years
Have I been patron to Antipholus,
During which time he ne'er saw Syracuse.
I see, thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Rev-entire Abyss, with Antipholus of Syracuse and Dromio of Syracuse.

Abb. Most mighty duke, behold a man much wrong'd.
[All gather to see them.]

Adr. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me!

Duke. One of these men is Genius to the other;
And so of these: which is the natural man,
And which the spirit? Who deciphers them?

Dro. S. I, Sir, am Dromio: command him away.

Dro. E. I, Sir, am Dromio: pray let me stay.

Ant. S. Ageon, art thou not? or else his ghost?

Dro. S. O, my old master! who hath bound him here?

Abb. Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds,
And gain a husband by his liberty.

Speak, old Ageon, if thou be'st the man
That hadst a wife once call'd Emilia,
That bore thee at a burden two fair sons:
O, if thou be'st the same Ageon, speak,
And speak unto the same Emilia!

Age. If I dream not, thou art Emilia:
If thou art she, tell me where is that son
That floated with thee on the fatal raft?

Abb. By men of Epidamnum, he and I,
And the twin Dromio, all were taken up;
But by and by, rude fishermen of Corinth
By force took Dromio and my son from them,
And me they left with those of Epidamnum.

What then became of them, I cannot tell;
I, to this fortune that you see in me.

Duke. Why, here begins his morning story right:
These two Antipholus', these two so like,
And these two Dromios, one in semblance,— Besides her urging of her wreck at sea;—
These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together,—
Antipholus, thou cam'st from Corinth first?

Ant. S. No, Sir, not I; I came from Syracuse.

Duke. Stay, stand apart; I know not which is which.

Ant. E. I came from Corinth, my most gracious lord,—

Dro. E. And I with him. [warior,]

Ant. E. Brought to this town by that most famous Duke Menaphon, your most renowned uncle.

Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to-day?

Ant. S. I, gentle mistress.

Adr. And are not you my husband?

Ant. E. No; I say nay to that.

Ant. S. And so do I; yet did she call me so:
And this fair gentle-woman, her sister here,—
Did call me brother.—What I told you then,
I hope I shall have leisure to make good;
If this be not a dream I see and hear.

Ang. That is the chain, Sir, which you had of me.
ACT I.

SCENE I.—Grounds adjoining LEONATO’S HOUSE.

Enter LEONATO, HERO, and BEATRICE, with a Messenger.

LEON. I learn in this letter, that Don Pedro of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

MESS. He is very near by this: he was not three leagues off when I left him.

LEON. How many gentlemen have you lost in this action?

MESS. But few of any sort, and none of name.

LEON. A victory is twice itself, when the achiever brings home full numbers. I find here, that Don Pedro hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine, called Claudio.

MESS. Much deserved on his part, and equally remembered by Don Pedro. He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age; doing, in the figure of a lamb, the feats of a lion: he hath, indeed, better betted expectation, than you must expect of me to tell you how.

LEON. He hath an uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

MESS. I have already delivered him letters, and there appears much joy in him; even so much, that joy could not show itself modest enough without a badge of bitterness.

LEON. Did he break out in tears?

MESS. In great measure.

LEON. A kind overflow of kindness: there are no faces truer than those that are so washed. How much better is it to weep at joy, than to joy at weeping!

BEAT. I pray you, is signior Montanto returned from the wars, or no?

MESS. I know none of that name, lady: there was none such in the army of any sort.

LEON. What is he that you ask for, niece?

HERO. My cousin means signior Benedict of Padua.

MESS. O, he is returned; and as pleasant as ever he was.

BEAT. He set up his bills here in Messina, and challenged Cupid at the flight; and my uncle’s fool, reading the challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-bolt—I pray you, how many hath he killed and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he killed? for, indeed, I promised to eat all of his killing.

LEON. Faith, niece, you tax signior Benedick too much; but he will be meet with you, I doubt it not.

MESS. He hath done good service, lady, in these wars.

BEAT. You had musty victual, and he hath holp to eat it: he is a very valiant trencher-man; he hath an excellent stomach.

MESS. And a good soldier too, lady.

BEAT. And a good soldier to a lady—but what is he to a lord?

MESS. A lord to a lord, a man to a man; stuffed with all honourable virtues.

BEAT. It is so, indeed; he is no less than a stuffed man: but for the stuffing.—Well, we are all mortal.

LEON. You must not, Sir, mistake my niece.

There is a kind of merry war betwixt signior Benedick and her: they never meet, but there’s a skirmish of wit between them.

BEAT. Alas, he gets nothing by that! In our last conflict four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man governed with one: so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse; for it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be known a reasonable creature.—Who is his companion now? He hath every month a new sworn brother.

MESS. Is’t possible?

BEAT. Very easily possible: he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block.

MESS. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

BEAT. No; an he were, I would burn my study. But I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord! he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio! if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere he be cured.

Mess. I will hold friends with you, lady.

Beat. Do, good friend.

Leon. You will never run mad, niece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mess. Don Pedro is approached.

Enter Don Pedro, Don John, Claudio, Benedict, and Balthasar.

D. Pedro. Good signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your grace: for trouble being gone, comfort should remain; but when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happiness takes his leave.

D. Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly—I think this is your daughter.

Leon. Her mother hath many times told me so.

Leon. Were you in doubt, Sir, that you asked her?

Leon. Signior Benedick, no; for then were you a child.

D. Pedro. You have it full, Benedick: we may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly, the lady mothers herself. Be happy, lady; for you are like an honourable father.

Bene. If signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

Bene. I wonder that you will still be talking, signior Benedick: nobody marks you.

Bene. What, my dear lady Diadaine! are you yet living?

Bene. Is it possible disdain should die, while she hath such meet food to feed it, as signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to disdain, if you come in her presence.

Bene. Then is courtesy a turn-coat. But it is certain I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted: and I would I could find in my heart that I had not a hard heart; for, truly, I love none.

Bene. If I had happiness to women: they would else have been troubled with a pernicious saunter. I thank God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that: I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow, than a man swear he loves me.

Bene. God keep your ladyship still in that mind! so some gentleman or other shall 'scape a predestinate scratched face.

Bene. Scratching could not make it worse, an't were such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

Bene. A bird of my tongue is better than a beast of yours.

Bene. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer. But keep your way, o' God's name; I have done.

Bene. You always end with a jade's trick: I know you of old.

D. Pedro. This is the sum of all: Leonato,— signer Claudio, and signer Benedict,—my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all. I tell him we shall stay here at the least a month; and he heartily prays some occasion may detain us longer: I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you swear, my lord, you shall not be forsworn.—Let me bid you welcome, my lord: being reconciled to the prince your brother, I owe you all duty.

D. John. I thank you: I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leon. Please it your grace lead on? D. Pedro. Your hand, Leonato; we will go together. (Exit all but BENEDICK and CLAUDIO.)

Claud. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not; but I looked on her.

Claud. Is she not a modest young lady?

Bene. Do you question me, as an honest man should do, for my simple true judgment; or would you have me speak after my custom, as being a professed tyrant to their sex?

Claud. No; I pray thee, speak in sober judgment.

Bene. Why, 'tis faith, methinks she's too low for a high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little for a great praise: only this commendation I can afford her,—that were she other than she is, she were unhandsome; and being no other but as she is, I do not like her.

Claud. Thou thinkest, I am in sport: I pray thee, tell me truly how thou likest her.

Bene. Would you buy her, that you inquire after her?

Claud. Can the world buy such a jewel?

Bene. Yes, and a case to put it into. But speak you this with a sad brow? or do you play the flattering Jack, to tell us Cupid is a good hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare carpenter? Come, in what key shall a man take you, to go in the song?

Claud. In mine eye she is the sweetest lady that ever I looked on.

Bene. I can see yet without spectacles, and I see no such matter: there's her cousin, an she were not possessed with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty, as the first of May doth the last of December. But I hope, you have no intent to turn husband, have you?

Claud. I would scarce trust myself, though I had sworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

Bene. Is't come to this, 'tis faith! Hath not the world one man, but he will wear his cap with suspicion? Shall I never see a bachelor of threescore again? Go to, 'tis faith; an thou wilt needs thrust thy neck into a yoke, wear the print of it, and sigh away Sundays. Look; Don Pedro is returned to seek you.

Re-enter Don Pedro.

D. Pedro. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato's?

Bene. I would your grace would constrain me to tell.

D. Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance.

Bene. You hear, Count Claudio: I can be secret as a dumb man, I would have you think so; but on my allegiance,—mark you this, on my allegiance.—He is in love. With whom?—now that is your grace's part.—Mark, how short his answer is;—with Hero, Leonato's short daughter.
SCENE II.

MUCH ABOU DT NOTHING.

105

Claud. If this were so, so were it uttered.

Bene. Like the old tale, my lord: it is not so, nor twas not so; but, indeed, God forbid it should be so.

Claud. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

D. Pedro. Amen, if you love her; for the lady is very well worthy.

Claud. You speak this to fetch me in, my lord.

D. Pedro. By my troth, I speak my thought.

Claud. And in faith, my lord, I spoke mine.

Bene. And by my two faiths and troths, my lord, I spoke mine.

Claud. That I love her, I feel.

D. Pedro. That she is worthy, I know.

Bene. That I neither feel how she should be loved, nor know how she should be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me: I will die in it at the stake.

D. Pedro. Thou wast ever an obstinate heretic in the despite of beauty.

Claud. And never could maintain his part, but in the force of his will.

Bene. That a woman conceived me, I thank her; that she brought me up, I likewise give her most humble thanks: but that I will have a reechest winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an invisible baldrick, all women shall pardon me. Because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will do myself the right to trust none; and the fine is, (for the which I may go the finer,) I will live a bachelor.

D. Pedro. I shall see thee, ere I die, look pale with love.

Bene. With anger, with sickness, or with hunger, my lord; not with love: prove, that ever I lose more blood with love than I will get again with drinking; pick out mine eyes with a ballad-maker's pen, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-house for the sign of blind Cupid.

D. Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat, and shoot at me; and he that hits me, let him be clapped on the shoulder, and called Adam.

D. Pedro. With what time shall I try?

"In the time the savage bull doth bear the yoke."

Bene. The savage bull may; but if ever the sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull's horns, and set them in my forehead: and let me be vilely paint-ed; and in such great letters as they write, "Here is good horse to hire," let them signify under my sign,—"Here you may see Benedick the married man."

Claud. If this should ever happen, thou wouldst be horn-mad.

D. Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Bene. I look for an earthquake too, then.

D. Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the hours. In the meantime, good signior Benedick, repair to Leonato's; commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at supper; for indeed he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassage; and so I commit you—

Claud. To the tuition of God: from my house, if I had it.—

D. Pedro. The sixth of July: your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay, mock not, mock not. The body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly based on neither: ere you flout old ends any farther, examine your conscience: and so I leave you.

[Exit.]

Claud. My liege, your highness now may do me good.

D. Pedro. My love is thine to teach: teach it but
And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn
Any hard lesson that may do thee good.

Claud. Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

D. Pedro. No child but Hero; she's his only heir.

Dost thou affect her, Claudio?

Claud. O, my lord,

When you went onward on this ended action,
I look'd upon her with a soldier's eye,
That lik'd, but had a rougher task in hand
Than to drive liking to the name of Hero,
Saying, I lik'd her ere I went to wars.

D. Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover presently,

And tire the hearer with a book of words.

If thou dost love Hero, cherish it;
And I will break with her, and with her father,
And thou shalt have her. Was't not to this end
That thou beganst to twist so fine a story?

Claud. How sweetly do you minister to love,

That know love's grief by his complexion!

But lest my liking might too sudden seem,
I would have cal'd it with a longer treatise.

D. Pedro. What need the bridge much broader

Than the flood?
The fairest grant is the necessity.

Look, what will serve is fit: 'tis once, thou lovest;
And I will fit thee with the remedy.

I know we shall have revelling to-night:

I will assume thy part in some disguise,
And tell fair Hero I am Claudio;

And in her bosom I'll unclasp my heart,

And take her hearing prisoner with the force
And strong encounter of my amorous tale:

Then, after, the lover will I break;

And the conclusion is, she shall be thine.

In practice let us put it presently.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in LEONATO'S House.

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO.

Leon. How now, brother! Where is my cousin, your son? Hath he provided this music?

Ant. He is very busy about it. But, brother, I can tell you strange news, that you yet dream not of.

Leon. Are they good?

Ant. As the event stamps them: but they have a good cover; they show well outward. The prince and Count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached alley in my orchard, were thus much overheard by a man of mine: the prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my niece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance; and, if he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time by the top, and instantly break with you of it.

Leon. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?

Ant. A good sharp fellow: I will send for him; and question him yourself.
Lom. No, no; we will hold it as a dream, till it appear itself: but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be true. Go you, and tell her of it. [Several persons cross the stage.]
Con. Cousins, you know what you have to do.—O, I cry you mercy, friend; go you with me, and I will use your skill.—Good cousin, have a care this busy time. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in Leonato’s House.

Enters DON JOHN and COMMANDER.
Con. What the good-year, my lord! why are you thus out of measure sad?
D. John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds; therefore the sadness is without limit.
Con. You should hear reason.
D. John. And when I have heard it, what blessing brings it up?
Con. If not a present remedy, yet a patient sufferance.
D. John. I wonder that thou, being (as thou say’st, thou art) born under Saturn, guess to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mischief. I cannot hide what I am: I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no man’s jests; eat when I have stomach, and wait for no man’s leisure; sleep when I am drowsy, and tend on no man’s business; laugh when I am merry, and clown no man in his humour.
Con. Yes, but you must not make the full show of this, till you may do it without controlment. You have of late stood out against your brother, and he hath taken you newly into his grace; where it is impossible you should take true root, but by the fair weather that you make yourself: it is needful that you frame the season for your own harvest.
D. John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, than a rose in his grace; and it better fits my blood to be disdained of all, than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any: in this, though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man, it must not be denied but I am a plain-dealing villain. I am trusted with a muzzle, and enfranchised with a clog; therefore I have decreed not to sing in my cage. If I had my mouth, I would bite; if I had my liberty, I would do mewing; in the meantime, let me be that I am, and seek not to alter me.
Con. Can you make no use of your discontent?
D. John. I make all use of it, for I use it only.—Who comes here? [Enter Borachio.]
Bora. I came yonder from a great supper: the prince, your brother, is royally entertained by Leonato; and it can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.
D. John. Will it serve for any model to build mischief on? What is he for a fool, that betroths himself to unquietness?
Bora. Marry, it is your brother’s right hand.
D. John. Who, the most exquisite Claudio?
Bora. Even he.
D. John. A proper square! And who, and who? which way looks he?
Bora. Marry, on Hero, the daughter and heir of Leonato.
D. John. A very forward March-chick! How came you to this?
Bora. Being entertained for a perfumer, as I was smoking a musty room, comes me the prince and Claudio, hand in hand, in sad conference: I whipt me behind the arras; and there heard it agreed upon, that the prince should woo Hero for himself, and having obtained her five hours before Benedick.
D. John. Come, come, let us thither: this may prove food to my displeasure. That young start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow; if I can cross him any way, I bless myself every way. You are both sure, and will assist me?
Con. To the death, my lord.
D. John. Let us to the great supper: their cheer is the greater, that I am subdued. Would the cook were of my mind!—Shall we go prove what’s to be done?
Bora. We’ll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Leonato’s House.

Enters LEONATO, ANTONIO, HERO, BEATRICE, and others.
Lom. Was not count John here at supper?
Ant. I saw him not.
Beat. How truly that gentleman looks! I never can see him, but I am heart-burned an hour after.
Hero. He is of a very melancholy disposition.
Beat. He was an excellent man, that were made just in the mid-way between him and Benedick: the one is too like an image, and says nothing; and the other too like my lady’s eldest son, evermore tattling.
Lom. Then, half signior Benedick’s tongue in count John’s mouth, and half count John’s melancholy in signior Benedick’s face,— Beat. With a good leg, and a good foot, uncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world,—if he could get her good will.
Lom. By my troth, niece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.
Ant. In faith, she’s too curt.
Beat. Too curt is more than curt: I shall lessen God’s sending that way; for it is said, ‘God sends a curt cow short horns;’ but to a cow too curt he sends none.
Lom. So, by being too curt, God will send you no horns?
Beat. Just, if he send me no husband; for the which blessing, I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening. Lord! I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face: I had rather lie in the woollen.
Lom. You may light on a husband that hath no beard.
Beat. What should I do with him? dress him in my apparel, and make him my waiting-gentlewoman? He that hath a beard is more than a youth; and he that hath no beard is less than a man: and he that is more than a youth is not for me; and he that is less than a man, I am not for him: therefore I will even take sixpence in earnest of the beard-ward, and lease his apes into hell.
Lom. Well, then, go you into hell?
Beat. No; but to the gate; and there will the devil meet me, like an old cuckold, with horns on his head, and say, ‘Get you to heaven, Beatrice, get you to heaven; here's no place for you maids:"

Son. 1. And so Saint Peter: for the heavens, he shows me where the bachelors sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Ant. [To Hero.] Well, niece, I trust you will be ruled by your father.

Beat. Yes, faith; it is my cousin's duty to make courtly, and say, "Father, as it please you:"—but yet for all that, cousin, let him be a handsome fellow, or else make another courtly, and say, "Father, as it please me."

Leon. Well, niece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beat. Not till God make men of some other metal than earth. Would it not grieve a woman to be over-mastered with a piece of valiant dust? to make an account of her life to a cloid of wayward mar's? No, uncle, I'll none: Adam's sons are my brethren; and truly, I hold it a sin to match in my kindred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you: if the prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beat. The fault will be in the music, cousin, if you be not wooed in good time: if the prince be too important, tell him there is measure in every thing, and there's a dance out the answer. For, bear me, Hero:—wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque-pace: the first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical; the wedding, mannerly-modest, as a measure, full of state and anciently; and then comes repentance, and, with his bad legs, falls into the cinque-pace faster and faster, till he sink into his grave.

Leon. Cousin, you apprehend passing shrewdly.

Beat. I have a good eye, uncle; I can see a church by day-light.

Leon. The revellers are entering, brother: make good room!

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedict, Balthasar, Don John, Borachio, Margaret, Ursula, and others, masked.

D. Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with your friend?

Afron. So you walk softly, and look sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walk; and especially when I walk away.

D. Pedro. With me in your company?

Hero. I may say so, when I please.

D. Pedro. And when you please to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour; for God defend the lute should be like the case!

D. Pedro. My visor is Philomel's room; within the house is Jove.

Hero. Why, then, your visor should be thatch'd.

D. Pedro. Speak low, if you speak love.

[Takes her visor.]

Balth. Well, I would you did like me.

Marg. So would not I, for your own sake; for I have many ill qualities.

Balth. Which is one?

Marg. I say my prayers aloud.

Balth. I love you the better; the hearers may cry Amen.

Marg. God match me with a good dancer!

Balth. Amen.

Marg. And God keep him out of my sight, when the dance is done!—Answer, clerk.

Balth. No more words: the clerk is answered.

Urs. I know you well enough; you are signior Antonio.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. I know you by the waggling of your head.

Ant. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Urs. You could never do him so ill-well, unless you were the very man. Here's his dry hand up and down: you are he, you are he.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. Come, come, do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide itself? Go to, mum, you are; he; grace will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdained, and that I had my good wit out of the "Hundred Merry Tales."—Well, this was signior Benedict that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure, you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you, what is he?

Beat. Why, he is the prince's jester: a very dull fool; only his gift is in devising impossible slanders, none but libertines delight in him; and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villainy; for he both pleases men and angers them, and then they laugh at him and beat him. I am sure he is in the fleet; I would he had boarded me!

Bene. When I know the gentleman, I'll tell him what you say.

Beat. Do, do; he'll but break a comparison or two on me; which, peradventure, not marked, or not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy; and then there's a partridge wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. [Music within.] We must follow the leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Beat. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

[Music; then Exeunt all but Dom John, Don Pedro, Borachio, and Claudio.]

D. John. Sure, my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it. The ladies follow her, and but one visor remains.

Bora. And that is Claudio: I know him by his bearing.

D. John. Are not you signior Benedict?

Claud. You know me well; I am he.

D. John. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love: he is enamoured on Hero. I pray you, dissuade him from her; she is not equal for his birth: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Claud. How know you he loves her?

D. John. I heard him swear his affection.

Bora. So did I too; and he swore he would marry her to-night.

D. John. Come, let us to the banquet.

[Exeunt Dom John and Borachio.]

Claud. Thus answer I in name of Benedict, but hear these ill news with the ears of Claudio. "Tis certain so:—the prince woos for himself. Friendship is constant in all other things, Save in the office and affairs of love. Therefore, all hearts in love use their own tongues;
Let every eye negotiate for itself,
And trust no agent; for beauty is a witch,
Against whose charms faith melteth into blood.
This is an accident of hourly proof,
Which I mistrusted not. Farewell, therefore, Hero!

Re-enter BENVOLIO

Benv. Count Claudio?
Claud. Yes, the same.
Benv. Come, will you go with me?
Claud. Whither?
Benv. Even to the next willow, about your own business, count. What fashion will you wear the garland off? About your neck, like a usurer's chain, or under your arm, like a lieutenant's scarf? You must wear it one way, for the prince hath got your Her.
Claud. I wish him joy of her.
Benv. Why, that's spoken like an honest draver: so they sell bullocks. But did you think the prince would have served you thus?
Claud. I pray you, leave me.
Benv. Ho! now you strike like the blind man: 'twas the boy that stole your meat, and you 'll beat the post.
Claud. If it will not be, I 'll leave you. [Exit.
Benv. Alas, poor hurt foul! Now will he creep into sedges.—But, that my lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me! The prince's fool!—Ha! it may be I go under that title, because I am merry.—Yes, but so I am apt to do myself wrong: I am not so reputed: it is the base, though bitter disposition of Beatrice, that puts the world into her person, and so gives me out. Well, I 'll be revenged as I may.

Re-enter DON PEDRO.

D. Ped. Now, signior, where's the count? Did you see him?
Benv. Troth, my lord, I have played the part of lady Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a lodger in a warren; I told him, and I think I told him true, that your grace had got the good-will of this young lady; and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him up a rod, as being worthy to be whipped.
D. Ped. To be whipped! What's his fault?
Benv. The flat expression of a school-boy; who, being overjoy'd with finding a bird's nest, shows it his companion, and he steals it.
D. Ped. Will thou make a trust a transgression? The transgression is in the stealer.
Benv. Yet it had not been amiss the rod had been made, and the garland too; for the garland he might have worn himself, and the rod he might have bestowed on you, who, as I take it, have stolen his bird's nest.
D. Ped. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Benv. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith, you say honestly.

D. Ped. The lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you: the gentleman that danced with her, told her she is much wronged by you.
Benv. O, she misused me past the endurance of a block! an oak, but with one green leaf on it, would have answered her; my very visor began to assume life, and scold with her. She told me, not thinking I had been myself,—that I was the prince's jestor; that I was droller than a great thaw; bud-dling jest upon jest, with such impossible conveyance, upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me. She speaks poniards, and every word stabs: if her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her; she would infect to the north star. I would not marry her, though she were endowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgressed: she would have made Hereules have turned spit, yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. Come, talk not of her; you shall find her the internal Até in good apparel. I would to God some scholar were her; for certainly, while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell as in a sanctuary; and people sin upon purpose, because they would go thither; so, indeed, all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follow...

D. Ped. Look, here she comes.
Benv. Will your grace command me any service to the world's end? I will go on the slightest errand now to the Antipodes that you can devise to send me on; I will fetch you a toothpick now from the farthest inch of Asia; bring you the length of Prester John's foot; fetch you a hair off the great Cham's beard; do you any embassage to the Pigmies,— rather than hold three words' conference with this harpy. You have no employment for me?

D. Ped. None, but to desire your good company.
Benv. O God, Sir, here's a dish I love not; I cannot endure my lady Tongue.

[Exit.

Re-enter CLAUDIO, BEATRICE, HERO, and LEONATO.

D. Ped. Come, lady, come; you have lost the heart of signior Benedick.

Benv. Indeed, my lord, he lent it me a while; and I gave him use for it,—a double heart for his single one: marry, once before he won it of me with false dice, therefore your grace may well say I have lost it.

D. Ped. You might have put him down, lady, you have put him down.

Benv. So I would not he should do me, my lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools.—I have been as much out of Claudius, as you sent me to seek.

D. Ped. Why, how now, count! wherefore are you sad?

Claud. Not sad, my lord.

D. Ped. How then? sick?

Claud. Neither, my lord.

Benv. The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor merry, nor well; but civil, count,—civil as an orange, and something of that jealous complexion.

D. Ped. I faith, lady, I think your blazon to be true; though, I'll be sworn, if he be so, his conceit is false.—Here, Claudio, I have wooed in thy name, and fair Hero is won: I was ever broke with her father, and his good-will obtained, name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy!

Leon. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes: her grace hath made the match, and all grace say Amen to it!

Benv. Speak, count, 'tis your cue.

Claud. Silence is the perfectest herald of joy: I were but little happy, if I could say how much.—
Lady, as you are mine, I am yours: I give away myself for you, and dote upon the exchange.

Benv. Speak, count; or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss, and let not him speak neither.

D. Ped. In faith, lady, you have a merry heart.

Benv. Yea, my lord; I thank it, poor fool, it keeps on the windy side of care.—My cousin tells him in his ear, that he is in her heart.

Claud. And so she doth, cousin.

Beat. Good lord, for alliance! Thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burnt: I may sit in a corner, and cry heigh-ho for a husband!

D. Petru. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your father's getting. Hath your grace ne'er a brother like you? Your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

D. Petru. Will you have me, lady?

Beat. No, my lord, unless I might have another for working-days: your grace is too costly to wear every day.—But, I beseech your grace, pardon me; I was born to speak all mirth, and no matter.

D. Petru. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry best becomes you; for, out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beat. No, sure, my lord, my mother cried; but then there was a sound danced, and under that was I born.—Cousins, God give you joy!

Leon. Niece, will you look to those things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy, uncle.—By your grace's pardon.

D. Petru. By my troth, a pleasant-spirited lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholy element in her, my lord: she is never sad, but when she sleeps; and not ever sad then; for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamed of unhappiness, and waked herself with laughing.

D. Petru. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.

Leon. O, by no means: she mocks all her wooers out of suit.

D. Petru. She was an excellent wife for Benedick.

Leon. O lord, my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad!

D. Petru. Count Claudio, when mean you to go to church?

Claud. To-morrow, my lord: time goes on crutches till love have all his rites.

Leon. Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven-night; and a time too brief, too, to have all things answer my mind.

D. Petru. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing: but, I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us. I will, in the interim, undertake one of Hercules' labours; which is, to bring signor Benedick and the lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection, the one with the other. I would fain have it a match; and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claud. And I, my lord.

D. Petru. And you too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Petru. And Benedick is not the unhopefullest husband that I know. Thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick;—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer: his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Don John and Borachio.

D. John. It is so; the count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bora. Yea, my lord; but I can cross it.

D. John. Any bar, any cross, any impediment will be medicable to me: I am sick in displeasure to him; and whatsoever comes athwart his affection, ranges eveny with mine. How canst thou cross this marriage?

Bora. Not honestly, my lord; but so covertly that no dishonour appear in me.

D. John. Show me briefly how.

Bora. I think I told your lordship, a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting-gentlewoman to Hero.

Bora. I can, at any unseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her lady's chamber-window.

D. John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bora. The poison of that lies in you to temper. Go you to the prince your brother; spare not to tell him, that he hath wronged his honour in marrying the renowned Claudio (whose estimation do you mightly hold up) to a contaminated state, such a one as Hero.

D. John. What proof shall I make of that?

Bora. Proof enough to misuse the prince, to vex Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato. Look you for any other issue?

D. John. Only to despire them, I will endeavour any thing.

Bora. Go, then; find me a meet hour to draw Don Pedro and the count Claudio alone: tell them that you know that Hero loves me; intend a kind of real both to the prince and Claudio, as,—in love of your brother's honour, who hath made this match, and his friend's reputation, who is thus like to be cozened with the semblance of a maid,—that you have discovered thus. They will scarcely believe this without trial: offer them instances; which shall bear no less likelihood than to see me at her chamber-window; hear me call Margaret, Hero; hear Margaret term me, Claudio; and bring them to see this the very night before the intended wedding,—for in the meantime I will so fashion the matter that Hero shall be absent;—and there shall appear such seeming truth of Hero's disloyalty, that jealously shall be called assurance, and all the preparation overthrown.

D. John. Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put it in practice. Be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

Bora. Be you constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

D. John. I will presently go learn their day of marriage.

[Exeunt.
SCENE III.—LEONATO'S GARDEN.

Enter Benedick.

Benedick.

Bene. Boy!

Enter a Boy.

Boy. Signior?

Bene. In my chamber-window lies a book; bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already, Sir.

Bene. I know that; but I would have thee hence, and here again. [Exit Boy.] I do much wonder, that one man, seeing how much another man is a fool when he dedicates his behaviours to love, will, after he hath laughed at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn by falling in love; and such a man is Claudio. I have known, when there was no music with him but the drum and the fife; and now he had rather hear the tabor and the pipe: I have known, when he would have walked ten mile afore to see a good armour; and now will he lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet. He was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose, like an honest man, and a soldier; and now he is turned orator; his words are a very fantastical banquet,—just so many strange dishes. May I be so converted, and see with these eyes? I cannot tell; I think not: I will not be sworn but love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool. One woman is fair,—yet I am well; another is wise,—yet I am well; another virtuous,—yet I am well; but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich she shall be, that's certain; wise, or I'll none; virtuous, or I'll never cheapen her; fair, or I'll never look on her; mild, or come not near me; noble, or not I for an angel; of good discourse, an excellent musician, and her hair shall be of what colour it please God.—Ha! the prince and monsieur Love! I will hide me in the arbour. [Withdraws.

Enter Don Pedro, Leonato, and Claudio, followed by Balthasar and Musicians.

D. Pedro. Come, shall we hear this music?

Claud. Yes, my good lord.—How still the evening is,

As hush'd on purpose to grace harmony!

D. Pedro. [Aside to Claudio.] See you where Benedick hath hid himself?

Claud. [Aside to D. Pedro.] O, very well, my lord: the music ended, We'll fit the kid-fox with a penny-worth.

D. Balth. Come, Balthasar, we'll hear that song again.

Balth. O, good my lord, tax not so bad a voice

To slander music any more than once.

D. Pedro. It is the witness still of excellence,

To put a strange face on his own perfection:—

I pray thee, sing, and let me woo no more.

Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing;

Since you are curious in my suit.

To her he thinks not worthy; yet he woos,

Yet will be swear, he loves.

D. Pedro. Nay, pray thee, come;

Or, if thou wilt hold longer argument,

Do it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes,—

There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

D. Pedro. Why these are very crotchets that he speaks;

Note, notes, forsooth, and nothing! [Music.

Bene. [Aside.] Now, divine air! now is his soul ravished!—Is it not strange, that sheep's guts should hale souls out of men's bodies?—Well, a horn for my money, when all's done.

Balthasar sings.

Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,

Men were deceived ever;

One foot in sea, and one on shore;

To one thing constant never:

Then sigh not, = &c.

But let them go,

And be ye bithes and bonny;

Converting all your sounds of woe

Into, Hey mussy, mussy,

Sing no more ditties, sing no more

Of dumps so dull and heavy;

The fraud of men was ever so,

Since summer first was leavy.

Then sigh not so, &c.

D. Pedro. By my troth, a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer, my lord.

D. Pedro. Ha? no, no, faith; thou singest well enough for a shift.

Bene. [Aside.] An he had been a dog that should have howled thus, they would have hanged him;

And I pray God, his bad voice bode no mischief!

I had as lief have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

D. Pedro. [To Claudio.] Yes, marry.—Dost thou hear, Balthasar? I pray thee, get us some excellent music; for to-morrow night we will have it at the lady Hero's chamber-window.

Balth. The best I can, my lord.

D. Pedro. Do so: farewell. [Exeunt BALTHASAR and Musicians.] Come hither, Leonato: what was it you told me of to-day,—that your niece Beatrice was in love with signior Benedick?

Claud. O, ay.—[Aside to D. Pedro.] Stalk on, stalk on; the fowl sits. [Aside.] I did never think that lady would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither; but most wonderful, that she should so dote on signior Benedick, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor.

Bene. [Aside.] Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner?

Leon. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it: but that she loves him with an earnest affection,—it is past the infinite of thought.

D. Pedro. May be, she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. 'Faith, like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit! There was never counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion as she discovers it.

D. Pedro. Why, what effects of passion shows she?

Claud. [Aside to them.] Bait the hook well; this fish will bite.

Leon. What effects, my lord? She will sit you,—

[To Claudio.] You heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did, indeed.

D. Pedro. How, how, I pray you? You amaze me: I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leon. I would have sworn it had it, my lord; especially against Benedick.
Benz. [Aside.] I should think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it; knavery cannot, sure, hide himself in such reverence.

Claud. [Aside to them.] He hath ta'en the infection; hold it up.

D. Pedro. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leon. No; and swears she never will: 'tis her torment.

Claud. 'Tis true, indeed; so your daughter says:

"Shall I," says she, "that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him that I love him?"

Leon. This says she now when she is beginning to write to him; for she 'll be up twenty times a night; and there will she sit in her smock, till she have writ a sheet of paper—my daughter tells us all.

Claud. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leon. O,—when she had writ it, and was reading it over, she found Benedick and Beatrice between the sheet—

Claud. That.

Leon. O, she tore the letter into a thousand half-pence; railed at herself, that she should be so immodest to write to one that she knew would flout her: "I measure him," says she, "by my own spirit; for I should flout him, if he write to me; yes, though I love him, I should."

Claud. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, cries,—"O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!"

Leon. She doth indeed: my daughter says so: and the ecstasy hath so much overcome her, that my daughter is sometime afraid she will do a desperate outrage to herself: it is very true.

D. Pedro. It were good, that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Claud. To what end? He would but make a sport of it, and torment the poor lady worse.

D. Pedro. An he should, it were an alms to hang him. She's an excellent sweet lady; and, out of all suspicion she is virtuous.

Claud. And she is exceeding wise.

D. Pedro. In everything, but in loving Benedick.

Leon. O my lord, wisdom and blood combating in a tender body, we have ten proofs to one, that blood hath the victory. I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian.

D. Pedro. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me; I would have daffed all other respects, and made her half myself. I pray you, tell Benedick of it; I would hear what he will say.

Leon. Were it good, think you?

Claud. Hero thinks surely she will die; for she says she will die if he love her not; and she will die, ere she make her love known; and she will die, if he woo her, rather than she will raise one breath of her accustomed crossness.

D. Pedro. She doth well: if she should make tender of her love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it; for the man, as you know all, hath a contemptible spirit.

Claud. He is a very proper man.

D. Pedro. He hath indeed a good outward happiness.

Claud. 'Fore God, and in my mind, very wise.

D. Pedro. He doth indeed show some sparks that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

D. Pedro. As Hector, I assure you: and in the managing of quarrels you may say he is wise; for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a most Christian-like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, he must necessarily keep peace: if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

D. Pedro. And so will he do; for the man doth fear God, howsoever it seems not in him by some large jests he will make. Well, I am sorry for your niece. Shall we go seek Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my lord: let her wear it out with good counsel.

Leon. Nay, that's impossible: she may wear her heart out first.

D. Pedro. Well, we will hear further of it by your daughter: let it cool the while. I love Benedick well; and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy to have so good a lady.

Leon. My lord, will you walk? dinner is ready.

Claud. [Aside to them.] If he do not dote on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation.

D. Pedro. [Aside to Leonato.] Let there be the same net spread for her; and that must your daughter and her gentlewomen carry. The sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter; that's the scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumb show.

Let us send her to call him in to dinner.

[Exeunt Don Pedro, Claudius, and Leonato.

Benz. [Advancing from the audience.] This can be no trick: the conference was sadly borne. They have the truth of this from Hero. They seem to pity the lady: it seems, her affections have their full bent. Love me! why, it must be requited. I hear how I am censured: they say I will bear myself proudly, if I perceive the love come from her: they say too, that she will rather die than give any sign of affection,—I did never think to marry,—I must not seem proud.—Happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending. They say the lady is fair,—'tis a truth, I can bear them witness; and virtuous,—'tis so, I cannot prove it; and wise, but for loving me: by my troth, it is no addition to her wit; nor any great argument of her folly,—for I will be horribly in love with her. I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have railed so long against marriage: but doth not the appetite alter? A man loves the meat in his youth, that he cannot endure in his age. Shall quips, and sentences, and these paper bullets of the brain, awe a man from the career of his humour? No; the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married.—Here comes Beatrice. By this day, she's a fair lady: I do spy some marks of love in her.

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Against my will, I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Benz. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks, than you take pains to thank me: if it had been painful, I would not have come.

\textit{Benedict.} You take pleasure, then, in the message?
\textit{Hero.} Yes, just so much as may take upon a knave's point, and choke a dwaf withal. —You have no stomach, signior! fare you well.

[\textit{Exit.}]

\textit{Benedict.} Ha! "Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner." —there's a double meaning in that. "I took no more pains for those thanks, than you took pains to thank me,"—that's as much as to say, Any pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks.—If I do not take pity of her, I am a villain: if I do not love her, I am a Jew. I will go get her picture.

[\textit{Exit.}]

\textbf{ACT III.}

\textbf{SCENE I.} —LEONATOS'S GARDEN.

\textit{Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.}

\textit{Hero.} Good Margaret, run thee to the parlour; There shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice Proposing with the Prince and Claudio: Whisper her ear, and tell her, I and Ursula Walk in the orchard, and our whole discourse Is all of her: say that thou overheard'st us; And bid her steal into the pleas'd bower, Where her brooches, ripes'd by the sun, Forbidden the sun to enter:—like favourites, Made proud by princes, that advance their pride Against that power that bred it:—there will she hide To listen our propose. This is thy office:
\textit{Bess,} Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

\textit{Margaret.} I'll make her come, I warrant you, presently.

[\textit{Exit.}]

\textit{Hero.} Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come, As we do trace this alley up and down, Our talk must only be of Benedick.
When I do name him, let it be thy part To praise him more than ever man did merit.
My talk to thee must be, how Benedick Is sick in love with Beatrice. Of this matter Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made, That only wounds by hearsay. Now begin; \textit{Enter Beatrice, behind.}

\textit{For love where Beatrice, like a lapping, runs Close by the ground, to bear our conference.}

\textit{Ursula.} The pleasantest angling is to see the fish Cut with her golden ears the silver stream, And greedily devour the treacherous bait: So angle we for Beatrice; who even now Is couched in the woodland coverture. Fear you not my part of the dialogue. [nothing]

\textit{Hero.} Then go we near her, that her ear lose Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it. [They advance to the bower.]

No, truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful; I know her spirits are as coy and wild As haggards of the rock.

\textit{Hero.} But are you sure That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely?

\textit{Hero.} So says the prince, and my new-troothed lord.

\textit{Ursula.} And did they bid you tell her of it, madam?

\textit{Hero.} They did entreat me to acquaint her of it; But I persuaded them, if they lov'd Benedick, To wish him wrestle with affection, And never to let Beatrice know of it.

\textit{Ursula.} Why did you so? Doth not the gentleman Desire as full, as fortunate a bed, As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

\textit{Hero.} O God of love! I know he doth deserve As much as may be yielded to a man: But nature never fram'd a woman's heart Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice;
Dissain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes, Misprizing what they look on; and her wit Values itself so highly, that to her All matter else seems weak: she cannot love, Nor take no shape nor project of affection, She is so self-endear'd.

\textit{Ursula.} Sure, I think so; And therefore certainly it were not good She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

\textit{Hero.} Why, you speak truth. I never yet saw man, How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featur'd, But she would spell him backward: if fair-fac'd, She'd swear the gentleman should be her sister; If black, why, nature, drawing of an antick, Made a foul blot; if tall, a lance ill-headed; If low, an agate very visibly cut; If speaking, why, a vane blown with all winds; If silent, why a block moved with none.

So turns she every man the wrong side out; And never gives to truth and virtue that Which simplicity and merit purchase.

\textit{Ursula.} Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.

\textit{Hero.} No; not to be so odd, and from all fashions, As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable: But who dare tell her so? If I should speak, She would mock me into air: O, she would laugh Me out of myself, press me to death with wit! Therefore let Benedick, like cover'd fire, Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly: It were a better death than die with mocks, Which is as bad as die with tickling.

\textit{Ursula.} Yet tell her of it: hear what she will say.

\textit{Hero.} No; rather I will go to Benedick, And counsel him to fight against his passion. And, truly, I'll devise some honest sanders To stain my cousin with: one doth not know, How much an ill word may empoison liking.

\textit{Ursula.} O, do not do your cousin such a wrong; She cannot be so much without true judgment, (Having so swift and excellent a wit) As she is priz'd to have) as to refuse So rare a gentleman as signior Benedick.

\textit{Hero.} He is the only man of Italy,— Always excepted, as you know, Claudio.

\textit{Ursula.} I pray you, be not angry with me, madam, Speaking my fancy: signior Benedick, For shape, for bearing, argument, and valour, Goes foremost in report through Italy.

\textit{Hero.} Indeed, he hath an excellent good name.

\textit{Ursula.} His excellence did earn it, ere he had it.— When are you married, madam?

\textit{Hero.} Why, every day to-morrow. Come, go in: I'll show thee some attires; and have thy counsel Which is the best to furnish me to-morrow.

\textit{Ursula.} [Aside.] If it prove so, then loving goes by haps; Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps. [Exeunt Hero and Ursula.]

\textit{Beatrice.} [Advancing.] What fire is in mine ears! Can this be true?
Stand I condemn’d for pride and scorn so much?
Contempt, farewell! and maiden pride, adieu!
No glory lives behind the back of such.
And, Benedick, love on: I will requite thee,
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand.
If thou dost love, my kindness shall incite thee
To bind our loves up in a holy band;
For others say thou dost deserve, and I
Believe it better than reportingly.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—A Room in Leonato’s House.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, and Leonato.

D. Pedro. I do but stay till your marriage be consummated, and then go I toward Arragon.
Claud. I’ll bring you thither, my lord, if you’ll vouchsafe me.

D. Pedro. Nay, that would be as great a soil in the new gloss of your marriage, as to show a child his new coat and forbid him to wear it. I will only be bold with Benedick for his company; for, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth: he hath twice or thrice cut Cupid’s bowstring, and the little hangman dare not shoot at him. He hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper; for what his heart thinks, his tongue speaks.

Bene. Gallants, I am not as I have been.
Leon. So say I: methinks you are sadder.
Claud. I hope he be in love.

D. Pedro. Hang him, traitor! there’s no true drop of blood in him, to be truly touched with love.
If he be sad, he wants money.
Bene. I have the tooth-ache.

D. Pedro. Draw it.

Bene. Hang it!

Claud. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.

D. Pedro. What! sigh for the tooth-ache?
Leon. Where is but a humour, or a worm?
Bene. Well, every one can master a grief, but he that has it.

Claud. Yet say I, he is in love.

D. Pedro. There is no appearance of fancy in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises; as, to be a Dutchman to-day, a Frenchman to-morrow, or in the shape of two countries at once; as, a German from the waist downward, all slops, and a Spaniard from the hip upward, no doublet. Unless he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appear he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is.

Claud. If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs: he brushes his hat of mornings; what should that bode?

D. Pedro. Hath any man seen him at the barber’s?

Claud. No, but the barber’s man hath been seen with him; and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.

Leon. Indeed he looks younger than he did, by the loss of a beard.

D. Pedro. Nay, he rubs himself with civies: can you smell him out by that?

Claud. That’s as much as to say, the sweet youth’s in love.

D. Pedro. The greatest note of it is his melancholy.

Claud. And when was he wont to wash his face?
Claud. If I see any thing to-night why I should not marry her to-morrow, in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.

D. Pedro. And, as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.

D. John. I will disperse her no farther, till you are my witnesses; hear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.

D. Pedro. O day untowardly turned! Claud. O mischief strangely thwarting!

D. John. O plague right well prevented! So will you say, when you have seen the sequel.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Street.

Enter Dogberry and Verges, with the Watch.

Dog. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yes, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

Dog. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the prince's watch.

Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dog. First, who think you the most desertarted man to be constable?

1 Watch. Hugh O' stake, Sir, or George Seacol

Dog. For they can write and read.

Dog. Come hither, neighbour Seacol. God hath blessed you with a good name: to be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune; but to write and read comes by nature.

2 Watch. Both which, master constable.

Dog. You have known it; I would it were your answer. Well, for your favour, Sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear, when there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for the constable of the watch; therefore bear you the lantern. This is your charge—you shall comprehend all vagrom men; you are to bid any man stand, in the prince's name.

Watch. How, if a' will not stand?

Verg. Why, then, take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knife.

Dog. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the prince's subjects.

Dog. True, and they are to meddle with none but the prince's subjects. You shall also make no noise in the streets; for, for the watch to babble and talk, is most tolerable and not to be endured.

2 Watch. We will rather sleep than talk: we know what belongs to a watch.

Dog. Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman; for I cannot see how sleeping should offend: only, have a care that your bills be not stolen.—Well, you are to call at all the alehouses, and bid those that are drunk get them to bed.

Watch. How if they will not?

Dog. Why, then, let them alone till they are sober: if they make you not then the better answer, you may say they are not the men you took them for.

Watch. Well, Sir.

Dog. If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by virtue of your office, to be no true man; and, for such kind of men, the less you meddle or make with them, why, the more is for your honesty.

2 Watch. If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

Dog. Truly, by your office, you may; but I think they that touch pitch will be defiled: the most peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is, to let him show himself what he is, and steal out of your company.

Verg. You have been always called a merciful man, partner.

Dog. Truly, I would not hang a dog by my will; much more a man who hath any honesty in him.

Verg. If you hear a child cry in the night, you must call to the nurse, and bid her still it.

2 Watch. How, if the nurse be asleep, and will not hear us?

Dog. Why, then, depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying; for the ewe that will not hear her lamb when it baaes, will never answer a call when he bleats.

Verg. 'Tis very true.

Dog. This is the end of the charge. You, constable, are to present the prince's own person: if you meet the prince in the night, you may stay him.

Verg. Nay, by' th' lady, that, I think, a' cannot.

Dog. Five shilling to one on't, with any man that knows the statutes, he may stay him; marry, not without the prince be willing; for, indeed, the watch ought to offend no man; and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

Verg. By' th' lady, I think it be so.

Dog. Ha, ha, ha! Well, masters, good night: an there be any matter of weight chances, call up me: keep your fellows' concerns and your own; and good night.—Come, neighbour.

1 Watch. Well, masters, we hear our charge: let us go sit here upon the church-bench till two, and then all go to bed.

Dog. One word more, honest neighbours. I pray you, watch about signor Leonato's door; for the wedding being there to-morrow, there is a great coll to-night. Adieu, be vigilant, I beseech you.

[Exeunt Dogberry and Verges.

Enter Borachio and Conrade.

Bora. What, Conrade!

Watch. [Aside.] Peace! sir not.

Bora. Conrade, I say!

Con. Here, man; I am at thy elbow.

Bora. Mass, and my elbow itched; I thought there would a scab follow.

Con. I will owe thee an answer for that: and now forward with thy tale.

Bora. Stand thee close, then, under this penthouse, for it drizzles rain; and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

Watch. [Aside.] Some treason, masters: yet stand close.

Bora. Therefore, know, I have earned of Don John a thousand ducats.

Con. Is it possible that any villainy should be so dear?

Bora. Thou shouldst rather ask, if it were possible any villainy should be so rich; for when rich villains have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will.
SCENE IV.\] MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING. 115

Con. I wonder at it.

Bona. That shows thou art unconfirmed. Thou knowest, that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparel.

Bona. I mean, the fashion.

Con. Yes, the fashion is the fashion.

Bona. Tush! I may as well say the fool’s the fool.

But seest thou not what a deformed thief this fashion is?

Watch. [Aside.] I know that Deformed; a’ has been a vile thief this seven year: a’ goes up and down like a gentleman. I remember his name.

Bona. Didst thou not hear somebody?

Con. No; ’twas the vane on the house.

Bona. Seest thou not, I say, what a deformed thief this fashion is? how giddily he turns about all the hot bloods between fourteen and five and thirty! sometime, fashioning them like Pharaoh’s soldiers in the reeky painting; sometime, like god Bel’s priests in the old church window; sometime, like the shaven Hercules in the smirched worm-eaten tapestry,—where his cod-piece seems as massy as his club.

Con. All this I see; and I see that the fashion wears out more apparel than the man. But art not thou thyself giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Bona. Not so, neither: but know, that I have to-night woosed Margaret, the lady Hero’s gentlewoman, by the name of Hero; she leans me out at her mistress’ chamber-window, bids me a thousand times good night,—I tell this tale vilely:—I should first tell thee how the prince, Claudio, and my master, planted and placed and possessed by my master Don John, saw afar off in the orchard this amiable encounter.

Con. And thought they Margaret was Hero?

Bona. Two of them did, the prince and Claudio; but the devil, my master, knew she was Margaret; and partly by his oaths, which first possessed them, partly by the dark night, which did deceive them, but chiefly by my villainy, which did confirm any slander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged; swore he would meet her, as he was appointed next morning at the temple, and there, before the whole congregation, shame her with what he saw over-night, and send her home again without a husband.

1 Watch. We charge you in the prince’s name, stand!

2 Watch. Call up the right master constable. We have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that ever was known in the commonwealth.

1 Watch. And one Deformed is one of them: I know him; a’ wears a lock.

Con. Masters, masters,—

2 Watch. You’ll be made bring Deformed forth, I warrant you.

Con. Masters,—

1 Watch. Never speak: we charge you, let us obey you to go with us.

Bona. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of these men’s bills.

Con. A commodity in question, I warrant you.—Come, we’ll obey you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. — A Room in Leonato’s House.

Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero. Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.

Urs. I will, lady.

Hero. And bid her come hither.

Urs. Well.

Hero. No, pray thee, good Meg, I’ll wear this.

Marg. By my troth, it’s not so good; and I warrant, your cousin will say so.

Hero. My cousin’s a fool, and thou art another: I’ll wear none but this.

Marg. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner; and your gown’s a most rare fashion, ’t faith. I saw the duchess of Milan’s gown, that they praise so.

Hero. O, that exceeds, they say.

Marg. By my troth, it’s but a night-gown in respect of yours,—cloth o’ gold, and cuts, and laced with silver, set with pearls down sleeves, side sleeves, and skirts round, underborne with a bluish tinsel: but for a fine, quaint, graceful, and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on t’.

Hero. God give me joy to wear it! for my heart is exceeding heavy!

Marg. ’Twill be heavier soon by the weight of a man.

Hero. Fie upon thee! art not ashamed?

Marg. Of what, lady? of speaking honourably? is not marriage honourable in a beggar? Is not your lord honourable without marriage? I think you would have me say, saving your reverence,—"a husband;" an bad thinking do not wrest true speaking, I’ll offend nobody. Is there any harm in —"the heavier for a husband?" None, I think, an it be the right husband, and the right wife; otherwise ’tis light, and not heavy: ask my lady Beatrice else; here she comes.

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Good-morrow, col.

Beat. Good-morrow, sweet Hero.

Hero. Why, how now! do you speak in the sick tune?

Beat. I am out of all other tune, methinks.

Marg. Clap us into—"Light o’ love;" that goes without a burden: do you sing it, and I’ll dance it.

Beat. Yes, "Light o’ love," with your heels—then, if your husband have stables enough, you’ll see he shall lack no barns.

Marg. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

Beat. ’Tis almost five o’clock, cousin; ’tis time you were ready.—By my troth, I am exceeding ill:—be-hold—

Marg. For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.

Marg. Well, an you be not turned Turk, there’s no more nailing by the star.

Beat. What means the fool, trow?

Marg. Nothing I; but God send every one their heart’s desire!

Here. These gloves the count sent me; they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am stuffed, cousin, I cannot smell.
[ACT IV.

MARG. A maid, and stuffed! there's goodly catching of cold.
Butt. O, God help me! God help me! how long have you professed apprehension?
MARG. Ever since you left it. Doth not my wit become me rarely?
Beaut. It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap.—By my troth, I am sick.
MARG. Get you some of this distilled Carduus Benedictus, and lay it to your heart: it is the only thing for a qualm.
Helo. There thou prick'st her with a thistle.
Beaut. Benedictus! why Benedictus? you have some moral in this Benedictus.
MARG. Moral! no, by my troth, I have no moral meaning; I meant, plain holy-thistle. You may think, perchance, that I think you are in love: nay, by 'r lady, I am not such a fool to think what I list; nor I list not to think what I can; nor, indeed, I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love. Yet Benedict was such another, and now is he become a man: he swore he would never marry; and yet now, in despite of his heart, he eats his meat without gnawing: and how you may be converted, I know not; but methinks you look with your eyes as other women do.
Beaut. What pace is this that thy tongue keeps?
MARG. Not a false gallop.

[Re-enter Ursula.

Urso. Madam, withdraw: the prince, the count, signior Benedict, Don John, and all the gallants of the town, are come to fetch you to church.
Helo. Help to dress me, good cos, good Meg, good Ursula.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato with Dogberry and Verges.

Leon. What would you with me, honest neighbour?
Dogb. Marry, Sir, I would have some confidence with you, that decerns you nearly.
Leon. Brief, I pray you; for you see it is a busy time with me.
Dogb. Marry, this it is, Sir.
Verg. Yes, in truth it is, Sir.
Leon. What is it, my good friends?
Dogb. Goodman Verges, Sir, speaks a little off the matter: an old man, Sir, and his wits are not so blunt as, God help, I would desire they were; but, in faith, honest as the skin between his brows.
Verg. Yes, I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honester than I.
Dogb. Comparisons are odorous: palabras, neighbour Verges.
Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.
Dogb. It pleases your worship so say, but we are the poor duke's officers; but truly, for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a king, I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.
Leon. All thy tediousness on me, ha?
Dogb. Yes, an 'twere a thousand pound more than 'tis; for I hear as good exclamation on your worship, as of any man in the city; and though I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

Verg. And so am I.
Leon. I would fain know what you have to say.
Verg. Marry, Sir, our watch to-night, excepting your worship's presence, have 't'en a couple of as arrant knaves as any in Messina.
Dogb. A good old man, Sir, he will be talking: as they say, when the age is in, the wit is out. God help us! it is a world to see!—Well said, i' faith, neighbour Verges:—well, God's a good man: an two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind.—An honest soul, i' faith, Sir; by my troth he is, as ever broke bread: but God is to be worshipped: all men are not alike:—alas, good neighbour!
Leon. Indeed, neighbour, he comes too short of you.
Dogb. Gifts that God gives.
Leon. I must leave you.
Dogb. One word, Sir: our watch, Sir, have indeed comprehended two aspicious persons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worship.
Leon. Take their examination yourself, and bring it me: I am now in great haste, as may appear unto you.
Dogb. It shall be suffigance.
Leon. Drink some wine ere you go: fare you well.

Enter a Messenger

Mess. My lord, they stay for you to give your daughter to her husband.
Leon. I'll wait upon them: I am ready.

[Exit Leonato and Messenger.

Dogb. Go, good partner, go, get you to Francis Seacoal; bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the gaol: we are to examination these men.
Verg. And we must do it wisely.
Dogb. We will spare for no wit, I warrant you: here's that shall drive some of them to a non cons: only get the learned writer to set down our excommunication, and meet me at the gaol.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Inside of a Church.

Enter Don Pedro, Don John, Leonato, Friar Francis, Claudio, Benedict, Hero, Beatrice, and others.

Leon. Come, friar Francis, be brief; only to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.
Frier. You come hither, my lord, to marry this lady?
Claud. No.
Leon. To be married to her: friar, you come to marry her.
Frier. Lady, you come hither to be married to this count?
Here. I do.
Frier. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conjoined, I charge you, on your souls, to utter it.
Claud. Know you any, Hero?
Here. None, my lord.
Frier. Know you any, count?
Leon. I dare make his answer,—None.
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

SCENE I.

Claud. O, what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do, not knowing what they do!
Bene. How now! Interjections? Why then, some be of laughing, as, ha! ha! ha!
Claud. Stand thee by, friar.—Father, by your leave with free and unconstrained soul—Give me this maid, your daughter!
Leom. As freely, son, as God did give her me.
Claud. And what have I to give you back, whose worth May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?
D. Pedro. Nothing, unless you render her again.
Claud. Sweet prince, you learn me noble thank-You, Leonato; take her back again: fullness.
Give not this rotten orange to your friend;
She's but the sign and semblance of her honour.
Behold how like a maid she blushes here!
O, what authority and show of truth
Can cunning sin cover itself withal!
Comes not that blood as modest evidence
To witness simple virtue? Would you not swear,
All you that see her, that she were a maid,
By these exterior shows? But she is none:
She knows the heat of a luxurious bed;
Her blush is guiltless, not modesty.
Leom. What do you mean, my lord?
Claud. Not to be married;
Not to knit my soul to an approved wanton.
D. John. Dear my lord, if you, in your own proof,
Have vanquished the resistance of her youth,
And made defeat of her virginity,—
Claud. I know what you would say: if I have known her,
You'll say she did embrace me as a husband,
And extenuate the 'forehand sin:
No, Leonato,
I never tempted her with word too large;
But, as a brother to his sister, show'd
Bashful sincerity and comely love.
Leom. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?
Claud. Out on thee! Seeming! I will write
You seem to me as Dian in her orb, [against it]
As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown:
But you are more intemperate in your blood
Than Venus, or those pamper'd animals
That rage in savage sensuality.
Leom. Is my lord well, that he doth speak so wide?
Claud. Sweet prince, why, speak not you?
D. Pedro. What should I speak?
I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about
To link my dear friend to a common stake.
Bene. Are these things spoken? or do I but dream?
D. John. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.
Bene. This looks not like a nuptial.
Claud. Leonato, stand I here!
Is this the prince? Is this the prince's brother?
Is this face Hero? Are our eyes our own?
Claud. All this is so; but what of this, my lord?
Claud. Let me but move one question to your And, by that fatherly and kindly power [daughter;
That you have in her, bid her answer truly.
Claud. I charge you do so, as thou art my child.
Leom. O, God defend me! how am I beset!—
What kind of catechizing call you this?
Claud. To make you answer truly to your name.
Leom. Is it not Hero? Who can blot that name
With any just reproach?

Claud. Marry, that can Hero:
Hero itself can blot out Hero's virtue.
What man was he that talk'd with you yesternight
Out at your window, betwixt twelve and one?
Now, if you are a maid, answer to this.
Leom. I talk'd with no man at that hour, my lord.
D. Pedro. Why, then are you no maiden.—Leonato,
I am sorry you must hear: upon mine honour,
Myself, my brother, and this griev'd count,
Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night,
'Walk with a niffian at her chamber-window;
Who hath indeed, most like a liberal villain,
Confess'd the vile encounters they have had
A thousand times in secret.
D. John. Fie, fie! they are not to be nam'd, my lord,
Not to be spoke of; [hero
There is not chastity enough in language,
Without offence to utter them. Thus, pretty lady,
I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.
Claud. O Hero! what a Hero hast thou been,
If half thy outward graces had been plac'd
About thy thoughts, and counsels of thy heart!
But fare thee well, most foul, most fair! farewell,
Thou pure impurity, and impious purity!
For thee I'll lock up all the gates of love,
And on my eye-lids shall conjecture hang,
To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,
And never shall it more be gracious.
Leom. Hath no man's dagger here a point for me?
[HERO returns.
Bene. Why, how now, cousin Hero! wherefore sink you down?
D. John. Come, let us go. These things, come Smother her spirits up.
[Exeunt DON PEDRO, DON JOHN, AND CLAUDIO.
Bene. How doth the lady?
Brot. Dead, I think?—help, uncle!—
Hero! why, Hero!—Uncle!—Signior Benedick!—
Friar!
Leom. O fate, take not away thy heavy hand!
Death is the fairest cover for her shame
That may be wish'd for.
Brot. How now, cousin Hero!
Friar. Have comfort, lady.
Leom. Dost thou look up?
Friar. Yea, wherefore should she not?
Leom. Wherefore? Why, doth not every earthly Cry shame upon her? Could she here desy [thing
The story that is printed in her blood?—
Do not live, Hero; do not ope thine eyes:
For, did I think thou wouldst not quickly die,
The thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy shame,
Myself would, on the rearward of reproaches,
Strike at thy life. Grie'd I, I had but one:
Chid I for that at frugal nature's frame?
O, one too much by thee! Why had I one?
Why ever wast thou lovely in my eyes?
Why had I not with charitable hand
Took up a beggar's issue at my gates;
Who smirched this and mir'd with infamy,
I might have said, "No part of it is mine;
This shame derives itself from unknown loiis!"
But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was proud on; mine so much,
That I myself was to myself not mine,
Valuing of her; why, she—O, she is fallen
Into a pit of ink, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her clean again,
And salt too little, which may season give
To her foul tainted flesh!
Bene. Sir, Sir, be patient.
For my part, I am so attir'd in wonder,
I know not what to say.
Bast. O, on my soul, my cousin is belied!
Bene. Lady, were you her bead-fellow last night?
Bast. No, truly, not; although, until last night,
I have this twelvemonth been her bead-fellow.
Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd! O, that is stronger made,
Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron!
Would the two princes lie? and Claudio lie,
Who lov'd her so, that, speaking of her foulness,
Wash'd it with tears? Hence from her! let her die.
Friar. Hear me a little;
For I have only been silent so long,
And given way unto this course of fortune,
By noting of the lady: I have mark'd
A thousand blushing apparitions
Into her face; a thousand innocent shame
In angel whiteness bear away those blushes;
And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire,
To burn the errors that these princes hold
Against her maiden truth. Call me a fool;
Trust not my reading nor my observation,
Which with experimental dote doth warrant
The tenor of my book; trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor divinity,
If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here
Under some biting error.
Leon. Friar, it cannot be.
Thou seest that all the grace that she hath left,
Is, that she will not add to her damnation
A sin of perjury: she not denies it.
Why seek'st thou, then, to cover with excuse
That which appears in proper nakedness?
Friar. Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of?
Her. They know, that do accuse me; I know none:
If I know more of any man alive,
Than that which maiden modesty doth warrant,
Let all my sins lack mercy!—O, my father!
Prove you that any man with me convers'd
At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight
Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death. [princes.
Friar. There is some strange misprison in the Bene. Two of them have the very bent of honour;
And if their wisdoms be misled in this,
The practice of it lives in John the bastard,
Whose spirit is in frame of villains.
Leon. I know not. If they speak but truth of her,
These hands shall tear her: if they wrong her honour,
The proudest of them shall well hear of it.
Time hath not yet so driest this blood of mine,
Nor age so eat up my invention,
Nor fortune made such havoc of my means,
Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,
But they shall find, awak'd in such a kind,
Both strength of limb and policy of mind,
Ability in means and choice of friends,
To quit me of them thoroughly.
Friar. Pause a while,
And let my counsel sway you in this case.
Your daughter, here, the princes left for dead:
Let her a while be secretly kept in,
And publish it, that she is dead indeed;
Maintain a mourning ostentation,
And on your family's old monument
Hang mournful epitaphs, and do all rites
That appertain unto a burial.
Leon. What shall become of this? What will this Friar. Marry, this, well carried, shall on her behalf
Change slander to remorse;—that is some good:
But not for that dream I on this strange course,
But on this travel look for greater birth.
She dying, as it must be so maintain'd,
Upon the instant that she was accus'd,
Shall be lamented, pitied, and excused
Of every hearer: for it so falls out,
That what we have we prize not to the worth
Whiles we enjoy it; but being lack'd and lost,
Why, then we rack the value, then we find
The virtue that possession would not show us,
Whiles it was ours.—So will it fare with Claudio:
When he shall hear she died upon his words,
The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination;
And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparel'd in more precious habit,
More moving delicate, and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soul,
Than when she liv'd indeed:—then shall he mourn,
(If ever love had interest in his liver)
And wish he had not so accus'd her;—
No, though he thought his accusation true.
Let this be so, and doubt not but success
Will fashion the event in better shape
Than I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this be level'd false,
The supposition of the lady's death
Will quench the wonder of her infamy:
And if it sort not well, you may conceal her
(As best befits her wounded reputation)
In some reclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries.
Bene. Signior Leonato, let the friar advise you:
And though you know my inwardness and love
Is very much unto the prince and Claudio,
Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this
As secretly and justly, as your soul
Should with your body.
Leon. Being that I flow in grief,
The smallest twine may lead me.
Friar. This is well considered: presently away;
For to strange sores strangely they strain the Come, lady, die to live: this wedding day
[exit Friar. Perhaps is but prolong'd: have patience, and endure.]
Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while?
Bust. Yes, and I will weep a while longer.
Bene. I will not desire that.
Bust. You have no reason; I do it freely.
Bene. Surely, I do believe your fair cousin is wronged.
Bust. Ah, how much might the man deserve of me that would right her!
Bene. Is there any way to show such friendship?
Bust. A very easy way, but no such friend.
Bene. May a man do it?
Bust. It is a man's office, but not yours.
Bene. I do love nothing in the world so well as you: is not that strange?
Bust. As strange as the thing I know not. It were as possible for me to say I loved nothing so well as you: but believe me not; and yet I lie not; I confess nothing, nor I deny nothing.—I am sorry for my cousin.

Beatrice. By my sword, Beatrice, thou lovtest me.

Beatrice. Do not swear by it, and eat it.

Beatrice. I will swear by it that you love me; and I will make him eat it that says I love not you.

Beatrice. Will you not eat your word?

Beatrice. With no sauce that can be devised to it. I protest I love thee.

Beatrice. Why then, God forgive me!

Beatrice. What offence, sweet Beatrice?

Beatrice. You have stayed me in a happy hour: I was about to protest I loved you.

Beatrice. And do it with all thy heart.

Beatrice. I love you with so much of my heart, that none is left to protest.

Beatrice. Come, bid me do any thing for thee.

Beatrice. Kill Claudio.

Beatrice. Ha! for the wide world.

Beatrice. You kill me to deny it. Farewell.

Beatrice. Terry, sweet Beatrice.

Beatrice. I am gone, though I am here:—there is no

Beatrice. Nay, I pray you, let me go.

Beatrice. Beatrice.

Beatrice. In faith, I will go.

Beatrice. We'll be friends first.

Beatrice. You dare easier be friends with me, than Beatrice. Is Claudio thine enemy?

Beatrice. Is he not approved in the height a villain,

Beatrice. Ha! for I am engaged; I will challenge

Beatrice. Think you in your soul the count Claudio hath wronged Hero?

Beatrice. Yes, as sure as I have a thought or a soul.

Beatrice. Enough! I am engaged; I will challenge

Beatrice. You must say she is dead: and so, fare-suddenly died.—Master constable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato’s: I will go before, and show them their examination. [Exit.

Dog. Come, let them be opinioned.

Verg. Let them be in the hands—

Con. Oof, coxcomb!

Dog. God’s my life! where’s the sexton? let him write down—the prince’s officer, coxcomb.—

Come, bind them.—Thou naughty varlet!

Con. Away! you are an ass, you are an ass.

Dog. Dost thou not suspect my place?—Dost thou not suspect my years?—O that he were here to write me down an ass!—but, masters, remember that I am an ass; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass.—No, thou villain, thou art full of piety, as shall be proved upon thee by good witness. I am a wise fellow; and, which is more, an officer; and, which is more, a householder, and, which is more, a good piece of flesh, and, in any Messina; and one that knows the law, go to; and a rich fellow enough, go to; and a fellow that hath had losses; and one that hath two gowns, and every thing handsome about him. Bring him away.—O that I had been writ down an ass!

[Exeunt.

ACT. V.

SCENE I.—Before LEONATO’S HOUSE.

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO.

Ant. If you go on thus, you will kill yourself; And this will not wisdom thus to subdue grief Against yourself.

Leon. I pray thee, cease thy counsel, Which falls into mine ears as profanities As water in a sieve: give not me counsel; Nor let no comforter delight mine ear But such a one whose wrongs do suit with mine. Bring me a father that so lov’d his child, Whose joy of her is overwhelm’d like mine, And bid him speak of patience; Measure his woe the length and breadth of mine, And let it answer every strain for strain; As thus for thus, and such a grief for such, In every lineament, branch, shape, and form:— If such a one will smile, and stroke his beard; Cry “Sorrow, wag!” and him, when he should groan; Patch grief with provers; make misfortune drunk With candle-wasters;—bring him yet to me, And I of him will gather patience. But there is no such man: for, brother, men Can counsel, and speak comfort to that grief Which they themselves not feel; but, tasting it, Their counsel turns to passion, which before Would give preceptual medicine to rage, Fetter strong madness in a silken thread, Charm ache with air, and agony with words: No, no; ’tis all men’s office, as my patience To those that wring under the load of sorrow; But no man’s virtue, nor sufficiency, To be so moral when he shall endure The like himself. Therefore give me no counsel: My griefs cry louder than advertisement.

Ant. Therein do men from children nothing differ.

Leon. I pray thee, peace! I will be flesh and For there was never yet philosopher

That could endure the tooth-ache patiently, However they have writ the style of gods, And made a push at chance and suffrance. Ant. Yet bend not all the harm upon yourself; Make those that do offend you suffer too. [so.

Leon. There thou speakest reason: nay, I will do My soul doth tell me Hero is belied; And that shall Claudio know; so shall the prince, And all of them that thus disannoy her.

Ant. Here come the prince and Claudio hastily.

Enter Don PEDRO and CLAUDIO.

D. Pedro. Good den, good den.

Claud. Good day to both of you.

Leon. Hear you, my lords.—

D. Pedro. We have some haste, Leonato.

Leon. Some haste, my lord!—well, fare you well, my lord.—

Are you so hasty now?—well, all is one. [man.

D. Pedro. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old Ant. If he could right himself with quarrelling, Some of us would lie low. Who wrongs him?

Claud. Marry, thou dost wrong me; thou, dissembler, thou;—

Nay, never lay thy hand upon thy sword; I fear thee not.

Claud. Marry, besbrew my hand, If it should give your age such cause of fear: In faith, my hand meant nothing to my sword.

Leon. Tush, tush, man! never fleer and jest at I speak not like a dotard nor a fool, [me: As, under privilege of age, to brag

What have I done being young, or what would do, Were I not old. Know, Claudio, to thy head, Thou hast so wrong’d mine innocent child and me, That I am forc’d to lay my reverence by, And, with gray hairs and bruises of many days, Do challenge thee to trial of a man. I say thou hast belied mine innocent child: Thy slander hath gone through and through her And she lies buried with her ancestors,—[heart, O, in a tomb where never scandal slept, Save this of hers, fram’d by thy villainy! Claud. My villainy!—

Leon. Thine, Claudio; thine, I say.

D. Pedro. You say not right, old man.

Leon. My lord, my lord, I’ll prove it on his body, if he dare, Despite his nice fence and his active practice, His May of youth and bloom of lustyhood. Claud. Away! I will not have to do with you. Leon. Canst thou so daff me? Thou hast kill’d my child:

If thou killst me, boy, thou shalt kill a man. Ant. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed: But that’s no matter; let him kill one first:— Win me and wear me,—let him answer me. Come, follow me, boy! come, sir boy, come, follow me! Sir boy, I’ll whip you from your faining fence; Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother,— [niece.

Ant. Content yourself. God knows I lov’d my And she is dead, slander’d to death by villains, That dare as well answer a man, indeed, As I dare take a serpent by the tongue; Boys, apos, braggers, Jacks, milksops!—

Leon. Brother Antony,—
Ant. Hold you content. What, man! I know them, yes,
And what they weigh, even to the utmost scruple,— Scambling, out-facing, fashion-mong’ring boys,
That lie, and cog, and stout, deprave, and slander,
Go antickly, and show outward hideousness,
And speak of half a dozen dangerous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst;
And this is all!
Leo. But, brother Antonio,—
Ant. 'Tis no matter; do not you meddle; let me deal in this.
D. Pedro. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience.
My heart is sorry for your daughter’s death:
But, on my honour, she was charg’d with nothing
But what was true, and very full of proof.
Leo. My lord, my lord!—
D. Pedro. I will not hear you.
Leo. No,—
Ant. Come, brother, away. I will be heard.—
And shall, or some of us will smart for it. [Exit LEONATO and ANTONIO.]
D. Pedro. See, see; here comes the man we went to seek.

Enter BENEDICK.

Claud. Now, signior, what news?
Bene. Good day, my lord.
D. Pedro. Welcome, signior: you are almost come to part almost a fray.
Claud. We had like to have had our two noses snapped off with two old men without teeth.
D. Pedro. Leonato and his brother. What think’st thou? Had we fought, I doubt, we should have been too young for them.
Bene. In a false quarter there is no true valour.
I came to seek you both.
Claud. We have been up and down to seek thee;
for we are high-proof melancholy, and would fain have it beaten away. Will thou use thy wit?
Bene. It is in my scabbard; shall I draw it?
D. Pedro. Dost thou wear thy wit by thy side?
Claud. Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit.——I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels; draw, to pleasure us.
D. Pedro. As I am an honest man, he looks pale.——Art thou sick, or angry?
Claud. What, courage, man! What though care killed a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.
Bene. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the careers, an you change it against me. I pray you, choose another subject.
Claud. Nay then, give him another staff: this last was broke cross.
D. Pedro. By this light, he changes more and more. I think he be angry indeed.
Claud. If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.
Bene. Shall I speak a word in your ear?
Claud. God bless me from a challenge!
Bene. You are a villain;—I jest not:—I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare.——Do me right, or I will protest your cowardice. You have killed a sweet lady, and her death shall fall heavy on you. Let me hear from you.
Claud. Well, I will meet you, so I may have good cheer.
D. Pedro. What, a feast? a feast?
D. Pedro. First, I ask thee what they have done; thirdly, I ask thee what’s their offence; sixth and lastly, why they are committed; and, to conclude, what you lay to their charge?

Claud. Rightly reasoned, and in his own division; and, by my truth, there’s one meaning well suited.

D. Pedro. Whom have you offended, masters, that you are thus bound to your answer? this learned constable is too cunning to be understood: what’s your offence?

Bora. Sweet prince, let me go no farther to mine answer: do you hear me, and let this count kill me. I have deceived even your very eyes: what your wisdom could not discover, these shallow fools have brought to light; who, in the night, overheard me confessing to this man, how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the lady Hero; how you were brought into the orchard, and saw me court Margaret in Hero’s garments; how you disgraced her, when you should marry her: my villainy they have upon record: which I had rather seal with my death, than repeat over to my shame. The lady is dead upon mine and my master’s false accusation; and, briefly, I desire nothing but the reward of a villain.

D. Pedro. Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?

Claud. I have drunk poison whiles he utter’d it.

D. Pedro. But did my brother set thee on to this?

Bora. Yes; and paid me richly for the practice of it.

D. Pedro. He compos’d and fram’d of treach’r
And fled he is upon this villainy. [ery:—]

Claud. Sweet Hero! now thy image doth appear in the rare semblance that I lov’d it first.

Dog. Come, bring away the plaintiffs: by this time our sexton hath reformed signior Leonato of the matter: and masters, do not forget to specify, when time and place shall serve, that I am an ass.

Verg. Here, here comes master signior Leonato, and the sexton too.

Re-enter Leonato, Antonio, and the Sexton.

Leon. Which is the villain? Let me see his eyes, That, when I note another man like him, I may avoid him: which of these is he? [C. Bora. If you would know your wringer, look on Leon. Art thou the slave that with thy breath Mine innocent child? [hast kill’d Bora. Leon. No, not so, villain; thou believest thyself:

Here stand a pair of honourable men,
A third is fied, that had a hand in it.—
I thank you, princes, for my daughter’s death; Record it with your high and worthy deeds;
’Twas bravely done, if you bethink you of it.

Claud. I know not how to pray your patience; Yet I must speak. Choose your revenge yourself; Impose me to what penance your invention Can lay upon my sin: yet sim’r’d I not, But in mistaking.

Bora. Tis true. By my soul, nor I: And yet, to satisfy this good old man, I would bend under any heavy weight That he’ll enjoin me to.

Leon. I cannot bid you my daughter live,— That were impossible; but, I pray you both, Possess the people in Messina here, How innocent she died; and if your love Can labour aught in sad invention, Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb,
And sing it to her bones,—sing it to-night;—
To-morrow morning come you to my house; And since you could not be my son-in-law, Be yet my nephew: my brother hath a daughter, Almost the copy of my child that’s dead, And she alone is heir to both of us: Give her the right you should have given her cousin, And so dies my revenge.

Claud. O noble Sir!

Leon. To-morrow, then, I will expect your coming; To-night I take my leave.—This naughty man Shall face to face be brought to Margaret, Who, I believe, was pack’d in all this wrong, Hir’d it to by your brother.

Bora. No, by my soul, she was not. Nor knew not what she did, when she spoke to me; But always hath been just and virtuous, In any thing that I do know by her.

Dog. Moreover, Sir, (which, indeed, is not under white and black,) this plaintiff here, the offender, did call me ass: I beseech you, let it be remem- bered in his punishment. And also, the watch heard them talk of one Deformed: they say he wears a key in his ear, and a lock hanging by it; and borrows money in God’s name,—the which he hath used so long, and never paid, that now men grow hard-hearted, and will lend nothing for God’s sake: pray you, examine him upon that point.

Leon. I thank thee for thy care and honest pains.

Dog. Your worship speaks like a most thankful and reverend youth; and I praise God for you.

Leon. There’s for thy pains.

Dog. God save the foundation!

Leon. Go, I discharge thee of this prisoner, and I thank thee.

Dog. I leave an arrant knave with your worship: which I beseech your worship to correct yourself, for the example of others. God keep your worship! I wish your worship well; God restore you to health! I humbly give you leave to depart; and if a merry meeting may be wished, God prohibit it!—Come, neighbour.

[Exeunt Dogberry, Verges, and Watch.

Ant. Farewell, my lords: we look for you to-morrow.

D. Pedro. We will not fail.

Claud. To-night I’ll mourn with Hero.

[Exeunt Don Pedro and Claudio.

Leon. Bring you these fellows on. We’ll talk with Margaret, How her acquaintance grew with this lewed fellow.

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—Leonato’s Garden.

Enter Benedick and Margaret, meeting.

Beno. Pray thee, sweet mistress Margaret, deserve well at my hands by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.

Merc. Will you, then, write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?

Beno. In so high a style, Margaret, that no man living shall come over it; for, in most comely truth, thou deservest it.
SCENE III.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

123.

Marg. To have no man come over me! why, shall I always keep below stairs?
Bene. Thy wit is as quick as the greyhound’s mouth,—it catches.
Marg. And you are as blunt as the fencer’s foils, which hit, but hurt not.
Bene. A most manly wit, Margaret; it will not hurt a woman; and so, I pray thee, call Beatrice: I give thee the buckler of our own.
Marg. If you use them, Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice; and they are dangerous weapons for maids.
Bene. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I think hath legs.
Marg. And therefore will come.

[Exit MARGARET.

[Singing]
The god of love,
That sits above,
And knows me, and knows me,
How pitiful I deserve,—

[Enter BEATRICE.

I mean, in singing; but in loving, Leander the good swimmer, Troilus the first employer of pander, and a whole book full of these quondam carpet-monkeys, whose names yet run smoothly in the even road of a blank verse,—why, they were never so truly turned over and over as my poor self, in love. Marry, I cannot show it in rhyme; I have tried: I can find out no rhyme to “lady” but “baby,”—an innocent rhyme; for “corn,” “horn,”—a hard rhyme; for “school,” “fool,”—a babbling rhyme; very ominous endings: no, I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.—

Enter Beatrice.

Sweet Beatrice, wouldst thou come when I called thee?
Bene. Yea, signior; and depart when you bid me.
Marg. O, stay but till then!
Bene. “Then” is spoken; fare you well now:—and yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came for; which is, with knowing what hath passed between you and Claudio.
Marg. Only foul words; and thereupon I will kiss thee.
Bene. Foul words is but foul wind, and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome; therefore I will depart unkindly.
Marg. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit. But I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge; and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And, I pray thee now, tell me for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me?
Bene. For them all together; which maintained so politic a state of evil, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts didst thou first suffer love for me?
Bene. “Suffer love”—a good epithet! I do suffer love indeed, for I love thee against my will.
Bene. In spite of your heart, I think; alas, poor heart! If you spit it for my sake, I will spit it for yours; for I will never love that which my friend hates.
Bene. Then and I are too wise to woo pensively. But it appears not in this confession: there’s not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.
Bene. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that lived in the time of good neighbours. If a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument than the bell tings and the widow weeps.
Bene. And how long is that, think you?
Bene. Question—why, an hour in clamber, and a quarter in rheum: therefore is it most expedient for the wise (if Don Worm, his conscience, find no impediment to the contrary) to be their rumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself. So much for praising myself, who, I myself will bear witness, is praiseworthy. And now tell me, how doth your cousin?
Bene. Very ill.
Bene. And how do you?
Bene. Very ill too.
Bene. Serve God, love me, and mend. There will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

[Enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, you must come to your uncle. Yonder’s old coil at home: it is proved, my lady Hero hath been falsely accused, the prince and Claudio mightily abused: and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone. Will you come presently?
Bene. Will you go hear this news signior?
Bene. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be buried in thy eyes; and moreover, I will go with thee to thy uncle’s.

[Exit.

SCENE III.  — The Inside of a Church.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, and Attendants, with music and thapers.

Claud. Is this the monument of Leonato?
Att. It is, my lord.
Claud. [Reads from a scroll.]
Done to death by slanderous tongues.
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death, in gendour of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies.
So the life, that died with shame,
Lives in death with glorious fame.

Hand thou there upon the tomb.

[Appealing it: as Ephes.]

Now, music, sound; and sing your solemn hymn.

SONG.

Pardon, goddess of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight;
For the which, with songs of woe,
Round about her tomb they go.
Midnight, assist our mourn;
Help us to sigh and groan,
Heavily, heavily.

Graves, yawn, and yield your dead,
Till death be uttered,
Heavily, heavily.

Claud. Now, unto thy bones good night!
Yearly will I do this rite.

D. Pedro. Good-morrow, masters; put your torches out.
The wolves have prey’d; and look, the gentle day,
Before the wheels of Phoebus, round about
Dapples the drowsy east with spots of gray.
Thanks to you all, and leave us: fare you well.

Claud. Good-morrow, masters: each his several way.
D. Pedro. Come, let us hence, and put on other weeds:
And then to Leonato’s we will go.
Claud. And Hymen now with luckier issue speed;
Than this, for whom we render’d up this woe!

{Exeunt.}

SCENE IV.—A Room in Leonato’s House.
Enter Leonato, Antonio, Benedick, Beatrice, Margaret, Ursula, Friar Francis, and Hero.

Friar. Did I not tell you she was innocent?
Leon. So are the prince and Claudio, who accus’d her.

Upon the error that you heard debated:
But Margaret was in some fault for this,
Although against her will, as it appears
In the true course of all the question.
Ant. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.
Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforc’d
To think that young Claudio to a reckoning for it.
Leon. Well, daughter, and you gentiwen all,
Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves,
And when I send for you, come hither mask’d:
The prince and Claudio promis’d by this hour
To visit me.—You know your office, brother;
You must be father to your brother’s daughter,
And give. her to young Claudio. {Exeunt ladies.
Ant. Which I will do with confin’d countenance.
Bene. Friar, I must entreat your pains, I think.
Friar. To do what, signior?
Bene. To bind me, or undo me; one of them.—
Signior Leonato, truth it is, good signior,
Your niece regards me with an eye of favour.
Leon. That eye my daughter lent her: ’tis most true.
Bene. The sight whereof, I think, you had from me,
From Claudio, and the prince: but what’s your will?
Bene. Your answer, Sir, is enigmatical;
But, for my will, my will is, your good will
May stand with ours, this day to be conjoin’d
In the state of honourable marriage:
In which, good friar, I shall desire your help.
Leon. My heart is with your liking.

Friar. And my help.—Here come the prince and Claudio.

Enter Don Pedro and Claudio, with Attendants.

D. Pedro. Good-morrow to this fair assembly.
Leon. Good-morrow, prince; good-morrow, Claudio;

We here attend you. Are you yet determin’d
To-day to marry with my brother’s daughter?
Claud. I’ll hold my mind, were she an Ethiop.
Leon. Call her forth, brother: here’s the friar ready. {Exit Antonio.

D. Pedro. Good-morrow, Benedick. Why, what’s that matter,
That you have such a February face,
So full of frost, of storm, and cloudiness?
Bened. I think he thinks upon the savage bull—
Tush! fear not, man; we’ll tip thy horns with gold,
And all Europa shall rejoice at thee;
As once Europa did at lusty Jove,
When he held the golden bowl in hand.
Bene. Jove Jove, Sir, had an amiable low;
And some such strange bull leap’d your father’s cow,

And got a calf in that same noble feast,
Much like to you, for you have just his beat.
Claud. For this I owe you: here come other reckonings.

Re-enter Antonio, with the ladies masked.

Which is the lady I must seize upon?
Ant. This same is she, and I do give you her.
Claud. Why, then she’s mine.—Sweet, let me see your face.
Leon. No, that you shall not, till you take her hand.

Before this friar, and swear to marry her.
Claud. Give me your hand before this holy friar:
I am your husband, if you like of me.
Hero. And when I liv’d, I was your other wife.

{Unmasking.}

And when you lov’d, you were my other husband.
Claud. Another Hero! Hero.

Nothing certainer:
One Hero died defil’d; but I do live,
And surely as I live, I am a maid.
D. Pedro. The former Hero! Hero that is dead!
Leon. She died, my lord, but whiles her slander liv’d.

Friar. All this amazement can I qualify:
Whenafter that the holy rites are ended,
I’ll tell you largely of fair Hero’s death:
Meantime, let wonder seem familiar,
And to the chapel let us presently.
Bene. Soft and fair, friar.—Which is Beatrice?

Beat. {Unmasking.} I answer to that name. What is your will?
Bene. Do not you love me?

Beat. Why, no; no more than reason.

Bene. Why, then, your uncle, and the prince, and Claudio,
Have been deceived; for they swore you did.
Beat. Do not you love me?

Beat. Troth, no; no more than reason.

Beat. Why, then, my cousin, Margaret, and Ursula,
Are much deceiv’d; for they did swear, you did.
Beat. They swore that you were almost sick for me.

Beat. They swore that you were well-nigh dead for me.

Beat. ’Tis no such matter.—Then, you do not love me?

Beat. No, truly, but in friendly recompense.

Leon. Come, cousin, I am sure you love the gentle

Claud. And I’ll be sworn upon’t that he loves her:
For here’s a paper, written in his hand,
A halting sonnet of his own pure brain,
Fashion’d to Beatrice.

Hero. And here’s another,
Writ in my cousin’s hand, stolen from her pocket,
Containing her affection unto Benedick.

Beat. A miracle! here’s our own hands against our hearts.—Come, I will have thee; but, by this light, I take thee for pity.

Beat. I would not deny you;—but, by this good day, I yield upon great persuasion; and partly to save your life, for I was told you were in a consumption.

Beat. Peace! I will stop your mouth.

{Kissing her.
D. Pedro. How dost thou, Benedick, the married man?

Benz. I'll tell thee what, prince; a college of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour. Dost thou think I care for a satire, or an epigram? No: if a man will be beaten with brains, he shall wear nothing handsome about him. In brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it; for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion.—For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee; but, in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.

Claud. I had well hoped thou wouldst have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgelled thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double-dealer; which, out of question, thou wilt be, if my cousin do not look exceeding narrowly to thee.

Benz. Come, come, we are friends.—Let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wives' heels.

Leon. We'll have dancing afterward.

Benz. First, of my word; therefore play, music!—Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife, get thee a wife: there is no staff more reverend than one tipped with horn.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your brother John is ta'en in flight,
And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Benz. Think not on him till to-morrow: I'll devise thee brave punishments for him.—Strike up, pipers!

[Music. Exeunt.]

SCENE.—Navarre.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Park, with a Palace in it.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Dumain.

King. Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live register'd upon our brazen tombs,
And then grace us in the disgrace of death;
When, spite of cormorant devouring Time,
'Tis our endeavour of this present breath may buy
That honour which shall bate his scythe's keen
And make us heirs of all eternity.
Therefore, brave conquerors,—for so you are,
That war against your own affections,
And the huge army of the world's desires,—
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force:
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world;
Our court shall be a little Academe,
Still and contemplative in living art.
You three, Biron, Dumain, and Longaville,
I have sworn for three years' term to live with me,
My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes
That are recorded in this schedule here:
Your oaths are past; and now subscribe your names,
That his own hand may strike his honour down,
That violates the smallest branch herein:
If you are arm'd to do, as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oaths, and keep it too.
Long. I am resolv'd; 'tis but a three years' fast
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine:
Fat paunches have lean pates; and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.
Dum. My loving lord, Dumain is mortified:
The grosser manner of these world's delights
He throws upon the gross world's base slaves:
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die;
With all these living in philosophy.
Biron. I can but say their protestation over;
So much, dear liege, I have already sworn,
That is, to live and study here three years,
But there are other strict observances:
As, not to see a woman in that term,—
Which I hope well is not enrolled there;
And one day in a week to touch no food,
And but one meal on every day beside,—
The which I hope is not enrolled there;
And then, to sleep but three hours in the night,
And not be seen to wink of all the day,
(When I was wont to think no harm all night,
And make a dark night too of half the day,)—
Which I hope well is not enrolled there:
O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keep,—
Not to see ladies, study, fast, not sleep!
King. Your oath is pass'd to pass away from these.
Biron. Let me say no, my liege, an you please
I only swore to study with your grace,
And stay here in your court for three years' space.
Long. You swore to that, Biron, and to the rest.
Biron. By yes and no, Sir, then I swore in jest.—
What is the end of study? let me know.
King. Why, that to know, which else we should not know.
Biron. Things hid and barr'd, you mean, from common sense?
King. Ay, that is study's god-like recom pense.
Biron. Come on, then; I will swear to study so,
To know the thing I am forbid to know:
As thus,—to study where I well may dine,
When I to feast expressly am forbid;
Or study where to meet some mistress fine,
When mistresses from common sense are hid;
Or, having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath,
Study to break it, and not break my troth.
If study's gain be thus, and this be so,
Study knows that which yet it doth not know:
Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say no.
King. These be the stops that hinder study quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.
Biron. Why, all delights are vain; but that most
Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain:
As, painfully to pore upon a book:
To seek the light of truth: while truth the while Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look:
Scene 1.

[Light, seeking light, doth light of light beguile:—
So ere you find where light in darkness lies,
Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.
Study me how to please the eye indeed,
By fixing it upon a fairer eye:
Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed,
And give him light that it was blinded by.
Study is like the heven's glorious sun,
That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks:
Small have continual plodders ever won,
Save base authority from others' books.
These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights,
That give a name to every fixed star,
Have no more profit of their shining nights
Than those that walk, and wit not what they are.
Too much to know, is to know naught but fame;
And every godfather can give a name.
King. How well he's read, to reason against reading!
Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding!
Long. He weeds the corn, and still lets grow the weeding.
Biron. The spring is near, when green geese are a data breeding.
Dum. How follows that?
Biron. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reason nothing.
Biron. Something, then, in rhyme.
King. Biron is like an eavish sneaping frost,
That bites the first-born infants of the spring.
Biron. Well, say I am; why should proud sumter boast,
Before the birds have any cause to sing?
Why should I joy in an abortive birth?
At Christmas I no more desire a rose,
Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled shows;
But like of each thing that in season grows.
So you, to study now it is too late,
Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate.
King. Well, sit you out: go home, Biron: adieu!
Biron. No, my good lord; I have sworn to stay
With you:
And though I have for barbarism spoke more
Than for that angel knowledge you can say,
Yet confident I'll keep to what I swore;
And bide the pence of each three years' day.
Give me the paper,—let me read the same;
And to the strictest decrees I'll write my name.
King. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame?
Biron. [Reads.] "Item, That no woman shall come within a mile of my court."—Hath this been proclaimed?
Long. Four days ago.
Biron. Let's see the penalty. [Reads.] "On pain of losing her tongue."—Who devised this penalty?
Long. Marry, that did I.
Biron. Sweet lord, and why?
Long. To fright them hence with that dread penalty.
Biron. A dangerous law against gentility! [Reads.]
"Item, If any man be seen to talk with a woman within the term of three years, he shall endure such public shame as the rest of the court can possibly devote."
This article, my liege, yourself must break;
For well you know, here comes embassy
The French king's daughter with yourself to speak,—
A maid of grace and complete majesty,—
About surrender up of Aquilain.
To her decrepit, sick, and bed-rid father:
Therefore this article is made in vain,
Or vainly comes th' admired princess hither.
King. What say you, lords? why, this was quite Biron. So study evermore is overshot; [forgot.
While it doth study to have what it would,
It doth forget to do the thing it should;
And when it hath the thing it hunteth most,
'Tis won, as towns with fire; so won, so lost.
King. We must of force dispense with this de-
She must lie here on mere necessity. [creep;
Biron. Necessity will make us all forsworn
Three thousand times within this three years'...

Love's Labour's Lost.

[ACT I]

Scene I.—Another part of the Park. Before ARMANDO'S House.

Enter ARMANDO and MOTH.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it, when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?
Moth. A great sign, Sir; that he will look sad.
Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear imp.
Moth. No, no; O lord! Sir, no.
Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenile?
Moth. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.
Arm. Why tough senior? why tough senior?
Moth. Why tender juvenile? why tender juvenile?
Arm. I spoke it, tender juvenile, as a congruent epithet appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender.
SCENE II.

LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Moth. And I, tough senior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.
Arm. Pretty, and apt.
Moth. How mean you, Sir? I pretty, and my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?
Arm. Thou pretty, because little. [apt?
Moth. Little pretty, because little. Wherefore
Arm. And therefore apt, because quick.
Moth. Speak you this in my praise, master?
Arm. In thy condign praise.
Moth. I will praise an eel with the same praise.
Arm. What, that an eel is ingenuous?
Moth. That an eel is quick.
Arm. I do say thou art quick in answers: thou heatest my blood.
Moth. I am answered, Sir.
Arm. I love not to be crossed.
Moth. [Aside.] He speaks the mere contrary,—crosses love not him.
Arm. I have promised to study three years with the duke.
Moth. You may do it in an hour, Sir.
Arm. Impossible.
Moth. How many is one thrice told?
Arm. I am ill at reckoning,—it fitteth the spirit of a tapster.
Moth. You are a gentleman, and a gamsiter, Sir. I confess both: they are both the varnish of a complete man.
Moth. Then, I am sure, you know how much the gross sum of decoy-ace amounts to.
Arm. It doth amount to one more than two.
Moth. Which the base vulgar do call three.
Arm. True.
Moth. Why, Sir, is this such a piece of study? Now, here’s three studied, ere you’ll thrice wink: and how easy it is to put years to the word three, and study three years in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.
Arm. A most fine figure!
Moth. [Aside.] To prove you a cipher.
Arm. I will hereupon confess I am in love: and as it is base for a soldier to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Desire prisoner, and ransom him to any French courtier for a new devised court’sy. I think scorn to sigh: methinks I should out-swear Cupid. Comfort me, boy: what great men have been in love?
Moth. Hercules, master.
Arm. Most sweet Hercules!—More authority, dear boy, name more; and, sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.
Moth. Samson, master: he was a man of good carriage, great carriage,—for he carried the town-gates on his back like a porter: and he was in love.
Arm. O well-knit Samson! strong-jointed Samson! I do excel thee in my rapiers, as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love too:—who was Samson’s love, my dear Moth?
Arm. A woman, master.
Arm. Of what complexion?
Moth. Of all the four, or the three, or the two; or one of the four.
Arm. Tell me precisely of what complexion?
Moth. Of the sea-water green, Sir.
Arm. Is that one of the four complexions? [too.
Moth. As I have read, Sir; and the best of them
Arm. Green, indeed, is the colour of lovers; but to have a love of that colour, methinks Samson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for her wit.
Moth. It was so, Sir, for she had a green wit.
Arm. My love is most immaculate white and red.
Moth. Most maculate thoughts, master, are masked under such colours.
Arm. Define, define, well-educated infant.
Moth. My father’s wit, and my mother’s tongue, assist me!
Arm. Sweet invocation of a child; most pretty and pathetic!
Moth. If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne’er be known;
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And fears by pale-white shown:
Then, if she fear, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know;
For still her cheeks possess the same,
Which native she doth owe.
A dangerous rhyme, master, against the reason of white and red.
Arm. Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King and the Beggar?
Moth. The world was very guilty of such a ballad some three ages since: but, I think, now ‘tis not to be found; or, if it were, it would neither serve for the writing nor the tune.
Arm. I will have that subject newly writ o’er, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl, that I took in the park with the rational hind Costard: she deserves well.
Moth. [Aside.] To be whipp’d; and yet a better love than my master.
Arm. Sing, boy; my spirit grows heavy in love.
Moth. And that’s great marvel, loving a light wench.
Arm. I say, sing.
Moth. Forbear till this company be past.

ENTER DULL, COSTARD, AND JAQUENETTA.

Dull. Sir, the duke’s pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe: and you must let him take no delight, nor no penance: but a’ must fast three days a week. For this damsel, I must keep her at the park: she is allowed for the day-woman. Fare you well.
Arm. I do betray myself with blushing.—Maid.
Jaq. Man.
Arm. I will visit thee at the lodge.
Jaq. That’s hereby.
Arm. I know where it is situate.
Jaq. Lord, how wise you are!
Arm. I will tell thee wonders.
Jaq. With that face?
Arm. I love thee.
Jaq. So I heard you say.
Arm. And so farewell.
Jaq. Fair weather after you!
Dull. Come, Jaquenetta; away.

EXEUNT DULL AND JAQUENETTA.

Arm. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.
Cost. Well, Sir, I hope, when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach.
Arm. Thou shalt be heavily punished.
Cost. I am more bound to you than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—A part of the Park, with a Pavilion and Tents at a distance.

Enter the Princess of France, Rosaline, Maria, Katharine, Boyet, Lords, and other Attendants.

Boyet. Now, madam, summon up your dearest
Consider whom the king your father sends; [spirits:
To whom he sends; and what's his embassy;
Youself, held precious in the world's esteem,
To parley with the sole inheritor
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchless Navarre; the plea of no less weight
Than Aquitaine,—a dowry for a queen.
Be now as prodigal of all dear grace,
As nature was in making graces dear,
When she did starve the general world beside,
And prodigiously gave them all to you. [mean,
Prin. Good lord Boyet, my beauty, though but Needs not the painted flourish of your praise:
But is best told by judgment of the eye,
Not utter'd by base sale of champion's tongues:
I am less proud to hear you tell my worth,
Than you much willing to be counted wise
In spending your wit in the praise of mine.
But now to task the tasker:—Good Boyet,
You are not ignorant, all-telling fame
Doth noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow,
Till painful study shall out-wear three years,
No woman may approach his silent court:
Therefore to us seem thet it a needful course,
Before we enter his forbidden gates,
To know his pleasure; and in that behalf,
Bold of your worthiness, we single you
As our best moving fair solicitor.
Tell him, the daughter of the king of France,
On serious business, craving quick despatch,
Importunes personal conference with his grace:
Haste, signify so much; while we attend,
Like humble-visag'd suitors, his high will.

Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go.

Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so.—

[Exit Boyet.

Who are the votaries, my loving lords,
That are vow-fellows with this virtuous duke?

1 Lord. Longaville is one.

Prin. Know you the man?

Mar. I know him, madam: at a marriage feast,
Between lord Perigot and the beautiful heir
Of Jaques Faulconbridge, solèmniz'd
In Normandy, saw I this Longaville:
A man of sovereign parts he's esteem'd;
Well fitted in the arts, glorious in arms:
Nothing becomes him ill, that he would well.
The only soil of his fair virtue's gloss,—
If virtuous speech will stain with any soil,—
Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will;
Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will wills
It should none spare that come within his power.

Prin. Some merry mocking lord, belike; 'tis so?

Mar. They say so most that most his humour's know.

Prin. Such short-liv'd wit's do wither as they grow.
Who are the rest? [youth.

Kath. The young Dumas, a well-achol'mised
Of all that virtue love for virtue lov'd:
Much power to do most harm, least knowing ill;
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he had no wit.
I saw him at the duke Alençon's once;
And much too little of that good I saw
Is my report to his great worthiness.

Rey. Another of these students at that time
Was there with him: if I have heard a truth,
Biron they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal:
His eye begets occasion for his wit;
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue (conceit's expositor,) Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That ageless ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and valuable is his discourse.

Prin. God bless my ladies! are they all in love,
That every one her own hath garnished
With such beheading ornaments of praise?

1 Lord. Here comes Boyet.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Now, what admittance, lord?

Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
And he and his competitors in oath,
Were all address'd to meet you, gentle lady,
Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt,—
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his court,
Than seeks a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled house.

Here comes Navarre. [The ladies mask.]

Enter King, Longaville, Dumain, Boyet, and Attendants.

King. Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.

Prin. "Fair," I give you back again; and "welcome"
I have not yet: the roof of this court is too high to be yours; and welcome to the wide fields too base to be mine.

King. You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.

Prin. I will be welcome, then: conduct me thither.

King. Hear me, dear lady, I have sworn an oath.

Prin. Our lady help my lord! he'll be forsworn.

King. Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.

Prin. Why, will she break it; will, and nothing else.

King. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.

Prin. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise,
Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.
I bear your grace, to keep it shut; how keeping:
'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord,
And sin to break it.

But pardon me, I am too sudden-bold:
To teach a teacher ill deserving me.
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit.

[Givea paper.]

King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.

Prin. You will the sooner, that I were away;
For you'll prove perjur'd, if you make me stay.

Boyet. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
Rou. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
Dum. I know you did.

Ros. How needless was it then,
To ask the question?

Boyet. You must not be so quick.

Ros. 'Tis long of you, that spur me with such questions.

Boyet. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, twill tire.

Ros. Not till it leave the rider in the mere.

Boyet. What time o' day?

Ros. The hour that fools should ask.

Boyet. Now fair befall your mask!

Ros. Fair fall the face it covers!

Boyet. And send you many lovers!

Ros. Amen, so you be none.

Boyet. Nay, then will I be gone.

King. Madam, your father here doth intimate
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns;
Being but the one half of an entire sum,
Disturbed by my father in his wars.

But say that he, or we, (as neither have,) Reckoned that sum, yet there remains unpaid
A hundred thousand more; in surety of the which, One part of Aquitaine is bound to us, Although not valued to the money's worth. If, then, the king your father will restore But that one half which is unsatisfied, We will give up our right in Aquitaine, And hold fair friendship with his majesty. But that, it seems, he little purposeth; For here he doth demand to have repaid A hundred thousand crowns; and not demands, On payment of a hundred thousand crowns, To have his title live in Aquitaine; Which we must rather had depart withal, And have the money by our father lent,
ACT III.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Park. Before Armado's House.

Enter Armado and Moth.

Arm. Warble, child: make passionate my sense of hearing.

Moth. [Singing] Conclude—

Arm. Sweet air!—Go, tenderness of years; take this key, give enlargement to the swain, bring him estimately hither: I must employ him in a letter to my love.

Moth. Master, will you win your love with a French brawl?

Arm. How meanest thou! brawling in French?

Moth. No, my complete master: but to jig off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your lips, humour it with turning up your eye-lids; sigh a note and sing a note,—sometimes through the throat, as if you swallowed love with singing love,—sometimes through the nose, as if you snuffed up love by smelling love; with your hat penthouse-like, or ere the stop of your eyes; with your arms crossed on your thin belly's doublet, like a rabbit on a spit; or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old painting; and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away. These are complements, these are honours; these betray nice wenchings,—that would be betrayed without these; and make them men of note, (do you note,—men!) that most are affected to these.

Arm. How hast thou purchased this experience?

Moth. By my penny of observation.

Arm. But O,—but O,—

Moth. —the hobby-horse is forgot.

Arm. Callist thou my love hobby-horse?

Moth. No, master; the hobby-horse is but a colt, and your love, perhaps, a hackney. But have you forgot your love?

Arm. Almost I had.

Moth. Negligent student! learn her by heart.

Arm. By heart, and in heart, boy.

Moth. And out of heart, master: all those three I will prove.

Arm. What wilt thou prove?

Moth. A man, if I live;—and this, by, in, and without, upon the instant: by heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her; in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her; and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.

Arm. I am all these three.

Moth. And three times as much more,—and yet nothing at all.

Arm. Fetch hither the swain: he must carry me a letter.

Moth. A message well sympathised; a horse to be ambassador for an ass.

Arm. Ha, ha! what sayest thou?

Moth. Marry, Sir, you must send the ass upon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited: but I go.

Arm. The way is but short: away!

Moth. As swift as lead, Sir.

Arm. Thy meaning, pretty ingenious? Is not lead a metal heavy, dull, and slow? [no.

Moth. Minime, honest master; or rather, master,

Arm. I say, lead is slow.

Moth. You are too swift, Sir, to say so: Is that lead slow which is fir'd from a gun?
Scene I.

Arm. Sweet smoke of rhetoric!
He repents me a cannon; and the bullet, that's I shoot thee at the swain.

Moth. [he:—]

Arm. A most acute juvenal; voluble and free of grace!—

Moth. [face:—]

By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy Most rude melancholy, valour gives thee place.—
My herald is return'd.

Re-enter Moth with Costard.

Arm. Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise thee.

Cost. O, marry me to one Frances—I smell some I've nooey, some goose, in this.

Arm. By my sweet soul, I mean setting thee at liberty, enfreeing thy person: thou wast immured, restrained, captivated, bound.

Cost. True, true; and now you will be my purgation, and let me loose.

Arm. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from duration; and in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this:—[Giving a letter.] Bear this significant to the country maid Jaucenetta. [Giving money.] There is remunerating for a best ward of mine honour is rewarding my dependants.—Moth, follow. [Exit.

Moth. Like the sequel, I.—Signior Costard, adieu.

Arm. My sweet ounce of man's flesh! my inconfy Jew.

[Exit Moth.

Now will I look to his remuneration. Remuneration! O, that's the Latin word for three farthings: three farthings, I—remuneration.—"What's the price of this inkle?"—"A penny."—"No, I'll give you a remuneration:" why, it carries it.—Remuneration!—why, it is a fairer name than French crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Enter Biron.

Biron. O, my good knave Costard! exceedingly well met.

Cost. Pay me, Sir, how much carnation ribband may a man buy for a remuneration?

Biron. What is a remuneration?

Cost. Marry, Sir, half-penny farthing.

Biron. O, why then, three-farthings-worth of silk.

Cost. I thank your worship: God be wi' you.

Biron. O, stay, slave; I must employ thee: As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave, Do one thing for me that I shall entreat. Cost. When would you have it done, Sir?

Biron. O, this afternoon.

Cost. Well, I will do it; Sir: fare you well.

Biron. O, thou knowest not what it is.

Cost. I shall know, Sir, when I have done it.

Biron. Why, villain, thou must know first.

Cost. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.

Biron. It must be done this afternoon. Hark, slave.

It is but this:—The princess comes to hunt here in the park, And in her train there is a gentle lady; When tongues begin sweetly, then they name her name, And Rosaline they call her: ask for her; And to her white hand see thou do commend This seal'd-up counsel. [Gives him money.] There's thy girdon; go.

Cost. Gardner, O sweet gardon! better than remuneration; eleven-pence farthing better: most sweet gardon!—I will do it, Sir, in print.—Gardner — remuneration. [Exit.

Biron. O, and I, forsooth, in love! Is that have been this up? A very bandy to a humorous sigh; A critic, nay, a night-watch constable; A dogmizing pedant o'er the boy, Than whom no mortal so magnificent! This wimpled, whining, purblind, wayward boy; This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid; Regent of love-rymes, lord of folded arms,
ACT IV.

SCENE 1.—Another part of the Park.

Enter the PRINCESS, ROSALINE, MARIA, KATHARINE, BOYET, Lords, Attendants, and a Forester.

PRIN. Was that the king, that spurr’d his horse so hard Against the steep’s unfolding hill?

BOYET. I know not; but I think it was not he.

PRIN. Who’s he was, he show’d a mounting mind.

Well, lord to day we shall have our dispatch; On Saturday we will return to France.—Then, forester, my friend, where is the bush That we must stand and play the murderer in? A bush, my lord, upon the edge of yonder coppice; A stand where we may make the fairest shot.

PRIN. I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot, And thereupon thou speakest the fairest shoot.

BOYET. [Aside.] For Parker, madam, [for I meant not so.

PRIN. What, what? first praise me, and again say no?

O short liv’d pride! Not fair! alack for woe!

For. Yes, madam, fair.

PRIN. Nay, never paint me now: Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow. Here, good my glass.—[Giving him money.] Take this for telling true.

Fair payment for foul words is more than due. For. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.

PRIN. See, see! my beauty will be sav’d by merit. O heresy in fair, fit for these days! A giving hand, though foul, shall have fair praise.—But come, the bow:—now mercy goes to kill, And shooting well is then accounted ill. Thus will I save my credit in the shoot: Not wounding, pity would not let me do’t; If wounding, then it was to show my skill, That more for praise than purpose meant to kill. And out of question, so it is sometimes,—

Glory grows guilty of detected crimes,
When, for fame’s sake, for praise, an outward part,
We bend to that the working of the heart;
As I for praise alone now seek to spill
The poor deer’s blood, that my heart means no ill.

BOYET. Do not curst wives hold that self-sovereignty?

Only for praise, sake, when they strive to be Lords o’er their lords?

PRIN. Only for praise; and praise we may afford
To any lady that subdues a lord.

BOYET. Here comes a member of the commonwealth.

Enter COSTARD.

COST. God dig you—den all! Pray you, which is the head lady?

PRIN. Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the rest
That have no hands.

COST. Which is the greatest lady, the highest?

PRIN. The thickest, and the tallest.

COST. The thickest, and the tallest! it is so; truth

An your waist, mistress, were as slender as my wit,
One o’ these maid’s girdles for your waist should be fit.

Are not you the chief woman? you are the thickest here.

PRIN. What’s your will, Sir? what’s your will?

COST. I have a letter from monsieur Biron to one lady Rosaline.

PRIN. O, thy letter, thy letter! he’s a good friend of mine:

Stand aside, good bearer.—Boyet, you can carve;

Break up this capon.

BOYET. I am bound to serve.—

This letter is mistook; it importeth none here:

It is writ to Jaquinetta.

PRIN. We will read it, I swear.

Break the neck of the wax, and every one give ear.

BOYET. [Reads.] “By heaven, that thou art fair, is most infallible; true, that thou art beauteous;

truth itself, that thou art lovely. More fairer than fair, beautiful than beauteous, truer than truth itself, have commineration on thy heroic valas! The unanimous, and most illustrious king Cophetua set eye upon the pernicious and inordinate beggar

Zenelophon; and he it was that might rightly say,

Veni, vidi, veri; which to anatomize in the vulgar,

(O base and obscure vulgar!) wisdom, He came, saw, and overcame: he came, one; saw, two;

overcame, three. Who came? the king: Why did he come? to see: Why did he see? to overcome:

To whom came he? to the beggar: What saw he?

the beggar: Whom overcame he? the beggar.

The conclusion is victory: on whose side? the king’s. The captive is enriched: on whose side? the beggar’s. The catastrophe is a nuptial: on whose side? the king’s:—no, on both in one, or one in both. I am the king; for so stands the comparison: thou the beggar; for so witnesseth thy lowliness. Shall I command thy love? I may:

Shall I enforce thy love? I could: Shall I entreat thy love? I will. What shall thou exchange for rags? robes; for titles? titles; for thyself? me.

Thus, expecting thy reply, I prolong my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part.

Thine, in the dearest design of industry,

DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO.”
"Thus dost thou hear the Nemean lion roar,
'Gainst thee, thou lamb, that standest as his prey;
Submissive fall his princely feet before,
And he from forage will incline to play:
But if thou strive, poor soul, what art thou then?
Food for his rage, repasture for his den."

Prin. What plume of feathers is he that indited this letter?
What vane? what weather-cock? did you ever hear better?
Boyet. I am much deceiv'd, but I remember the style.
Prin. Else your memory is bad, going o'er it erewhile.
Boyet. This Armado is a Spaniard, that keeps here in court;
A phantasm, a Monarch, and one that makes sport
To the prince and his book-mates.
Prin. Thou, follow, a word.
Who gave thee this letter?
Cost. I told you; my lord.
Prin. To whom shouldst thou give it?
Cost. From my lord to my lady.
Prin. From which lord, to which lady?
Cost. From my lord Biron, a good master of mine,
To a lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline.
Prin. Thou hast mistaken his letter.—Come, lords, away.

Here, sweet, put up this: 'twill be thine another day.

[Exit Prince and Trin;]

Boyet. Who is the suitor? who is the suitor?
Rut. Shall I teach you to know?
Boyet. Ay, my continent of beauty.
Rut. Why, she that bears the bow.
Finely put on! [marry.
Boyet. My lady goes to kill horns; but, if thou
Hang me by the neck, if horns that year miscarry.
Finely put on!
Rut. Well then, I am the shooter.
Boyet. And who is your deer?
Rut. If we choose by the horns, yourself: come Finely put on, indeed! [not near.
Mar. You still wrangle with her, Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.
Boyet. But she herself is hit lower: have I hit her now?
Rut. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a man when king Pepin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it?
Boyet. So may I answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when queen Guinever of Britain was a little wench, as touching the hit it.
Rut.

"Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it.
Thou canst not hit it, my good man."

Boyet.

"An I cannot, cannot, cannot.
An I cannot, another can."

[Exit Ros. and Kath.;

Cost. By my troth, most pleasant: how both did fit it!
Mar. A mark marvellous well shot, for they both did hit it.
Boyet. A mark! O, mark but that mark! a mark, says my lady!
[be.
Let the mark have a prick in 't, to mete at, if it may Mar. Wide o' the bow hand! I faith your hand is out.

Cost. Indeed, a' must shoot nearer, or he'll ne'er hit the clout.
Boyet. An if my hand be out, then belike your hand is.
Cost. Then will she get the upshot by cleaving
the pin.
Mar. Come, come, you talk greasily; your lips grow foul.
Cost. She's too hard for you at pricks, Sir: challenge her to bowl.
Boyet. I fear too much rubbing. Good night, my good owl. [Exit Boyet and Maria.

Cost. By my soul, a swain! a most simple clown!
Lord, lord! how the ladies and I have put him down!
O' my troth, most sweet jests! most incoy vulgar
wit.
When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were, so fit.
Armathe o' the one side,—O, a most dainty man!
To see him walk before a lady, and to bear her fan!
To see him kiss his hand! and how most sweetly a'
will swear:—
And his page o' the other side, that handful of wit!
Ah, heavens, it is most pathetical nay!
[Shouting within.] Sois, sola! [Exit running.

SCENE II.—Another part of the Park.

Enter Holofernsis, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull.

Nath. Very reverend sport, truly; and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Hol. The deer was, as you know, sausquita,—in blood; rips as a possewato, who now hangeth like a jewel in the ear of valo,—the sky, the welkin, the heaven; and anon fallith like a crab on the face of torn,—the soil, the land, the earth.

Nath. Truly, master Holofernsis, the epithets are sweetly varied, as scholar at the least: but, Sir,
I assure ye, it was a buck of the first head.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, hand crede.

Dull. 'Twas not a hand crede; 'twas a pricket.

Hol. Most barbarous intimation! yet a kind of insinuation, as it were, in vis, in way, of explication; facere, as it were, replication, or, rather, extentior, to show, as it were, his inclination,—after his undressed, unpollished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or, rather, unlettered, or, ratherest, uncon-formed fashion,—to insert again my hand crede for a deer.

Dull. I said the deer was not a hand crede; 'twas a pricket.

Hol. Twice sod simplicity, his coccus!—O thou monster ignorance, how deformed dost thou look!

Nath. Sir, he hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book; he hath not eat paper, as it were;
he hath not drunk ink: his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the dullest parts:
And such barren plants are set before us, that we thank should be
(Which we of taste and feeling are) for those parts that do fructify in us more than he.

For as it would thence make me to be vain, indiscreet,
or a fool,
So, were there a patch set on learning, to see him
in a school:
But, omne bonum, say I; being of an old father's mind,—
Many can brook the weather, that love not the wind.
Dull. You two are book-men: can you tell by your wit, What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five weeks old as yet? Hol. Dictynnus, good man Dull: Dictynnus, good man Dull. Dull. What is Dictynnus? Nat. A title to Phoebe, to Luna, to the moon. Hol. The moon was a month old when Adam was no more; And rangeth not five weeks, when he came to five-score. The allusion holds in the exchange. Dull. 'Tis true indeed; the collusion holds in the exchange. Hol. God comfort thy capacity! I say, the allusion holds in the exchange. Dull. And I say, the collusions holds in the exchange; for the moon is never but a month old; and I say beside, that 'twas a pricket that the princess killed. Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal epigraph on the death of the deer? and, to humour the ignorant, I have call'd the deer the princess killed, a pricket. Nat. Perge, good master Holofernes, perge; so it shall please you to abrogate surcularity. Hol. I will something affect the letter, for it argues facility. The profuyl princess pierc'd and prick'd a pretty pleasing pricker; Some say a sore; but not a sore, till now made sore with shooting. The dogs did yell: put I to sore, then sorel jumps from thicket: Or pricket, sore, or else sore; the people fall a howling. If sore be sore, then I to sore makes fifty sores: O sore! Of one sore I a hundred make, by adding but one more l. Nat. A rare talent! Dull. [Aside.] If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent. Hol. This is a gift that I have, simple, simple; a foolish extravagant spirit, full of foms, figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions: these are bogey in the ventricle of memory, nourished in the womb of pug master, and delivered into the mellowing of occasion. But this is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it. Nat. Sir, I praise the Lord for you: and so may my parishioners, for their sons are well tutored by you, and their daughters profit very greatly under you: you are a good member of the commonwealth. Hol. Miserere! if their sons be ingenious, they shall want no instruction; if their daughters be capable, I will put it to them: but, vir sapit qui posset loquatur. A soul feminine saluteth us. Enter Jaquenetta and Costard. Jaq. God give you good morrow, master person. Hol. Master person—vasti pereunt. An if one should be pierced, which is the one? Cost. Marr, master schoolmaster, he that is likest to a hoghead. Hol. Of piercing a hoghead! a good lustre of conceit in a turf of earth; fire enough for a flint, pearl enough for a swine: 'tis pretty; it is well. /Say. Good master parson, [Giving a letter to NATH.] be so good as read me this letter: it was given me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armathio: I beseech you, read it.

Hol. Fauste, precor gelida quando fuscus omne sub umbra Kunimante,—and so forth. Ah, good old Mantuan! I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice:—

Venegia, Venegia, Chi non te vede, e non te pregia.

Old Mantuan, old Mantuan! Who understandeth thee not, loves thee not.—Ut, re, sol, la, mi, fa.—Under pardon, Sir, what are the contents? or, rather, as Horace says in his—[Sees the writing in the letter.] What, my soul, verses? Nat. Ay, Sir, and very learned. Hol. Let me hear a staff, a stanzas, a verse: leges, dominus. Nat. [Reads.] "If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love? Ah, never faith could hold, if not to beauty vowed! Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll faithful prove: Those thoughts to me were oaks, to thee like osiers bowed. Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes, Where all those pleasures live that art would comprehend: If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice; Well learned is that tongue, that well can thee commend; All ignorant that soul, that sees thee without wonder,— Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire: Thy eye Jove's lightning bears, thy voice his dreadful thunder.

Which, not to anger best, is music and sweet fire. Celestial as thou art, O, pardon love this wrong. That sings heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue!"

Hol. You find not the apostrophes, and so miss the accent: let me supervise the canonnet. [Takes the letter.] Here are only numbers ratified; but, for the elegancy, facility, and golden cadence of poesy, savet. Ovidius Naso was the man: and why, indeed, Naso, but for smelting out the odoriferous flowers of fancy, the jerks of invention? Imperatur is nothing: so doth the hound his master, the ape his keeper, the fired horse his rider. But, damosella virgin, was this directed to you? Nat. Ay, Sir; from one monsieur Biron, one of the strangequeen's lords. Hol. I will overgrasp the superscript:—[Reads.] "To the snow-white hand of the most beautiful lady Rosaline." I will look again on the intellect of the letter, for the nomination of the party writing to the person written unto:—[Reads.] "Your ladyship's, in all desired employment, Biron."—Sir Nathaniel, this Biron is one of the votaries with the king; and here he hath framed a letter to a sequent of the stranger queen's, which, accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried. —Trip and go, my sweet; deliver this paper into the royal hand of the king: it may concern much. Stay not thy compliment; I forget thy duty; adieu. Tas. Good Costard, go with me. —Sir, God save your life! Cost. Have with thee, my girl. [Exeunt COST. and JAO. Nat. Sir, you have done this in the fear of God, very religiously: and, as a certain father saith— Hol. Sir, tell not me of the father; I do fear colourable colours. But to return to the verses: did they please you, Sir Nathaniel? Nat. Marvelous well for the pen. Hol. I do dine to-day at the father's of a certain pupil of mine: where, if, before repeat, it shall please you to gratify the table with a grace, I will, on my privilege I have with the parents of the fore-said child or pupil, undertake your venia venusta; where I will prove those verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention: I beseech your society.

Nath. And thank you too; for society (theath the text) is the happiness of life.

Hol. And, certes, the text most infully concludes it.—[78 DULL.] Sir, I do invite you too; you shall not say me nay: pauca verba. Away! The gentle are at their game, and we will to our recreation.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another part of the Park.

Enter Biron, with a paper.

Biron. The king he is hunting the deer; I am coursting myself: they have pitched a toil; I am toil in a pitch,—pitch that defies; defies! a foul word. Well, Sit thee down, sorrow! for so they say the fool said, and so say I, and I the fool: well proved, wit! By the lord, this love is as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep; it kills me, a sheep: well proved again o' my side! I will not love: if I do, hang me; if faith, I will not. O, but her eye,—by this light! but for her eye, I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but lie, and lie in my throat. By heaven, I do love: and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to be melancholy; and here is part of my rhyme, and here my melancholy. Well, she hath one o' my sonnets already: the clown bore it, the fool sent it, and the lady hath it: sweet clown, sweeter fool, sweetest lady! By the world, I would not care a pin if the other three were in. —Here comes one with a paper: God give him grace to groan!

[Get up into a tree.

Enter the King, with a paper.

King. Ah me!

Biron. [Aside.] Shot, by heaven!—Proceed, sweet Cupid: thou hast thumped him with thy bird-bolt under the left pap.—In faith, secrets!—[Steps aside.

"So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not To those fresh morning drops upon the rose, As thy eye-hearts, when their fresh rays have smote The dew of night that on my cheeks down flows: Nor shines the silver moon one half so bright Through the transparent bosom of the sleep, As doth thy face through tears of mine give light; Thou shin'st in every tear that I do weep: No drop but as a coach doth carry thee; So ridest thou triumphing in my woe. Do but behold the tears that swell in me, And they thy glory through my grief will show: But do not love thyself; then thou wilt keep My tears for glassed, and still make me weep. O queen of queens! how far thou dost excel, No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell!

How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the paper. Sweet leaves, shade folly.—Who is he comes here?—[Steps aside.

Biron. [Aside.] Now, in thy likeness, one more fool appear!

[Enter Longaville, with a paper.

Long. Ah me! I am forsworn.

Biron. [Aside.] Why, he comes in like a perjure, wearing papers.

King. [Aside.] In love, I hope: sweet fellowship in life.

Biron. [Aside.] One drunkard loves another of the name.

Long. Am I the first that have been perjur'd so?

Biron. [Aside.] I could put thee in comfort,—not by two that I know: Thou mak'st the triumvir, the corner-cap of society, The shape of love's Tyburn, that hangs up simplicity.

Long. I fear these stubborn lines lack power to move—

O sweet Maria, empress of my love!—

These numbers will I test, and in the sky, in prose.

Biron. [Aside.] O, rhymes are guards on wanton Cupid's hose: Disfigure not his slop.

Long. This same shall go.—

[Reads.

"Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,—

Gainst whom the world can not hold argument,—

Persuade my heart to this false perjury?—

Vows for thee broke, deserve not punishment.

A woman's love is but a woman's grace:—

Thou being a goddess, I forsware not thee:—

Thy vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love:

Thy grace, being gained, cues all disgrace in me.

Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is:

Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth dost shine,

Exhal'st this vapour-vow; in thee it is:

If broken, then, it is no fault of mine.

If by me broke, what fault is not so wise,

To lose an oath, to win a paradise?"

Biron. [Aside.] This is the liver vein, which makes flesh a deity:

A green goose, a goddess: pure, pure idolatry.

God amends us, God amend! we are much out o' the way.

Long. By whom shall I send this?—Company! stay.

[Steps aside.

Biron. [Aside.] All hid, all hid,—an old infant

Like a demilune, in the sky, in play.

And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eye.

More sacks to the mill! O heavens, I have my wish!

Enter Duman, with a paper.

Duman. Transform'd! four woodcocks in a dish!

Biron. [Aside.] O most divine Kate!

Biron. [Aside.] O most profane coxcomb!

Dum. By heaven, the wonder of a mortal eye!

Biron. [Aside.] By earth, s he is not: corporal, corporal, you lie.

Dum. Her amber hairs for foil have amber coted.

Biron. [Aside.] An amber-colour'd raven was well

Dum. As upright as the cedar. [noted.

Biron. [Aside.] Stoop, I say; Her shoulder is with child.

Dum. As fair as day.

Biron. [Aside.] Ay, as some days; but then no sun must shine.

Dum. O that I had my wish!

Long. [Aside.] And I had mine!

King. [Aside.] And I mine too, good lord!

Biron. [Aside.] Amen, so I had mine: is not that a good word?

Dum. I would forget her; but a fever she Reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be.

Biron. [Aside.] A fever in your blood! why, then incision

Would let her out in sauce: sweet misprision!

Dum. Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.

Biron. [Aside.] Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit in shame!

"On a day.—slack the day:—

Love, whose month is ever May,
Said a blossom, passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air.
Through the violet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
Alas, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow;
Ail, would I might triumph so!
But alack! my hand is sworn
Not to pluck thee from thy birth;
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet,
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Do not call it sin in me,
That I am forewarned for thee;
Thou for whom Jove would a-wear
June and an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.

This will I send, and something else more plain,
That shall express my true love's fasting pain.
O, would the King, Biron, and Longaville,
Were lovers too! Ill, to example ill,
Would from my foresend wipe a perjur'd note;
For none offend, where all alike do dote.

Long. [Advancing.] Dimain, thy love is far from charity.

That in love's grief desirest society;
You may look pale, but I should blush, I know,
To be o'erheard, and taken napping so.

King. [Advancing.] Come, Sir, you blush as his your case is such;
You chide at him, offending twice as much:
You do not love Maria; Longaville
Did never sonnet for her sake compile,
Nor never lay his wreathed arms athwart
His loving bosom, to keep down his heart!
I have been closely shrouded in this bush.
And mark'd you both, and for you both did blush:
I heard your guilty rhymes, observed your fashion,
Saw sighs reck from you, noted well your passion;
Ah me! says one; O love! the other cries;
One, her hairs were gold, crystal the other's eyes:
[To Long.] You would for paradise break faith and truth;
[To DUMAIN.] And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath.

'What will Biron say, when that he shall hear
Faith infringed, which such zeal did swear?
How will he be scorn'd! how will he spend his wit!
How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it?
For all the wealth that ever I did see,
I would not have him know so much by me.

Biron. Now I am forth to whip hypocrisy.

Ah, good my liege, I pray thee, pardon me:
Good heart! what grace hast thou, thus to reproce
These worms for loving, that art most in love?
Your eyes do make no coaches; in your tears
There is no certain princess that appears;
You'll not be perjur'd, 'tis a hateful thing;
Tush! none but mistrels like of someting.
But are you not asham'd, nay, are you not,
All three of you, to be thus much o'erhath?
You found his note; the king your note did see;
But I a beam do find in each of three.
O, what a scene of foolery have I seen,
Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of tein! O me, with what strict patience have I sat,
To see a king transformed to a gnat!
To see great Hercules whipping a gip,
And profound Solomon tuning a jig.
And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,
And critic Timon laugh at idle toys!
Where lies thy grief, O tell me, good Dimain?
And, gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain?
And where my liege's all about the breast:
A caule, ho!:

King. Too bitter is thy jest.
Are we betray'd thus to thy over-view?
Biron. Not you to me, but I betray'd by you:
I, that am honest; J, that hold it sin
To break the vow I am engaged in;
I am betray'd; by keeping company
With men like men, of strange inconstancy.
When shall you see me write a thing in rhyme?
Or groan for Joan? or spend a minute's time
In prunin me? When shall you hear that I
Will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye,
A gait, a state, a brow, a breast, a waist,
A leg, a limb:

Biron. Soft! Whither away so fast?
A true man, or a thief, that gallops so?
Biron. I post from love; good lover, let me go.

Enter Jaquenetta, with letters, and Costard.

Jaq. God bless the king!
King. What present hast thou there?
Cost. Some certain treason.
King. What makes treason here?
Cost. Nay, it makes nothing, Sir.
King. If it mar nothing neither,
The treason and you go in peace away together.
Jaq. I beseech your grace, let this letter be read;
Our person misdoe it; twas treason, he said.

Biron. King, read it over.

[BRION takes letter from JAQ.
Where hadst thou it?

Jaq. Of Costard.
King. What hast thou it?
Cost. Of Dun Adramadio, Dun Adramadio.

King. How now! what is in you? why dost thou

Biron. A toy, my liege, a toy: your grace needs not fear it.

Long. It did move him to passion, and therefore Let's hear it.

Dum. [Picking up the piece.] It is Biron's writing,
And here is his name.
Biron. [To COSTARD.] Ah, you whoreson loggerhead!
You were born to do me shame.

Guilty, my lord, guilty! I confess, I confess.
King. What?
Biron. That you three fools lack'd me, fool, to King. Hence, Sirs; away!

Cost. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitors stay.

[Exeunt COSTARD and JAQUENETTA.
Biron. Sweet lovers, sweet lovers, O, let us embrace!
As true we are as flesh and blood can be:
The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face;
Young blood doth not obey an old decree.
We cannot cross the cause why we were born;
Therefore, of all hands must we be forsworn.

King. What, did these rent lines show some love of thine?

Biron. Did they, quoth you? Who sees the heavenly Rosaline,
That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,
At the first opening of the gorgeous east,
Bows not his vassal head; and, stricken blind,
Kisses the base ground with obedient breast?
What peremptory eagle-sighted eye
Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
That is not blinded by her majesty?

King. What zeal, what fury hath inspir'd thee now?

My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon;
She, an attending star, scarce seen a light.

Biron. My eyes are, then, no eyes, nor I Biron:
O, but for my love, day would turn to night!

Of all complusions the cull'd sovereignty
Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair cheek;

Where several worthies make one dignity,
Where nothing wants that want itself doth seek.

Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues,—
Fie, painted rhetoric! O, she needs it not:
To things of sale a seller's praise belongs,—
She passes praise; then praise too short doth blot.

A witther'd hermit, five-score winters worn,
Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye:

Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born,
And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy:

O, 'tis the sun, that maketh all things shine.

King. By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.

Biron. Is ebony like her? O wood divine!
A wife of such wood were felicity.

O, who can give an oath? where is a book?
That I may swear beauty doth beauty lack,

If that she learn not of her eye to look:
No face is fair, that is not full so black.

King. O paradox! Black is the badge of hell,
The hue of dungeons, and the scowl of night;
And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well.

Biron. Devil's doost! and soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light.

O, if in black my lady's brows be deck'd,
It mourns that painting, and usurping hair,
Should ravish dowers with a false aspect;

And therefore is she born to make black fair.

Her favour turns the fashion of the days,
For native blood is counted painting now;
And therefore red, that would avoid disgrace,
Paints itself black, to imitate her brow.

Dum. To look like her are chimney-sweepers black.

Long. And since her time are colliers counted bright.

King. And Ethiopis of their sweet complexion crack.

Dum. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.

Biron. Your mistresses dare never come in rain,
For fear their colours should be wash'd away.

King. True were good, yours did; for, Sin, to tell you plain,
I'll find a fairer face not wash'd to-day.

Biron. I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomsday here.

King. No devil will fright thee then so much as she.

Dum. I never knew man hold vile stuff so dear.

Long. Look, here's thy love: [Showing his shoe.]
My foot and her face see.

Biron. O, if the streets were paved with thine eyes,
Her feet were much too dainty for such tread.

Dum. O vile! then, as she goes, what upward lies
The street should see, as she walk'd over head.

King. But what of this? Are we not all in love?

Biron. O, nothing so sure; and thereby all forsworn.

King. Then leave this chat: and, good Biron, now prove
Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn.

Dum. Ay, marry, there; some flattery for this evil.

Long. O, some authority how to proceed;
Some tricks, some querulous, how to cheat the devil.

Dum. Some salve for pejury.

Biron. O, 'tis more than need.—
Have at you, then, affection's men at arms;
Consider what you first did swear unto,—
To fast, to study, and to see no woman;

Flat treason 'gainst the kingly state of youth.
Say, can you fast? your stomachs are too young;
And abstinence engenders maladies,
And where that you have vow'd to study, lords,
In that each of you hath forsworn his book,—
Can you still dream, and pore, and thereon look?
For when would you, say Lord, or you, or you,
Have found the ground of study's excellence,
Without the beauty of a woman's face?

From women's eyes this doctrine I derive,—
They are the ground, the books, the Academies,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.

Why, universal plodding prisons up
The nimble spirits in the arteries,
As motion, and long-during action, tires
The sinewy vigour of the traveller.

Now, for not looking on a woman's face,
You have in that forsworn the use of eyes,
And study, too, the lessener of your vow;

For where is any author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?

Learning is but an adjunction to ourself,
And where we are, our learning likewise is.
Then, when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes,
Do we not likewise see our learning there?
O we have made a vow to study, lords,
And in that vow we have forsworn our books:

For when would you, my liege, or you, or you,
In learned contemplation, have found out
Such fiery numbers, as the prompting eyes
Of beauty's tutors have enrich'd you with?
Other slow arts entirely keep the brain;
And therefore, finding barren practisers,
Spare show a harvest of their heavy toil:
But love, first learnt in a lady's eye,
Lives not alone immured in the brain;
But, with the motion of all elements,
Courses as swift as thought in every power,
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices.
It adds a precious spring to the eye,—
A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;
A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,
When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd:
Love's feeling is more soft, and sensible,
Than are the tender horns of cocked snails:
Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in taste;
For valour is not Love a Herculeas,
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?
Subtile as sphinxes; as sweet and musical
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;
And, when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods
Makes heaven drowsy with the harmony.
Never durst poet touch a pen to write,
Until his ink were temper'd with Love's sighs:
O, then his lines would ravish savage ears,
And plant in tyrants mild humility.
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They sparkle still the right Promethean fire;
They are the books, the arts, the Academies,
That show, contain, and nourish all the world,
Else none at all in augh proves excellent.
Then, fools you were these women to forswear;
Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools.
For wisdom's sake, a word that all men love;
Or for love's sake, and for that loves all men;
Or for men's sake, the authors of these women;
Or women's sake, by whom we men are men;
Let us once lose our oaths, to find ourselves,
Or oaths to keep our oaths.
It is religion to be thus forsworn:
For charity itself fulfils the law,—
And who can sever love from charity? [field!]
King. Saint Cupid, then! and, soldiers, to the Biron. Advance your standards, and upon them, lords!
Pell-mell, down with them! but be first advis'd,
In conflict that you get the sun of them.
Long. Now to plain-dealing; lay these gloves by;
Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?
King. And win them too: therefore let us devise
Some entertainment for them in their tents.
Biron. First, from the park let us conduct them thither;
Then, homeward, every man shall accompany the
Of his fair mistress. In the afternoon
We will with some strange pastime solace them;
Such as the shortness of the time can shape;
For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours.
Fore-run fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.
King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted,
That will be time, and may by us be fitted.
Biron. Alas! alas! Sow'd cockle reap'd no corn;
And justice always whirs in equal measure:
Light wenches may prove plagues to men forsworn;
If so, our copper buys no better treasure.
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Park.

Enter Holofemnus, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull.

Hol. Satia quod sufficit.

Nath. Praise God for you, Sir: your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious; pleasant without c vitrility, witty without affectation, audacious without impudence, learned without opinion, and strong without heresy. I did converse this quan
day with a companion of the king's, who is intuited, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Armando.

Hol. Aequo hominem tanguam te: his humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gait majestical, and his general behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thraesonical. He is too picked, too scarce, too affected, too odd, as it were, too perigrinate, as I may call it.

Nath. A most singular and choice epithet.

Hol. He draweth out the thread of his art no finer than the staple of his argument. I abhor such fanatical phantasms, such insociable and point-device companions; such rackers of orthography, as to speak dought, fine, when he should say, doubt; det when he should pronounce, debt,—d, e, b, t, not d, e, t: he clepeth a calf, cauf; half, hauf; neighbour weavernebeur; neigh abbreviated ne. This is abominable,—which he would call abominable: it insinuath me of insanie; ne intelligis domine? to make frantic, lunatic.

Nath. Laus Deo, bone intellige.

Hol. Bone!—bone, for bone: Priscian a little scratched; 'twill serve.

Nath. Videunte quis venit?

Hol. Vase ne gueder.

Enter Armado, Molt, and Costard.

Arm. [To Hol.] Chirrah?

Hol. Quare Chirrah, not sirrah?

Arm. Men of peace, well encountered.

Hol. Most military Sir, salutation.

Molt. [Aside to Costard.] They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps.

Cost. [Aside to Molt.] O, I have lived long on the alms-basket of words. I marvel my master hath not eaten thee for a word; for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatis; thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon.

Molt. [Aside to Costard.] Peace! the peal begins.

Arm. [To Hol.] Monsieur, are you not lettered?

Hol. Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book.—
What is a, b, spelt backward, with the horn on his head?

Hol. B, a, puertas, with a horn added.

Molt. Ba! most silly sheep, with a horn.—You hear his learning.

Hol. Quis, quis, thou consommat?

Molt. The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them; or the fifth, if I.

Hol. I will repeat them,—a, e, i,— Molt. The sheep; the other two includes it,— ou.

Arm. Now, by the salt wave of the Mediterranean, a sweet touch, a quick venem of wit, snip, quick and home! It rejoceth my intellect: true wit!

Molt. Offered by a child to an old man; which is wit-old.

Hol. What is the figure? what is the figure?

Molt. Horns.

Hol. Thou disputest like an infant: go, whip thy gig.

Molt. Lend me your horn to make one, and I will whip your infant circun circa,—a gig of a cuckold's horn.

Cost. An I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread: hold, there is the very remuneran I had of thy master, thou half-penny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion. O, an the heavens were so pleased that thou wert but my bastard, what a joyful father wouldst
LOVES LABOUR'S LOST.

thou make me! Go to; thou hast it ad dunghill, at the fingers' end, as they say.
Hol. O, I smell false Latin; dunghill for augueum.
Arm. Arts-man, praeambula; we will be singed from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the mountain?
Hol. Or mini, the hill.
Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the mountain.
Hol. I do, sans question.
Arm. Sir, it is the king's most sweet pleasure and affection, to congratulate the princess at her pavilion in the posterior of this days, which the rude multitude call the afternoon.
Hol. The posterior of the day, most generous Sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon: the word is well cutted; choice, sweet, and apt, I do assure you, Sir, I do assure.
Arm. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman; and my familiar, I do assure you, very good friend.—for you have the best pass; I do beseech thee, remember thy courtesy;—I beseech thee, apparel thy head:—and among other important and most serious designs,—and of great import indeed, too,—but let that pass:—for I must tell thee, it will please his grace, by the world, sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger, thus, daily with my excrement, with my mustachi, —but, sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable: some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world,—but let that pass.—The very all of all is,—but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy,—that the king would have me present the princess, sweet chuck, with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antic, or fire-work. Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.
Hol. Sir, you shall present before her the nine Worthies.—Sir Nathaniel, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rendered by our assistance, at the king's command, and this most gallant, illustre, and learned gentleman, before the princess, I say, none so fit as to present the nine Worthies.
Nath. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?
Hol. Joshua, yourself; myself, or this gallant gentilman, Judica Macabeus; this swain, because of his great limb or joint, shall pass Pompey the great; the page, Hercules,—
Arm. Pardon, Sir; error: he is not quantity enough for that worthy's thumb; he is not so big as the end of his club.
Hol. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.
Moth. An excellent device! so if any of the audience else, you may cry, 'What have done, Hercules! now thou crushest the snake!' that is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it.
Arm. For the rest of the Worthies?—
Hol. I will play three myself.
Moth. Thrice-worthy gentleman
Arm. Shall I tell you a thing?
Hol. We attend.
Arm. We will have, if this fadge not, an antick.
I beseech you, follow.
Hol. What a, goodman Dul! thou hast spoken no word all this while.
Dull. Nor understood none neither, Sir.
Hol. Allons! we will employ thee.
Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play on the tabor to the Worthies, and let them dance the hay.
Hol. Most dull, honest Dull!—To our sport, away!
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another part of the Park. Before the Princess' Pavilion.

Enter the Princess, Katharine, Rosaline, and Maria.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart, if fairings come thus plentifully in:
A lady walk with diamonds!—
Look you, what I have from the loving king.
Rut. Madam, came nothing else along with that?
Prin. Nothing but this! yes, as much love in rhyme.
As would be cram'd up in a sheet of paper, Writ on both sides the leaf, margent and all, That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.
Rut. That was the way to make his god-head wax; For he hath been five thousand years a boy.
Kath. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.
Rut. You'll ne'er be friends with him; he kill'd your sister.
Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy; And so she died: had she been light, like you, Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit, She might ha' been a grandam ere she died; And so may you; for a light heart lives long.
Rut. What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word?
Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark.
Rut. We need more light to find your meaning out.
Kath. You'll mar the light by taking it in snuff; Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.
Kath. So do not you, for you are a light wench. Rut. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.
Kath. You weigh me not? O, that's you care not for me.
Rut. Great reason; for, Past cure is still past care.
Prin. Well handled both; a set of wit well play'd.—
But Rosaline, you have a favour too:
Who sent it? and what is it?
Rut. I would you knew:
An if my face were but as fair as yours,
My favour were as great; be witness this.
Nay, I have verses too, I thank Biron:
The numbers true; and, were the numbing too,
I were the fairest goddess on the ground:
I am compar'd to twenty thousand fairs.
O, he hath drawn my picture in this letter!
Prin. Are those thy lines?
Rut. Much, in the letters; nothing in the praise.
Prin. Beauteous as ink; a good conclusion.
Rut. 'Ware pencils, ho! let me not die your debtor,
My red dominical, my golden letter:
O, that your face were not so full of O's!
Kath. A pox of that jest; and I beshrew all shrews!

Prin. But, Katharine, what was sent to you from Kath. Madam, this glove. [fair Duniam?]

Prin. Did he not send you twain?

Kath. Yes, madam; and moreover, Some thousand verses of a faithful lover,— A huge translation of hypocrisy, Vilily compil'd, profound simplicity. Men. This, and these pearls, to me sent Long- The letter is too long by half a mile. [ville:

Prin. I think no less. Dost thou not wish in heart, The chain were longer, and the letter short?

Mar. Ay, or I would these hands might never part.

Prin. We are wise girls to mock our lovers so.

Ros. They are worse fools to purchase mocking so.

That same Biron I'll torture ere I go: O that I knew he were but in by the week! How I would make him saven, and beg, and seek, And wait the season, and observe the times, And spend his prodigal wits in bootless rhymes, And shape his service wholly to my hests, And make him proud to make me proud that jest! So portent-like would I e'eraway his state, That he should, as a fool, and I his fate.

Prin. None are so surely caught, when they are catch'd, As wit turn'd fool: folly, in wisdom hatch'd, Hath wisdom's warrant and the help of school, And wit's own grace to grace a learned fool.

Ros. The blood of youth burns not with such ex- As gravity's revolt to wantonness. [cess,

Mar. Folly in fools bears not so strong a note, As foolery in the wise, when wit doth dote; Since all the power thereof it doth apply To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity.

Prin. Here comes Boyet, and mirth is in his face.

Enter Boyet.

Boyet. O, I am stabb'd with laughter! Where's Prin. Thy news, Boyet? [her grace?

Boyet. Prepare, madam, prepare!— Arm, wenches, arm! encounters mounted are Against your peace: Love doth compell her disguis'd, Armed in arguments; you'll be surpris'd: Muster your wits; stand in your own defence; Or hide your heads like cowards, and fly hence.

Prin. Saint Dennis to saint Cupid! What are they That charge their breath against us? say, scout, say.

Boyet. Under the cool shade of a sycamore, I thought to close mine eyes some half an hour; When, lo! to interrupt my purpose rest, Toward that shade I might behold address The king and his companions: warily I stole into a neighbour thicket by, And overheard what you shall overhear,— That, by and by, disguis'd they will be here. Their herald is a pretty knavish page, That well by heart hath com'd his embassage: Action and accent did they teach him there; "Thus must thou speak, and thus thy body bear:" And ever and anon they made a doubt, Presence majestic would put him out: "For," quoth the king, "an angel shalt thou see; Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously," The boy replied, "An angel is not evil; I should have fear'd her, had she been a devil."

With that, all laugh'd, and clapp'd him on the shoulder, Making the bold wag by their praises bolder: One rubb'd his elbow, thus, and steer'd, and swore A better speech was never spoke before; Another, with his finger and his thumb, Cry'd "Vit! we will do't, come what will come;" The third he caper'd and cried, "All goes well;" The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell. With that, they all tumble on the ground, With such a saucy laughter, so profound, That in this spleen ridiculous appears, To check their folly, passion's solemn tears.

Prin. But what, but what, come they to visit us?

Boyet. They do, they do; and are apparel'd thus,— Like Muscovies or Russians, as I guess. Their purpose is, to parle, to court, and dance; And every one his love-feast will advance Unto his several mistress,—which they'll know By favours several which they did bestow.

Prin. And will they so? the gallants shall be task'd! For, ladies, we will every one be mask'd; And not a man of them shall have the grace, Despite of suit, to see a lady's face. Hold, Roseline, this favour thou shalt wear, And then the king will court thee for his dear; Hold, take thou this, my sweet, and give me thine, So shall Biron take me for Roseline,— And change you favours, too; so shall your loves Woo contrary, deceive'd by these removes. [sight.

Ros. Come on, then; wear the favours most in Kath. But in this changing what is your intent?

Prin. The effect of my intent is, to cross theirs: They do it in mocking merriment; And mock for mock is only my intent. Their several counsels they unbosom shall To loves mistook; and so be mock'd withal Upon the next occasion that we meet, With visages display'd, to talk and greet. Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us to't?

Prin. No, to the death, we will not move a foot; Nor to their penn'd speech render we no grace; But while 'tis spoke, each turn away her face.

Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart. And quite divorce his memory from his part.

Prin. Therefore I do it; and I make no doubt, The rest will never come in, if he be out. There's no such sport, as sport by sport o'erthrown; To make theirs ours, and ours none but our own: So shall we stay, mocking intended game; And they, well mock'd, depart away with shame. [Trumpets sound within.

Boyet. The trumpet sounds: be mask'd; the maskers come. [The ladies mask.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Dumain, in Russian habits, and masked; Moth, Musicians, and Attendants.

Moth. Hail, hail, the richest beauties on the earth!—

Boyet. Beauties no richer than rich taffetas.

Moth. A holy parcel of the fairest dames, The ladies turn their backs to kim. That ever turn'd their—backs—to mortal views!"

Biron. THEIR EYES," villain, "their eyes."

Moth. "That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal death— Views—"

Boyet. True; out, indeed.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

SCENE II.

Moth. "Out of your favours, heavenly spirits, Not to behold"— [vochoasa]

Biron. "Once to behold," rogue.

Moth. "Once to behold with your sun-beam'd eyes, —with your sun-beam'd eyes"—

Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet; You were best call it "daughter-beam'd eyes."

Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.

Biron. Is this your perfectness? be gone, you rogue! —[Exit Moth.]

Ros. What would these strangers? know their minds, Boyet:

If they do speak our language, 'tis our will
That some plain man recount their purposes:

Know what they would.

Boyet. What would you with the princess?

Biron. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. What would they, say they?

Biron. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. Why, that they have; and bid them so be gone.

Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be gone.

King. Say to her, we have measur'd many miles,

To tread a measure with her on this grass.

Boyet. They say, that they have measur'd many a mile,

To tread a measure with you on this grass.

Ros. It is not so. Ask them how many inches
Is one mile: if they have measur'd many,
The measure, then, of one is easily told.

Boyet. If, to come hither you have measur'd miles,
And many miles, the princess bids you tell
How many inches do fill up one mile.

Biron. Tell her, we measure them by weary steps.

Boyet. She hears herself.

Ros. How many weary steps,

Of many weary miles you have o'ergone,

Are number'd in the travel of one mile?

Biron. We number nothing that we spend for you:

Our duty is so rich, infinite,

That we may do it still without account.

Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face,

That we, like savages, may worship it.

Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.

King. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do!

Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars, to shine
(Those clouds remov'd) upon our wat'ry eye.

Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter;

Thou now request'st but moonshine in the water.

King. Then, in our measure but vouchsafe one change.

Thou bidst me beg: this begging is not strange.

Ros. Play, music, then! Nay, you must do it soon.

[Music plays.]

Not yet;—no dance;—thus change I like the moon.

Ros. Will you not dance? How come you thus estrang'd?

Ros. You took the moon at full, but now she's chang'd.

King. Yet still she is the moon, and I the man.

The music plays; vouchsafe some motion to it.

Ros. Our ears vouchsafe it.

King. But your legs should do it.

Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by chance,

We'll not be nice: take hands;—we will not dance.

King. Why take we hands, then?

Ros. Only to part friends:—

Court'ry, sweet hearts; and so the measure ends.

King. More measure of this measure; be not nice.

Ros. We can afford no more at such a price.

King. Prize you yourselves: what buys your com-

Ros. Your absence only.

[pany?

King. That can never be. The fairy can provide;

Ros. Then cannot we be bought: and so, adieu;

Twice to your visor, and half once to you!

King. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.

Ros. In private, then.

King. I am best pleas'd with that.

[They converse apart.

Biron. White-handed mistress, one sweet word with thee.

Prin. Honey, and milk, and sugar,—there are three.

Biron. Nay then, two treys, (an if you grow so nice)

Metheglin, wort, and malmssey,—well run, dice!—

There's half a dozen sweets.

Prin. Seventh sweet, adieu:

Since you can cog, I'll play no more with you.

Biron. One word in secret.

Prin. Let it not be sweet.

Biron. Thou griev'st my gall.

Prin. Gall! bitter.

Biron. Therefore meet.

[They converse apart.

Dem. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a

Mar. Name it. — [word] —

Dem. Fair lady.—

Mar. Say you so? Fair lord,—

Take that for your fair lady.

Dem. Please it you,

As much in private, and I'll bid adieu.

[They converse apart.

Kath. What, was your visor made without a Long. I know the reason, lady, why you ask.

Kath. O for your reason! quickly, Sir; I long.

Long. You have a double tongue within your Long. A calf, fair lady! [call]

Kath. No, a fair lord call.

Long. Let's part the word.

Kath. No, I'll not be your half:

Take all, and wean it; it may prove an ox.

Long. Look, how you butt yourself in these sharp mocks!

Will you give horns, chaste lady? do not so.

Kath. Then die a calf, before your horns do grow.

Long. One word in private with you, ere I die.

Kath. Bleat softly, then; the butcher hears you cry.

Boyet. The tongues of mocking wench's are as

As is the razor's edge invisible. [keen

Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen,—

Above the sense of sense: so sensible

Seemeth their conference; their conceits have wings

Fleeter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought, swifter things.

Ros. Not one word more, my maids: break off, break off.

Biron. By heaven, all dry-beaten with pure scoff!

King. Farewell, mad wenches; you have simple wits.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

[ACT V.

Prin. Twenty adieu, my frozen Muscovites.—
[Exeunt King, Lords, Musicians, and Attendants.

Are these the breed of wits so wonder'd at?

Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweet breaths puff'd out.

Ros. Well-looking wits they have; gross, gross;

Prin. O poverty in wit, kingly-poor fluent!
Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-night,
Or ever, but in visors, show their faces?

This pert Biron was out of countenance quite.

Ros. O, they were all in lamentable cases!

The king was weeping-ripe for a good word.

Prin. Biron did swear himself out of all suit.

Mar. Dumasian was at my service, and his sword:

No point, quoth I; my servant straight was mute.

Kath. Lord Longaville said, I came o'er his heart;

And trow you what he call'd me?

Prin. Qualm, perhaps.

Kath. Yes, in good faith.

Prin. Go, sickness as thou art!

Ros. Well, better wits have worn plain statute-caps.

But will you hear? the king is my love sworn.

And it quick Biron hath gloitied faith to me.

Kath. And Longaville was for my service born.

Mar. Dumasian is mine, as sure as bark on tree.

Boyet. Madam, and pretty mistresses, give ear:

Immediate they will again be here

In their own shapes; for it can never be,

They will digest this harsh indignity.

Prin. Will they return?

Boyet. They will, they will, God knows,

And leap for joy, though they are lame with blows:

Therefore change favours; and, when they repair,

Blew like sweet roses in this summer air.

Prin. How blow! how blow! speak to be understood.

Boyet. Fair ladies mask'd, are roses in their bud;

Dismask'd, their damask sweet commixture shown,

Are angels vailing clouds, or roses blown.

Prin. Avaunt, perplexity! What shall we do,

If they return in their own shapes to woo?

Ros. Good madam, if by me you'll be advis'd,

Let's mock them still, as well known, as disguis'd.

Let us complain to them what fools were here,

Disguis'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear;

And wonder what they were, and to what end

Their shallow shows and prologue vilely pen'd,

And their rough carriage so ridiculous,

Should be presented at our tent to us.

Boyet. Ladies, withdraw: the gallants are at hand.

Prin. Whip to our tents, as foes run over land.

[Exeunt Princess, Ros. Kath. and Maria.

Re-enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Dumasian, in their proper habits.

King. Fair Sir, God save you! Where is the princess?

Boyet. Gone to her tent. Please it your majesty,

Command me any service to her thither?

King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.

Boyet. I will; and so will she, I know, my lord.

[Exit.

Biron. This fellow pecks up wit, as pigeons peac,

And utters it again when God doth please:

He is wit's pedlar, and retails his wares

At wakes and wassails, meetings, markets, fairs;

And we that sell by gross, the Lord doth know,

Have not the grace to grace it with such show.

This gallant pins the wenches on his sleeve,—

Had he been Adam, he had tempted Eve:

He can carve too, and lap: why, this is he

That kiss'd his hand away in courtesy:

This is the ape of form, monsieur the nice,

That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice

In honourable terms: nay, he can sing

A mean most meanly; and in ushering,

Mend him who can: the ladies call him, sweet;

The stairs, as he treads on them, kiss his feet.

This is the flower that smiles on every one,

To show his teeth as white as whails bone:

And consciences, that will not die in debt,

Pay him the due of honey-tongued Boyet.

King. A blister on his sweet tongue, with my heart.

That put Armado's page out of his part!

Biron. See where it comes.—Behaviour, what

Till this man show'd thee? and what art thou now?

Re-enter the Princess, ushered by Boyet; Rosaline, Maria, Katharine, and Attendants.

King. All hail, sweet madam, and fair time of day!

Prin. Fair, in all hail, is soul, as I conceive.

King. Construe my speeches better, if you may.

Prin. Then wish me better; I will give you leave.

King. We came to visit you; and purpose now

To tell you to our court: vouchsafe it, then.

Prin. This field shall hold me; and so hold your vow:

Nor God, nor I, delight in perjur'd men.

King. Let me not for that which you pro voke:

The virtue of your eye must break my oath.

Prin. You nick-name virtue: vice you should have spoke;

For virtue's office never breaks men's troth.

Now, by my maiden honour, yet as pure

As the unsullied lily, I protest,

A world of torments though I should endure,

I would not yield to be your house's guest;

So much I hate a breaking cause to be

Of heavenly oaths, vouch'd with integrity.

King. O you have liv'd in desolation, here,

Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.

Prin. Not so, my lord: it is not so, I swear;

We have had pastimes here, and pleasant game:

A mess of Russians left us but of late.

King. How, madam! Russians?

Prin. Ay, in truth, my lord;

Trim gallants, full of courtship and of state.

Ros. Madam, speak true.—It is not so, my lord:

My lady (to the manner of the days)

In courtesy gives undeserving praise.

We four, indeed, confronted were with four

In Russian habit: here they stay'd an hour,

And talk'd apiece; and in that hour, my lord,

They did not bless us with one happy word.

I dare not call them fools; but this I think,

When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink.

Biron. This jest is dry to me.—Fair, gentle sweet,

Your wit makes wise things foolish: when we greet,

With eyes best seeing, heaven's fiery eye,

By light we lose light: your capacity
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Is of that nature, that to your huge store
Wise things seem foolish, and rich things but poor.
Ros. This proves you wise and rich; for in my eye,— Biron. I am a fool, and full of poverty.
Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong,
It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.
Biron. O, I am yours, and all that I possess!
Ros. All the fool mine?
Biron. I cannot give you less.
Ros. Which of the visors was it that you wore?
you this?
Ros. There, then, that visor; that superfluous case
That hid the worse, and shou'd the better face.
King. We are descried; they'll mock us now downright.
Dum. Let us confess, and turn it to a jest.
Prin. Amaz'd, my lord? Why looks your highness sad?
Ros. Help! hold his brows! he'll swoon!—Why look you pale?
Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.
Biron. Thus pour the stars down plagues for know your perjury.
Can any face of brass hold longer out?—
Here stand I, lady; dart thy skill at me;
Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a flout;
Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance;
Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit.
And I will wish thee never more to dance,
Nor never more in Russian habit wait.
O, never will I trust to speeches penn'd,
Nor to the motion of a school-boy's tongue;
Nor never come in visor to my friend;
Nor woo in rhyme, like a blind harper's song!
Tall-tafted phrases, silken terms precise,
Three-pil’d hyperboles, spruce affectation,
Figures pedantical:—these summer flies
Have blown me full of maggot ostentation:
I do forswear them; and I here protest,
By this white glove,—how white the hand, God knows!—
Henceforth my wooring mind shall be express’d
In russet yess, and honest kersey noes;
And, to begin,—wench, so God help me, la!
My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw.
Ros. Sans "sans," I pray you.
Biron. Yet I have a trick
Of the old rage:—bear with me, I am sick;
I 'll leave it by degrees. Soft, let us see:—
Write, "Lord have mercy on us" on those three;
They are infected, in their hearts it lies;
They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes:
These lords are visited; you are not free,
For the Lord's tokens on you do I see.
Ros. No, they are free that gave those tokens to Biron. Our states are forfeit: seek not to undo us.
Ros. It is not so; for how can this be true,
That you stand forfeit, being those that sue?
Biron. Peace! for I will not have to do with you.
Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.
Biron. Speak for yourselves; my wit is at an end.
King. Teach us, sweet madam, for our rude trans-
Some fair excuse.
Ros. The fairest is confession.
Were you not here but even now, disguis’d?
King. Madam, I was.
Ros. And were you well advis’d?

King. I was, fair madam.
Ros. When you then were here,
What did you whisper in your lady's ear?
King. That more than all the world I did respect her.
Ros. When she shall challenge this, you will reject her.
King. Upon mine honour, no.
Prin. Peace, peace! forbear:
Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.
King. Despise me, when I break this oath of mine.
Prin. I will: and therefore keep it.—Rosaline,
What did the Russian whisper in your ear?
Ros. Madam, he swore that he did hold me dear
As precious eye-sight, and did value me
Above this world; adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover.
Prin. God give thee joy of him! the noble lord
Most honourably doth uphold his word.
King. What mean you, madam? by my life, my
I never swore this lady such an oath.
[proth.
Ros. By heaven, you did; and to confirm it plain,
You gave me this:— but take it, Sir, again.
King. My faith, and this, the princess I did give:
I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve.
Prin. Pardon me, Sir, this jewel did she wear:
And lord Biron, I thank him, is my dear.—
What, will you have me, or your pearl again?
Biron. Neither of either; I remit both twain.—
I see the trick on’t:—here was a consent,
Knowing aforehand of our merriment,
To dash it like a Christmas comedy:
Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight zany,
Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick,—
That smiles his check in years, and knows the trick
To make my lady laugh when she’s disposed,— Told our intents before; which once disclos’d,
The ladies did change favours; and then we,
Following the signs, woo’d but the sign of she.
Now, to our perjury to add more terror,
We are again forsworn,—in will and error.
Much upon this it is:—[To BOYET] and might not Forestal our sport, to make us thus untrue?—[you
Do not you know my lady’s foot by the square,
And laugh upon the apple of her eye?
And stand between her back, Sir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, jesting merrily?
You put our page out: go, you are allow’d;
Die when you will, a smock shall be your shroud.
You leer upon me, do you? there’s an eye
Wounds like a leaden sword.
Boyet. Full merrily
Hath this brave manage, this career, been run.
Biron. Lo, he is tilting straight! Peace, I have done.

Enter COSTARD.
Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray.
Cost. O Lord, Sir, they would know
Whether the three Worthies shall come in or no.
Biron. What, are there but three?
Cost. No, Sir; but it is vara fine,
For every one pursents three.
Biron. And three times thrice is nine.
Cost. Not so, Sir;—under correction, Sir, I hope, it is not so.
You cannot beg us, Sir, I can assure you, Sir; we know what we know:
I hope, Sir, three times thrice, Sir,—
Biron. Is not nine.
Cost. Under correction, Sir, we know whereunto it doth amount.
Biron. By Jove, I always took three threes for Cost. O Lord! Sir, it were pity you should get your living by reckoning, Sir.
Biron. How much is it?
Cost. O Lord! Sir, the parties themselves, the actors, Sir, will show whereunto it doth amount: for mine own part, I am, as they say, but to perfect one man in one poor man.—Pompiom the great, Sir.
Biron. Art thou one of the Worthies?
Cost. It pleased them to think me worthy of Pompion the great; for mine own part, I know not the degree of the pedant, the brae to stand for him.
Biron. Go, bid them prepare.
Cost. We will turn it finely off, Sir, we will take good care.
King. Biron. They will shame us: let them not approach.
Biron. We are shame-proof, my lord: and 'tis some policy To have one show worse than the king's and his company.
King. I say, they shall not come.
Cost. Nay, my good lord, let me o'er-rule you That sport best pleases that doth least know how. Where zeal strives to content, and the content Lies in the zeal of those which it presents: Their form confounded makes most form in mirth; When great things labouring perish in their birth.
Biron. A right description of our sport, my lord.

Enter Armado.
Arm. Anointed, I implore so much expense of thy royal sweet breath, as will utter a brace of words. [Converses with the King, and delivers a paper to him.
Prin. Doth this man serve God?
Biron. Why ask you?
[making a face]
Prin. He speaks not like a man of God his Arm. That's all one, my fair, sweet, honey mon- arch: for, I protest, the school-master is exceeding fantastical; too vain; too vain: but we will put it, as they say, to fortuna della guerra. I wish you the peace of mind, most royal couplement!

Enter King. Here is like to be a good presence of Worthies. He presents Hector of Troy; the swain, Pompey the great; the parish curate, Alexander; Armado's page, Hercules; the pedant, Judas Maccabeus: And if these four Worthies in their first show thrive, These four will change habits, and present the other Biron. There are five in the first show. [five.
King. You are deceived; 'tis not so.
Biron. The pedant, the bargjett, the hedge- priest, the fool, and the boy:— Abate throw at novum, and the whole world again, Cannot prick out five such, take each one in his vein.
King. The ship is under sail, and here she comes again.

Enter Costard, armed, for Pompey.
Cost. "I Pompey am,——"
Boyet. You lie, you are not he.
Cost. "I Pompey am,——"
Boyet. With libbard's head on knee.
Biron. Well said, old mockers: I must needs be friends with thee.
Cost. "I Pompey am, Pompey surnam'd the big,——"
Dum. "The great,——"
Cost. It is "great," Sir;—"Pompey surnam'd the great; That oft in field, with targe and shield, did make His men plain eyes; And travelling along this coast, I here am come by chance, And lay my arms before the legs of this sweet lass If your ladyship would say, "Thanks, Pompey," I had done.
Prin. Great thanks, great Pompey.
Cost. "Tu not so much worth; but I hope I was I made a little fault in, "great."
Biron. My hat to a half-penny, Pompey proves the best worthy.

Enter Sir Nathaniel armed, for Alexander.
Nath. "When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander; By east, west, north, and south, I spread my con- quering might: My 'scutcheon plain declares, that I am Alexander,—" Boyet. Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right.
Biron. Your nose smells, no, in this, most tender- smelling knight.
Prin. The conqueror is dismayd.—Proceed, good Alexander.
Nath. "When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;—" Boyet. Most true, 'tis right; you were so, Al- sander.
Biron. Pompey the great,—
Cost. Your servant, and Costard.
Biron. Take away the conqueror, take away Al- sander.
Cost. [To Nath.] O Sir, you have overthrown Al sander the conqueror. You will be scraped out of the printed cloth for this: your lion, that holds his poll-axe sitting on a close-stool, will be given to Ajax; he will be the ninth Worthy. A conqueror, and afraid to speak! run away for shame, Al sander. [Nath. retires.] There, an't shall please you; a foolish mild man; an honest man, look you, and soon dashed. He is a marvellous good neighbour, faith, and a very good bowler; but, for Al sander,—alas, you see how 'tis,—a little o'erparted.—But there are Worthies a coming will speak their mind in some other sort.
Prin. Stand aside, good Pompey.

Enter Holomfrses armed, for Judas; and MOTH armed, for Hercules.
Hol. "Great Hercules is presented by this imp, Whose club kill'd Cerberus, that three-headed canis; And, when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp, Thus did he strangle serpents in his manus. Quoniam, he seemeth in minority, Ergo, I come with this apology:" Keep some state in thy caft, and vanish.
[Cost left.
Hol. "Judas I am,—"
Dum. A Judas!
SCENE II.

LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Biron. A kissing traitor.—How art thou proved Judas?

Hol. "Judas I am,"...

Dum. The more shame for you, Judas.

Hol. What mean you, Sir?

Boyet. To make Judas hang himself.

Hol. Begirt, Sir; you are my elder.

Biron. Well follow'd: Judas was hanged on an elder.

Hol. I will not be put out of countenance.

Biron. Because thou hast no face.

Hol. What is this?

Boyet. A cittern head.

Dum. The head of a bodkin.

Biron. A death's face in a ring.

Long. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.

Boyet. The pumel of Caesar's fauchion.

Dum. The carved bone face on a flasket.

Biron. St. George's half cheek in a brooch.

Dum. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.

Biron. Ay, and worn in the cap of a tooth-drawer.

And now forward; for we have put thee in countenance.

Hol. You have put me out of countenance.

Biron. False: we have given thee faces.

Hol. But you have out-fac'd them all.

Biron. An thou wert a lion, we would do so.

Boyet. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go.

And so adieu, sweet Jude! nay, why dost thou stay?

Dum. For the latter end of his name.

Biron. For the ass to the Jude? give it him:—

Jud-as, away.

Hol. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.

Boyet. A light for monsieur Judas! it grows dark, he may stumble.

Prin. Alas, poor Maccabeus, how hath he been Enter ARMADO armed, for Hector.

Biron. Hide thy head, Achilles: here comes Hector in arms.

Dum. Though my mocks come home by me, I will now be merry.

King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of this.

Boyet. But is this Hector?

King. I think Hector was not so clean-timbered.

Long. His heart is too big for Hector.

Dum. More call, certain.

Boyet. No; he is best indued in the small.

Biron. This cannot be Hector.

Dum. He's a god or a painter; for he makes

Arm. "The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty, Gave Hector a gift,—"

Dum. A gift nutmeg.

Biron. A lemon.

Long. Stuck with cloves.

Dum. No, cloven.

Arm. Peace!—

"The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty,

Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion;

A man so breath'd, that certain he would fight ye

From morn till night, out of his pavilion.

I am that flower,"—

Dum. That mint.

Long. That columbine.

Arm. Sweet lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.

Long. I must rather give it the rein; for it runs against Hector.

Dum. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound.

Arm. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten;

sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried:

when he breathed, he was a man.—But I will forward with my device. [To the Princess.] Sweet royalty, bestow on me the sense of hearing.

[BI RON whispers COSTARD.

Prin. Speak, brave Hector: we are much delighted.

Arm. I do adore thy sweet grace's slipper.

Boyet. Loves her by the foot.

Dum. He may not by the yard.

Arm. "This Hector far surmounted Hannibal."—

Cat. The party is gone, fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two months on her way.

Arm. What meanest thou?

Cat. Faith, unless you play the honest Trojan, the poor wench is cast away; she's quick; the child brags in her belly already: it's yours.

Arm. Dost thou inflamóx me among potentates?

Thou shalt die.

Cat. Then shall Hector be whipped for Jaquenetta's that is quick by him, and hanged for Pompe-py that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey!

Boyet. Renowned Pompey!

Biron. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the huge!

Dum. Hector trembles.

Biron. Pompey is moved.—More Ates, more

Ares! sit them on! sit them on!

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Biron. Ay, if he have no more man's blood in's belly than will sup a flea.

Arm. By the north pole, I do challenge thee.

Cat. I will not fight with a pole, like a northern man: I'll slash; I'll do it by the sword.—I pray

you, let me borrow my arms again.

Dum. Room for the incensed Worthies!

Cat. I'll do it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey!

Sloth. Master, let me take you a button-hole lower.

Do you not see, Pompey is uncasing for the combat?

What mean you? you will lose your reputation.

Arm. Gentlemen and soldiers, pardon me: I will not combat in my shirt.

Dum. You may not deny it: Pompey hath made the challenge.

Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

Biron. What reason have you for it?

Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt; I go woolward for penance.

Boyet. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of linen; since when, I'll be sworn, he wore none but a dish-clout of Jaquenetta's, and that he wears next his heart for a favour.

Enter MERCIAE.

Mscr. God save you, madam!

Prin. Welcome, Mercacia;

But that thou interruptest our merriment.

Mscr. I am sorry, madam; for the news I bring is heavy in my tongue. The king your father—

Prin. Dead, for my life!

Mscr. Even so; my tale is told.

Biron. Worthies, away! the scene begins to cloud.

Arm. For mine own part, I breathe free breath.
I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a soldier.

King. How fares your majesty?
Prin. Boyet, prepare; I will away to-night.
King. Madam, not so; I do beseech you, stay.
Prin. Prepare, I say.—I thank you, gracious lords,
For all your fair endeavours; and entreat,
Out of a new and sad soul, that you vouchsafe
In your rich wisdom to excuse, or hide,
The liberal opposition of our spirits;
If over-boldly we have borne ourselves
In the converse of breath, your gentleness
Was guilty of. —Farewell, worthy lord!
A heavy heart bears but a humble tongue:
Excuse me so, coming so short of thanks
For my great suit so easily obtain'd.

King. The extreme part of time extremely forms
All causes to the purpose of his speed;
And often, at his very loose, decides
That which long process could not arbitrate;
And though the mourning bow of progeny
Forbid the smiling courtesy of love
The holy suit which faint it would convince;
Yet, since love's argument was firm on foot,
Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it
From what it purposed; since, to wall friends lost,
Is not by much so wholesome profitable,
As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Prin. I understand you not; my griefs are dull.

Biron. Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief;
And by these badges understand the king.
For your fair sakes have we neglected time,
Play'd foul play with our oaths: your beauty, ladies,
Hath much deform'd us, fashioning our humour;
Even to the opposite end of our intents;
And what we hath seem'd ridiculous,—
As love is full of unbefitting strains;
All wanton as a child, skipping, and vain;
Form'd by the eye, and, therefore, like the eye,
Full of strange shapes, of habits, and of forms,
Varying in subjects, as the eye doth roll
To every variation in his glance;
Which party-coated presence of loose love
Put on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes,
Have misconstrued our oaths and gravities,
Those heavenly eyes, they look into these faults,
Suggested us to make. Therefore, ladies,
Our love being yours, the error that love makes
Is likewise yours: we to ourselves prove false,
By being once false for ever to be true;
To those that make us both, —fair ladies, you:
And even that falsehood, in itself a sin,
Thus purifies itself, and turns to grace.

Prin. We have receiv'd your letters full of love;
Your favours, the embassadors of love;
And, in our maiden council, rated them
At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy,
As bombast, and as lusing to the time:
But more devout than this in our respects
Have we not been; and therefore met your loves
In their own fashion, like a mercerment.

Long. So did our looks.

King. Now, at the latest minute of the hour,
Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time, methinks, too short
To make a world-without-end bargain in.
No, no, my lord, your grace is perjur'd much,
Full of dear gullines; and therefore this:—
If for my love (as there is no such cause)
You will do aught, this shall you do for me:
Your oath I will not trust; but go with speed
To some forlorn and naked hermitage,
Remote from all the pleasures of the world;
There stay, until the twelve celestial signs
Have brought about their annual reckoning,
If this austere insociable life
Change not your offer made in heat of blood;
If frosts, and fasts, hard lodging, and thin weeds,
Nip not the guily blossoms of your love,
But that it bear this trial, and last love;
Then, at the expiration of the year,
Come challenge me, challenge me by these deserts,
And, by this virgin palm, now kissing thine,
I will be thine; and, till that instant, shut
My woful self up in a mourning house,
Raining the tears of lamentation
For the remembrance of my father's death.
If this thou do deny, let our hands part;
Neither intitled in the other heart.

King. If this, or more than this, I would deny,
To flatter up these powers of mine with rest,
The sudden hand of death close up mine eye!
Hence ever, then, my heart is in thy breast.

Biron. And what to me, my love? and what to me?

Ros. You must be purg'd too, your sins are rank:
You are attaint with faults and perjury;
Therefore, if you my favour mean to get,
A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never rest,
But seek the weary beds of people sick.

Dum. But what to me, my love? but what to me?

Kath. A wife!—A beard, fair health, and honesty;
With three-fold love I wish you all these three.

Dum. O, shall I say, I thank you, gentle wife?

Kath. Not so, my lord, a twelvemonth and a day
I'll mark no words that smooth-fac'd wooers say:
Come when the king doth to my lady come;
Then, if I have much love, I'll give you some.

Dum. I'll serve thee true and faithfully till then.

Kath. Yet swear not, lest you be forsworn again.

Long. What says Marie?

Mar. At the twelvemonth's end,
I'll change my black gown for a faithful friend.
Long. I'll stay with patience; but the time is long.

Mar. The liker you; few taller are so young.

Biron. Studies my lady? mistress, look on me;
Behold the window of my heart, mine eye,
What humble suit attends thy answer there:
Impose some service on me for thy love.

Ros. Oft have I heard of you, my lord Biron,
Before I saw you; and the world's large tongue
Proclaims you for a man replete with mock's,
Full of comparisons and wounding flouts,
Which you on all estates will execute
That lie within the mercy of your wit.
To weed this wormwood from your fruitful brain,
And therewithal to win me, if you please,—
Without the which I am not to be won,—
You shall this twelvemonth term, from day to day,
Visit the speechless sick, and still converse.
With groaning wretches; and your task shall be,
With all the fierce endeavour of your wit.
To enforce the pain’d impatient to smile.

Biron. To move wild laughter in the throat of death!
It cannot be; it is impossible:
Mirth cannot move a soul in agony.

Re-enter Holofernes, Nathaniel, Moth, Costard, and others.

This side is Hiems, winter; this Ver, the spring;
the one maintained by the owl, the other by the cuckoo. Ver, begin.

SONG.

Spring. When daisies pied, and violets blue,
And lady-smocks all silver-white,
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue,
Do paint the meadow with delight,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo,—O word of fear!
Unpleasing to a married ear.

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
And merry larks are ploughmen’s clocks,
When turtles tread, and rooks, and daws,
And maidens bleach their summer smocks,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo,—O word of fear!
Unpleasing to a married ear.

Winter. When icicles hang by the wall,
And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,
And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipp’d, and ways be foul,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
To-who;
To-who, to-who, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coughing draws the parson’s saw,
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marianne’s nose looks red and raw,
When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
To-who;
To-who, to-who, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You, that way; we, this way.

[Exeunt.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—ATHENS. A Room in the Palace of Theseus.
Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Philostrate, and Attendants.

Th. Now, fair Hippolyta, our nuptial hour Draws on before us; four happy days bring in Another moon: but, oh, methinks, how slow This old moon wanes! she lingers my desires, Like to a step-dame, or a dowager, Long withering out a young man's revenue.

Hipp. Four days will quickly steep themselves in nights; Four nights will quickly dream away the time; And then the moon, like to a silver bow New bent in heaven, shall behold the night Of our solemnities.

Th. Then, go, Philostrate,
Stir up the Athenian youth to merriments;
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth:
Turn melancholy for to mourns, —
The pale companion is not for our pomp.
[Exit Philostrate.]

Hippolyta, I woo'd thee with my sword,
And won thy love, doing thee injuries;
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.
[Enter Egeus, Hermia, Lysander, and Demetrius.]

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned duke!
Th. Thanks, good Egeus: what's the news with thee?
Ege. Full of vexation come I, with complaint Against my child, my daughter Hermia. — Stand forth, Demetrius,—My noble lord, This man hath my consent to marry her.
Stand forth, Lysander:—and, my gracious duke, This man hath bewitch'd the bosom of my child. —
Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rhymes, And interchang'd love-tokens with my child: Thou hast by moon-light at her window sung, With feigning voice, verses of feigning love; And stolen th' impression of her fantasy With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawds, conceits, Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweetmeats (messengers Of strong prevailment in unharden'd youth): With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughter's heart; Turn'd her obedience, which is due to me, To stubborn harshness:—and, my gracious duke, Be it so she will not here before your grace Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens,—
As she is mine, I may dispose of her:
Which shall be either to this gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our law
Immediately provided in that case.
Th. The. What say you, Hermia? be advis'd, fair maid:
To you your father should be as a god; One that compos'd your beauties; yes, and one To whom you are but as a form in wax,
By him imprinted, and within his power
To leave the figure, or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.
Herm. So is Lysander.

Th. In himself he is;
But, in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must be held the worthier.
Herm. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.
Th. Rather, your eyes must with his judgment look.
Herm. I do entreat your grace to pardon me,
I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concern my modesty,
In such a presence here, to plead my thoughts;
But I beseech your grace, that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

Ths. Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires;
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether, if you yield not to your father’s choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun;
For aye to be in shape of cloister maw’d,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chasting faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon.
Thrice blessed they, that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage:
But earthly happy is the rose distill’d,
Than that which, withering on the virgin thorn,
Grows, lives, and dies, in single blemishness.

Her. So will I grow, so live, so die, my lord,
Eve I will yield my virgin patent up
Unto his lordship, whose unwished yoke
Monstrels is my head, my heart my yoke.

Ths. Take time to pause; and, by the next new

The sealing-day betwixt my love and me
For everlasting loveliness.

Upon that day either prepare to die
For disobedience to your father’s will,
Or else to wed Demetrius, as he would;
Or on Diana’s altar to protest,
For eye, austerity and single life.

Dem. Relent, sweet Hermia;—and, Lysander,
Thy craz’d title to my certain right.

Lyr. You have her father’s love, Demetrius;
Let me have Hermia’s: do you marry him.

Egr. Scornful Lysander! true, he hath my love,—
And what is mine my love shall render him;
And she is mine, and all my right of her
I do estate unto Demetrius.

Lyr. I am, my lord, as well deriv’d as he,
As well possess’d: my love is more than his;
My fortunes every way as fairly rank’d
(If not with vantage), as Demetrius’;
And, which is more than all these boast is can be,
I am below’d of Vienna’s doves;
Why should I not, then, prosecute my right?
Demetrius, I’ll avouch it to his head,
Made love to Nedar’s daughter, Helena,
And won her soul; and she, sweet lady, dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry,
Upon this spotted and inconsistent man.

Ths. I must confess that I have heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof;
But, being over-full of self-affairs,
My mind did lose it.—But, Demetrius, come;
And come, Egeus; you shall go with me,
I have some private schooling for you both.—
For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself
To fit your fancies to your father’s will;
Or else the law of Athens yeals you up
(Which by no means we may extenuate)
To death, or to a vow of single life.

Come, my Hippolyta: what cheer, my love?—
Demetrius, and Egeus, go along.
I must employ you in some business
Against our nuptial; and confer with you
Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.

Egr. With duty and desire we follow you.

Lyr. How now, my love! Why is your cheek so
How chance the roses there do fade so fast? [pale

Her. Beline, for want of rain, which I could well
Betewn them from the tempest of mine eyes.

Lyr. Ah me! for aught that ever I could read,
Could ever hear by tale or history,
The course of true love never did run smooth:
But, either it was different in blood,—

Her. O cross! too high to be enthrall’d to low!

Lyr. Or else misprisou in respect of years,—

Her. O spite! too old to be engag’d to young!

Lyr. Or else it stood upon the choice of friends,—

Her. O hell! to choose love by another’s eye!

Lyr. Or, if there were a sympathy in choice,
War, death, or sickness, did lay siege to it,
Making it momentary as a sound,
Swift as a shadow, short as my dream;
Brief as the lightning in the collied night,
That, in a spience, unfolds both heaven and earth,
And ere a man hath power to say,—Behold!

The jaws of darkness do devour it up:
So quick bright things come to consumption.

Her. If, then, true lovers have been ever cross’d,
It stands as an edict in destiny:
Then let us teach our trial patience,
Because it is a customary cross.
As due to love as thoughts, and dreams, and sighs,
Wishes, and tears, poor fancy’s followers.

Lyr. A good persuasion: therefore, hear me,
I have a widow aunt, a dowager
(Hermia),
Of great revenue, and she hath no child:
From Athens is her house remote seven leagues;
And she respects me as her only son.
There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee;
And to that place the sharp Athenian law
Cannot pursue us. If thou lov’est me, then,
Steal forth thy father’s house to-morrow night;
And in the wood, a league without the town,
Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To do observance to a morn of May,
There will I stay for thee.

Her. My good Lysander!

I swear to thee, by Cupid’s strongest bow;
By his best arrow, with the golden head;
By the simplicity of Venus’ doves;
By that which knitteth souls and fopres loves,
And by that fire which burn’d the Carthage queen,
When the false Trojan under sail was seen;
By all the vows that ever men have broke,
In number more than ever women spoke;—
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To-morrow truly will I meet with thee.

Lyr. Keep promise, love. Look, here comes Helena.

Enter Helena.

Her. God speed fair Helena! Whither away?

Hel. Call you me fair? that fair again uneasy,
Demetrius loves your fair: O happy fair!
Your eyes are like the stars; and your tongue’s sweet
More tunable than lark to shepherd’s ear,

When wheat is green, when hawthorn buds appear.
Sickness is catching: O, were favour so,
Yours would I catch, fair Hermia! so I go,
My ear should catch your voice, my eye your eye,
My tongue should catch your tongue’s sweet melody,
Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated,
The rest I’ll give to be to you translated,
O, teach me how you look; and with what art
You sway the motion of Demetrius’ heart!

Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me still.
Scene II.—Athens. A Room in Quince’s House.

Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout,

and STARRVLING.

Quin. Is all our company here?

Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the script.

Quin. Here is the scroll of every man’s name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our interlude before the duke and the duchess on his wedding-day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on; then read the names of the actors; and so grow to a point.

Quin. Marry, o’er play is—The most lamentable comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bot. A very good piece of work, I assure you, and a merry.—Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your actors by the scroll.—Masters, spread yourselves.

Quin. Answer, as I call you.—Nick Bottom, the weaver.

Bot. Ready. Name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quin. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?

Quin. A lover, that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bot. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it: if I do it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move storms, I will condole in some measure. To the rest,—yet my chief humour is for a tyrant: I could play Hercules rare, or a part to tear a cat in, to make all split.

The raging rocks and shivering shocks Shall break the locks Of prison-gates; And some cars Shall shine from far, And make and mar— The foolish fate.

This was lofty!—Now name the rest of the players.

—This is Ercles' vein, a tyrant’s vein;—a lover is more conducing.

Quin. Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.

Flut. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You must take Thisby on you.

Flut. What is Thisby? a wandering knight?

Quin. It is the lady that Pyramus must love.

Flut. Nay, faith, let not me play a woman; I have a beard coming.

Quin. That’s all one: you shall play it in a mask, and you may speak as small as you will.

Bot. And I will hide my face, let me play Thisby too: I’ll speak in a monstrous little voice:—“Thisbe, Thisbe”—“Ah, Pyramus, my lover dear! thy Thisby dear, and lady dear!”

Quin. No, no; you must play Pyramus:—and,

Flute, you Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling, the tailor.

Snout. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisby’s mother.—Tom Snout, the tinker.

Snout. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You, Pyramus’s father;—myself, Thisby’s father; Snug, the joiner, you, the lion’s part:—and, I hope, here is a play fitted.

Snug. Have you the lion’s part written? pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study.

Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the lion too: I will roar, that I will do any man’s heart good to hear me; I will roar, that I will make the duke say, "Let him roar again, let him roar again."

Quin. An you should do it too terribly, you would fright the duchess and the ladies, that they would shriek; and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us, every mother's son.

Bot. I grant you, friends, if that you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us: but I will aggravate my voice so, that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you an 'twere any nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus; for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man; a proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day; a most lovely, gentlemanlike man: therefore, you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What beard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, that which you will.

Bot. I will discharge it in either your straw-colour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown-colour beard, your perfect yellow come at will.

Quin. Some of your French crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play bare-faced.—But masters, here are your parts: and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to-morrow night; and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moon-light; there will we rehearse,—for if we meet in the city, we shall be dogged with company, and our devices known. In the meantime, I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants. I pray you, fail me not.

Bot. We will meet; and there we may rehearse more obscenely, and courageously. Take pains; be perfect; adieu.

Quin. At the duke's oak we meet.

Bot. Enough; hold, or cut bow-strings. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Wood near Athens.

Enter a Fairy and Puck, from opposite sides.

Puck. How now, spirit? whither wander you?

Fai. Over hill, over dale,
Thorough bush, thorough brier,
Over park, over pale,
Thorough flood, thorough fire,
I do wander everywhere,
Swifter than the moon's sphere;
And I serve the fairy queen,
To dew her orbs upon the green:
The cowslips tall her pensioners be;
In their gold coats spots you see;
Those be rubies, fairy favours,
In those freckles live their savours:
I must go seek some dew-drops here,
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.

Farewell, thou lob of spirits; 'till I be gone;
Our queen and all her elves come here anon.

Puck. The king doth keep his revels here to-night;
Take heed the queen come not within his sight;
For Oberon is passing fell and wrath,
Because that she, as her attendant, hath

A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king;
She never had so sweet a changeling:
And jealous Oberon would have the child
Knight of his train, to trace the forest's wild;
But she, perfidious, withholds the loved boy,
Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy:
And now they never meet in grove or green,
Iy fountain clear, or spangled star-light sheen,
But they do square; that all their elses, for fear,
Creep into acorn cups, and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite,
Or else you are that shrewd and knavish sprite, Call'd Robin Good-fellow: are you not he
That frights the maidens of the villagery;
Skims milk, and sometimes labours in the quern,
And booteless chases the breathless housewife churn;
And sometime makes the drink to bear no barm;
Misleads night-wanderers, laughing at their harm?
Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Puck,
You do their work, and they shall have good luck:
Are not you he?

Puck. Thou speak'st aright; I am that merry wanderer of the night,
I jest to Oberon, and make him smile.
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likeness of a silly foal;
And sometime lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab;
And, when she drinks, against her lips I bob,
And on her wither'd dew-lap pour the ale.
The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stool mistaken me;
Then slip I from her bum, down topples she,
And "tailor" cries, and falls into a crouch;
And then the whole quire hold their hips, and loffe;
And waxen in their mirth, and neese, and swear
A merrier hour was never wasted there.—
But, room, Fairy! here comes Oberon. [Exeunt.

ACT II.—The Same.

Enter Oberon from one side, with his train: and TITANIA from the other, with hers.

Obe. Ill met by moon-light, proud Titania.
Tita. What, jealous Oberon! Fairies, skip hence:
I have forsworn his bed and company.

Obe. Tarry, rash wanton! am I not thy lord?

Tita. Then, I must be thy lady: but I know
When thou hast stol'n away from fairy land,
And in the shape of Corin sat all day,
Playing on pipes of corn, and versing love
To amorous Phyllida. Why art thou here,
Come from the farthest steep of India,
But that, forsooth, the bouncing Amazon,
Your buskin'd mistress and your warrior love,
To Theseus must be wedded? and you come to give their bed joy and prosperity.

Obe. How canst thou thus, for shame, Titania,
Glance at my credit with Hippolyta,
Knowing I know thy love to Theseus?
Didst thou not lead him through the glimmering night
From Perigernas, whom he ravished?
And make him with fair Ragle break his faith,
With Ariadne, and Antiope?

Tita. These are the forgeries of jealousy:
And never, since the middle summer's spring,
Met we on hill, in dale, forest, or mead,
By paved fountain, or by rushy brook,
Or on the beached margent of the sea,
To dance our ringlets to the whistling wind,
But with thy brows thou hast disturb'd our sport.
Therefore the winds, piping to us in vain,
As in revenge, have suck'd up from the sea
Contagious fogs: which, falling in the land,
Have every pelting river made so proud,
That they have overborne their continents:
The ox hath therefore stretch'd his yoke in vain,
The ploughman lost his sweat; and the green corn
 Hath rotted ere his youth attain'd a beard:
The fold stands empty in the drowned field,
And crows are fatted with the murrain flock:
The nine-men's Morris is fill'd up with mud;
And the quaint mazes in the wanton green,
For lack of tread are indistinguishable:
The human mortals want their winter here;
No night is now with hymn or carol blest:—
Therefore the moon, the governess of floods,
Pale in her anger, washes all the air,
That rheumatic diseases do abound:
And thorough this distemper we see
The seasons alter: hoary-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose;
And on old Hyacinth's chin, and ivy crown
An odorous coplet of sweet summer buds
Is, as in mockery, set.
The spring, the summer,
The chiding autumn, angry winter, change
Their wonted liverys; and the 'mark'd world,
By their increase, now know'st not which is which:
And this same progeny of evils comes
From our debate, from our dissertation;
We are their parents and original.

Oke. Do you amend it, then; it lies in you:
Why should Titania cross her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my henchman.

Tit. Set your heart at rest:
The fairy land buys not the child of me.
His mother was a votress of my order;
And, in the spiced Indian air, by night,
Full often hath she gossip'd by my side;
And sat with me on Neptune's yellow sands,
Making th' embark'd traders on the flood;
When we have laugh'd to see the sails conceive,
And grow big-bellied, with the wanton wind;
Which she, with pretty and with swimming gait,
Follow'd, her womb then rich with my young;
When she would imitate, and sail upon the land, (Quire)
To fetch me trifles, and return again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandise.
But she, being mortal, of that boy did die;
And for her sake I do rear up her boy;
And for her sake I will not part with him.

Oke. How long within this wood intend you stay?
Tit. Perchance till after Theseus' wedding-day.
If you will patiently dance in our round,
And see our moonlight revels, go with us;
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.
Oke. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.

Tit. Not for thy fairy kingdom.—Fairies, away!
We shall chide downright, if I longer stay.

[Exeunt Titania, with her train.

Oke. Well, go thy way; thou shalt not from this Till I torment thee for this injury.—
[growc., My gentle Puck, come hither. Thou remember'st
Since once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid, on a dolphin's back,
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew civil to her song,
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres,
To hear the sea-maid's music.

Puck. Oke. That very time I saw (but thou couldst not),
Flying between the cold moon and the earth,
Cupid all arm'd: a certain aim he took
At a fair vestal thro'bed by the west,
And loo'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow,
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts:
But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft
Quench'd in the chaste beams of the wat'ry moon,
And the imperial votress pass'd on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.
Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell:
It fell upon a little western flower,
Before milk-white, now purple with love's wound,
And maidsens call it, love-in-idleness.
Fetch me that flower; the herb I show'd thee once:
The juice of it on sleeping eyelids laid,
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Upon the next live creature that it sees.
Fetch me this herb; and be thou here again,
Ere the lewathan can swim a league.

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.

Oke. Having once this juice,
I'll watch Titania when she is asleep;
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes.
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
(Do it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull.
On meddling monkey, or on busy ape.)
She shall pursue it with the soul of love:
And ere I take this charm off from her sight,
(Ass I can take it with another herb)
I'll make her render up her page to me.
But who comes here? I am invisible;
And I will over-hear their conference.

Enter Demetrius, Helena, following him.

Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me not.
Where is Lysander, and fair Hermia?
The one I'll slay, the other slayeth me.
Thou told'st me when I was stol'n into this wood;
And here am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence! get thee gone, and follow me no more.

Hel. You wrong a true heart.活动你
You wrong a true heart.活动你
You wrong a true heart.
But yet you draw not iron, for my heart
Is true as steel: leave you your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I enjoin you? Do I speak you fair?
Or, rather, do I not in plainest truth
Tell you, I do not nor I cannot love you?

Hel. And even for that do I love you the more.
I am your spaniel; and, Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you:
Use me but as your spaniel, spur me, strike me,
Neglect me, lose me; only give me leave,
Unworthy as I am, to follow you.
What wors'r place can I beg in your love?
(And yet a place of high respect with me.)
Than to be used as you use your dog?

Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit;
For I am sick when I do look on thee.

Hel. And I am sick when I look not on you.
Scene III.

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

Dem. You do impeach your modesty too much, To leave the city, and commit yourself Into the hands of one that loves you not; To trust the opportunity of night, And the ill counsel of a desert place, With the rich worth of your virginity.
Her. Your virtue is my privilege for that. It is not night when I do see your face, Therefore I think I am not in the night; Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company, For you, in my respect, are all the world: Then how can it be said I am alone, When all the world is here to look on me?
Dem. I'll run from thee and hide me in the brakes, And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.
Her. The wildest hath not such a heart as you. Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd, Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase; The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind Makes speed to catch the tiger,—boastless speed, When cowardice pursues, and valour flies!
Dem. I will not stay thy questions; let me go: Or, if thou follow me, do not believe That I shall do thee mischief in the wood.
Her. Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field, You do me mischief. Fie, Demetrius! Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex: We cannot fight for love, as men may do; We should be woo'd, and were not made to woo. I'll follow thee, and make a heaven of hell, To die upon the hand I love so well.

[Exeunt Dem. and Herl.

Obe. Fare thee well, nymph: ere he do leave this grove, Thou shalt by him, and he shall seek thy love.—

Re-enter Puck.

Hast thou the flower there? Welcome, wanderer.
Puck. Ay, there it is. I pray thee, give it me.
Obe. I know a bank where the wild thyme blows, Where ox-lips, and the nodding violet grows; Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine, With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine: There sleeps Titania some time of the night, Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight; And there the snake throws her enameled skin, Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in: And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes, And make her full of hateful fantasies.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove: A sweet Athenian lady is in love With a disdainful youth: anon his eyes; But do it, when the next thing he espies May be the lady. Thou shalt know the man By the Athenian garments he hath on. Effect it with some care, that he may prove More fond on her than she upon him: And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.
Puck. Fear not, my lord, your servant shall do so.

[Exit.

Scene III.—Another part of the wood.

Enter Titania, with her train.

Tit. Come, now a roundel, and a fairy song; Then for the third part of a minute, hence:—
Some, to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds; Some, war with rear-mice for their leathern wings, To make my small elves costs: and some, keep back The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots, and wonders.
At our quiet spirits, Sing me now asleep; Then to your offices, and let me rest.

Song.

1 Fair. You spotted snakes, with double tongue, Thorny hedge-hogs, be not seen;
Nests, and blind-worms, do no wrong: Come not near our fairy queen:
Chorus. Philomel, with melody, Sing love our sweet lullaby; Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullaby; Never harm, Nor spell nor charm, Come our lovely lady nigh; So, good night, with lullaby.

2 Fair. Weaver spiders, come not here; Hence, you long-legged spinners, hence!
Bees black, and bumble-bees, stay near; Worm, nor snail, do no offence.

Chorus. Philomel, with melody, &c.

1 Fair. Hence, away! now all is well. One, asleep, stand sentinel.
[Exeunt Fairies. Titania sleeps.

Enter Oberon.

Obe. [Squeezes the flower on Titania's eyelids.] What thou seest when thou dost wake, Do it for thy true love take; Love, and languish for his sake: Be it ounce, or cat, or bear, Hard, or bear with bristled hair, In thy eye that shall appear When thou wak'st, it is thy dear.
Wake when some vile thing is near.

[Exit. Enter Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandering in the wood; And to speak truth, I have forgot our way: We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good, And tarry for the comfort of the day.
Her. Be it so, Lysander: find you out a bed; For I upon this bank will rest my head.
Lys. One turf shall serve as pillow for us both; One heart, one bed, two bosoms, and one troth.
Her. Nay, good Lysander: for my sake, my dear, Lie farther off yet; do not lie so near.

Lys. O, take the sense, sweet, of my innocence! Love takes the meaning in love's conference. I mean, that my heart unto yours is knit, So that last one heart we can make of it: Two bosoms interchanged with an oath; So then, two bosoms, and a single troth. Then, by your side no bed-room me deny; For, lying so, Hermia, I do not lie.
Her. Lysander riddles very prettily:—
Now much be shrewd my manners and my pride, If Hermia meant to say, Lysander lied. But, gentle friend, for love and courtesies Lie farther off; in human modesty, Such separation as may well be said Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid,—
So far be distance; and, good night, sweet friend. Thy love ne'er alter till thy sweet life end!
Lys. Amen, amen, to that fair prayer, say I;
And then end life, when I end loyalty!
Here is my bed; sleep give thee all his rest!
_Her._ With half that wish the wiser's eyes be press'd! [They sleep.

_Enter Puck._

_Puck._ Through the forest have I gone,
But Athenian found I none,
On whose eyes I might approve
This flower's force in stirring love.
Night and silence! who is here?
Weeds of Athens he doth wear:
This is he, my master said,
Despised the Athenian maid;
And here the maiden, sleeping sound,
On the dank and dirty ground:—
Pretty soul! she durst not lie
Near this lack-love, this kill-courtesy.
[Sequestrer the flower on Lyndemus's eyelid.

Churl, upon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charm doth owe.
When thou wak'st, let love forbid
Sleep his seat on thy eyelid:
So awake when I am gone,
For I must now to Oberon.

_Enter Demetrius and Helena, running._

_Hel._ Stay, though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.

_Dem._ I charge thee, hence; and do not haunt me thus.

_Hel._ O, wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.

_Dem._ Stay, on thy peril! I alone will go.

[Exit Demetrius.

_Hel._ O, I am out of breath in this fond chase!
The more my prayer, the lesser is my grace.
Happy is Hermia, wheresoe'er she lies;
For she hath blessed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears:
If so, my eyes are oftener wash'd than hers.
No, no, I am as ugly as a bear;
For beasts that meet me, run away for fear:
Therefore no marvel though Demetrius
Do, as a monster, fly my presence thus.
What wicked and dissembling glass of mine
Made me compare with Hermia's spheyre eye?—
But who is here?—Lyndemus on the ground!
Dead! or asleep?—I see no blood, no wound.—
Lyndemus, if you live, good Sir, awake.

_Lys._ [Awaking.] And run through fire I will, for thy sweet sake.

Transparent Helena! Nature here shows art,
That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart.
Where is Demetrius? O, how fit a word
Is that vile name to perish on my sword!
_Hel._ Do not say so, Lyndemus; say not so.
What though he love your Hermia? Lord, what though?
Yet Hermia still loves you: then be content
_Lys._ Content with Hermia! No; I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have spent.
Not Hermia, but Helena I love:
Who will not change a raven for a dove?
The will of man is by his reason away'd;
And reason says you are the worthier maid.
Things growing are not ripe until their season:
So I, being young, till now ripe not to reason;
And touching now the point of human skill,

Reason becomes the marshal to my will,
And leads me to your eyes; where I o'erlook
Love's stories, written in love's richest book.

_Hel._ Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?
When, at your hands, did I deserve this scorn?
Is't not enough, is't not enough, young man,
That I did never, no, nor never can,
Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eye,
But you must flout my insufficiency?

Good truth, you do me wrong,—good sooth, you do.
In such disdainful manner me to woo,
But fare you well; perforce I must confess,
I thought you lord of more true gentleness.
O, that a lady, of one man refus'd,
Should of another therefore be abus'd!

_Lys._ She sees not Hermia.—Hermia, sleep thou there;
And never may'st thou come Lyndemus near!
For, as a surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to the stomach brings;
Or, as the heresies, that men do leave,
Are hated most of those they did deceive;
So thou, my surfeit and my heresy,
Of all be hated, but the most of me!
And, all my powers, address your love and might
To honour Helen, and to be her knight.

_Her._ [Awaking.] Help me, Lyndemus, help me! do thy best
To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast!
Ah me, for pity!—what a dream was here!
Lyndemus, look how I do quake with fear:
Methought a serpent eat my heart away,
And you sat smiling at his cruel prey,—
Lyndemus,—What, remov'd?—Lyndemus, lord!—
What, out of hearing? gone? no sound, no word?
Alack! where are you? speak, an if you hear;
Speak, of all loves! I swoon almost with fear.
Not,—then I well perceive you are not nigh:
Either death, or you, I'll find immediately.

[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Wood. TITANIA lying asleep.

_Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, and Starveling._

_Bot._ Are we all met?

_Quin._ Pat, pat; and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal. This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn brake our tiring-house; and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the duke.

_Bot._ Not a wight. —

_Quin._ What say'st thou, bully Bottom?

_Bot._ There are things in this comedy of "Pyramus and Thisby," that will never please. First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself; which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?

_Snout._ By'takin', a parlous fear.

_Star._ I believe we must leave the killing out, when all is done.

_Bot._ Not a wight: I have a device to make all well. Write me a prologue; and let the prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords, and that Pyramus is not killed indeed; and, for the more better assurance, that I, Pyramus, am not Pyramus, but Bottom the weaver. This will put them out of fear.

Quin. Well, we will have such a prologue; and it shall be written in eight and eight.

Bot. No, make it two more; let it be written in eight and eight.

Snout. Will not the ladies be afraid of the lion?

Star. I fear it, I promise you.

Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with yourselves: to bring in,—God shield us!—a lion among ladies, is a most dreadful thing; for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion, living; and we ought to look to it.

Snout. Therefore, another prologue must tell he is not a lion.

Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck; and he himself must speak through, saying thus, or to the same effect,—""Ladies,—or, fair ladies,—I would wish you,—or, I would request you,—or, I would entreat you,—not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a lion, it were pity of my life: no, I am no such thing; I am a man, and other men are;—and there, indeed, let him name his name, and tell them plainly, he is Snug, the joiner.

Quin. Well, it shall be so. But there is two hard things,—that is, to bring the moonlight into a chamber; for, you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moonlight.

Snug. Doth the moon shine that night we play our play?

Bot. A calendar, a calendar! look in the almanack; find out moonshine, find out moonshine.

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why, then may you leave a casement of the great chamber window, where we play, open; and the moon may shine in at the casement.

Quin. Ay; or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lantern, and say he comes to disfigure, or to present, the person of moonshine. Then, there is another thing: we must have a wall in the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby, says the story, did talk through the chink of a wall.

Snug. You can never bring in a wall.—What say you, Bottom?

Bot. Some man or other must present wall: and let him have some plaster, or some loam, or some rough-cast about him, to signify wall; and let him hold his fingers thus, and through that cranny shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down, every mother's son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin. When you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake;—and so every one according to his cue.

Enter Puck, behind.

Puck. What hempen home-spuns have we swaggering here, So near the cradle of the fairy queen? What, a play toward? I'll be an auditor; An actor too, perhaps, if I see cause.

Quin. Speak, Pyramus.—Thisby, stand forth.

Pyr. ""Thisby, the flowers of odious savours Quin. ""Odours,"" ""odours."" [sweet,]

Puck. ""Odours savours sweet: So hath thy breath, my dearest Thisby, dear.—

But hark, a voice! stay thou but here a while, And by and by I will to thee appear."" [Exit.

Puck. [Aside.] A stranger Pyramus than e'er play'd here! [Exit.

This. Must I speak now?

Quin. Ay, marry, must you; for you must understand, he goes but to see a noise that he heard, and is to come again.

This. ""Most radiant Pyramus, most lily-white of hue, Of colour like the red rose on triumphant brier, Most brisky juvenil, and else most lovely Jew, As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire, I'll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninny's tomb.""

Quin. ""Ninus' tomb,"" man. Why, you must not speak that yet; that you answer to Pyramus: you speak all your part at once, cues and all.—Pyramus, enter: your cue is past; it is, ""never tire."" [Exit.

This. ""As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire.""

Re-enter Puck, and Bottom with an ass's head.

Pyr. ""If I were, fair Thisby, I were only thine.""—Quin. O monstrous! O strange! we are haunted.—Pray, masters! fly, masters!—Help! [Exit, with Snug, Fluente, Snout, and Starveling.

Puck. I'll follow you, I'll lead you about a round, Through bough, through bush, through brake, through brier: Sometime a horse I'll be, sometime a hound, A hog, a headless bear, sometime a fire; And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar, and burn, Like horse, hound, hog, bear, fire, at every turn, [Exit.

Bot. Why do they run away? this is a knavery of them, to make me afraid.

Re-enter Snout.

Snout. O Bottom! thou art changed! what do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? you see an ass's head of your own, do you? [Exit Snout.

Re-enter Quince.

Quin. Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! thou art translated. [Exit.

Bot. I see their knavery: this is to make an ass of me, to fright me, if they could. But I will not stir from this place, do what they can: I will walk up and down here, and I will sing, that they shall hear I am not afraid. [Sings. Theousel-crock, black of hue, With orange-tawny bill, The thrush with his note so true, The wren with little quill:—

Tita. [Awakening.] What angel wakes me from my flowery bed?

Bot. [Sings.] The flinch, the sparrow, and the lark, The plain-song cuckoo grey, Whose note fall many a man doth mark, And dares not answer, nay,—for, indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird? who would give a bird the lie, though he cry "'Cuckoo' never so?"

Tita. I pray God, gentle mortal, sing again: Mine ear is much enamour'd of thy note;
So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape;
And thy fair virtue’s force, perforce doth move me,
On the first view, to say, I love thee.

But, mistress, you should have little reason for that: and yet, to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days:—the more the pity, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleek upon occasion.

 Tate. Thou art as wise as thou art beautiful.

But, not so, neither: but if I had wit enough to gain the power of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

 Tate. Out of this wood do not desire to go:
Thou shalt remain here, whether thou wilt or no.
I am a spirit of no common rate,—
The summer still doth tend upon my state;
And I do love thee: therefore go with me;
I’ll give thee fairies to attend on thee;
And they shall fetch thee jewels from the deep,
And sing, while thou on pressed flowers dost sleep;
And I will purge thy mortal grossness so,
That thou shalt shine like an appley spirit go.—
Peas-blossom! Cobweb! Moth! and Mustard-seed!

Enter PEAS-BLOSSOM, COBWEB, MOTH, and MUSTARD-SEED.

Peas. Ready. And I.
Cob. And I.
Moth. And I.
Must. And I.
All Four. Where shall we go?

 Tate. Be kind and courteous to this gentleman:
Hop in his walks, and gambol in his eyes;
Feed him with apricocks, and dewberries,
With purple grapes, green figs, and mulberries;
The honey-bags steal from the humble-bees,
And for night tapers crop their waxen thighs,
And light them at the furious glowworm’s eyes,
To have my love to bed, and to arise;
And pluck the wings from painted butterflies,
To fan the moon-beams from his sleeping eyes:
Not to him, elves, and do him courtesies.

Peas. Hail, mortal!
Cob. Hail!
Moth. Hail!
Must. Hail!

 Tate. I cry thy worship’s mercy, heartily.—I beseech thy worship’s name.
Cob. Cobweb.

 Tate. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good master Cobweb; if I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you.—Your name, honest gentleman?
Peas. Peas-blossom.

 Tate. I pray you, commend me to mistress Squash, your mother, and to master Peasod, your father.
Good master Peas-blossom, I shall desire you of more acquaintance too.—Your name, I beseech you, Sir?
Must. Mustard-seed.

 Tate. Good master Mustard-seed, I know your patience well: that same cowardly, giant-like ox-beef, hath devoured many a gentleman of your house: I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire of you more acquaintance, good master Mustard-seed.

 Tate. Come, wait upon him; lead him to my bower.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Wood.

Enter OBION.

Ober. O, I wonder if Titania be awak’d;
Then, what it was that next came in her eye,
Which she must dote on in extremity—
Here comes my messenger.—[Enter PUCK.]

How now, mad spirit?

What night-rule now about this haunted grove?

Puck. My mistress with a monster is in love.
Near to her close and consecrated bower,
While she was in her dull and sleeping hour,
A crew of patches, rude mechanicals,
That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,
Were met together to rehearse a play,
Intended for great Theseus’ nuptial day.
The shallowest-thick-skin of that barren sort,
Who Pyramus presented, in their sport,
Forsook his scene, and enter’d in a brake:
When I did him at this advantage take,
An ass’s noul I fixed on his head:
Anon his Thibbe must be answer’d,
And forth my mimic comes. When they him spy,
As wild geese that the creeping fowler eye,
Or rusted-pated coughs, many in sort,
Rising and cawing at the gun’s report,
Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky;
So, at his sight, away his fellows fly;
And, at our stamp, here o’er and o’er one falls;
He murder cries, and help from Athens calls.
Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus strong,
Made senseless things begin to do them wrong;
For biers and thorns at their apparel match;
Some, sleeves,—some, hats,—from yielders all things
I led them on in this distracted fear, [catch.
And left sweet Pyramus translated there;
When in that moment (so it came to pass)
Titania wak’d, and straightway lov’d an ass.

Ober. This falls out better than I could devise.
But hast thou yet catch’d the Athenian’s eyes
With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do?

Puck. I took him sleeping, (that is finish’d too,) And the Athenian woman by his side;
That, when he wak’d, off force she must be ey’d.

Enter DEMETRIUS and HERMIA.

Ober. Stand close: this is the same Athenian.

Puck. This is the woman; but not this the man.

Dem. O, why rebuke you him that loves you so?
Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

Herm. Now I but chide; but I should use thee worse.

For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse.
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o’er shoes in blood, plunge in the deep,
And kill me too.

The sun was not so true unto the day,
As he to me: would he have stol’n away
From sleeping Hermia? I’ll believe as soon,
This whole earth may be bor’d; and that the moon
May through the centre creep, and so dispel the
Her brother’s noon-tide with th’ Antipodes.
It cannot be but thou hast murder’d him;
So should a murderer look,—so dead, so grim. [I.

Dem. So should the murder’d look; and so should Pierc’d through the heart with your stern cruelty:
Yet you, the murderer, look as bright, as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glittering sphere.
SCENE II.

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

Her. What's this to my Lysander? where is he? Ah, good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me? Dem. I had rather give his carcass to my hounds. Her. Out, dog! out, cur! thou drivest me past the bounds Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him, then? Henceforth be never number'd among men! O, once tell true, tell true, 'en for my sake! Durst thou have look'd upon him being awake, And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave touch! Could not a worm, an adder, do so much? An adder did it; for with doublet tongue Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung. Dem. You spend your passion on a misprisi'd I am not guilty of Lysander's blood; [mood: Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell. Her. I pray thee, tell me, then, that he is well. Dem. An if I could, what should I get therefor? Her. A privilege, never to see me more:— And from thy hated presence part I so: See me no more, whether he be dead or no. [Exit. Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vein: Here therefore, for a while I will remain. So sorrow's heaviest doth heavier grow For debt that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe; Which now in some slight measure it will pay, If for his tender here I make some stay. [Lies down and sleeps. Oke. What hast thou done? thou hast mistaken quite, And laid the love-juice on some true-love's sight: Of thy misprision must perforce ensue Some true-love turn'd, and not a false turn'd true. Puck. Then late o'er-rules; that, one man holding A million fail, confounding oath on oath. [troth, Oke. About the wood go swifter than the wind, And Helena of Athens look thou find: All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer With sights of love, that cost the fresh blood dear: By some illusion see thou bring her here; I'll charm his eyes against she do appear. Puck. I go, I go; look how I go,— Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow. [Exit. Oke. Flower of this purple die, Hit with Cupid's archery, [Squeezes the flower on Demetrius' eyelids. Sink in apparel of his eye! When his love he doth espy, Let her shine as gloriously As the Venus of the sky,— When thou wak'st, if she be by, Beg of her for remedy. Re-enter Puck. Puck. Captain of our fairy band, Helena is here at hand; And the youth, mistook by me, Pleading for a lover's fee. Shall we their fond pageant see? Lord, what foolish these mortals be! Oke. Stand aside: the noise they make Will cause Demetrius to awake. Puck. Then will two at once woo one,— That must needs be sport alone; And those things do best please me, That befall preposterously. Enter Lysander and Helena. Lys. Why should you think that I should woo in scorn? Scorn and derision never come in tears: Look, when I vow, I weep, and vows so born, In their nativity all truth appears. How can these things in me seem scorn to you, Bearing the badge of faith, to prove them true? Hel. You do advance your cunning more and more. When truth kills truth, O devilish-holy fray! These vows are Hermia's: will you give her o'er? Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh: Your vows to her and me, put in two scales, Will even weigh; and both as light as tales. Lys. I had no judgment when to her I swore. Hel. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'er. Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not you. Dem. [Awaking.] O Iden, goddess, nymph, perfect, divine! To what, my love, shall I compare thine eye? Crystal is muddy. O, how ripe in show Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow? That pure congealed white, high Taurus snow, Vain'd with the eastern winds, turn to a crow When thou holst up thy hand: O, let me kiss This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss! Hel. O spite! O hell! I see you all are bent To set against me, for your errour: If you were civil, and knew courtesy, You would not do me thus much injury. Can you not hate me, as I know you do, But you must join in souls to mock me too? If you were men, as men you are in show, You would not use a gentle lady so; To vow, and swear, and superpraise my parts, When I am sure you hate me with your hearts. You both are rivals, and love Hermia; And now both rivals, to mock Helena: A trim exploit, a manly enterprise, To conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes With your derision! none of noble sort Would so offend a virgin, and extort A poor soul's patience, all to make you sport. Lys. You are unkind, Demetrius; be not so! For you love Hermia:—this you know I know: And here, with all good-will, with all my heart, In Hermia's love I yield you up my part; And yours of Helena to me bequeath, Whom I do love, and will do to my death. Hel. Never did mockers waste more idle breath. Dem. Lysander, keep thine Hermia; I will none: If e'er I lov'd her, all that love is gone. My heart to her but as guest-wise sojourn'd, And now to Helen is it home return'd, There to remain. Lys. Helen, it is not so. Dem. Disparage not the faith thou dost not know, Lest, to thy peril, thou aby it dear.— Look, where thy love comes; yonder is thy dear. Re-enter Hermia. Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes, The ear more quick of apprehension makes; Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense, It pays the hearing double recompense,— Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander, found; Mine ear, I thank it, brought me to thy sound. But why unlively didst thou leave me so? [go? Lys. Why should we stay, whom love doth press to
Her. What love could press Lysander from my side?
Lys. Lysander's love, that would not let him bide,—
Fair Helena; who more engilds the night
Than all you fiery oes and eyes of light.
Why seek'st thou me? could not this make thee know,
The hate I bear thee made me leave thee so?
Her. You speak not as you think: it cannot be.
Hel. Lo, she is one of this confederacy!
Now I perceive they have conjoint'd, all three,
To fashion this false sport in spite of me.
Injurious Hermia! most ungrateful maid!
Have you conspired, have you with these contriv'd
To bait me with this foul derision?
Is it all the counsel that we two have shar'd,
The sisters' vows, the hours that we have spent,
When we have chid the hasty-footed time
For parting us,—O! is all forgot?
All school-days' friendship, childhood innocence?—
We, Hermia, like two artificial gods,
Have with our needls created both one flower,
Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion,
Both warbling of one song, both in one key;
As if our hands, our sides, voices, and minds,
Had been incorporat. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted;
But yet a union in partition,
Two lovely berries moulded on one stem;
So, with two seeming bodies, but one heart;
Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Due but to one, and crowned with one crest.
And will you rent our ancient love asunder,
To join in men in scorning your poor friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly:
Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for it,
Though I alone do feel the injury.
Her. I am amazed at your passionate words.
I scorn you not: it seems that you scorn me.
Hel. Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn,
To follow me, and praise my eyes and face?
And made your other love, Demetrius,
(Who even but now did spur me with his foot,) To call me goddess, nymph, divine, and rare,
Precious celestial? Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates? and wherefore doth Lysander
Deny your love, so rich within his soul,
And tender me, forsooth, affection,
But by your setting on, by your consent?
What thought I be not so in grace as you,
So hung upon love, so fortunate; But miserable most to love unlov'd?
This you should pity, rather than despise.
Hel. I understand not what you mean by this.
Hel. Ay, do, perséver, counterfeit sad looks,
Make mouths upon me when I turn my back;
Wink each at other; hold the sweet jest up: This sport, well carried, shall be chronicled.
If you have any pity, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument.
But, fare ye well: 'tis partly mine own fault;
Which death, or absence, soon shall remedy.
Lys. Stay, gentle Helena; hear my excuse: My love, my life, my soul, fair Helena!
Hel. O excellent!
Her. Sweet, do not scorn her so.
Dem. If she cannot entertain, I can compell.
Lys. Thou canst compell no more than she entertain:
Thy threats have no more strength than her weak prayers.—
Helen, I love thee; by my life, I do:
I swear by that which I will lose for thee,
To prove him false that says I love thee not.
Dem. I say I love thee more than he can do.
Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it too.
Dem. Quick, come!
Lys. Whereto tends all this?
Lys. Away, you Ethiop!
Dem. No, no, Sir.—
Seem to break loose; take off, as you would follow;
But yet come not: you are a tame man, go!
Lys. [To Hermia.] Hang off, thou cat, thou hurst: vile thing, let loose,
Or I will shake thee from me like a serpent!
Her. Why are you grown so rude? what change
Is this,
Sweet love?
Lys. Thy love! out, tawny Tartar, out! Out, loath'd medicine! O hated potion, hence!
Her. Do you not jest?
Hel. Yes, 'tis sooth; and so do you.
Dem. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.
Dem. I would I had your bond, for I perceive
A weak bond holds you: I'll not trust your word.
Lys. What, should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?
Although I hate her, I'll not harm her so.
Her. What, can you do me greater harm than harm her?
Hate me! wherefore? O me! what news, my love?
Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander?
I am as fair now, as I was erewhile.
Since night, you lov'd me; yet, since night you left
Why, then you left me (O, the gods forbid!) [me: In earnest, shall I say?
Lys. Ay, by my life; And never did desire to see thee more.
Therefore be out of hope, of question, of doubt:
Be certain, nothing truer; 'tis no jest,
That I do hate thee, and love Helena.
Her. O me!—you juggler! you canker-blossom!
You thief of love! what, have you come by night,
And stol'n my love's heart from him?
Fie, fie! Fine, i' faith!
Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulness? What, will you tear
Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?
Fie, fie! you counterfeit, you puppet you!
Lys. Puppet! why, so; by that way goes the game.
Now I perceive that she hath made compare
Between our statures; she hath urg'd her height;
And with her personage, her tall personage,
Her height, forsooth, she hath prevail'd with him.—
And are you grown so high in his esteem,
Because I am so dwarfish and so low?
How low am I, thou painted maypole? speak;
How low am I? I am not yet so low,
But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.
Hel. I pray you, though you mock me, gentle—
Let her not hurt me: I was never curst; |men,
I have no gift at all in shrewishness;
I am a right maid for my cowardice: Let her not strike me. You perhaps may think,
Because she is something lower than myself, That I can match her.
Her. Lower! hark, again.
SCENE II.]

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM. 161

Heli. Good Hermia, do not be so bitter with me. I evermore did love you, Hermia, Did ever keep your counsels, never wrong'd you; Save that, in love unto Demetrius, I told him of your stealth unto this wood. He follow'd you; for love, I follow'd him; But he hath chid me hence, and threaten'd me To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too: And now, so you will let me quiet go, To Athens will I bear my folly back, And follow you no farther: let me go: You see how simple and how fond I am.

Heli. Why, get you gone: who is 't that hinders you?

Heli. A foolish heart, that I leave here behind.

Heli. What, with Lysander?

Heli. With Demetrius.

Lys. Be not afraid; she shall not harm thee, Helena. [part.

Dem. No, Sir, she shall not, though you take her.

Heli. O, when she is angry, she is keen and shrewd!

She was a vixen when she went to school; And though she be but little, she is fierce.

Lys. Little again! nothing but low and little!— Why will you suffer her to flout me thus?

Let me come to her.

Lys. Get you gone, you dwarf!

You miniumus, of hindering knot-grass made;

You bead, you acorn!

Dem. You are too officious

In her behalf that scourns your services.

Let her alone: speak not of Helena;

Take not her part; for, if thou dost intend

Never so little show of love to her,

Thou shalt aby it.

Lys. Am. Now she holds me not;

Now follow, if thou dar'st, to try whose right, —

Or thine or mine,—is most in Helena.

Dem. Follow! say, I'll go with thee, check by Lys.

Heli. You, mistress, all this coil is 'long of you:

Nay, go not back.

Heli. I will not trust you, I,

Nor longer stay in your curtsey company.

Your hands, than mine, are quicker for a fray;

My legs are longer though, to run away. [Exit.

Heli. I am amaz'd, and know not what to say.

[Exeunt LYS. and DEM.

Lys. This is thy negligence: still thou mistak'st, Or else commit'st thy knavery willfully.

Puck. Believe me, king of shadows, I mistook. Did not you tell me I should know the man

By the Athenian garments he had on?

And so far blameless proves my enterprise,

That I have 'nointed an Athenian's eyes;

And so far am I glad it so did sort.

As this their jangling I esteem a sport.

Lys. Thou seest, these lovers seek a place to fight:

Hie therefore, Robin, overcast the night;

The starry welkin cover thou anon

With drooping fog, as black as Acheron;

And lead these tryal rivals so astray,

As one come not within another's way.

Like to Lysander sometime frame thy tongue,

Then stir Demetrius up with bitter wrong;

And sometime rail thou like Demetrius;

And from each other look thou lead them thus,

Till o'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep

With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep:

Then crush this herb into Lysander's eye;

Whose liquor hath this virtuous property,

To take from thence all error with his might,

And make his eye-balls roll with wonted sight.

When they next wake, all this derision

Shall seem a dream, and fruitless vision;

And back to Athens shall the lovers wand,

With league, whose date till death shall never end.

Whiles I in this affair do thee employ,

I'll to my queen, and beg her Indian boy;

And then I will her charmed eye release

From monster's view, and all things shall be peace.

Puck. My fairy lord, this must be done with haste,

For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast,

And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger;

At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here and there,

Troop home to church-yards: damned spirits all,

That in cross-ways and floods have burial,

Already to their wormy beds are gone;

For fear last day should look their shames upon,

They wilfully themselves exile from light,

And must for eye consort with black-brow'd night.

Obe. But we are spirits of another sort:

I with the morning's love have oft made sport;

And, like a forester, the groves may tread,

Even till the eastern gate, all fiery-red,

Opening on Neptune with fair blessed beams,

Turns into yellow gold his salt green streams.

But, notwithstanding, haste; make no delay:

We may effect this business yet ere day.

[Exit OBERRY.

Puck. Up and down, up and down,

I will lead them up and down:

I am fear'd in field and town:

Goblin, lead them up and down.

Here comes one.

Re-enter LYSANDER.

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius? speak thou now.

Puck. Here, villain! drawn and ready. Where

Lys. I will be with thee straight. [art thou?

Puck. Follow me, then,

To plainer ground.

[Exit LYS. and following the voice.

Re-enter DEMETRIUS.

Dem. Lysander! speak again.

Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?

Puck. In some bush? Where dost thou hide thy head?

Puck. Art thou coward! art thou bringing to the stars

Telling the bushes that thou look'st for wars,

And wilt not come? Come, recrave; come, thou child;

I'll whip thee with a rod: he is defil'd

That draws a sword on thee.

Puck. Yes, art thou there?

Puck. Follow my voice: we'll try no manhood here. [Exeunt.

Re-enter LYSANDER.

Lys. He goes before me, and still dares me on:

When I come where he calls, then he is gone.

The villain is much lighter-foot'd than I:

I follow'd fast, but faster he did fly;

That fallen am I in dark uneven way,

L
And here will rest me. [Exit.] Come, thou gentle day!
For if but once thou show me thy grey light,
I'll find Demetrius, and revenge this spite. [Sleeps.]

_Puck._ Good morrow, Master Demetrius.
_Dem._ Ah! now I am afeard; I am afeard, now I am afeard:—
Are you not you?—Prithee, go in thine forehead,
And thou art safe, and will not see mine eyes.

_Puck._ Whither away?—Go straight within.
_Dem._ Nay, I will not; I will not go in this way,
For I have seen already what I have not seen.

_Puck._ Come hither, I am here.
_Dem._ Come hither? I am here.

_Puck._ Nay, thou mock'st me. Thou shalt not
Be sure thou dost not wish to see me. [Exit._
By day's approach look to be visited.

_Lies down and sleeps._

_R敷_._

_Hel._ O weary night! O long, tedious night!
Abate thy hours: shine, comfort, from the east,
That I may back to Athens, by day-light,
From these that my poor company detest:
And sleep, that sometimes shuts up sorrow's eye,
Steal me a while from mine own company.

_Lies down and sleeps._

_Puck._ Yet but three hours? Come one more;
Two of both kinds make up four.
Here she comes, curt and sad:—
Cupid is a knavish lad,
Thus to make poor females mad.

_R敷_._

_Her._ Never so weary, never so in woe;
Bedaddled with the dew, and corn with briers;
When I come farther crawl, no farther go;
My legs can keep no pace with my desires.
Here will I rest me till the break of day.
Heaven's shield Lysander, if they mean a fray!

_Lies down and sleeps._

_Puck._ On the ground sleep sound:
I'll apply to your eye,
Gentle lover, remedy.

[Spea king the herd on LYSDANDER'S eyelids.
When thou wak'est, thou tak'ist
True delight in the sight
Of thy former lady's eye:
And the country proverb known,
That every man should take his own,
In your waking shall be shown;
Jack shall have Jill;
Naught shall go ill;
The man shall have his mare again,
And all shall be well.

[Exit._

ACT IV.

SCENE I. [The Wood.

_Enter_ TITANIA and BOTTOM; _LYSDANDER, DIEMETRIUS, HERMIA, and HELENA, still lying asleep. PUCK, BLOOM, COPPER, MOTH, MUSTARD-BED, and other Fairies attending; Oberon behind unseen._

_Tit._ Come, sit thee down upon this flowery bed,
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,
And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head,
And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.

Bot._ Where's Peau-blossom?
_Pau._ Ready.
Bot._ Scratch my head, Peau-blossom.—Where's my monsieur Cobweb?
_Cob._ Ready.
Bot._ Monsieur Cobweb, good monsieur, get your weapons in your hand, and kill me a red-hipped humble-bee on the top of a thistle; and, good monsieur, bring me the honey-bag. Do not fret yourself too much in the action, monsieur; and, good monsieur, have a care the honey-bag break not; I would be loath to have you overflown with a honey-bag, signior.—Where's my monsieur Mustard-seed?
_Must._ Ready.
Bot._ Give me your needle, monsieur Mustard-seed.
Pray you, leave your courtesy, good monsieur. _Monsieur._ What's your will?
Bot._ Not now; good monsieur, but to help cavalier Cobweb to scratch. I must to the barber's, monsieur; for methinks I am marvellous hairy about the face, and I am such a tender ass, if my hair do tickle me, I must scratch.
_Tit._ What wilt thou hear some music, my sweet love?
Bot._ I have a reasonable good ear in music: let us have the tongs and the bones.
_Tit._ Or say, sweet love, what thou desir'st to eat.
Bot._ Truly, a peck of provender: I could munch your good dry oats. Methinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay, hath no follow.
_Tit._ I have a venturous fairy that shall seek
The squirrel's hoard, and fetch thee new nuts.
Bot._ I had rather have a handful or two of dried peas. But, I pray you, let none of your people stir me: I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.
_Tit._ Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my arms.—

_Fairies._

_Fairies._ So doth the woodbine the sweet honeysuckle
Gently entwist; the female ivy so
Enrings the barchy fingers of the elm.
O, how I love thee, how I doth thee! [They sleep._

_Obe._ [Addressing.] Welcome, good Robin, Seest thou this sweet sight?
_Her._ Her dotage now I do begin to pity:
For, meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking sweet savours for this hateful fool,
I did upbraid her, and fall out with her;
For she his hairy temples then had rounded
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers
And that same dew, which sometime on the buds
Was wont to swell, like round and orient pearls,
Stood now within the pretty flow'rets' eyes,
Like tears, that did their own disgrace bewail.
When I had any pleasure taunted her,
And she in mild terms begg'd my patience,
I then did ask of her her changeling child;
Which straight she gave me; and her fairies sent
To bear him to my hower in fairy land.
And now I have the boy, I will undo
This hateful imperfection of her eyes:
And, gentle Puck, take this transformed scalp
From off the head of this Athenian swain;
That he, awaking when the other do,
May all to Athens back again repair,
And think no more of this night's accidents,
But as the fierce version of a dream.
But first I will release the fairy queen.

[Teaching her eyes with a herb.
Be, as thou wost want to be;
See, as thou wost want to see:
Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower
Hath such force and blessed power.
Now, my Titania; wake you, my sweet queen.
Tita. My Oberon! what visions have I seen!
Methought I was enamour'd of an ass.
Obe. There lies your love.
Tita. How came these things to pass?
Obe. Silence, awhile.—Robin, take off this head.—
Titania, music call; and strike more dead
Than common sleep, of all these five the sense.
Tita. Music! music! such as charmed sleep.
[Still music.
Puck. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.
Obe. Sound, music! Come, my queen, take hands with me,
And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in unity,
And will to-morrow in solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus' house triumphantly,
And bless it to all fair prosperity.
There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.
Puck. Fairy king, attend, and mark:
I do hear the morning lark.
Obe. Then, my queen, in silence sad,
Trip we after the night's shade:
We the globe can compass soon,
Swifter than the wandering moon.
Tita. Come, my lord; and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night,
That I sleeping here was found
With these mortals on the ground.
[Exeunt. Horns sound wherein.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus, and train.

Thee. Go, one of you, find out the forester;
For now our observation is perform'd;
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My love shall hear the music of my hounds;
Uncouple in the western valley; let them go:
Despatch, I say, and find the forester.

[Exeunt an Attendant.

We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top,
And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Crete they baid the bear
With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear
Such gallant chiding; for besides the groves,
The skies, the fountains, every region near Seem'd all one mutual cry: I never heard
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

The. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,
So few'd, so sanded; and their heads are hung
With ears that sweep away the morning dew;
Crook-knee'd, and dropp'd like Thessalian bulls;
Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bells,
Each under each. A cry more tunable
Was never hollied to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly:

Judge, when you hear.—But, soft! what nymphs
Are these?

Ege. My lord, this is my daughter here asleep;
And this, Lyndander; this Demetrius is;
This Helena, old Nikia's Helena;
I wonder of their being here together.
Thee. No doubt they rose up early to observe
The rite of May; and, hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our solemnity.—
But speak, Egeus; is not this the day
That Hermia should give answer of her choice?

Ege. It is, my lord.

Thee. The Go, bid the huntsmen wake them with their [Exit an Attendant. Horns, and shout within.

Lynd., Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena awake and start up.

Good morrow, friends. Saint Valentine is past;
Begin these wood-birds but to couple now;
Lys. Pardon, my lord.

[Exeunt. Horns sound within; I pray you all, stand up.

I know you two are rival enemies:
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousy,
To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity?
Ly. My lord, I shall reply amaz'd;
Half sleep, half waking: but as yet, I swear,
I cannot truly say here I came here:
But, as I think, (for truly would I speak,—
And now I do bethink me, so it is)
I came with Hermia hither: our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might,\nWithout the peril of the Athenian law—

Ege. Enough, enough, my lord; you have enough;
I beg the law, the law, upon his head.
They would have us'toway away; they would, Demetrius,
Thereby to have defeated you and me,
Your of your wife, and me of my consent,
Of my consent that she should be your wife.

Dem. My lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth,
Of this their purpose hither to this wood;
And in a fury hither follow'd them,
Fair Helen in fancy following me.
But, my good lord, I wot not by what power,
(But by some power it is,) my love to Hermia,
Melted as the snow, seems to me now
As the remembrance of an idle gavle,
Which in my childhood I did dote upon;
And all the faith, the virtue of my heart,
The object, and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helen. To her, my lord,
Was I betroth'd ere I saw Hermia:
But, like in sickness, did I loathe: this food,
But, as in health, come to my natural taste,
Now do I wish it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it.

Thee. Fair lovers, you are fortunately met:
Of this discourse we more will here anon.
Egeus, I will overbear your will;
For in the temple, by and by, with us,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And, for the morning now is something worn,
Our purpose'd hunting shall be set aside.
Away, with us, to Athens: three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.—

Come, Hippolyta.

[Exeunt Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus, and train.

Dem. These things seem small and undistinguishable:
Like far-off mountains turned into clouds.
Her. Methinks I see these things with parted eye,
When every thing seems double.

Hel. So methinks:
And I have found Demetrius, like a jewel,
Mine own, and not mine own.

Dem. Are you sure
That we are awake? It seems to me
That yet we sleep, we dream.—Do not you think
The duke was here, and bid us follow him?

Her. Yea; and my father.

Hel. And Hippolyta.

Lyse. And he did bid us follow to the temple.

Dem. Why then, we are awake: let's follow him;
And by the way let us recount our dreams.

[Exeunt Lvs. Dem. Her. and Hel.]

But. [Awaking.] When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer:—my next is, "Most fair Pyramus.
—He, ho!—Peter Quince!—Flute, the bellows-mender!—Snout, the tinker!—Starveling!—
God's my life! stolen whence, and left me sable!
I have had a most rare vision. I have had a dream, —pay, the wit of man to say what dream it was:
man is but an ass, if he go about to expound this Dream. Methought I was—there is no man can tell what. Methought I was, and methought I had,— but man is but a patched fool, if he will offer to say what methought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen, man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballad of this dream: it shall be called Bottom's Dream, because it hath no bottom; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the duke; peradventure, to make it more gracious, I shall sing it at her death.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—ATHENS. A Room in Quince's
House.

Enter Quince, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Quin. Have you sent to Bottom's house? is he come home yet?

Snug. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt, he is transported.

Flu. If he come not, then the play is marred: it goes not forward, doth it?

Quin. It is not possible: you have not a man in all Athens able to discharge Pyramus but he.

Flu. No, he hath simply the best wit of any handy-craftsman in Athens.

Quin. Yes, and the best person too; and he is a very paramour for a sweet voice.

Flu. You must say, paragon: a paramour is, God bless us! a thing of naught.

Enter Snug.

Snug. Masters, the duke is coming from the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married: if our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

Flu. Oh sweet bully Bottom! Thus hath he lost sixpence a-day during his life; he could not have 'scaped sixpence a-day: an the duke had not given him sixpence a-day for playing Pyramus, I'll be hanged; he would have deserved it: sixpence a-day in Pyramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottom.

But. Where are these lads? where are these hearts?
SCENE II.]

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

To ease the anguish of a torturing hour,
Call Philostrate.

Philostr. Here, mighty Theseus.

Th. Say, what abridgment have you for this evening?

What mask? what music? How shall we beguile
The lazy time, if not with some delight? [ripe:
Philostr. There is a brief how many sports are Make choice of which your highness will see first.

Th. [Reads.] "The battle with the Centaurs, to be sung
By an Athenian eunuch to the harp."—
We'll none of that: that have I told my love,
In glory of my kinsman Hercules.—
[Reads.] "The riot of the tipsy Bacchanales, Tearing the Thracian singer in their rage."—
That is an old device; and it was play'd
When I from Thesebe came last a conqueror.— [Reads.] "The thrice three Muses mourning for the death
Of learning, late deceased in beggary."—
That is some satire, keen and critical,
Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony.—

[Reads.] "A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus,
And his love Thisbe; very tragical mirth.

Merry and tragical! Tedium and brief!
That is, hot ice and wondrous strange snow.
How shall we find the concord of this discord?
Philostr. A play there is, my lord, some ten words
Which is as brief as I have known a play; [long,
But by ten words, my lord, it is too long,
Which makes it tedious; for in all the play
There is not one word apt, one player fitted
And tragicel, my noble lord, it is;
For Pyramus therein doth kill himself.
Which, when I saw rehearse'd, I must confess,
Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears
The passion of loud laughter never shed.

Th. What are they that do play it? [Here,
Philostr. Hard-handed men, that work in Athens
Which never labour'd in their minds till now;
And now have told their unbreath'd memories
With this same play, against your nuptial.

Th. And we will hear it.
Philostr. No, my noble lord;
It is not for you: I have heard it over,
And it is nothing, nothing in the world;
Unless you can find sport in their intents,
Extremely stretch'd and conn'd with cruel pain,
To do you service.
Th. I will hear that play;
For never any thing can be amiss,
When simplicity and duty tender it.
Go, bring them in— and take your places, ladies.
[Exit PHILOSTRATE.

Hip. I love not to see wretchedness o'ercharg'd,
And duty in his service perishing.
Th. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.

Hip. He says they can do nothing in this kind.
Th. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing.
Our sport shall be to take what they mistake;
And what poor duty cannot do,
Noble respect takes it in might, not merit.
Where I have come, great clerks have purposed
To present me with premeditated welcomes;
Where I have seen them shiver and look pale,
Make periods in the midst of sentences,
Throttle their prattled accent in their fears,
And, in conclusion, dumbly have broke off,
Not paying me a welcome. Trust me, sweet,
Out of this silence, yet, I pick'd a welcome;
And in the modesty of fearful duty,
I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
Of saucy and audacious eloquence.
Love, therefore, and tongue-tied simplicity,
In least speak most, to my capacity.

Enter PHILOSTRATE.

Philostr. So please your grace, the prologue is addrest.

Th. Let him approach. [Flourish of trumpets.

Enter Prologue.

Pro. "If we offend, it is with our good-will.
That you should think, we come not to offend,
But with good-will. To show our simple skill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Consider, then, we come but in despite.
We do not come as minding to content you,
Our true intent is. All for your delight,
We are not here. That you should here repent
you,
The actors are at hand; and, by their show,
You shall know all, that you are like to know."
Th. This fellow doth not stand upon points.

Ly. He hath rid his prologue like a rough colt;
he knows not the stop. A good moral, my lord: it is not enough to speak, but to speak true.

Hip. Indeed, he hath played on his prologue, like a child on a recorder; a sound, but not in government.

Th. His speech was like a tangled chain; nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Enter PYRAMUS and THIBSY, Wall, Moonshine, and Lion,
as in dumb show.

Pro. "Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show;
But wonder on, till truth make all things plain.
This man is Pyramus, if you would know;
This beauteous lady Thisyb is, certain.
This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present
Wall, that vile Wall which did these lovers
sunder;
And through Wall's chink, poor souls, they are content
To whisper; at the which let no man wonder.
This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn,
Presenteth Moonshine; for, if you will know,
By moonshine did these lovers think no scorn
To meet at Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo.
This grisly beast, which Lion hight by name,
The trusty Thisyb, coming first by night,
Did scare away, or rather did affright;
And, as she fled, her mantle she did fall,
Which Lion vile with bloody mouth did stain.
Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall,
And finds his trusty Thisyb's mantle slain:
Whereat, with blade, with bloody blameful blade,
He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breast;
And Thisyb, tarrying in mulberry shade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,
Let Lion, Moonshine, Wall, and lovers twain.
At large discourse, while here they do remain."

[Exeunt Pro. Turn, Wall, Moonshine, and Lion.]

Th. I wonder, if the lion be to speak.
No wonder, my lord:
One lion may, when many assos do.

Wall. "In this same interlude it doth befall,
That I, one Snout by name, present a wall;
And such a wall, as I would have you think,
That had in it a cranny'd hole or chink,
Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Thisby,
Did whisper often very secretly.

This line, this rough-cast, and this stone, doth show
That I am that same wall; the truth is so:
And this the cranny is, right and sinister,
Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper."

The. Would you desire lime and hair to speak better?

Dem. It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard discourse, my lord.

The. Pyramus draws near the wall: silence!

Enter Pyramus.

Pyrr. "O grim-looking night! O night with hue so black!
O night, which ever art when day is not!
O night, O night! slack, slack, slack!
I fear my Thisby's promise is forgot!"

And thou, O wall, O sweet, O lovely wall,
That stand'st between her father's ground and thou wall, O wall, O sweet, and lovely wall, [mine;
Show me thy chink to blink through with mine eye:
[Wall holds up his fingers.

Thanks, courteous wall: love shield thee well for
But what see I? No Thisby do I see. [this!
O wicked wall, through whom I see no bliss!
Curst be thy stones for thus deceiving me!"

The. The wall, methinks, being sensible, should curse again.

Pyrr. No, in truth, Sir, he should not. "Deceiving me," is Thisby's cue: she is to enter now, and I am to spy her through the wall. You shall see, it will fall pat as I told you.—Yonder she comes.

Enter Thisbe.

This. "O wall, full often hast thou heard my moans,
For parting my fair Pyramus and me!
My cherry lips have often kiss'd thy stones,
Thy stones with lime and hair knit up in thee."

Pyrr. "I see a voice: now will I see the chink,
To spy on I can hear my Thisby's face."—

This. "My love! thou art my love, I think.
I think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's
And, like Limander, am I trusty still." [grave.

This. "And I like Helen, till the fates me kill."

Pyrr. "Not Shafalus to Procris so true."

This. "As Shafalus to Procris, I to you."

Pyrr. "O! kiss me through the hole of this vile wall!"

This. "I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at all."

Pyrr. "Wilt thou at Ninny's tomb meet me straightway?"

Wall. "Thus have I, wall, my part discharged so;
And, being done, thus wall away doth go." [Exit.

Th. Now is the mural down between the two neighbours.

Dem. No remedy, my lord, when walls are so willful to hear without warning.

Hipp. This is the silliest stuff that ever I heard.

The. The best in this kind are but shadows; and
The worst are no worse, if imagination amend them.

Hipp. It must be your imagination then, and not theirs.

The. If we imagine no worse of them than they of themselves, they may pass for excellent men.—
Here come two noble beasts in, a moon and a lion.

Enter Lion and Moonshine.

Lion. "You, ladies, you, whose gentle hearts do fear
The smallest monster's mouse that creeps on floor,
May now perchance both quake and tremble here,
When lion rough in wildest rage doth roar.

Then know that I, one Snug the joiner, am
No lion fell, nor else no lion's dam;
For, if I should as lion come in strife
Into this place, 'twere pity of my life.

Th. A very gentle beast, and of a good conscience.

Dem. The very best at a beast, my lord, that e'er
Lyr. This lion is a very fox for his valour. [I saw
The. The true; and a goose for his discretion.

Dem. Not so, my lord; for his valour cannot carry his discretion; and the fox carries the goose.

The. His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his valour; for the goose carries not the fox.
It is well: leave it to his discretion, and let us listen to the moon.

Moon. "This lantern doth the horned moon present?"

Dem. He should have worn the horns on his head.

The. He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible within the circumference.

Moon. "This lantern doth the horned moon present; Myself the man i' the moon do seem to be."

The. This is the greatest error of all the rest: the man should be put into the lantern. How is it else the man i' the moon?

Dem. He dares not come there for the candle; for, you see, it is already in staff.

Hipp. I am awary of this moon; would he would change!

The. It appears, by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane; but yet, in courtesy, in all usages, we must say the time.

Lyr. Proceed, moon.

Moon. All that I have to say, is, to tell you that the lantern is the moon; I, the man in the moon; this thorn-bush, my thorn-bush; and this dog, my dog.

Dem. Why, all these should be in the lantern; for all these are in the moon. But, silence! here comes Thesibie.

Enter Thesibie.

This. "This is old Ninny's tomb. Where is my love?"

Lyr. Roaring! "Oh—."

[Thesibie runs off.

Dem. Well roared, lion.

Th. Well run, Thesibie.

Hipp. Well shone, moon.—Truly, the moon shines with a good grace.

[The Lion tears Thesibie's mantle, and exit.

Th. Well moused, lion.

Dem. And then came Pyramus.

Lyr. And so the lion vanished.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyrr. "Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams;"
SCENE I.

MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM.

I thank thee, moon, for shining now so bright;
For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering streams,
I trust to taste of truest Thaisby's sight.
But stay,—O spithe!—
But mark, poor knight,
What dreadful dole is here!
Eyes, do you see?
How can it be?
O dainty duck! O dear!
Thy mantle good,
What, stain'd with blood?
Approach, ye furies fell!
O fate, come, come,
Cut thread and thrum;
Quell, crush, conclude, and quell!"
The. This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would go near to make a man look sad.

Hsp. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the man.

Pyr. "O wherefore, nature, didst thou line frame?
Since lion vile hath here desower'd my dear:
Which is—no, no—which was the fairest dame
That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with Come, tears, confound;
[cheer.
Out, sword, and wound
The pop of Pyramus,— Ay, that left pap,
Where heart doth hop —
[Stabs himself.
Thus die I, thus, thus!
Now am I dead,
Now am I dier;
My soul is in the sky:
Tongue, lose thy light!
Moon, take thy flight!
[Exit Moonshine.

Dem. Now die, die, die, die, die, die, die."

[Dies.

Dem. No die, but an ace, for him; for he is but one.

Lyr. Less than an ace, man; for he is dead; he is nothing.

The. With the help of a surgeon, he might yet recover, and prove an ass.

Hsp. How chance moonshine is gone, before
Thaisbe comes back and finds her lover?

The. She will find him by starlight.—Here she comes; and her passion ends the play.

Remover Tuscan.

Hsp. Methinks she should not use a long one for such a Pyramus: I hope she will be brief.

Dem. A mote will turn the balance, which Pyr-amus, which Thisbe, is the better; he for a man,
God warrant us,—she for a woman, God bless us.

Lyr. She hath spied him already with those sweet eyes.

Dem. And thus she moans, vide lect:—
This. "A sleep, my love!
What, dead, my dove?
O Pyramus, arise!
Speak, speak. Quite dumb!
Dead, dead! A tomb
Must cover thy sweet eyes.
These lily lips,
This cherry nose,
These yellow cowslip cheeks,
Are gone, are gone:
Lovers, make moan:
His eyes were green as leeks.

O, sisters three,
Come, come to me,
With hands as pale as milk;
Lay them in gore,
Since you have shore
With shears his thread of silk.
Tongue, not a word:
Come, trusty sword;
Come, blade, my breast imbude:
[Stabs herself.

And farewell, friends,—
Thus Thaisby ends,— Adieu, adieu, adieu."
[Dies.

The. Moonshine and Lion are left to bury the dead.

Dem. Ay, and Wall too.

Puck. No, I assure you; the wall is down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance between two of our company?

The. No epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed.
Mary, if he that writ it, had play'd Pyramus, and hanged him in Thisbe's garter, it would have been a fine tragedy; and so it is, truly; and very notably discharged. But come, your Bergomask: let your epilogue alone.

[A dance.

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve:—
Lovers, to bed; 'tis almost fair time.
I fear we shall out-sleep the coming morn,
As much as we this night have overwatch'd.
This palpable gross play hath well beguil'd
The heavy gait of night. —Sweet friends, to bed. —
A fortnight hold we this solemnity,
In nightly revels, and new jollity.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.

Enter Pyramus.
Puck. Now the hungry lion roars,
And the wolf behows the moon;
Whilst the heavy ploughman snores,
All with weary task forborne.
Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whilst the screech-owl, screeching loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a shroud.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his spirit,
In the church-way paths to glide:
And we fairies, that do run
By the triple Heante's team,
From the presence of the sun,
Following darkness like a dream,
Now are frolic: not a mouse
Shall disturb this hallow'd house:
I am sent, with broom, before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter Endymion and Titania, with their train.

Oke. Through the house give glimmering light,
By the dead and drowsy fire:
Every elf, and fairy sprite,
Hop as light as bird from brier;
And this ditty, after me,
Sing, and dance it trippingly.

Tita. First, rehearse your song by rote,
To each word a warbling note:
Hand in hand, with fairy grace,
Will we sing, and bless this place.

[Song and dance.

Oke. Now, until the break of day,
Through this house each fairy stray.
To the best bride-bed will we,
Which by us shall blessed be;
And the issue there create
Ever shall be fortunate.
So shall all the couples three Ever true in loving be;
And the blots of nature's hand
Shall not in their issue stand;
Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar,
Nor mark prodigious, such as are Despised in nativity,
Shall upon their children be.
With this field-dew consecrate,
Every fairy take his gait;
And each several chamber bless,
Through this palace, with sweet peace:

Ever shall in safety rest,
And the owner of it blest.
Trip away; make no stay;
Meet me all by break of day.

[Exit Oberon, Titania, and train.

Puck. If we shadows have offended,
Think but this, (and all is mended,)
That you have but slumber'd here,
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theme,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend:
If you pardon, we will mend.
And, as I'm an honest Puck,
If we have unearn'd luck
Now to 'scape the serpent's tongue,
We will make amends ere long;
Else the Puck a liar call:
So, good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends. [Exit.

Shylock, a Jew.
Tubal, a Jew, his friend.
Launcelot, a Clown, servant to Shylock.
Old Gobbo, Father to Launcelot.
Leonardo, Servant to Bassanio.
Saraceno, 5
Servants to Portia.
Portia, a rich Heiress.
Nerissa, her Waiting-maid.
Jessica, daughter to Shylock.

Gosier, Servants, and other Attendants.

SCENE,—Partly at Venice, and partly at Belmont, the seat of Portia, on the Continent.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—VENICE. A Street.

Enter Antonio, Saraceno, and Solanio.

Ant. In sooth, I know not why I am so sad:
It wearies me; you say it wearies you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
What stuff 'tis made of, whereof it is born,
I am to learn;
And such a want-wit sadness makes of me,
That I have much ado to know myself.

Sar. Your mind is tossing on the ocean;
There, where your argosies with portly sail,—
Like signoria and rich burghers to know where sits the flood,
Or, as it were, the pageants of the sea,—
Do overpeer the petty traffickers,
That court'sy to them, do them reverence,
As they fly by them with their woven wings.

Sola. Believe me, Sir, had I such venture forth,
The better part of my affections would
Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still Plucking the grass, to know where sits the wind;
Peering in maps for ports, and piers, and roads,
And every object that might make me fear
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt
Would make me sad.

Sar. My wind, cooling my broth, Would blow me to an ague, when I thought
What harm a wind too great might do at sea,
I should not see the sandly hour-glass run,
But I should think of shallows and of flats;
And see my wealthy Andrew dock'd in sand,
Vailing her high top lower than her ribs,
To kiss her burial. Should I go to church,
And see the holy edifice of stone,
And not behinth me straight of dangerous rocks,
Which, touching but my gentle vessel's side,
Would scatter all her spices on the stream;
Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks;
And, in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing? Shall I have the thought
To think on this; and shall I lack the thought,
That such a thing bechanc'd would make me sad?
But tell not me; I know, Antonio
Is sad to think upon his merchandize.
Ant. Believe me, no: I thank my fortune for it,
My ventures are not in one bottom trusted,
Not to one place; nor is my whole estate
Upon the fortune of this present year:
Therefore, my merchandize makes me not sad.

Sola. Why, then you are in love.

Ant. Fie, fie!

Sola. Not in love neither? Then let's say, you are sad,
Because you are not merry: and 'twere as easy
For you to laugh, and leap, and say you are merry,
Because you are not sad. Now, by two-headed Juno,
Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time:
Some that will evermore peep through their eyes,
And laugh, like parrots, at a bag-piper;
And other of such vinegar aspect,
That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

Sola. Here comes Bassanio, your most noble kineman,
Gratiano, and Lorenzo. Fare you well;
We leave you now with better company.

Sola. I would have stay'd till I had made you merry,
If worthier friends had not prevented me.

Ant. Your worth is very dear in my regard.
I take it, your own business calls on you,
And you embrace the occasion to depart.

Enter Bassanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.

Sara. Good morrow, my good lords.
Bas. Good signiors both, when shall we laugh?

Ant. Say, when?
Yon grow exceeding strange: must it be so?
Sola. We'll make our leisure to attend on [Exeunt Saraceno and Solanio.]
Lor. My lord Bassanio, since you have found Antonio, We two will leave you: but, at dinner-time, I pray you, have in mind where we must meet. Bass. I will not fail you. Gra. You look not well, signor Antonio; You have too much respect upon the world: They lose it that do buy it with much care: Believe me, you are marvellously chang'd. Ant. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano; A stage, where every man must play a part, And mine a sad one. Gra. Let me play the fool: With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come; And let my liver rather heast with wine, Than my heart cool with mortifying groans. Why should a man, whose blood is warm within, Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster? Sleep when he wakes? and creep into the jaundice By being peevish? I tell thee what, Antionio,— I love thee, and it is my love that speaks,— There are a sort of men, whose visages Do cream and marl like a standing pond; And do a wilful stillness entertain, With purpose to be dress'd in an opinion Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit; As who should say, "I am Sir Oracle, And, when I ope my lips, let no dog bark!" O my Antonio, I do know of these, That therefore only are reputed wise, For saying nothing; when, I am very sure, If they should speak, would almost damn those ears, Which, hearing them, would call their brothers fools. I'll tell thee more of this another time: But fad not, with this melancholy balm, For this fool-gudgeon, this opinion.— Come, good Lorenzo.—Fare ye well, awhile: I'll end my exhortation after dinner. Lor. Well, we will leave you, then, till dinner-time: I must be one of these same dumb wise men, For Gratiano never lets me speak. Gra. Well, keep me company but two years more. Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own tongue. Ant. Farewell! I'll grow a talker for this gear. Gra. I thank you, faith; for silence is only commendable. In a neat's tongue dried, and a maid not vendible. [Exeunt Gratiano and Lorenzo. Ant. Is that any thing now? Bass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice. His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff: you shall seek all day ere you find them; and, when you have them, they are not worth the search. Ant. Well; tell me now, what lady is the same To whom you swore a secret pilgrimage, That you to-day promis'd to tell me of? Bass. 'Tis not unknown to you, Antonio, How much I have disabled mine estate: By something showing a more swelling port Than my faint means would grant continuance: Nor do I now make moan to be abridg'd From such a noble rate; but my chief care Is, to come fairly off from the great debts, Wherein my time, something too prodigal, Hath left me gasp'd. To you, Antonio, I owe the most, in money and in love; And from your love I have a warranty To unburthen all my plots and purposes, How to get clear of all the debts I owe. Ant. I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know it; And if it stand, as you yourself still do, Within the eye of honour, be assur'd, My purse, my person, my extremest means, Lie all unlock'd to your occasions. Bass. In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft, I shot his fellow of the self-same flight The self-same way with more advised watch, To find the other forth; and by adventuring both, I oft found both: I urge this childhood proof, Because what follows is pure innocence. I owe you much: and, like a wilful youth, That which I owe is lost: but if you please To shoot another arrow that self way Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt, As I will watch the aim, or to find both, Or bring your latter hazard back again, And thankfully rest debtor for the first. Ant. You know me well; and herein spend but time, To wind about my love with circumstance; And out of doubt you do me now more wrong In making question of my uttermost, Than if you had made waste of all I have: Then do but say to me what I should do, That in your knowledge may by me be done, And I am prent unto it: therefore, speak. Bass. In Belmont is a lady richly left; And she is fair, and, fairer than that word, Of wondrous virtues: sometimes from her eyes I did receive fair speechless messages: Her name is Portia: nothing undervalu'd To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia: Nor is the wise world ignorant of her worth; For the four winds blow in from every coast Renowned suitors: and her sunny locks Hang on her temples like a golden fleece; Which makes her seat of Belmont Clochus' strand, And many Jasons come in quest of her. O my Antonio! had I but the means To hold a rival place with one of them, I have a mind pressages me such thrall, That I should questionless be fortunate. Ant. Thou know'st all that my fortunes are at Neither have I money, nor commodity. [Exit. To raise a present sum: therefore go forth; Try what my credit can in Venice do: That shall be rack'd, even to the uttermost, To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia. Go, presently enquire, and so will I, Where money is; and I no question make, To have it of my trust, or for my sake. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—BELMONT. A ROOM IN PORTIA'S MANSION. Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Por. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is aware of this great world.

Ner. You would be, sweet madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are: and yet, for aught I see, they are as sick that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing: it is no mean happiness, therefore, to be seated in the mean: superfluity comes sooner by white hairs; but competency lives longer.

Por. Good sentences, and well pronounced.

Nor. They would be better, if well followed.

Por. If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions: I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. The brain may devise laws for the blood: but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree: such a hare is madness, the youth, to skip o'er the meshes of good counsel, the cripple. But this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose a husband:—O me, the woe! nor is it in the manner of him whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike; so is the will of a living daughter curbed by the will of a dead father. Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none?

Nor. Your father was ever virtuous; and holy men, at their death, have good inspirations: therefore, the lottery, that he hath devised in these three chests of gold, silver, and lead (whereof who chooses his meaning, chooses you), will, no doubt, never be chosen by any rightly, but one whom you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of those princely suitors that are already come?

Por. I pray thee, over-name them; and as thou namest them, I will describe them; and, according to my description, level at my affection.

Nor. First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

Por. Ay, that's a colt, indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse; and he makes it a great approbation to his own good parts, that he can shoe him himself. I am much afraid, my lady's mother played false with a smith.

Nor. Then is there the county Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown; as who should say, "An you will not have me, choose." He hears merry tales, and smiles not: I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmanly sadness in his youth. I had rather be married to a death's head with a bone in his mouth, than to either of these:—God defend me from these two!

Nor. How say you by the French lord, Monsieur Le Bon?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mocker: but, he!—why, he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan's: a better bad habit of frowning than the count Palatine: he is every man in no man: if a throttle sing, he falls straight a cabinsing: he will fence with his own shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands. If he would despise me, I would forgive him; for if he love me to madness, I shall never requite him.

Nor. What say you, then, to Faulconbridge, the young baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him; for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian: and you will come into the court and swear that I have a poor penny-worth in the English. He is a proper man's picture; but, alas, who can converse with a dumb show? How oddly he is suited! I think he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour every where.

Nor. What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him; for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again when he was able: I think the Frenchman became his surety, and sealed under for another.

Nor. How like you the young German, the duke of Saxony's nephew?

Por. Very vively in the morning, when he is sober: and most vively in the afternoon, when he is drunk: when he is best, he is a little worse than a man; and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast. An the worst fall that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to go without him.

Nor. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee, set a deep glass of Khenish wine on the contrary casket; for, if the devil be within, and that temptation without, I know he will choose it. I will do anything, Nerissa, ere I will be married to a sponge.

Nor. You need not fear, lady, the having any of these lords: they have acquainted me with their determinations; which is, indeed, to return to their home, and to trouble you with no more suit, unless you may be won by some other sort than your father's imposition, depending on the caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibylla, I will die as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my father's will. I am glad this parcel of wooers are so reasonable; for there is not one among them but I dote on his very absence; and I pray God grant them a fair departure.

Nor. Do you not remember, lady, in your father's time, a Venetian, a scholar and a soldier, that came hither in company the Marquis of Montferrat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Basanio: as I think, so was he called.

Nor. True, madam: he, of all the men that ever my foolish eyes looked upon, was the best deserving a fair lady.

Por. I remember him well; and I remember him worthy of thy praise.—[Enter a Servant.] How now! what news?

Serv. The four strangers seek for you, madam, to take their leave: and there is a forerunner come from a fifth, the prince of Morocco; who brings word, the prince his master, will be here to-night.

Por. If I could bid the fifth welcome with so good heart, as I can bid the other four, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a saint, and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should thrive me than wive me. Come, Nerissa.—Sirrah, go before.—Whiles we shut the gate upon one wooer, another knocks at the door.

[Exeunt.]
MERCHANT OF VENICE.

[ACT I]

70 Ant. Well then, your bond; and let me see,—
But hear you;
Methought you said you neither lend nor borrow
Upon advantage.
Ant. I do never use it.
Sky. When Jacob graz'd his uncle Laban's sheep,—
This Jacob from our holy Abraham was
(As his wise mother wrought in his behalf.)
The third possessor,—ay, he was the third,—
Ant. And what of him? did he take interest?
Sky. No, not take interest; not, as you would say,
Directly, interest,—mark what Jacob did.
When Laban and himself were compromis'd
That all the earlings which were streak'd and pied
Should fall as Jacob's hire, the ewes, being rank,
In end of autumn turned to the rams;
And when the work of generation was Between these woolly breeders in the act,
The skilful shepherd peel'd me certain wands,
And, in the doing of the deed of kind,
He stuck them up before the fulsome ewes,
Who, then conceiving, did in earing time
Fall party-colour'd lambs, and those were Jacob's.
This was a jest to thrive, and he was blest:
And thrift is blessing, if men steal it not.
Ant. This was a ventures, Sir, that Jacob serv'd
A thing not in his power to bring to pass, [for;
But sway'd and fashion'd by the hand of heaven.
Was this inserted to make interest good?
Or is your gold and silver ewes and rams?
Sky. I cannot tell; I make it breed as fast—
But note me, signer.
Ant. Mark you this, Bassanio,
The devil can cite scripture for his purpose.
An evil soul, producing holy witness,
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek;
A goodly apple rotten at the heart:
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!
Sky. Three thousand ducats,—'tis a good round sum.
Three months from twelve, then let me see the rate.
Ant. Well, Shylock, shall we be beholden to you?
Sky. Signior Antonio, many a time and oft,
In the Rialto, you have rated me
About my monies and my usances:
Still have I borne it with a patient shrug:
For surfeiture is the bane of all our tribe:
You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gaberine,
And all for use of that which is mine own.
Well, then, it now appears you need my help:
Go to, then; you come to me, and you say,
"Shylock, we would have monies:"—you say so;
You, that did void your usum upon my beard,
And foot me, as you spurn a stranger cur
Over your threshold: monies is your suit.
What should I say to you? Should I not say,
"Hath a dog money? Is it possible;
A cur can lend three thousand ducats?" or Shall I bend low, in a bondman's key,
With 'bated breath and whispering humbleness,
Say this,
"Fair Sir, you spit on me on Wednesday last;
You spurn'd me such a day; another time
You call'd me dog; and for these courtesies
I'll lend you thus much monies?"
Ant. I am as like to call thee so again,
To spit on thee again, to spurn thee too.
If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friends; (for when did friendship take
A breed for barren metal of his friend?)
But lend it rather to thine enemy;
Who if he break, thou mayst with better face
Exact the penalty.
_Say._
Why, look you, how you storm!
I would be friends with you, and have your love,
Forget the shame that you have staid me with,
Supply your present wants, and take no doot
Of usance for my monies,
And you'll not hear me: this is kind I offer.
_Ant._ This were kindness.
_Say._ This kindness will I show.—
Go with me to a notary, seal me there
Your single bond; and, in a merry sport,
If you repay me not on such a day,
In such a place, such sum or sums as are Express'd in the condition, let the forfeit
Be nominated for an equal pound
Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your body pleaseth me.
_Ant._ Content, in faith: I'll seal to such a bond,
And say there is much kindness in the Jew.
_Say._ You shall not seal to such a bond for me: I'll rather dwell in my necessity.
_Ant._ Why, fear not, man; I will not forfeit it:
Within these two months—that's a month before
This bond expires,—I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond.
_Say._ O father Abraham! what these Christians are,
Whose own hard dealings teach them suspect
The thoughts of others!—Pray you, tell me this;
If he should break his day, what should I gain
By the exaction of the forfeitures.
_Bas._ You shall not seal to such a bond.
_Say._ Why? for what? by what just cause?
_Bas._ A pound of man's flesh taken from a man,
Is not so estimable, profitable neither,
As flesh of muttons, beef, or goats. I say,
To buy his favour, I extend this friendship:
If he will take it, so; if not, admis;
And, for my love, I pray you wrong me not.
_Ant._ Yes, Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.
_Say._ Then meet me forthwith at the notary's.—
Give him direction for this merry bond;
And I will go and parse the ducats straight;
See to my house, left in the fearful guard
Of an unthriftly knave; and presently
I will be with you.
_Ant._
Hie thee, gentle Jew.
_[Exit Shylock._
This Hebrew will turn Christian; he grows kind.
_Bas._ I like not fair terms add a villain's mind.
_Ant._ Come on: in this there can be no dismay;
My ships come home a month before the day.
_[Exeunt._

ACT II.

SCENE I.—BELMONT. A Room in Portia's Mansion.

Flourish of cornets. _Enter the Prince of Morocco, and his train: Portia, Nerissa, and other Attendants._

_Mor._ Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadow'd life of the burnish'd sun,
To whom I am a neighbour, and near bred.
Bring me the fairest creature northward born,
Where Phoebus' fire scarce shaws the icicles,
And let us make incision for your love,
To prove whose blood is reddest, his or mine.
I tell thee, lady, this aspect of mine
Hath fear'd the valiant: by my love, I swear
The best regarded virgin of our clime
Have lov'd it too: I would not change this hue,
Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle queen.
_Fer._ In terms of choice I am not solely led
By nice direction of a maiden's eyes:
Besides, the lottery of my destiny
Bars me the right of voluntary choosing:
But, if my father had not scanted me,
And hedg'd me by his wit, to yield myself
His wife who wins me by that means I told you,
Yourself, renowned prince, then stood as fair
As any comer I have look'd on yet
For my affection.
_Mor._
Even for that I thank you.
Therefore, I pray you, lead me to the caskets,
To try my fortune. By this similitude—
That slew the Sophy, and a Persian prince
That won three fields of Sultan Solymam,—
I would out-stare the sternest eyes that look,
Out-brave the heart, most daring on the earth,
Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she-bear,
Yea, mock the lion when he roars for prey,
To win thee, lady. But, alas the while!
If Hercules and Ithas play at dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Alcidae beaten by his page;
And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miss that which one unworthy may attain,
And die with grieving.
_Fer._
You must take your chance;
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or swear before you choose,—if you choose wrong,
Never to speak to lady afterward
In way of marriage: therefore be advis'd.
_Mor._ Nor will not. Come, bring me unto my chance.
_Fer._ First, forward to the temple: after dinner
Your hazard shall be made.
_Mor._
Good fortune then.
To make me blest or cursed'd among men!
_[Cornets, and exeunt._

SCENE II.—VENICE. A Street.

_Enter LAUNCELOT GOBBO._

_Lau._ Certainly, my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew, my master. The fiend is at mine elbow, and tempts me, saying to me, "Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo, good Launcelot," or "good Gobbo," or "good Launcelot Gobbo, use your legs, take the start, run away." My conscience says, "No; take heed, honest Launcelot; take heed, honest Gobbo;" or, as aforesaid, "honest Launcest Gobbo; do not run; scorn running with thy heels." Well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack: "'Fia!'" says the fiend; "'away!' says the fiend; "for the heavens, rush up a brave mind," says the fiend, "and run." Well, my conscience, hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me, "My honest friend Launcelot, being an honest man's son,—or rather an honest woman's son;—for, indeed, my father did something amiss, something grow to,—he had a kind of taste;—well, my conscience says, "Launcelot, budge not."
"Budge," says the fiend. "Budge not," says my conscience. Conscience, say I, you counsel well; fiend, say I, you counsel well: to be ruled by my conscience, I should stay with the Jew my master, who (God bless the mark!) is a kind of devil; and, to run away from the Jew, I should be ruled by the fiend, who, saving your reverence, is the devil himself. Certainly, the Jew is the very devil incarnation; and, in my conscience, my conscience is but a kind of hard conscience, to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew. The fiend gives the more friendly counsel: I will run, fiend; my heels are at your commandment; I will run.

Enter Old Gono, with a basket.

Gob. Master young man, you, I pray you, which is the way to master Jew's?

Lau. [Aside.] O heavens, this is my true begotten father! who, being more than sand-blind, high-gravel blind, knows me not—[I will try confusions with him.

Gob. Master young gentleman, I pray you, which is the way to master Jew's?

Lau. Turn up on your right hand at the next turning; but, at the next turning, turn on your left, marry, at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jew's house.

Gob. By God's sainties, 'twill be a hard way to hit. Can you tell me whether one Launcelot, that dwells with him, dwell with him or no?

Lau. Talk you of young master Launcelot?—[Aside.] Mark me now; now will I misbe the waters.

[To him.] Talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gob. No master, sir, but a poor man's son: his father, though I say it, is an honest exceeding poor man; and, God be thanked, well to live.

Lau. Well, let his father be what you will, we talk of young master Launcelot.

Gob. Your worship's friend, and Launcelot, Sir.

Lau. But I pray you, ergo, old man, ergo, I beseech you, talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gob. Of Launcelot, an't please your mastership.

Lau. Ergo, master Launcelot. Talk not of master Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman (according to fates and destinies, and such odd sayings, the sisters three, and such branches of learning,) is, indeed, deceased; or, as you would say in plainer terms, gone to heaven.

Gob. Marry, God forbid! the boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop.

Lau. [Aside.] Do I look like a cudgel or a hovel-post, a staff or a prop?—[To him.] Do you know me, father?

Gob. Alack the day! I know you not, young gentleman: but I pray you, tell me, is my boy (God rest his soul!) alive or dead?

Lau. Do you not know me, father?

Gob. Alack, Sir, I am sand-blind; I know you not.

Lau. Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes, you might fail of the knowing me: it is a wise father that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your son. [Kneels.] Give me your blessing: truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long,—a man's son may be; but, in the end, truth will out.

Gob. Pray you, Sir, stand up: I am sure you are not Launcelot, pray you, a poor gentleman.

Lau. Pray you, let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing: I am Launcelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think you are my son.

Lau. I know not what I shall think of that: but I am Launcelot, the Jew's man; and I am sure Margery, your wife, is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery, indeed: I'll be sworn, if thou be Launcelot, thou art mine own flesh and blood. Lord, worshipped might he be! what a beard hast thou got! thou hast got more hair on thy chin, than Dobbin my phil-horse has on his tail.

Lau. It should seem, then, that Dobbin's tail grows backward: I am sure he had more hair of his tail, than I have of my face, when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord, how art thou changed! How dost thou and thy master agree? I have brought him a present. How 'gree you now?

Lau. Well, well: but, for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground. My master's a very Jew: give him a present! give him a halter: I am famished in his service; you may tell every finger I have with my ribs. Father, I am glad you are come: give me your present to one master Bassoanio, who, indeed, gives rare new liveries: if I serve not him, I will run as far as God has any ground.—O rare fortune! here comes the man:—to him, father; for I am a Jew, if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter BASSANIO, with LEONARDO, and other followers.

Baz. You may do so;—but let it be so hasted, that supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clock. See these letters delivered; put the livery to making; and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodging. [Exit a Servant.

Lau. To him, father.

Gob. God bless your worship!

Baz. Gramercy; wouldst thou aught with me?

Lau. Here's my son, Sir, a poor boy.—

Lau. Not a poor boy, Sir, but the rich Jew's man; that would, Sir,—as my father shall specify,—

Gob. He hath a great infection, Sir, as one would say, to serve me.

Lau. Indeed, the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and have a desire,—as my father shall specify,—

Gob. His master and he (saving your worship's reverence,) are scarce cater-consumers.—

Lau. To brief, the very truth is, that the Jew having done me wrong, doth cause me,—as my father being, I hope, an old man, shall fructify unto you,—

Gob. I have here a dish of doves, that I would bestow upon your worship; and my suit is,—

Lau. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your lordship shall know by this honest old man; and, though I say it, though old man, yet, poor man, my father.

Baz. One speak for both.—What would you?

Lau. Serve you, Sir.

Gob. That is the very defect of the matter, Sir.

Baz. I know thee well; thou hast obtain'd thy suit.

Shylock, thy master, spoke with me this day, and hath prefer'd thee,—if it be preferment To leave a rich Jew's service, to become The following of thee, poor a gentleman.

Lau. The old proverb is very well parted be-SCENE III.—VENICE. A Room in SHYLOCK’S House.

Enter JESICA and LAUNCELOT.

JES. I am sorry thou will leave my father so:
Our house is hell; and thou, a merry devil,
Didst rob it of some taste of tidiousness.
But fare thee well; there is a ducat for thee:
And, Launcelot, soon at supper shalt thou see
Lorenzo, who is thy new master’s guest:
Give him this letter; do it secretly;
And so farewell: I would not have my father
See me in talk with thee.

LAUN. Adieu!—tears exhibit my tongue. Most beautiful pagan,—most sweet Jew! If a Christian do not play the knave, and get thee, I am much de-craved. But, adieu! these foolish drops do somewhat drown my manly spirit: adieu!

JES. Farewell, good Launcelot.—

[Exit LAUNCELOT.

Alack, what heinous sin is it in me
To be ashamed to be my father's child!
But though I am a daughter to his blood,
I am not to his manners. O Lorenzo!
If thou keep promise, I shall eat this strife,—
Become a Christian, and thy loving wife.

SCENE IV.—VENICE. A Street.

Enter GRATIANO, LORENZO, SALARIO, and SOLANO.

LOR. Nay, we will sit down in supper-time;
Disguise us at my lodging, and return
All in an hour.

GRA. We have not made good preparation.

SAL. We have not been yet to the bell-bearess.

SOL. 'Tis vile, unless it may be quaintly order'd,
And better, in my mind, not undertook.

LOR. 'Tis now but four o'clock: we have two hours
To furnish us.

[Exit LAUNCELOT, with a letter.

Friend Launcelot, what’s the news?

LAUN. An it shall please you to break up this, it shall seem to signify.

[Giving the letter.

LOR. I know the hand: in faith, ’tis a fair hand;
And whiter than the paper it writ on.

GRA. Yes, this fair hand that writ.

LOR. By your leave, Sir.

LAUN. Whither goest thou?

LOR. MARRY, SIR, TO MY OLD MASTER, THE JEW,
To sup to-night with my new master, the Christian.

GRA. Hold here, take this:—tell gentle Jessica,
I will not fail her;—speak it privately;
Go.—[Exit LAUNCELOT.]

LOR. Gentlemen,
Will you prepare you for this mask to-night?

SAL. AY, MARRY, I’LL BE DONE ABOUT IT STRAIGHT.

SOL. And so will I.

LOR. Meet me and Gratiano
At Gratiano’s lodging some hour hence.

SAL. Tis good we do so.

GRA. Was not that letter from fair Jessica?

LOR. I must needs tell thee all. She hath directed
How I shall take her from her father’s house;
What gold and jewels she is furnish’d with;
What page’s suit she hath in readiness.
If e’er the Jew her father come to heaven,
It will be for his gentle daughter’s sake:
And never dare misfortune cross her foot,
Unless she do it under this excuse,—
That she is issue to a faithless Jew.
Come, go with me: perseus this as thou goest.
Fair Jessica shall be my torch-bearer.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—VENICE. Before Shylock's House.

Enter Shylock and Launcelot.

Shy. Well, thou shalt see; thy eyes shall be thy judge,
The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio:—
What, Jessica!—thou shalt not gormandize,
As thou hast done with me;—What, Jessica!—
And sleep and snore, and rend apparel out;—
Why, Jessica, I say?

[Enter Jessica.

Laun. Why, Jessica.

Laun. Your worship was wont to tell me I could do nothing without bidding.

[Exit Launcelot.

Gu. Call you? What is your will?

Shy. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica.
There are my keys.—But wherefore should I go?
I am not bid for love; they flatter me
But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon
The prodigal Christmas.—Jessica, my girl,
Look to my house.—I am right loath to go:
There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,
For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

Laun. I beseech you, Sir, go: your young master doth expect your reproach.

Shy. So do I his.

Laun. And they have conspired together,—I will not say you shall see a mask; but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on Black-Monday last at six o'clock i' the morning, falling out that year on Ash-Wednesday was four years in the afternoon.

Shy. What! are there masks?—Hear you me, Jessica:
Lock up your doors; and when you hear the drum,
And the vile squeaking of the wry-neck's life,
Clamber not you up to the casements then,
Nor thrust your head into the public street
To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces;
But stop my house's ear,—I mean my casements:
Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter
My sober house.—By Jacob's staff, I swear
I have no mind of feasting forth to-night;
But I will go.—Go you before me, sirrath;
Say I will come.

Laun. I will go before, Sir. [Exit, to JESSICA.]

Mistress, look out at window, for all this;
There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Jewess' eye. [Exit, LAUN.

Shy. What says that fool of Hagar's offspring, ha?
[Exit, LAUN.

Gu. His words were, farewell, mistress; nothing
Shy. The patch is kind enough; but a huge feeder,
Snail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day
More than the wild cat; drones hive not with me;
Therefore I part with him; and part with him
To one that I would have him help to waste
His borrow'd purse.—Well, Jessica, go in:
Perhaps I will return immediately:
Do as I bid you; shut doors after you:
Fast bind, fast find,—
A proverb never stale in thriftie mind.
[Exit.
SCENE VII.—BELMONT.  A Room in PORTIA's Mansions.

Flourish of cornets. Enter PORTIA, with the PRINCE of MOROCCO, and their train.

Por. Go, draw aside the curtains, and discover The several caskets to this noble prince.

[Exeunt.] [bears,]

Mor. The first, of gold, who this inscription "Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire!"
The second, silver, which this promise carries,— "Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserveth.

This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt,— "Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath.

How shall I know if I do choose the right?— Por. The one of them contains my picture, prince: If you choose that, then I am yours withal. Mor. Some god direct my judgment! Let me I will survey th' inscriptions again. [See;] What says this leaden casket? "Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath."

Must give,—For what? for lead? hazard for lead? This casket threatens: men that hazard all, Do it in hope of fair advantages: A golden mind stoops not to shows of dross; I'll then nor give nor hazard aught for lead. What says the silver, with her virgin hue? "Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserveth As much as he deserves!—Pause there, Morocco, And weigh thy value with an even hand: If thou be'st rated by thy estimation, Thus dost deserve enough; and yet enough May not extend so far as to the lady: And yet to be afraid of my deserving Were but a weak disabling of myself. As much as I deserve!—Why, that's the lady: I do in birth deserve her, and in fortunes, In graces, and in qualities of breeding; But more than these, in love do I deserve. What if I stray'd no farther, but chose here?— Let's see once more this saying grav'd in gold: "Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire."

Why, that's the lady; all the world desires her; From the four corners of the earth they come, To kiss this shrine, this mortal breathing saint:

The Hyrcanian deserts, and the vasty wilds Of wide Arabia, are as through-fares now For princes to come view fair Portia: The wat'ry kingdom, whose ambitious head Spits in the face of heaven, is no bar To stop the foreign spirits; but they come, As o'er a brook, to see fair Portia. One of these three contains her heavenly picture. Is't like, that lead contains her? "Wert damnation To think so base a thought: it were too gross To rib her cerceoth in the obscene grave. Or shall I think in silver she's immured, Being ten times undervalued to tried gold? O sinful thought! Never so rich a gem Was set in worse than gold. They have in England A coin, that bears the figure of an angel Stamp'd in gold,—but that's inuscip'd upon; But here an angel in a golden bed Lies all within.—Deliver me the key: Here do I choose, and thrive I as I may! [there, Por. There, take it, prince; and if my form lies Then I am yours. [he open the golden casket, Por. O hell! what have we here? A carrion death, within whose empty eye There is a written scroll! I'll read the writing. [Reads.] "All that glister is not gold,— Often have you heard that told: Many a man his life hath sold, But my outside to behold: Gilded tombs do worms infold. Had you been as wise as bold, Young in limbs, in judgment old, Your answer had not been inscriv'd: Fare you well; your suit is cold."

Cold, indeed; and labour lost: Then, farewell, heart; and welcome, frost!— Portia, adieu. I have too grieved a heart To take a tedious leave: thus losers part. [Exit with his train. Cornets. Por. A gentle riddance.—Draw the curtains: So— Let all of his complexion choose me so. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—VENICE. A Street.

Enter SALARINO and SALARINO.

Salar. Why man, I saw not Basanio under sail: With him is Gratiano gone along; And in their ship, I'm sure, Lorenzo is not.

Salar. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd the Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship. [duke; Salar. He came too late, the ship was under sail; But there the duke was given to understand, That in a gondola were seen together Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica. Besides, Antonio certified the duke, They were not with Bassanio in his ship. Salar. I never heard a passion so confus'd, So strange, outrageous, and so variable, As the dog Jew did utter in the streets: "My daughter!—O my ducats!—O my daughter! Fled with a Christian!—O my Christian ducats!— Justice! the law! my ducats, and my daughter! A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats, Of double ducats, stolen from me by my daughter! And jewels,—two stones, two rich and precious stones, Stol'n by my daughter!—Justice! find the girl! She hath the stones upon her, and the ducats!"
Salar. Why, all the boys in Venice follow him,
Crying,—his stones, his daughter, and his duets.
Solen. Let good Antonio look he keep his day,
Or he shall pay for this.
Salar. Marry, well remember'd,
I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday,
Who told me,—in the narrow seas that part
The French and English, there miscarried
A vessel of our country, richly fraught:
I thought upon Antonio when he told me;
And wish'd in silence that it were not his.
Solan. You were best to tell Antonio what you
Yet do not suddenly, for it may grieve him. [beard;
Salar. A kinder gentleman treads not the earth.
I saw Bassanio and Antonio part:
Bassanio told him he would make some speed
Of his return: he answered, "Do not so,—
Slumber not business for my sake, Bassanio,
But stay the very rippling of the time;
And for the Jew's bond, which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your mind of love:
Be merry; and employ your chiefest thoughts
To courtship, and such fair ostens of love
As shall conveniently become you there:
And even there, his eye being big with tears,
Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,
And with affection wondrous sensible,
He wrung Bassanio's hand; and so they parted.
Solan. I think, he only loves the world for him.
I pray thee, let us go and find him out,
And quicken his embroc'd heaviness
With some delight or other.
Salar. Do we so. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—BELMONT. A Room in Portia's
Mansion.

Enter Nerissa, with a Servant.

Ner. Quick, quick, quick, I pray thee; draw the curtain straight.
The prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Fleurish of cornets. Enter the Prince of Arragon, Portia, and their train.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble prince:
If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptial rites be solemniz'd;
But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enjoin'd by oath to observe three things:—
First, never to unfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maid in way of marriage; lastly,
If I do fail in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you and be gone.

Por. To these injunctions every one doth swear
That comes to hazard, for my worth's sake.
Ar. And so have I address'd me. Fortune now
To my heart's hope—Gold, silver, and base lead.
"Who choosest me must give and hazard all he hath;
You shall look fairs, ere I give or hazard.
What says the golden chest? ha! let me see:
"Who choosest me shall gain what many men desire."

What many men desire—that many may be meant

By the fool multitude, that choose by show,
Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach;
Which price not to thy interior, but, like the martlet,
Builds in the weather, on the outward wall,
Even in the force and road of casualty.
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why, then to thee, thou silver-treasure-house;
Tell me once more what title thou dost bear:
"Who choosest me shall get as much as he deserves:"
And well said too; for who shall go about
To census fortune, and be honourable
Without the stamp of merit? Let none presume
To wear an undeserved dignity.
O, that estates, degrees, and offices,
Were not derive'd corruptly! and that clear honour
Were purchas'd by the merit of the wearer!
How many then should cover, that stand bare!
How many be commanded, that command!
How much low pravity would then he gain'd
From the true seed of honour! and how much hon-pick'd from the shaft and ruin of the times, [our
To be new varish'd! Well, but to my choice:
"Who choosest me shall get as much as he deserves."
I will assume desert.—Give me a key for this,
And instantly unlock my fortunes here.

Por. Too long a pause for that which you find there.

Ar. What's here! the portrait of a blinking idiot,
Presenting me a schedule! I will read it.
How much unlike art thou to Portia?
How much unlike my hopes, and my deserving!
Who choosest me shall have as much as he de-

Por. To offend, and judge, are distinct offices,
And of opposed natures.

What is here?

[Reads.] "The fire seven times tried this:
Seven times tried that judgment is,
That did never choose amiss.
Some there be that shadows kiss;
Such have but a shadow's bliss:
There be fools alive, I wis,
Silver'd o'er; and so was this.
Take what wise you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So be gone; you are sped."
Still more fool I shall appear
By the time I linger here:
With one fool's head I came to woo,
But I go away with two.—
Sweet, adieu. I'll keep my oath,
Patience to bear my wraith.

Exit with his train.

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the mirth.
O, these deliberate fools! when they do choose,
They have the wisdom by their wit to lose.

Ner. "The ancient saying is no here.
Hanging and wiving go by destiny.

Por. Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where is my lady?
Scene I.

Enter Solano and Salamano.

Solan. Why, yet it lives there uncheck'd, that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wreck'd on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place; a very dangerous flat, and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip, Report, be an honest woman of her word.

Solan. I would she were as lying a gossip in that, as ever knapped ginger, or made her neighbours believe she kept for the death of a third husband. But it is true,—without any slips of prolixity, or crossing the plain high-way of talk,—that the good Antonio, the honest Antonio,—O, that I had a title good enough to keep his name company!—

Salar. Come, the full stop.

Solan. Ha,—what say'st thou?—Why, the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Salar. I would it might prove the end of his losses.

Solan. Let me say amen betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer,—for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew.—

Enter Shylock.

Shy. Now how, Shylock! what news among the merchants?

Shy. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughter's flight.

Salar. That's certain: I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew withal.

Solan. And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fledged; and then, it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

Shy. She is dammed for it.

Salar. That's certain, if the devil may be her judge.

Shy. My own flesh and blood to rebel!

Solan. Out upon it, old carrion! rebels it at these years?

Shy. I say, my daughter is my flesh and blood.

Salar. There is more difference between thy flesh and hers, than between jet and ivory; more between your bloods, than there is between red wine and chesnich. —But tell us, do you hear whether Antonio have had any loss at sea or no?

Shy. There I have another bad match: a bankrupt, a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto,—a beggar, that used to come so smug upon the mart,—let him look to his bond: he was wont to call me unner,—let him look to his bond: he was wont to lend money for a Christian courtesy; —let him look to his bond.

Salar. Why, I am sure, if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh: what's that for good?

Shy. To bait fish withal: if it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge. He hath disgraced me, and hindered me half a million; laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's his reason? I am a Jew. Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warm'd and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? If we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what's his humanity? revenge: if a Christian wrong a Jew, what's his reason? or his Christianiety? why, revenge. The villainy you teach me, I will execute; and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Salar. We have been up and down to seek him.

Solan. Here comes another of the tribe: a third cannot be matched, unless the devil himself turn Jew.

[Exit Solan, Salar, and Servant.

Enter Tubal.

Tub. How now, Tubal! what news from Genoa? last thou found my daughter?

Shy. Why, there, there, there, there! a diamond gone, cost me two thousand ducats in Frankfort! The curse never fell upon our nation till now: I never felt it till now,—two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, precious jewels,—I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her car! would she were hearse'd at my foot, and the ducats in her coach! No news of them,—Why, so,—and I know not what's spent in the search; Why thou—loss upon loss! the thief gone with so much, and so much to find the thief; and no satisfaction, no revenge: nor no ill luck stirring but what lights o' my shoulders; no sighs but o' my breathing; no tears but o' my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too. Antonio, as I heard in Genoa,—

Shy. What, what! what! ill luck, ill luck?

Tub. —bath an argosy cast away, coming from Tripolis.

Shy. I thank God! I thank God! Is it true? is it true?

Tub. I spoke with one of the sailors that escaped the wreck.
SKY. I thank thee, good Tubal.—Good news, good news! ha, ha!—Where? in Genoa?
TU. Your daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard, one night, fourscore ducats.
SKY. Thou stick'st a dagger in me:—I shall never see my gold again: fourscore ducats at a sitting! fourscore ducats!
TU. There came divers of Antonio's creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break.
SKY. I am very glad of it—I'll plague him; I'll torture him:—I am glad of it.
TU. One of them showed me a ring, that he had of your daughter for a monkey.
SKY. Out upon her! Thou torturest me, Tubal: it was my turquoise; I had it of Leah, when I was a bachelor: I would not have given it for a wilderness of monkeys.
TU. But Antonio is certainly undone.
SKY. Nay, that's true, that's very true. Go, Tubal, fee me an officer; bespeak him a fortnight before. I will have a heart of him, if he forfeit; for, were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandize I will. Go, Tubal, and meet me at our synagogue; go, good Tubal, at our synagogue.

Scene II.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's Mansion.

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratiano, Nerissa, and Attendants.

PORTIA. I pray you, bawd: pause a day or two, Before you hazard; for, in choosing wrong, I lose your company: therefore, forbear a while. There's something tells me, (but it is not love,) I would not lose you; and you know yourself, Hate counsels not in such a quality, But lest you should not understand me well, (And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought,) I would detain you here some month or two, Before you venture for me. I could teach you How to choose right, but then I am forsworn; So will I never be: so may you miss me; But if you do, you'll miss, And so all yours! O, these naughty times Put bars between the owners and their rights! And so, though yours, not yours.—Prove it so, Let fortune go to hell for it,—not I. I speak too soon; but 'tis to pease the time, To eke it, and to draw it out in length, To stay you from election. Let me choose; For, as I am, I live upon the rack. BASSANIO. Upon the rack, Bassanio! then confess What treason there is mingled with your love. BASSANIO. None but that ugly treason of mistrust, Which makes me fear the enjoying of my love: There may as well be amity and life "T'ween snow and fire, as treason and my love. PORTIA. Ay, but I fear you speak upon the rack, Where men enforced do speak any thing. BASSANIO. Promise me life, and I'll confess the truth.
PORTIA. Well then, confess, and live. BASSANIO. Confess, and love, Had been the very sum of my confession. O happy torment, when my torturer Doth teach me answers for deliverance! But let me to my fortune and the caskets. [Curtain drawn from before the caskets.

PORTIA. Away then. I am lock'd in one of them: If you do love me, you will find me out.— Nerissa, and the rest, stand all aloof. Let music sound while he doth make his choice; Then, if he lose, he makes a swan-like end, Fading in music: that the comparison May stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream, And wat'ry death-bed for him. He may win; And what is music then? then music is Even as the flourish when true subjects bow To a new-crowned monarch: such it is, As are those dulcet sounds in break of day, That creep into the streaming bridgwoman's ear, And summon him to marriage. Now he goes, With no less presence, but with much more love, Than young Alcides, when he did redeem The virgin tribute paid by his black Trojan To the sea-monster: I stand for sacrifice; The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives, With blearied visages, come forth to view The issue of th' exploit. Go, Hercules! Live thou, I live,—with much, much more dismay I view the fight, than thou that mak'st the fray. [Music, and this Song, whilst Bassanio comments on the caskets to himself.

Tell me where is fancy bred, Or in the heart, or in the head? How begot, how nourished? reply. reply. It is engender'd in the eyes, With gazing fed; and fancy dies In less distill'd where it lies. Let us all ring fancy's knell, I'll begin it. Ding, dong, bell.

All. Ding, dong, bell.

BASSANIO. So may the outward shows be least then: The world is still deceiv'd with ornament. [selves:
In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt, But, being season'd with a gracious voice, Obscures the show of evil! In religion, What damned error, but some sober brow Will bless it, and approve it with a text, Hiding the grossness with fair ornament? There is no vice so simple, but assumes Some mark of virtue on his outward parts: How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false As stains of sand, wear yet upon their chins The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars; Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk; And these assume but valour's excrement To render them redoubled. Look on beauty, And you shall see 'tis purchased by the weight; Which therein works a miracle in nature, Making them lightest that wear most of it: So are those crisp'd, snaky golden locks, Which make such wanton gambols with the wind, Upon supposed fairness, often known To be the dowry of a second head, The skull that bred them, in the sepulchre. Thus ornament is but the gilded shore To a most dangerous sea; the beauteous scarf Velling an Indian beauty; in a word, The seeming truth which cunning times put on To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou gaudy gold,
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same myself,
Are yours, my lord: I give them with this ring;
Which when you part from, lose, or give away,
Let it presage the ruin of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bass. Madam, you have bereft me of all words;
Only my blood speaks to you in my veins:
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As, after some oration fairly spoke
By a beloved prince, there doth appear
Among the buzzing pleased multitude;
Where every something, being blent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing, save of joy,
Express'd, and not express'd. But when this ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence:
O, then be bold to say, Bassanio's dead!

Ner. My lord and lady, it is now our time,
That have stood by, and seen our wishes prosper,
To cry, good joy. Good joy, my lord and lady!

Gra. My lord Bassanio, and my gentle lady,
I wish you all the joy that you can wish;
For I am sure you can wish none from me:
And, when your honours mean to solemnize
The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you,
Even at that time I may be married too.

Bass. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.

Gra. I thank your lordship, you have got me one;
My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours:
You saw the mistress, I beheld the maid;
You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission
No more pertains to me, my lord, than you.
Your fortune stood upon the caskets there;
And so did mine too, as the matter falls;
For wooing here, until I swet again,
And swearing, till my very roof was dry
With oaths of love, at last,—if promise last,—
I got a promise of this fair one here,
To have her love, provided that your fortune
Achieve'd her mistress.

Por. Is this true, Nerissa?

Ner. Madam, it is, so you stand pleas'd withal.

Bass. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?

Gra. Yes, faith, my lord.

Bass. Our feast shall be much honour'd in your marriage.

Gra. We'll play with them the first boy for a thousand ducats.

Ner. What, and stake down?

Gra. No; we shall ne'er win at that sport, and stake down.—
But who comes here? Lorenzo and his infidel?
What, and my old Venetian friend, Solanio?

Enter Lorenzo, Jessica, and Solanio.

Bass. Lorenzo, and Solanio, welcome hither;
If that the youth of my new interest here
Have power to bid you welcome.—By your leave,
I bid my very friends and countrymen,
Sweet Portia, welcome.

Por. So do I, my lord:
They are entirely welcome.

Lor. I thank your honour.—For my part, my lord,
My purpose was not to have seen you here;
But meeting with Solanio by the way,
He did entreat me, past all saying nay,
To come with him along.

Solan. I did, my lord;
And I have reason for it. Signior Antonio
Commends him to you. [Gives Bassanio a letter.
Bass. Ere I ope his letter,
I pray you, tell me how my good friend doth.
Solan. Not sick, my lord, unless it be in mind;
Nor well, unless in mind: his letter there
Will show you his estate. [Bassanio reads the letter.
Ors. Nerissa, cheer you stranger; bid her welcome.—
Your hand, Solanio: what's the news from Venice?
How doth that royal merchant, good Antonio?
I know he will be glad of our success;
We are the Jasons, we have won the fleece.
Solan. I would you had won the fleece that he hath lost!

Por. There are some shrewd contents in your same paper,
That steal the colour from Bassanio's cheek:
Some dear friend dead; else nothing in the world
Could turn so much the constitution
Of any constant man. What, worse and worse! -
With leave, Bassanio; I am half yourself,
And I must freely have the half of any thing
That this same paper brings you.
Bass. O sweet Portia,
Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words
That ever blotted paper! Gentle lady,
When I did first impart my love to you,
I freely told you, all the wealth I had
Ran in my veins,—I was a gentleman;
And then I told you true: and yet, dear lady,
Rating myself at nothing, you shall see
How much I was a braggart. When I told you
My state was nothing, I should then have told you
That I was worse than nothing; for, indeed,
I have engag'd myself to a dear friend,
Engag'd my friend to his mere enemy,
To feed my means. Here is a letter, lady;
The paper as the body of my friend,
And every word in it a gaping wound,
Issuing life-blood.—But is it true, Solanio?
Have all his ventures fail'd? What, not one hit?
From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India?
And not one vessel 'scape the dreadful touch
Of merchant-marrying rocks?
Solan. Not one, my lord.
Besides, it should appear, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Jew,
He would not take it. Never did I know
A creature, that did bear the name of man,
So keen and greedy to confound a man:
He plies the duke at morning and at night;
And doth impeach the freedom of the state,
If they deny him justice: twenty merchants,
The duke himself, and the magnificoes
Of greatest port, have all persuaded him;
But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond.
Jef. When I was with him, I have heard him swear,
To Tubal, and to Chus, his countrymen,
That he would rather have Antonio's flesh,
Than twenty times the value of the sum
That he did owe him: and I know, my lord,
If law, authority, and power deny not,
It will go hard with poor Antonio.
Por. Is it your dear friend that is thus in trouble?
Bass. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,
The best condition'd and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies; and one in whom
The ancient Roman honour more appears,
Than any that draws breath in Italy.
Por. What sum owes he the Jew?
Bass. For me, three thousand ducats.
Por. What, no more?
Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond;
Double six thousand, and then treble that,
Before a friend of this description
Shall lose a hair through Bassanio's fault.
First, go with me to church and call me wife,
And then away to Venice for your friend;
For never shall you lie by Portia's side
With an unquiet soul. You shall have gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over:
When it is paid, bring your true friend along.
My maid Nerissa and myself, meantime,
Will live as maids and widows. Come, away!
For you shall hence upon your wedding-day;
Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheer:
Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear.—
But let me hear the letter of your friend.
Bass. [Reads.] "Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all mascaried, my creditors grow cruel, my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit; and since in paying it, it is impossible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might but see you at my death. Notwithstanding, use your pleasure:
If your love do not persuade you to come,
Let not my letter."—
Por. O love, despachat all business, and be gone!
Bass. Since I have your good leave to go away,
I will make haste: but, till I come again,
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my stay,
Nor rest be interposer twist us twain. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Shylock, Salarino, Antonio, and Gaoler.
Shy. Gaoler, look to him:—tell not me of mercy;—
This is the fool that lent out money gratis:—
Gaoler, look to him.
Ant. Hear me yet, good Shylock.
Shy. I'll have my bond; speak not against my bond:—
I have sworn an oath that I will have my bond.
Thou call'dst me dog before thou hadst a cause;
But, since I am a dog, beware my fangs:
The duke shall grant me justice.—I do wonder,
Thou naughty gaoler, that thou art so fond
To come abroad with him at his request.
Ant. I pray thee, hear me speak.
Shy. I'll have my bond; I will not hear thee speak:
I'll have my bond; and therefore speak no more.
I'll not be made a soft and dull-eyed fool,
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors. Follow not;
I'll have no speaking: I will have my bond. [Exeunt.
Salar. It is the most impermeable cur
That ever kept with men.

Ant. Let him alone:
I'll follow him no more with bootless prayers.
He seeks my life; his reason well I know:
I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures
Many that have at times made moan to me;
Therefore he hates me.
Salar. I am sure, the duke
Will never grant this forfeiture to hold.
SCENE V.]

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

183

Ant. The duke cannot deny the course of law,
For the commodity that strangers have
With us in Venice: if it be denied,
Will much impeach the justice of the state;
Since that the trade and profit of the city
Consisteth of all nations. Therefore, go:
These griefs and losses have so bated me,
That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
To-morrow to my bloody creditor.—
Well, gaoler, on.—Pray God, Bassanio come
To see me pay his debt,—and then I care not! [Exit.

SCENE IV.—BELMONT. A Room in Portia’s
Mansion.

Enter Portia, Nerissa, Lorenzo, Jessica, and Balthasar.

Lor. Madam, although I speak it in your presence,
You have a noble and a true conceit
Of god-like amity; which appears most strongly
In bearing thus the absence of your lord.
But if you knew to whom you show this honour,
How true a gentleman you send relief,
How dear a lover of my lord, your husband,
I know you would be prouder of the work,
Than customary bounty can enforce you,
Por. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now: for in companions
That do converse and waste the time together,
Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love,
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit;
Which makes me think that this Antonio,
Being the bosom lover of my lord,
Must needs be like my lord. If it be so,
How little is the cost I have bestowed,
In purchasing the semblance of my soul
From out the state of hellish cruelty!
This comes too near the praising of myself;
Therefore, no more of it: hear other things.—
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands
The husbandry and manage of my house,
Until my lord’s return; for mine own part,
I have toward heaven breath’d a secret vow
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Only attended by Nerissa here,
Until her husband and my lord’s return:
The one is a monastery two miles off,
And there we will abide. I do desire you
Not to deny this imposition;
The which my love, and some necessity,
Now lays upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart;
I shall obey you in all fair commands.
Por. My people do already know my mind,
And will acknowledge you and Jessica
In place of lord Bassanio and myself.
So fare you well, till we shall meet again.

Lor. Fair thoughts, and happy hours, attend on you!

Por. I wish your ladyship all heart’s content.
Lor. I thank you for your wish, and am well pledged.
To wish it back on you: fare you well, Jessica.—

[Exeunt Jessica and Lorenzo.

Now, Balthasar,
As I have ever found thee honest, true,
So let me find thee still. Take this same letter,
And use thou all the endeavour of a man
In speed to Padua: see thou render this
Into my cousin’s hand, doctor Bellario;
And, look, what notes and garments he doth give thee,
Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin’d speed
Unto the Transect, to the common ferry
Which trades to Venice. Waste no time in words,
But get thee gone: I shall be there before thee.

Balth. Madam, I go with all convenient speed. [Exit.

Por. Come on, Nerissa; I have work in hand,
That you yet know not of: we’ll see our husbands,
Before they think of us. Shall they see us?
Por. They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit,
That they shall think we are accomplished
With what we lack, that should be vis’d upon,
When we are both accoutred like young men,
I’ll prove the prettier fellow of the two,
And wear my dagger with the braver grace;
And speak between the change of man and boy,
With a reed voice; and turn two mincing steps
Into a manly stride; and speak of frays,
Like a fine breaching youth; and tell quaint lies,
How honourable ladies sought my love
Which I denying, they fell sick and died,—
I could not do withal;—then I’ll repent,
And wish, for all that, that I had not kill’d them:
And twenty of these puny lies I’ll tell;
That men shall swear I have discontinu’d school
Above a twelvemonth: I have within my mind
A thousand new tricks of these beggarly Jacks,
Which I will practise.

Por. Why, shall we turn to men?
Por. Fie, what a question’s that,
If thou went near a lewd interpreter!
But come, I’ll tell thee all my whole device
When I am in my couch, which stays for us
At the park gate; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to-day. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—BELMONT. Portia’s Garden.

Enter Launcelot and Jessica.

Laun. Yes, truly; for, look you, the sins of the father are to be laid upon the children: therefore, I promise you, I fear you. I was always plain with you, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter: therefore be of good cheer; for, truly, I think you are damned. There is but one hope in it that can do you any good; and that is but a kind of bastard hope neither.

Jec. And what hope is that, I pray thee?
Laun. Marry, you may partly hope that your father got you not,—that you are not the Jew’s daughter.

Jec. That were a kind of bastard hope, indeed:
so the sins of my mother should be laid upon me.
Laun. Truly, then, I fear you are damned both by father and mother: thus when I shun Scylla, your father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother: well, you are gone by all ways.

Jec. I shall be saved by my husband; he hath made me a Christian.
Laun. Truly, the more to blame he: we were Christians now before; ’en as many as could well live, one by another. This making of Christians will raise the price of hogs: if we grow all to be Enter Lorenzo.

Lor. I shall grow jealous of you shortly, Launcelot; for, if you thus get my wife into corners.

Jes. Nay, you need not fear us, Lorenzo: Launcelot and I are out. He tells me flatly, there is no mercy for me in heaven, because I am a Jew's daughter: and he says, you are no good coming to the commonwealth; for, in converting Jews to Christians, you raise the price of pork.

Lor. I shall answer that better to the commonwealth, than you can the getting up of the negro's belly: the Moor is with child by you, Launcelot.

Laun. It is much, that the Moor should be more than reason: but if she be less than an honest woman, she is indeed worse than she. Thrice bless her for.

Lor. How every fool can play upon the word! I think the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence; and discourse grow commendable in none but pedants. — Go in, sirrah; bid them prepare for dinner.

Laun. That is done, Sir; they have all stomachs.

Lor. Goodly lord, what a wit-snapper are you! then, let them prepare dinner.

Laun. That is done too, Sir; only, cover is the word.

Lor. Will you cover, then, Sir?

Laun. Not so, Sir; neither, I know my duty.

Lor. Yet more quarrelling with occasion! Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning: go to thy fellows; bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Laun. For the table, Sir, it shall be served in; for the meat, Sir, it shall be covered; for your coming in to dinner, Sir, why, let it be as humours and conceits shall govern. [Exit.

Lor. O dear discretion, how his words are suited! The fool hath planted in his memory An army of good words; and I do know A many fools, that stand in better place, Garnish'd like him, that for a tricksy word Defy the matter. — How cheer'st thou, Jessica? And now, good sweet, say thy opinion,— How dost thou like the lord Bassanio's wife?

Jes. Past all expressing. It is very meet, The lord Bassanio lead an upright life; For, having such a blessing in his lady, He finds the joys of heaven here on earth; And if on earth he do not mean it, then In reason he should never come to heaven. Why, if two gods should play some heavenly match, And on the wager lay two earthly women, And Portia one, there must be something else Pawn'd with the other; for the poor rude world Hath not her fellow.

Lor. Even such a husband Hazard you of, as she is for a wife. Jes. Nay, but ask my opinion, too, of that. Lor. I will anon: first, let us go to dinner. Jes. Nay, let me praise you, while I have a stomach.

Lor. No, pray thee, let it serve for table-talk; Then, howsoever thou speak'st, 'mong other things I shall digest it.

Jes. Well, I'll set you forth. [Exeunt.
I bear Antonio, that I follow thus
A losing suit against him. Are you answerd?

Bass. This is no answer, thou unfeeling man,
To excuse the current of thy cruelty.

Shy. I am not bound to please thee with my answer.

Bass. Do all men kill the things they do not love?

Shy. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?

Bass. Every offence is not a hate at first.

Shy. What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice?

Ant. I pray thee, think you question with the Jew;
You may as well go stand upon the beach,
And bid the main flood bathe his usual height;
You may as well use question with the wolf,
Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb;
You may as well forbid the mountain pines
To wag their high tops, and make the country noise,
When they are fretted with the gusts of heaven;
You may as well do any thing most hard,
As seek to soften that (than which what's harder?)
His Jewish heart;—therefore, I do beseech you,
Make no more offers, use no farther means,
But, with all brief and plain convenience,
Let me have judgment, and the Jew his will.

Bass. For thy three thousand ducats here is six.

Shy. If every ducat in six thousand ducats
Were in six parts, and every part a ducat,
I would not draw them,—I would have my bond.

Duke. How shalt thou hope for mercy, rendering none?

Shy. What judgment shall I dread, doing no wrong?

You have among you many a purchaser's slave,
Which, like your asses and your dogs and mules,
You use in abject and in slavish parts,
Because you bought them;—shall I say to you,
Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?
Why sweat they under burdens? let their beds
Be made as soft as yours, and let their palates
Be season'd with such viands? You will answer,
The slaves are ours:—so do I answer you:
The pound of flesh which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it.
If you deny me, fie upon your law!

There is no force in the decrees of Venice.
I stand for judgment; answer,—shall I have it?

Duke. Upon my power I may dismiss this court,
Unless Bellario, a learned doctor,
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to-day.

Salv. My lord, here stays without
A messenger with letters from the doctor,
New come from Padua.

Duke. Bring us the letters; call the messenger.

Bass. Good morrow, Antonio! What, man, courage?

The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and all,
Ere thou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.

Ant. I am a taintedウェホrth of the floor,
Meetest for death: the weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground; and so let me:
You cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio.
Than to live still, and write mine epitaph.

Enter Nascassia, dressed like a lawyer's clerk.

Duke. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?

Ner. From both, my lord. Bellario greets your grace.

[Present a letter.

Bass. Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly?

Shy. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrupt there.

Gra. Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, harsh Jew,
Thou makst thy knife keen; but no metal can,
No, not the hangman's axe, bear half the keenness
Of thy sharp envy. Can no prayers pierce thee?

Shy. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.

Gra. O, be thou damn'd, irrecoverable dog!

And for thy life let justice be accus'd.

Thou almost mak'st me waver in my faith.

To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of animals infuse themselves
Into the trunks of men; thy currish spirit
Grew'd a wolf, who, hang'd for human slaughter,
Even from the gallows did his fell soul fleet,
And, whilst thou lay'st in thy unshallow'd dam,
Infus'd itself in thee, And to thy desire
Are wolfish, bloody, starv'd, and ravenous.

Shy. Till thou canst raze the seal from off my bond,
Thou but offend'st thy lugs to speak so loud.

Duke. Repair thy wit, good youth, or it will fall
To cureless ruin.—I stand here for law.

Duke. This letter from Bellario doth commend
A young and learned doctor to our court.—

Where is he?

Ner. He attendeth here hard by,
To know your answer, whether you'll admit him.

Duke. With all my heart. Some three or four of Give him courteous conduct to this place. [you,
Meantime, the court shall hear Bellario's letter.

[Gler reads.] 'Your grace shall understand, that At the receipt of your letter I am very sick: but in the instant that your messenger came, in loving visitation was with me a young doctor of Rome; his name is Balthazar. I acquainted him with the cause:
in controversy between the Jew and Antonio the merchant: we turned o'er many books together:
he is furnished with my opinion; which, bettered with his own learning, the (generosity whereof I cannot enough commend,) comes with him, at my im-portunity, to fill up your grace's request in my stead.

I beseech you, let his lack of years be no impediment to let him lack a reverend estimation: for I never knew so young a body with so old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his commendation.'

Duke. You hear the learned Bellario, what he writes:
And here, I take it, is the doctor come.

Enter PORTIA, dressed like a doctor of laws.

Give me your hand. Came you from old Bellario?

Por. I did, my lord.

Duke. You are welcome: take your place.

Are you acquainted with the cause?

That holds this present question in the court?

Por. I am informed thoroughly of the cause.—
Which is the merchant here, and which the Jew?

Duke. Antonio Arii; for Shylock, both stand forth.

Por. Is your name Shylock?

Shy. Shylock is my name.

Por. Of a strange nature is the suit you follow;
Yet in such rule, that the Venetian law
Cannot impugn you as you do proceed.—

[To Antonio.] You stand within his danger, do you not?

Ant. Ay, so he says.

Por. Do you confess the bond?
Then must the Jew be merciful.

Shy. On what compulsion must I tell me that.

For. The quality of mercy is not strain'd,—
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath: it is twice bless'd.—
It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes:
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings:
But mercy is above this sceptred sway,—
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest God's,
When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew,
Though justice be thy plea, consider this,—
That in the course of justice, none of us
Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy;
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy. I have spoke thus much,
To mitigate the justice of thy plea;
Which if thou follow, this strict court of Venice
Must needs give sentence 'gainst the merchant there.

Shy. My deeds upon my head! I crave the law,
The penalty and forfeit of my bond.

For. Is he not able to discharge the money?

Bas. Yes, here I tender it for him in the court;
Yet, twice the sum: if that will not suffice,
I will be bound to pay it ten times o'er,
On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart:
If this will not suffice, it must appear
That malice bears down truth. And, I beseech you,
Wrest once the law to your authority:
To do a great right, do a little wrong;
And curb this cruel devil of his will.

For. It must not be; there is no power in Venice
Can alter a decree established:
'Twll be recorded for a precedent;
And many an error, by the same example,
Will rush into the state: it cannot be.

Shy. A Daniel come to judgment! yes, a Daniel!—
O wise young judge, how do I honour thee!

For. I pray you, let me look upon the bond.

Shy. Here 'tis, most reverend doctor, here it is.

Shy. By thry money offer'd thee.

For. A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Nearest the merchant's heart.—Be merciful:
Take thry money; bid me tear the bond.

Shy. When it is paid according to the tenour.—
It doth appear you are a worthy judge;
You know the law, your exposition
Hath been most sound: I charge you by the law,
Whereof you are a well-deserving judge.
Proceed to judgment: by my soul I swear
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me: I stay here on my bond.

Ant. Most heartily do beseech the court
To give the judgment.

For. Why then, thus it is:—
You must prepare your bosom for his knife.

Shy. O noble judge! O excellent young man!

For. For, the intent and purpose of the law
Hath full relation to the penalty,
Which here appeareth due upon the bond.

Shy. 'Tis very true: O wise and upright judge!
How much more elder art thou than thy locks?

For. Therefore, lay bare your bosom.

Shy. Ay, his breast;
So says the bond:—doth it not, noble judge?—
Nearest his heart: those are the very words.

For. It is so. Are there balance here to weigh
The flesh?

Shy. I have them ready.

For. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your charge,
To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.

Shy. Is it so nominated in the bond?

For. It is not so express'd; but what of that?
'Twere good you do so much for charity.

Shy. I cannot find it; 'tis not in the bond.

For. Come, merchant, have you any thing to say?

Ant. But little: I am arm'd and well prepar'd.—
Give me your hand, Bassanio: fare you well!
Grieve not that I am fallen to this for you;
For herein Fortune shows herself more kind
Than is her custom: it is still her use
To let the wretched man out-live his wealth,
To view with hollow eye and wrinkled brow
An age of poverty; from which lingering penance
Of such misery doth she cut me off.
Commend me to your honourable wife:
Tell her the process of Antonio's end;
Say how I lov'd you, speak me fair in death;
And, when the tale is told, bid her be judge,
Whether Bassanio had not once a love
Repent not you that you shall lose your friend,
And he repents not that he pays your debt;
For, if the Jew do cut but deep enough,
I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.

Bas. Antonio, I am married to a wife
Which is as dear to me as life itself;
But life itself, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteem'd above thy life:
I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all
Here to this devil, to deliver you.

For. Your wife would give you little thanks for that,
If she were by, to hear you make the offer.

Gra. I have a wife, whom, I protest, I love:
I would she were in heaven, so she could
Entreat some power to change this curst Jew.

Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behind her back;
The wish would make else an unquiet house.

Shy. [Aside.] These be the Christian husbands!
I have a daughter;
Would any of the stock of Barabas
Had been her husband, rather than a Christian!
[Aside.] We trifle time: I pray thee, pursue sentence.

For. A pound of that same merchant's flesh is thine:
The court awards it, and the law doth give it.

Shy. Most rightful judge!

For. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast:
The law allows it, and the court awards it.

Shy. Most learned judge!—A sentence! come, prepare!

For. Tarry a little: there is something else.
This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood;—
The words expressly are, a pound of flesh:
Take then thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh;—
But, in the cutting it, if thou dost shed
One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods
Are, by the laws of Venice, confiscate
Unto the state of Venice.

_Gra._ O upright judge!—Mark, Jew:—O learned judge!

_Sky._ Is that the law?

_Por._ Thyself shalt see the act:
For, as thou urgest justice, be assured:
Thou shalt have justice, more than thou desir'st.

_Gra._ O learned judge!—Mark, Jew:—a learned judge!

_Sky._ I take this offer, then;—pay the bond thric'e,
And let the Christian go.

_Por._ Here is the money.

_Duke._ Soft!
The Jew shall have all justice;—soft! no haste:—
He shall have nothing but the penalty.

_Gra._ O Jew! an upright judge, a learned judge!

_Por._ Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the flesh.
Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor more;
But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more,
Or less, than a just pound,—be it but so much
As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance,
Or the division of the twentieth part
Of one poor scruple; nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,—
Thou dicst, and all thy goods are confiscate.

_Gra._ A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew!
Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip.

_Por._ Why doth the Jew pause? take thy forfeiture:

_Sky._ Give me my principal, and let me go.

_Bass._ I have it ready for thee; here it is.

_Por._ He hath refus'd it in the open court:
He shall have merely justice, and his bond.

_Gra._ A Daniel, still say I; a second Daniel!—
I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.

_Sky._ Shall I not have barely my principal?

_Por._ Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeiture,
To be so taken at thy peril, Jew.

_Sky._ Why, then the devil give him good of it!
I'll stay no longer question.

_Ant._ Tarry, Jew:
The law hath yet another hold on you.
It is enacted in the laws of Venice,—
If it be prov'd against an alien
That by direct or indirect attempts
He seek the life of any citizen,
The party 'gainst which he doth contrive
Shall seize one half his goods; the other half
Comes to the privy coffer of the state;
And the offender's life lies in the mercy
Of the duke only, 'gainst all other voice.
In which predicament, I say, thou stand'st;
For it appears, by manifest proceeding,
That indirectly, and directly too,
Thou hast contriv'd against the very life
Of the defendant; and thou hast incur'd
The danger formerly by me reheard'd.
Down, therefore, and beg mercy of the duke.

_Gra._ Beg that thou may'st have leave to hang thyself:
And yet, thy wealth being forfeit to the state,
Thou hast not left the value of a cord;
Therefore, thou must be hang'd at the state's charge.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—BELMONT. The Avenue to Portia's Mansion.

Enter Lorenzo and Jessica.

Lor. The moon shines bright:—in such a night as this,
When the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees,
And they did make no noise,—in such a night
Troilus methinks mounted the Trojan walls,
And sigh'd his soul toward the Grecian tents,
Where Cressid lay that night.

Jac. In such a night
Did Thaisa fearfully o'ertrip the dew,
And saw the lion's shadow ere himself,
And ran dismay'd away.

Lor. In such a night
Stood Dido with a willow in her hand
Upon the wild sea-banks, and waft her love
To come again to Carthage.

Jac. In such a night
Medea gather'd the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Jason.

Lor. In such a night
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew,
And with an unthrift love did run from Venice,
As far as Belmont.

Jac. In such a night
Did young Lorenzo swear he'd love her well,
Stealing her soul with many vows of faith,
And ne'er a true one.

Lor. In such a night
Did pretty Jessica, like a little shrew,
Slender her love, and he forgave it her.

Jac. I would out-night you, did nobody come;
But, hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter Stephano.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?

Steph. A friend.

Lor. A friend! what friend? your name, I pray you, friend.

Steph. Jessica is my name; and I bring word,
My mistress will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont: she doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
For happy wedlock hours.

Lor. Who comes with her?

Steph. None, but a holy hermit, and her maid.
I pray you, is my master yet return'd?

Lor. He is not, nor we have not heard from him.—
But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Enter Launcelot.

Lau'n. Sola, sola! wo ha, ho! sola, sola!

Lor. Who calls?

Lau'n. Sola! did you see master Lorenzo and mistress Lorenzo? sola, sola!

Lor. Leave hollying, man:—here.

Lau'n. Sola! where? where?

Lor. Here.

Lau'n. Tell him there's a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news: my master will be here ere morning. [Exit.

Lor. Sweet soul, let's in, and there expect their coming.

And yet no matter:—why should we go in?—
SCENE I.

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you, Within this house, your mistress is at hand; And bring your music forth into the air.

[Exit STEPHANO.]

How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank! Here will we sit, and let the sounds of music Creep in our ears; soft stillness, and the night, Become the touches of sweet harmony. Sit, Jessica; look, how the floor of heaven Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold! There's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st, But in his motion like an angel sings, Still quiring to the young-ey'd cherubins,— Such harmony is in immortal souls; But whilst this muddy vesture of decay Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.

Enter MUSICIANS.

Come, ho! and wake Diana with a horn: With sweetest touches pressure your mistress' ear, And draw her home with music. [Music.]

[Exit.]

Lor. I am never merry when I hear sweet music.

Por. The reason is, your spirits are attentive: For do but note a wild and wanton herd, Or race of youthful and unhandled colts, Fetching mad bounds, bellowing, and neighing loud, Which is the hot condition of their blood; If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound, Or any air of music touch their ears, You shall perceive them make a mutual stand, Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze, By the sweet power of music: therefore the poet Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and floods; Since naught so stockish, hard, and full of rage, But music for the time doth change his nature. The man that hath no music in himself, Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet sounds, Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils: The motions of his spirit are dull as night, And his affections dark as Erebus: Let no such man be trusted.—Mark the music.

[Enter PORTIA and NERISSA, at a distance.]

Por. That light we see is burning in my hall. How far that little candle throws his beams! So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

Ner. When the moon shine, we did not see the candle.

Por. So doth the greater glory dim the less: A substitute shines brightly as a king, Until a king be by; and then his state Empties itself, as doth an inland brook Into the main of waters.—Music! hark!

Ner. It is your music, madam, of the house.

Por. Nothing is good, I see, without respect: Methinks it sounds much sweeter than by day.

Ner. Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam.

Por. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark, When neither is attended; and I think The nightingale, if she should sing by day, When every goose is cackling, would be thought No better a musician than the wren. How many things by season season'd are To their right praise and true perfection!— Peace, ho! the moon sleeps with Endymion, And would not be awak'd! [Music ceases.]

Lor. That is the voice, Or I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.

Por. He knows me, as the blind man knows the cuckoo, By the bad voice.

Lor. Dear lady, welcome home.

Por. We have been praying for our husbands' welfare, Which speed, we hope, the better for our words. Are they return'd?

Lor. Madam, they are not yet; But there is come a messenger before, To signify their coming.

Por. Go in, Nerissa; Give order to my servants that they take No note at all of our being absent hence;— Nor you, Lorenzo;—Jessica, nor you. [A tucket sounds.]

Lor. Your husband is at hand; I hear his trumpet: We are no tell-tales, madam; fear you not.

Por. This night methinks is but the daylight sick; It looks a little paler; 'tis a day, Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

[Enter BASSANIO, ANTONIO, GRATIANO, and their followers.]

Bass. We should hold day with the Antipodes, If you would walk in absence of the sun.

Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light; For a light wife doth make a heavy husband, And never be Bassanio so for me: But God sort all,—You are welcome home, my lord.

Bass. I thank you, madam: give welcome to my friend.

This is the man, this is Antonio, To whom I am so infinitely bound.

Por. You should in all sense be much bound to him.

For, as I hear, he was much bound for you.

Ant. No more than I am well acquittance of.

Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house: It must appear in other ways than words, Therefore I scant this breathing courtesy.

[To NERISSA.] By yonder moon I swear you do me wrong:

In faith, I gave it to the judge's clerk: Would he were gelt that had it, for my part, Since you do take it, love, so much at heart.

Por. A quarrel, ho, already! what's the matter?

Gra. About a hoop of gold, a pallet ring

That she did give me; whose posy was

For all the world like cutters' poetry

Upon a knife, "Love me, and leave me not."

Ner. What talk you of the posy, or the value? You swore to me, when I did give it you, That you would wear it till your hour of death: And that it should lie with you in your grave: Though not for me, yet for your vehement oaths, You should have been respective, and have kept it. Gave it a judge's clerk! no, God's my judge, The clerk will ne'er wear hair on his face that hail

Gra. He will, as if he live to be a man.

Ner. Ay, if a woman live to be a man.

Gra. Now, by this hand, I gave it to a youth,— A kind of boy; a little scrubbed boy, No higher than thyself, the judge's clerk; A prating boy, that bugg'd it as a bee: I could not for my heart deny it him.
Merchant of Venice

Act V

For. You were to blame,—I must be plain with you,—
To part so slightly with your wife's first gift;
A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger,
And so riveted with faith unto your flesh.
I gave my love a ring, and made him swear
Never to part with it; and here he stands,—
I dare be sworn he, he would not leave it,
Nor pluck it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world masters. Now, in faith, Gratiano,
You give your wife too unkind a cause of grief:
An 'twere to me, I should be mad at it.

Bass. [Aside.] Why, I were best to cut my left hand off,
And swear I lost the ring defending it.

Gra. My lord Bassanio gave his ring away
Unto the judge that begg'd it, and indeed
Deserv'd it too; and then the boy, his clerk,
That took some pains in writing, he begg'd mine:
And neither man nor master would take aught
But the two rings.

For. What ring gave you, my lord?—
Not that, I hope, which you receiv'd of me.

Bass. If I could add a lie unto a fault,
I would deny it; but you see, my finger
Has not for the ring upon it,—it is gone.

For. Even so void is your false heart of truth.
By heaven, I will ne'er come in your bed
Until I see the ring.

Nor. Nor I in yours,
Till I again see mine.

Bass. Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gave the ring,
If you did know for whom I gave the ring,
And would conceive for what I gave the ring,
And how unwillingly I left the ring,
When naught would be accepted but the ring,
You would abate the strength of your displeasure.

For. If you had known the virtue of the ring,
Or half her worthiness that gave the ring,
Or your own honour to contain the ring,
You would not then have parted with the ring.
What man is there so much unreasonable,
If you had pleasd't to have defended it
With any terms of seale, wanted the modesty
To urge the thing held as a ceremony?
Nerissa teaches me what to believe;
I'll die for't, but some woman had the ring.

Bass. No, by mine honour, madam, by my soul,
No woman had it, but a civil doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand ducats of me,
And begg'd the ring; the which I did deny him,
And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away;
Even he that had held up the very life
Of my dear friend. What should I say, sweet lady?
I was enforc'd to send it after him:
I was beset with shame and courtesy;
My honour would not let ingratitude
So much besmear it. Pardon me, good lady;
For, by these blessed candles of the night,
Hath you been there, I think you have begg'd
The ring of me to give the worthy doctor.

For. Let not that doctor e'er come near my house:
Since he hath got the jewel that I lov'd,
And that which you did swear to keep for me,
I will become as liberal as you;
I'll not deny him any thing I have,
No, not my body, nor my husband's bed:
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it:
Lie not a night from home; watch me like Argus:
If you do not, if I be left alone,
Now, by mine honour, which is yet mine own,
I'll have that doctor for my bedfellow.

Ner. And his clerk; therefore be well advis'd
How you do leave me to mine own protection.

Gra. Well, do you so: let not me take him, then;
For if I do, I'll mar the young clerk's pen.

Ant. I am th'o' unhappy subject of these quarrels.

For. Sir, grieve not you; you are welcome notwithstanding.

Bass. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong;
And, in the hearing of these many friends,
I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes,
Wherein I see myself,—

For. Mark you but that!
In both my eyes he doubly sees himself;
In each eye, one—swear by your double self,
And there's an oath of credit.

Bass. Nay, but hear me: I
Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear,
I never more will break an oath with thee.

Ant. I once did lend my body for his wealth;
Which, but for him that had your husband's ring,
Had quite miscarried: I dare be bound again,
My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord
Will never more break faith advisedly.

For. Then you shall be his surety. Give him this;
And bid him keep it better than the other.

Ant. Here, lord Bassanio; swear to keep this ring.

Bass. By heaven! it is the same I gave the doctor!

For. I had it of him: pardon me, Bassanio;
For, by this ring, the doctor lay with me.

Ner. And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano;
For that same scrubbed boy, the doctor's clerk,
In lieu of this last night did lie with me.

Gra. Why, this is like the making of highways
In summer, when the ways are fair enough;
What, are we cuckolds ere we have deserv'd it?

For. Speak not so grossly.—You are all amaz'd:
Here is a letter, read it at your leisure;
It comes from Padua, from Bellario;
There you shall find that Portia was the doctor;
Nerissa there, her clerk: Lorenzo, here,
Shall witness I set forth as soon as you,
And even but now return'd; I have not yet
Enter'd my house.—Antonio, you are welcome;
And I have better news in store for you
Than you expect: unseal this letter soon;
There you shall find, three of your argouses
Are richly come to harbour suddenly:
You shall not know by what strange accident
I chanced on this letter.

Ant. I am dumb.

Bass. Were you the doctor, and I knew you not?

Gra. Were you the clerk that is to make me cuckold?

Ner. Ay, but the clerk that never means to do it,
Unless he live until he be a man.

Bass. Sweet doctor, you shall be my bedfellow:
When I am absent, then, lie with my wife.

Ant. Sweet lady, you have given me life and living;
For here I read for certain that my ships
Are safely come to road.
SCENE I.

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Por. How now, Lorenzo! My clerk hath some good comfort, too, for you.

Ner. Ay, and I'll give them him without a fee.—

There do I give to you and Jessica,

From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift,

After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.

Lor. Fair ladies, you drop maunna in the way

Of starved people.

Por. It is almost morning,

And yet I am sure you are not satisfied

Of these events at full. Let us go in;

And charge us there upon inter'gatories,

And we will answer all things faithfully.

Cass. Let it be so: the first inter'gatory

That my Nerissa shall be sworn on, is,

Whether till the next night she had rather stay,

Or go to bed now, being two hours to day:

But were the day come, I should wish it dark,

That I were couching with the doctor's clerk.

Well, while I live, I'll fear no other thing

So sore, as keeping safe Nerissa's ring. [Exeunt.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Orchard near OLIVER’S House.

Enter ORLANDO and OLIVER.

OLI. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this fashion,—bequeathed me by will but poor a thousand crowns, and, as thou sayst, charged my brother, on his blessing, to breed me well: and there begins my sadness. My brother Jaques he keeps at school, and report speaks goldingly of his profit: for my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or, to speak more properly, stays me here at home unkept; for call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an ox? His horses are bred better; for, besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their management, and to that end riders dearly hired: but I, his brother, gain nothing under him but growth; for the which his animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I. Besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me, his countenance seems to take from me: he lets me feed with his hinds, bars me the place of a brother, and, as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it, Adam, that grieves me; and the spirit of my father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude: I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to avoid it.

ADAM. Yonder comes my master, your brother.

OLI. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

Enter OLIVER.

OLI. Now, Sir! what make you here?

OLI. Nothing: I am not taught to make any thing.

OLI. What mar you then, Sir?

OLI. Marry, Sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness.

OLI. Marry, Sir, be better employed, and be naught swill.

OLI. Shall I keep your hogs, and eat haiks with them? What prodigal portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?

OLI. Know you where you are, Sir?

OLI. O, Sir, very well: here in your orchard.

OLI. Know you before whom, Sir?

OLI. Ay, better than he I am before knows me. I know you are my eldest brother; and, in the gentle condition of blood, you should so know me. The courtesy of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first-born; but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us: I have as much of my father in me, as you; albeit, I confess, your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

OLI. What, boy!

OLI. Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in this.

OLI. Wilt thou lay hands on me, villain?

OLI. I am no villain: I am the youngest son of Sir Rowlande de Bois: he was my father; and he is thrice a villain that says such a father begot villains. Wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pulled out thy tongue for saying so: thou hast railed on thyself.

ADAM. [Coming forward.] Sweet masters, be patient: for your father’s remembrance, be at accord.

OLI. Let me go, I say.

OLI. I will not, till I please: you shall hear me. My father charged you in his will to give me good education: you have trained me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities. The spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allottery my father left me by testament; with that I will go buy my fortunes.

OLI. And what wilt thou do? beg, when that is spent? Well, Sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you; you shall have some part of your will: I pray you, leave me.
SCENE II.

Ors. I will no farther offend you than becomes me for your good.
Oli. Get you with him, you old dog.
Ad. Is old dog my reward! Most true, I have lost my teeth in your service.—God be with my old master! he would not have spoke such a word.
Oli. Is it even so? begin you to grow upon me? I will physic your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither.—Hola, Dennis!

Enter Dennis.

Deu. Calls your worship?
Oli. Was not Charles the duke's wrestler here to speak with me?
Deu. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunates access to you.
Oli. Call him in. [Exit Dennis.]-'Twill be a good way; and to-morrow the wrestling is.

Enter Charles.

Ch. Good-morrow to your worship.
Oli. Good monsieur Charles, what's the new news at the new court?
Ch. There's no news at the court, Sir, but the old news: that is, the old duke is banished by his younger brother the new duke; and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new duke; therefore he gives them good leave to wander.
Oli. Can you tell if Rosalind, the duke's daughter, be banished with her father?
Ch. O, no; for the duke's daughter, her cousin, so loves her,—being ever from their cradles bred together,—that she would have followed her exile, or have died to stay behind her. She is at the court, and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter; and never two ladies loved as they do.
Oli. Where will the old duke live?
Ch. They say, he is already in the forest of Arden, and a many men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England: they say, many young gentlemen flock to him every day, and fret the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.
Oli. What, you wrestle to-morrow before the new duke?
Ch. Marry, do I, Sir; and I came to acquaint you with a matter. I am given, Sir, secretly to understand that your younger brother, Orlando, hath a disposition to come in disguised against me to try a fall. To-morrow, Sir, I wrestle for my credit; and he that escapes me without some broken limb shall acquit him well. Your brother is but young and tender; and, for your love, I would be loath to fall him, as I must, for my own honour, if he come in: therefore, out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you withal: that either you might stay him from his intention, or brook such disgrace well as he shall run into; in that it is a thing of his own search, and altogether against my will.
Oli. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which, thou shalt find, I will most kindly requite. I had myself notice of my brother's purpose herein, and have by underhand means laboured to dissuade him from it; but he is resolute. I'll tell thee, Charles, it is the stubbomest young fellow of France; full of ambition, an envious emulator of every man's good parts, a secret and villainous contriver against me his natural brother: therefore use thy discretion: I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger: and thou wert best look to't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if he do not mightily grace himself on thee, he will practise against thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath ta'en thy life by some indirect means or other; for, I assure thee,—and almost with tears I speak it,—there is not one so young and so villainous this day living. I speak but brotherly of him; but should I animate him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder.
Ch. I am heartily glad I came hither to you. If I come to-morrow, I'll give him my payment: if ever he go alone again, I'll never wrestle for prize more: and so, God keep your worship!
Oli. Farewell, good Charles. [Exit Charles.]

Now will I stir this gamester: I hope I shall see an end of him: for my soul, yet I know not why, hates nothing more than he: yet he's gentle; never schooled, and yet learned; full of noble device; of all sorts enchantingly beloved; and, indeed, so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my own people, who best know him, that I am altogether misprised: but it shall not be so long: this wrestler shall clear all: nothing remains but that I kindle the boy thither; which now I'll go about. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Lawn before the Duke's Palace.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Cel. I pray thee, Rosalind, sweet my cox, be merry.
Ros. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of; and would you yet I were merrier? Unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.
Cel. Herein, I see, thou lovest me not with the full weight that I love thee. If my uncle, thy banished father, had banished thee, the duke my father, so thou hadst been still with me, I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine: so wouldst thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously tempered as mine is to thee.
Ros. Well! I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoice in yours.
Cel. You know my father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have: and, truly, when he dies, thou shalt be his heir; for what he hath taken away from thy father perforce, I will render thee again in affection; by mine honour, I will; and when I break that oath, let me turn monster: therefore, my sweet Rose, my dear Rose, be merry.
Ros. From henceforth I will, cox, and devise sports. Let me see; what think you of falling in love?
Cel. Marry, I pr'ythee, do, to make sport withal; but love no man in good earnest; nor no farther in sport neither, than with safety of a pure blush thou mayst in honour come off again.
Ros. What shall be our sport, then?
Cel. Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.
Ros. I would we could do so; for her benefits are
AS YOU LIKE IT.

[ACT L]

Rosi. As wit and fortune will.
Teoch. Or as the destinies decree.
Cei. Well said: that was laid on with a trowel.
Teoch. Nay, if I keep not my rank,—
Rosi. Thou lostest thy old smell.
Le Beau. Yon amaze me, ladies: I would have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.
Rosi. Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling.
Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning; and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end; for the best is yet to do; and here, where you are, they are coming to perform it.
Cei. Well,—the beginning, that is dead and buried.
Le Beau. There comes an old man and his three sons.
Cei. I could match this beginning with an old tale.
Le Beau. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence—
Rosi. With bills on their necks,—"Be it known unto all men by these presents,"—
Le Beau. The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles, the duke's wrestler, which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of life in him: so he served the second, and so the third. Yonder they lie; the poor old man, their father, making such jolly dole over them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.
Rosi. Alas!
Teoch. But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?
Le Beau. Why, this that I speak of.
Teoch. Thus men may grow wiser every day! it is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.
Cei. Or I, I promise thee.
Rosi. But is there any else longs to see this broken music in his sides? is there yet another dotes upon rib-breaking?—Shall we see this wrestling, cosin?
Le Beau. You must, if you stay here; for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it.
Cei. Yonder, sure, they are coming: let us now stay and see it.

Hoard. Enter Duke Frederick, Lords Orlando, Charles, and Attendants.

Duke F. Come on: since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.
Rosi. Is yonder the man?
Le Beau. Even he, madam.
Cei. Alas, he is too young! yet he looks successful.
Duke F. How now, daughter, and cousin! are you crest hither to see the wrestling?
Rosi. Ay, my liege, so please you give us leave.
Duke F. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you; there is such odds in the men. In pity of the challenger's youth, I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated. Speak to him, ladies; see if you can move him.
Cei. Call him hither, good Monsieur Le Beau.
Duke F. Do so: I'll not be by.

[Enter Le Beau.]

Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the princesses call for you.

Orie. I attend them with all respect and duty.
Sc. II.]

As You Like It.

[Enter Young man, have you challenged Charles the wrestler?
Ori. No, fair princess; he is the general challenger:
I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Col. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years. You have seen cruel proof of this man's strength: if you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your judgment, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.

Rosi. Do, young Sir; your reputation shall not therefore be misprised: we will make it our suit to the duke that the wrestling might not go forward.

Ori. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts; wherein I confess me much guilty, to deny so fair and excellent ladies any thing. But let your fair eyes and gentle wishes go with me to my trial: wherein if I be foiled, there is but one shame, that I am never generous; if killed, but one dead that is willing to be so: I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me; the world no injury, for in it I have nothing; only in the world I fill up a place which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.

Rosi. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.
Col. And mine, to eke out hers.
Rosi. Fare you well: pray heaven, I be deceived in you!
Col. Your heart's desires be with you!
Cha. Come, where is this young gallant, that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?
Ori. Ready, Sir; but his will hath in it a more modest working.

Duke F. You shall try but one fall.
Cha. No, I warrant your grace, you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded him from a first.

Ori. You mean to mock me after; you should not have mocked me before: but come your ways.

Rosi. Now Hercules be thy speed, young man!

Col. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg.

[Charles and Orlando wrestle.

Rosi. O excellent young man!
Col. If I had a handful of mine eye, I can tell who should down. [Charles is thrown. Shout.

Duke F. No more, no more.

Ori. Yes, I beseech your grace: I am not yet well breathed.

Duke F. How dost thou, Charles?
Le Beau. He cannot speak, my lord.
Duke F. Bear him away. [Charles is borne out.

What is thy name, young man?
Ori. Orlando, my liege; the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Bois.

Duke F. I would thou hadst been son to some man else:
The world esteem'd thy father honourable,
But I did find him still mine enemy:
Thou shouldst have better pleased me with this deed,
Hadst thou descended from another house.
But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth:
I would thou hadst told me of another father.

Le Beau. Were I my father, cos, would I do this?

Ori. I am more proud to be Sir Rowland's son, His youngest son;—and would not change that calling To be adopted heir to Frederick.

Rosi. My father lov'd Sir Rowland as his soul,
And all the world was of my father's mind:
I had I before known this young man his son,
I should have given him tears unto entreaties,
Ere he should thus have ventur'd.

Col. Gentle cousin,
Let us go thank him and encourage him:
My father's rough and envious disposition
Sticks me at heart.—Sir, you have well deserve'd:
If you do keep your promises in love
But justly, as you have exceeded all promise,
Your mistress shall be happy.

Ori. [Giving him a chain] Wear this for me, one out of suits with fortune,
That could give more, but that her hand lacks means.—
Shall we go, cos?
Col. Ay.—Fare you well, fair gentleman.

Ori. Can I not say, I thank you? My better parts Are all thrown down; and that which here stands Is but a quintain, a mere lifeless block.

Rosi. He calls us lack: my pride fell with my fortunes;
I'll ask him what he would.—Did you call, Sir?—
Sir, you have wrestled well, and overthrown
More than your enemies.

Col. Will you go, cos?
Rosi. Have with you.—Fare you well.

[Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.

Ori. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue? I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.
O poor Orlando, thou art overthrown!
Or Charles, or something weaker, masters thee.

Re-enter Le Beau.

Le Beau. Good Sir, I do in friendship counsel you
To leave this place. Albeit you have deserve'd High commendation, true applause, and love,
Yet such is now the duke's condition,
That he misconstrues all that you have done.
The duke is humorous: what he is, indeed,
More suits you to conceive, than I to speak of.
Ori. I thank you, Sir; and, pray you, tell me this,—
Which of the two was daughter of the duke,
That here was at the wrestling?

Le Beau. Neither his daughter, if we judge by manners;
But yet, indeed, the smaller is his daughter:
The other is daughter to the banish'd duke,
And here detain'd by her usurping uncle,
To keep his daughter company; whose loves
Are dearer than the natural bond of sisters.
But I can tell you, that of late this duke
Hath ta'en displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece,
Grounded upon no other argument,
But that the people praise her for her virtues,
And pity her for her good father's sake;
And, on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady
Will suddenly break forth.—Sir, fare you well:
Hereafter, in a better world than this,
I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.
AS YOU LIKE IT.

Orl. I rest much bounden to you: fare you well. [Exit Le Beau.

Thus must I from the smoke into the smoker;
From tyrant duke unto a tyrant brother:—
But heavenly Rosalind! [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Celia and Rosalind.

Cel. Why, cousin; why, Rosalind;—Cupid have mercy!—Not a word?

Ras. Not one to throw at a dog.

Cel. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away upon curs, throw some of them at me: come, lame me with reasons.

Ras. Then there were two cousins laid up, when the one should be lamed with reasons, and the other not without any.

Cel. But is this all for your father?

Ras. No, some of it for my father's child. O, how full of briers is this working-day world!

Cel. They are but burs, cousin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery: if we walk not in the trodden paths, our very pectocasts will catch them.

Ras. I could shake them off my coat: these burs are in my heart.

Cel. Hem them away.

Ras. I would try, if I could cry hem, and have him.

Cel. Come, come, wrestle with thy affections.

Ras. O, they take the part of a better wrestler than myself!

Cel. O, a good wish upon you! you will try in time, in spite of a fall. —But, turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest: is it possible, on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?

Ras. The duke my father lov'd his father dearly.

Cel. Doth it therefore ensue that you should love his son dearly? By this kind of chase, I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly; yet I hate not Orlando.

Ras. No, 'faith, hate him not, for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not? doth he not deserve well?

Ras. Let me love him for that; and do you love him because I do. —Look, here comes the duke.

Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Enter Duke FREDERICK and Lords.

Duke F. Mistress, dispatch you with your safest
And get you from our court. [Me, uncle, haste; [hasten,
Ras. You, cousin:
Within these ten days if that thou best found
So near our public court as twenty miles,
Thou diest for it.

Ras. I do beseech your grace,
Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me:
If with what I hold intelligence,
Or have acquaintance with mine own desires;
If that I do not dream, or be not frantic,
(As I do trust I am not) then, dear uncle,
Never so much as in a thought unborn
Did I offend your highness.

Duke F. Thus do all traitors:
If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace itself:—
Let it suffice thee, that I trust thee not.

Ras. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor:
Tell me whereon the likelihood depends.

Duke F. Thou art thy father's daughter; there's enough.

Ras. So was I when your highness took his duke—
So was I when your highness banish'd him. [dom;
Treason is not inherited, my lord;
Or, if we did derive it from our friends,
What's that to me? my father was no traitor:
Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much,
To think my poverty is treacherous.

Cel. Dear sovereign, hear me speak.

Duke F. Ay, Celia; we stay'd her for your sake,
Else had she with her father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then entreat to have her stay;
It was your pleasure, and your own remorse:
I was too young that time to value her;
But now I know her: if she be a traitor,
Why so am I; we still have slept together,
Rose at an instant, learn'd, play'd, eat together;
And wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupled and inseparable.

Duke F. She is too subtle for thee; and her
Her very silence, and her patience, [smoothness,
Speak to the people, and they pity her.
Thou art a fool: she robs thee of thy name;
And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more virtuous,
When she is gone. Then, open not thy lips:
Firm and irrevocable is my doom
Which I have pass'd upon her;—she is banish'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence, then, on me, my
I cannot live out of her company.
Liege: [liege:
Duke F. You are a fool.—You, niece, provide yourself:
If you out-stay the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatness of my word, you die.

[Exeunt Duke FREDERICK and Lords.

Cel. O my poor Rosalind! whither wilt thou go?
Wilt thou change fathers? I will give thee mine.
I charge thee, be not thou more grieved than I am.
Ras. I have more cause.

Cel. Thou hast not, cousin;
Pr'ythee, be cheerful: know'st thou not, the duke
Hath banish'd me, his daughter?

Ras. That he hath not.

Cel. No? hath not? Rosalind lacks, then, the love
Which thine own thee, and thou and I am one.
Shall we be bounder'd? shall we part, sweet girl? No: let my father seek another heir.
Therefore devise with me how we may fly,
Whither to go, and what to bear with us;
And do not seek to take your change upon you,
To bear your griefs yourself, and leave me out;
For, by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale,
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.

Ras. Why, whither shall we go?

Cel. To seek my uncle
In the forest of Arden.

Ras. Alas, what danger will it be to us,
Maid as we are, to travel forth so far?
Beauty provokedst thieves sooner than gold.

Cel. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire,
And with a kind of amber smirch my face;
The like do you: so shall we pass along,
And never stir assailants.

Ras. Were it not better,
Because that I am more than common tall,
That I did suit me all points like a man?
AS YOU LIKE IT.

A gallant curle-ax upon my thigh,
A coar-spear in my hand; and (in my heart)
Lie there what hidden woman's fear there will,
We'll have a swashing and a martial outside;
As many other mannish cowards have,
That do outface it with their semblances.

"Ce'd. What shall I call thee when thou art a man?
Rau. I'll have no worse a name than Loe's own
And therefore look you call me Gany mede. [page; But what will you be call'd?"

"Ce'd. Something that hath a reference to my state:
No longer Celia, but Alienia.

"Lo. Would it were in my power, if we assay'd to steal
The clowns foot out of your father's court?
Would he not be a comfort to our travel?

"Ce'd. He'll go along o'er the wide world with me;
Let's choose a man to woo him. Let's away,
And get our jewels and our wealth together;
Devise the fittest time and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made
After my flight. Now go we in content
To liberty, and not to banishment. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Forest of Arden.

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, and other Lords, in the dress of Foresters.

Duke S. Now, my co-mates and brothers in exile,
Hath not old custom made this life more sweet
Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
More free from peril than the envyous court?
I hear we but the penalty of Adam,
The seasons' difference; as, the icy fang
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind,
Which, when it bites and blows upon my body,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile, and say,
This is no slattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly persuade me what I am.
Sweet are the uses of adversity;
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;
And this our exile, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.
Ami. I would not change it. Happy is your grace,
That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a style.

Duke S. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me, the poor dappled fools,
Being nativeburghers of this desert city,
Should, in their own confines, with forked heads
Have their round haunches gored.

1 Lord. Indeed, my lord:
The melancholy Jaques grieves at that;
An in wait kind, swears you do more usurp
Than doth your brother that hath banished you,
To-day my lord of Amiens and myself
Did steal behind him, as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that crawls along this wood:
To the which place a poor sequester'd stag,
That from the hunters' aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish: and, indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal had forth such groans,
That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat
Almost to bursting; and the big round tears
Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase: and thus the hairy fool,
Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting it with tears.

Duke S. But what said Jaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?
1 Lord. O, yes, into a thousand similes.
First, for his weeping into the needless stream;
"Poor deer," quoth he, "thou mak'st a testament
As wordlings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much:" then, being there
Left and abandon'd of his velvet friends: [alone,
"'Tis right," quoth he; "thus misery doth part
The flux of company." anon, a careless herd,
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him,
And never stays to greet him; "Ay," quoth Jaques,
"Sweep on, you fat and greedy citizens;
'Tis just the fashion: wherfore do you look Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?"
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The body of the country, city, court,
Yen, and of this our life: swearing that we
Are mere usurers, tyrants, and what's worse,
To fright the animals, and to kill them up,
In their assign'd and native dwelling-place.

Duke S. And did you leave him in this contemplation?
2 Lord. We did, my lord, weeping and commenting upon the sobbing deer. [log

Duke S. Show me the place:
I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

2 Lord. I'll bring you to him straight. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke Frederick, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be: some villains of my court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.
3 Lord. I cannot find of any that did see her.
The ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her a-bed; and, in the morning early,
They found the bed untreasur'd of her mistress.
2 Lord. My lord, the reynish clown, at whom so oft
Your grace was wont to laugh, is also missing.
Hesperia, the princess' gentlewoman,
Confesses that she secretly o'er-heard
Your daughter and her cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the wrestler,
That did but lately foil the sinewy Charles;
And she believes, wherever they are gone,
That youth is surely in their company.

Duke F. Send to his brother; fetch that gallant
If he be absent, bring his brother to me; [hither
I'll make him find him: do this suddenly;
And let not search and inquisition quail
To bring again these foolish runaways. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Before Oliver's House.

Enter Orlando and Adam, meeting.

Orl. Who's there?
Adam. What, my young master?—O my gentle
O my sweet master!—O you memory [master!
Of old Sir Rowland! Why, what make you here?
Why are you virtuous? Why do people love you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant? Why would you be so fond to overcome The bony priser of the humorous duke? Your praise is come too swiftly home before you. Know you not, master, to some kind of men Their graces serve them but as enemies? No more do yours: your virtues, gentle master, Are sanctified and holy tutors to you. O, what a world is this, when what is comely Envenoms him that bears it!

O, why, what's the matter?

Adam. No unhappy youth, come not within these doors! within this roof! The enemy of all your graces lives: Your brother—I, no, brother; yet the son— Yet not the son—I will not call him son. Of him I was about to call his father. He heard your praises; and this night he means To burn the lodging where you use to lie, And you within it: if he fail of that, He will have other means to cut you off: I overheard him, and his practices. This is no place; this house is but a butchery: Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it. Orl. Why, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have me go? Adam. No matter whither, so you come not here. Orl. What! wouldst thou have me go and beg my food? Or with a base and boisterous sword enforce A thievish living on the common road? This I must do, or know not what to do: Yet this I will not do, do how I can; I rather will subject me to the malice Of a diverted blood, and bloody brother. Adam. But do not so. I have five hundred crowns, The thievish hire I saw'd under your father, Which I did store, to be my forster-nurse When service should in my old limbs lie lame, And unregarded age in corners thrown: Take that; and He that doth the ravens feed, Yes, providently eaters for the sparrow, Be comfort to my age! Here is the gold; All this I give you. Let me be your servant: Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty; For in my youth I never did apply Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood; Nor did not with unashful forehead woo The means of weakness and debility; Therefore my body is as lusty withal Frosty, but kindly: let me go with you; I'll do the service of a younger man In all your business and necessities. Orl. O good old man, how well in thee appears The constant service of the antique world, When service swet for duty, not for meed! Thou art not for the fashion of these times, Where none will sweat but for promotion; And having that, do choke their service up Even with the having it is not so with thee. But, poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree, That cannot so much as a blossom yield, In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry, But come thy ways; we'll go along together; And ere we have thy youthful wages spent, We'll light upon some settled low condition.

Adam. Master, go on, and I will follow thee, To the last gasp, with truth and loyalty. From seventeen years, till now almost fourscore,

Here lived I, but now live here no more. At seventeen years many their fortunes seek; But at fourscore it is too late a week: Yet fortune cannot recompense me better, Than to die well, and not my master's debtor. [Exeunt.]

SENE IV. — The Forest of Arden.

Enter Rosalind disguised as a youth, Celia like a shepherdess, and Touchstone.

Ros. O Jupiter! how weary are my spirits! Touch. I care not for my spirits, if my legs were not weary. Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel, and to cry like a woman; but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doublet and hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat: therefore, courage, good Aliena. Celf. I pray you, bear with me; I can go no farther.

Touch. For my part, I had rather bear with you, than bear you: yet I should bear no cross, if I did bear you; for I think you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the forest of Arden. Touch. Ay, now am I in Arden; the more fool I; when I was at home, I was in a better place: but travellers must be content.

Ros. Ay, be so, good Touchstone. Look you, who comes here; a young man, and an old, in solemn talk.

Enter Corin and Silvius.

Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you still.

Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her!

Cor. I partly guess; for I have lov'd ere now.

Sil. No, Corin, being old, thou canst not guess; Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow: But if thy love were ever like to mine, (As sure I think did never man love so,) How many actions most ridiculous Hast thou been drawn to by thy fancy? Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten. Sil. O, thou didst then ne'er love so heartily! If thou remember'st not the slightest folly That ever love did make thee run into, Thou hast not lov'd: Or if thou hast not sat, as I do now, Wearying thy heater in thy mistress' praise, Thou hast not lov'd:

Cor. Or if thou hast not broke from company Abruptly, as my passion now makes me, Thou hast not lov'd.—O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe! [Exit.

Ros. Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound, I have by hard adventure found mine own. Touch. And I mine. I remember, when I was in love, I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming a-night to Jane Smile: and I remember the kissing of her batlet, and the cow's dugs that her pretty chopp'd hands had milked: and I remember the wooling of a peacold instead of her; from whom I took two cods, and giving her them again, said with weeping tear, 'Wear these for my sake.' We, that are true lovers, run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal in folly.

Ros. Thou speakest wiser than thou art ware of.
SCENE VI.

AS YOU LIKE IT.

199

Touch. Nay, I shall ne'er be 'ware of mine own
Till I break my shins against it.

Ros. Jove! this shepherd's passion
Is much upon my fashion.

Touch. And mine; but it grows something stale with me.

Col. I pray you, one of you question yond' man,
If he for gold will give us any food:
I faint almost to death.

Touch. Hola, you clown!

Ros. Peace, fool: he's not thy kinsman.

Cor. Who calls?

Touch. Your betters, Sir.

Cor. Else are they very wreathed.

Ros. Peace, I say.—

Good even to you, friend.

Cor. And to you, gentle Sir, and to you all.

Ros. I pr'ythee, shepherd, if that love or gold
Can in this desert place buy entertainment,
Bring us where we may rest ourselves and feed:
Here's a young maid with travel much oppress'd,
And faints for succour.

Cor. Fair Sir, I pity her, and wish, for her sake more than for mine own,
My fortunes were more able to relieve her;
But I am shepherd to another man,
And do not shear the fleeces that I graze:
My master is of curish disposition,
And little recks to find the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality:
Besides, his cote, his flocks, and bounds of feed,
Are now on sale; and at our sheeppote now,
By reason of his absence, there is nothing
That you will feed on; but what is, come see,
And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?

Cor. That young swain that you saw here but erewhile,
That little cares for buying any thing.

Ros. Pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have for pay of it us.

Col. And we will mend thy wages. I like this
And willingly could waste my time in it.

Cor. Assuredly, the thing is to be sold.
Go with me: if you like, upon report,
The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,
I will your very faithful feeder be,
And buy it with your gold right suddenly.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter AMIENS, JAQUES, and others.

SONG.

Ami. Under the Greenwood tree
Who loves to sit with me
And turn his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see
The enemy.
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. More, more, I pr'ythee, more.
Ami. It will make you melancholy, monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. I thank it. More, I pr'ythee, more. I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs. More, I pr'ythee, more.

Ami. My voice is ragged: I know I cannot please you.

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me; I do desire you to sing. Come, more; another stanza: call you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing?

Ami. More at your request, than to please myself.

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'll thank you; but that they call compliment is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I have given him a penny, and he renders me the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sirs, cover the while; the duke will drink under this tree.—He hath been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid him. He is too disputable for my company: I think of as many matters as he; but I give heaven thanks, and make no boast of them. Come, warble, come.

[All together here.]

SONG.

Who doth ambition shun,
And loves to live but for the sun,
Seeking the food he eats,
And pleas'd with what he gets.
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. I'll give you a verse to this note, that I made yesterday in despite of my invention.

Ami. And I'll sing it.

Jaq. Thus it goes:

If it do come to pass,
That any man turn ass,
Leaving his wealth and ease,
A stubborn will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame:
Here shall he see
Gross fools as he,
An if he will come to me.

Ami. What's that "ducdame?"

Jaq. 'Tis a kind of invocation, to call fools into a circle. I'll go sleep, if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.

Ami. And I'll go seek the duke: his banquet is prepared.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE VI.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no farther: O, I die for food! Here lie I down, and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master.

Orl. Why, how now, Adam? no greater heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little; cheer thyself a little. If this uncouth forest yield any thing savage, I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers. For my sake be comfortable; hold death awhile at the arm's end: I will here be with thee presently; and if I bring thee not something to eat, I will give thee leave to die: but if thou diest before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour. Well said! thou lookest cheerily; and I'll be with thee quickly.—Yet thou liest in the blank air; come, I will bear thee to some shelter; and thou shalt not die for lack of a dinner, if there live any thing in this desert. Cheerly, good Adam.  [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Another part of the Forest. The same as Scene V.

A Table set out. Enter Duke, Senior, Amens, Lords, and others.

Duke S. I think he be transform’d into a beast;
For I can no where find him like a man.
1 Lord. My lord, he is but even now gone hence:
Here was he merry, hearing of a song.

Duke S. If he, compact of jars, grow musical,
We shall have shortly discard in the spheres.
Go, seek him: tell him I would speak with him.

1 Lord. He saves my labour by his own approach.

Enter Jacks.

Duke S. Why, how now, monsieur! what a life
is this,
That your poor friends must woo your company!
What, you look merrily!

Jag. A fool, a fool!—I met a fool i’ the forest,
A motley fool;—a miserable world!
As I do live by food, I met a fool;
Who laid him down and bask’d him in the sun,
And rail’d on lady Fortune in good terms,
In good set terms,—and yet a motley fool. [he
"Good-morrow, fool," quoth I. "No, Sir," quoth
"Call me not fool, till heaven hath sent me fortune."
And then he drew a sable from his poke,
And, looking on it with lack-lustre eye,
Says very wisely, "It is ten o’clock:
Thus may we see:" quoth he, "how the world wags:
’Tis but an hour ago since it was nine;
And after ong more ’twill be eleven;
And, so, from hour to hour, we ripe and ripe,
And then, from hour to hour, we rot and rot;
And thereby hangs a tale." When I did hear
The motley fool thus moral on the time,
My lungs began to crow like chanteleer,
That fools should be so deep contemplative;
And I did laugh, sans intermission,
An hour by his dial.—O noble fool!
A worthy fool!—Motley’s the only wear.

Duke S. What fool is this?

Jag. O worthy fool!—One that hath been a courtier;
And says, If ladies be but young and fair,
They have the gift to know it: and in his brain,—
Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit
After a voyage,—he hath strange places cram’d
With observation, which he vents in Mangled forms.—O that I were a fool!
I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Duke S. Thou shalt have one.

Jag. Provided, that you weed your better judgments
Of all opinion that grows rank in them.
That I am wise. I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind,
To blow on whom I please; for so fools have:
And they that are most galled with my folly,
They must must laugh. And why, Sir, must they so?
The why is plain as to the parish church;
He, that a fool doth very wisely hit.
Doth foolishly, although he smart,
Not to seem senseless of the bob: if not,
The wise man’s folly is anatom’d,
Even by the squandr’ing glance of the fool.
Invest me in my motley; give me leave
To speak my mind, and I will through and through Cleanse the foul body of th’ infected world,
If they will patiently receive my medicine. [do.

Duke S. Fie on thee! I can tell what thou wouldst

Jag. What, for a counter, would I do, but good?

Duke S. Most mischievous fool sin, in chiding sin:
For thou thyself hast been a libertine,
As sensual as the brutish sting itself;
And all th’ embossed sores, and healed evils,
That thou with licence of free foot hast caught,
Wouldst thou disgrace into the general world.

Jag. Why, who cries out on pride,
That can therein tax any private party?
Doth it not flow as huggly as the sea,
Till that the weary very means do ebb?
What woman in the city do I name,
When that I say, the city-woman bears
The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders?
Who can come in, and say that I mean her,
When such a one as she, such is her neighbour?
Or what is he of basest function,
That says his bravery is not on my cost,
(Thinking that I mean him,) but therein suits
His folly to the mettle of my speech?
There then: how then? what then? Let me see wherein
My tongue hath wrong’d him: if it do him right,
Then he hath wrong’d himself; if he be free,
Why then, my taxing like a wild goose flies,
Unclaim’d of any man.—But who comes here?

Enter Orlando, with his sword drawn.

Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jag. Why, I have eat none yet.

Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv’d.

Jag. Of what kind should this cook come of?

Duke S. Art thou thus bolden’d, man, by thy distress,
Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
That in civility thou seem’st so empty?

Orl. You touch’d my vein at first: the thorny point
Of bare distress hath ta’en from me the show
Of smooth civility: yet I am inland bred,
And know some nurture. But forbear, I say:
He dies, that touches any of this fruit,
Till I and my affairs are answered.

Jag. An you will not be answered with reason,
I must die.

Duke S. What would you have? Your gentleness shall force,
More than your force move us to gentleness.

Orl. I almost die for food; and let me have to our table.

Orl. Speak you so gently! Pardon me, I pray
you:
I thought that all things had been savage here;
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern commandment. But what’er you are,
That in this desert inaccessible,
Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time;
If ever you have look’d on better days,
If ever been where bells have knoll’d to church,
If ever sat at any good man’s feast,
If ever from your eye-lids wip’d a tear,
And know what 'tis to pity, and be pitied,—
Let gentleness my strong enforcement be:
In the which hope, I blush, and hide my sword.

Duke S. True is it that we have seen better days,
And have with holy bell been knoll'd to church,
And sat at good men's feasts, and wip'd our eyes
Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd:
And therefore sit you down in gentleness,
And take upon command what help we have,
That to your wantyng may be minister'd.

Orl. Then, but forbear your food a little while,
Whiles, like a doe, I go to find my fawn,
And give it food. There is an old poor man,
Who after me hath many a weary step,
Limp'd in pure love: till he be first suffic'd.—
Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger,—
I will not touch a bit.

Duke S. Go find him out,
And we will nothing waste till you return.

Orl. I thank ye; and be bless'd for your good comfort! [Exit.

Duke S. Thou seest, we are not all alone unhaply:
This wide and universal theatre
Presents more woful pagesents, than the scene
Wherin we play in.

Jaq. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
Then the whining school-boy, with his satchel,
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woful ballad
Made to his mistress' eye-brow. Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lin'd,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side;
His youthful hose, well sav'd, a world too wide;
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childhood, and mere oblivion,—
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans style, sans every thing.

Re-enter Orlando, with Adam.

Duke S. Welcome. Set down your vencarable
And let him feed. [Burdlen, Orl. Adan. So had you need:—
I scarce can speak to thank you for myself. [you
Duke S. Welcome; fall to: I will not trouble
As yet, to question you about your fortunes.—
Give us some music; and, good cousin, sing.

SONG.

Ami. Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind
As man's ingratitude;

thy tooth is not so keen,
Because thou art not seen.
Although thy breath be rude.
Heigh, ho! sing, heigh, ho! unto the green holly:
Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly:
Then, heigh, heigh! the holy!
This life is most jolly.
Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
That dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot:
Thou art the master of the waters warp,
Thy ring is not so sharp,
As friend remember'd not.
Heigh, ho! sing, &c.

Duke S. If that you were the good Sir Rowland's son,—
As you have whisper'd faithfully you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witness,
Most truly limp'd and living in your face,—
Ie truly welcome hither: I am the duke,
That lov'd your father: the residue of your fortune,
Go to my cave and tell me.—Good old man,
Thou art right welcome as thy master is.—
Support him by the arm.—Give me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes understand. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke Frederick, Oliver, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Not see him since! Sir, Sir, that cannot be:
But were I not the better part made mercy,
I should not seek an absent argument
Of my revenge, thou present. But look to it: Find out thy brother, wheresoe'er he is;
Seek him with candle; bring him, dead or living,
Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more To seek a living in our territory.
Thy lands, and all things that thou dost call thine, Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands,
Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth Of what we think against thee.
Oli. O that your highness knew my heart in this! I never lov'd my brother in my life.

Duke F. More villain thou.—Well, push him out of doors;
And let my officers of such a nature Make an extent upon his house and lands; Do this expeditiously, and turn him going. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Forest of ARDEN.

Enter Orlando, with a paper.

Orl. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love;
And thou, thrice crown'd queen of night, survey
With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above,
Thy huntsmen' name, that my full life doth away.
Rosalind! these trees shall be my books,
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character;
That every eye, which in this forest looks,
Shall see thy virtue witness'd every where.
Run, run, Orlando; carve on every tree
The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she. [Exit.

Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life, master Touchstone?
Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well; but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now, in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a sparse life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

Cor. No more but that I know, the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content, is without three good friends; that the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn; that good pasture makes fat sheep; and that a great cause of the night, is lack of the sun; that he that hath learned no wit by nature nor art, may complain of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher. Wast ever in court, shepherd?

Cor. No, truly.

Touch. Then thou art damned.

Cor. Nay, I hope.—Touch. Truly, thou art damned; like an ill-roasted egg, all on one side.

Cor. For not being at court? Your reason.

Touch. Why, if thou never wast at court, thou never sawest good manners; if thou never sawest good manners, then thy manners must be wicked; and wickedness is sin, and sin is damnation. Thou art in a parlous state, shepherd.

Cor. Not a whit, Touchstone: those that are good manners at the court, are as ridiculous in the country, as the behaviour of the country, is most mockable at the court. You told me you salute not at the court, but you kiss your hands: that courtesy would be uncleanly, if courtiers were shepherds.

Touch. Instance, briefly; come, instance.

Cor. Why, we are still handling our ewes; and their fells, you know, are greasy.

Touch. Why, do not your courtier's hands sweat? and is not the grease of a mutton as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow. A better instance, I say; come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Touch. Your lips will feel them the sooner. Shallower, again. A more sounder instance; come.

Cor. And they are often tarred over with the surgery of our sheep; and would you have us kiss tar? The courtier's hands are perfumed with civet.

Touch. Most shallow man! Thou worms-meat, in respect of a good piece of flesh, indeed!—Learn of the wise, and perdend: civet is of a baser birth than tar,—the very uncleanly flux of a cat. Mend the instance, shepherd.

Cor. You have too courtely a wit for me: I'll rest.

Cor. Sir, I am a true labourer: I earn that I eat, get that I wear; owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness; glad of other men's good, content with my harm; and the greatest of my pride is, to see my ewes graze, and my lambs suck.

Touch. That is another simple sin in you; to bring the ewes and the rams together, and to offer to get your living by the copulation of cattle; to be baw’d to a bell-wether; and to betray a she-lamb of a twelvemonth, to a crooked-pated, old, cackle-dam, out of all reasonable match. If thou be'st not damned for this, the devil himself will have no shepherds; I cannot see else how thou shouldest escape.

Cor. Here comes young master Ganymede, my new mistress's brother.

Enter ROSALIND, reading a paper.

Ros. [Reads.]

"From the east to western Ind,
No jewel is like Rosalind.
Her worth, being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
All the pictures, fairest lie'd,
Are but black to Rosalind.
Let no face be kept in mind,
By the fair of Rosalind."

Touch. I'll rhyme you so, eight years together, dinners, and suppers, and sleeping hours excepted: it is the right butter-women's rank to market.

Ros. Out, fool!

Touch. For a taste:—

If a hart do lack a hind,
Let him seek out Rosalind.
If the cat will after kind,
So, be sure, will Rosalind.
Winter-garments must be lin'd,
So must slender Rosalind.
They that reap must sheaf and bind;
Then to cart with Rosalind.
Sweetest nut hath sourest rind,
Such a nut is Rosalind.
He that sweetest rose will find,
Must find love's prick, and Rosalind.

This is the very false gallop of verses: why do you infect yourself with them?

Ros. Peace, you dull fool! I found them on a tree.

Touch. Truly, the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graft it with you, and then I shall graft it with a medlar: then it will be the earliest fruit 'tis the country; for you'll be rotten e'er you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

Touch. You have said; but whether wisely or no, let the forest judge.

Enter CELIA, reading a paper.

Ros. Peace! Here comes my sister, reading: stand aside.

Cel. [Reads.]

"Why should this a desert be?
For it is unpopped! No;
Tongues I'll hang on every tree,
That shall civil sayings show:
Some, how brief the life of man,
Roes his earring pilgrimag,
That the stretching of a span
Buckles in his sun of age;
Some, of violated vows
'Twixt the souls of friend and friend:
But upon the fairest bought,
Or at every sentence' end,
Will I Rosalinda write.
Teaching all that read, to know
The quintessence of every sprite
Heaven would in little show,
Therefore heaven Nature charge'd
That one body should be fild
AS YOU LIKE IT.

SCENE II.

With all graces wide enlarg'd:
Nature presently distil'd
Helen's cheek, but not her heart;
Cleopatra's majesty;
Antonia's better part;
Sad Lucullus' modesty.
Thus Rosalind of many parts
By heavenly synod was deviv'd;
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts.
To have the teares dearest priz'd.
Heaven would that she these gifts should have,
And I to live and die her slave.

Rosi. O most gentle Jupiter!—what tedious homily
Of love have you wearied your parioners withal, and never cried, "Have patience, good people!"

Cel. How now! back, friends—shepherd, go off a little—go with him, sirrah.

Touch. Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrup and scripago.

[Exit CORIN and TOUCHSTONE.

Cel. Didst thou hear these verses?

Rosi. O, yes, I heard them all, and more too; for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter: the feet might bear the verses.

Rosi. Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear without wondering, how thy name should be hang'd and carved upon those trees?

Rosi. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder, before you came; for look here what I found on a palm-tree:—I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagonas' time, that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you who hath done this?

Rosi. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck. Change you colour?

Rosi. I pr'lythe, who?

Cel. O lord, lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes, and so encounter.

Rosi. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it possible?

Rosi. Nay, I pr'lythe now, with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! and yet again wonderful, and after that,
out of all whooping!

Rosi. Good my complexion! dost thou think, though I am caprison'd like a man, I have a doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South sea of discovery; I pr'lythe, tell me who is it quickly, and speak apace. I would thou couldst stammer, thou might'st pour this concealed man out of thy mouth, as wine comes out drop of a narrow-mouth'd bottle,—either too much at once, or none at all. I pr'lythe, take the cork out of thy mouth, that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.

Rosi. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat, or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Rosi. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful: let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tripped up the wrestler's heels and your heart, both, in an instant.

Rosi. Nay, but the devil take mocking: speak and bow, and true maid.

Cel. I faith, coz, 'tis he.

Rosi. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Rosi. Alas the day! what shall I do with my doubt and hose?—What did he, when thou sawest him? What said he? How looked he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with th'ee? and when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth first; 'tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size. To say ay and no to these particulars, is more than to answer in a catechism.

Rosi. But doth he know that I am in this forest, and in man's apparel? Looks he as freshly as he did the day he wrestled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atoms, as to resolve the propositions of a lover;—but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with good observance.
I found him under a tree, like a dropp'd acorn.

Rosi. It may well be call'd Jove's tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good madam.

Rosi. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he, stretch'd along like a wounded knight.

Rosi. Though it be pity to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry, holla! to thy tongue, I pr'lythe; it curvets unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a hunter.

Rosi. O, ominous! he comes to kill my heart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burden:
thou bringest me out of tune.

Rosi. Do you not know I am a woman? when I think, I must speak. Sweet, say on.

Cel. You bring me out.—Soft! comes he not here?

Rosi. 'Tis he: slink by, and note him.

[ROSALIND and CELIA retire.

Enter ORLANDO and JAQUES.

Jaq. I thank you for your company; but, good faith, I had as lief have been myself alone.

Orl. And so had I; but yet, for fashion's sake, I thank you too for your society.

Jaq. God be wi' you, let's meet as little as we can.

Orl. I do desire we may be better strangers.

Jaq. I pray you, mar no more trees with writing love-songs in their barks.

Orl. I pray you, mar no more of my verses with reading them ill-favouredly.

Jaq. Rosalind is your love's name?

Orl. Yes, just.

Jaq. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you when she was christened.

Jaq. What stature is she of?

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Jaq. You are full of pretty answers. Have you not been acquainted with goldsmiths' wives, and con'd them out of rings?

Orl. Not so; but I answer you right painted cloth, from whence you have studied your questions.
You have a nimble wit: I think twas made of Atalanta's heels. Will you sit down with me? and we two will rail against our mistress the world, and all our miseries.

I will chide no breather in the world but myself, against whom I know most faults.

The worst fault you have is to be in love.

'Tis a fault I will not change for your best virtue. I am weary of you.

By my troth, I was seeking for a fool when I found you.

He is drowned in the brook: look but in, and you shall see him.

There shall I see mine own figure.

Which I take to be either a fool, or a cyphe.

I'll tarry no longer with you: farewell, good signior Love.

I am glad of your departure: adieu, good monsieur Melancholy.

[Exit JAQUES. ROSALIND and CELIA come forward.]

[Aside to CELIA.] I will speak to him like a saucy lady, and under that habil play the knave with him. [To him.] Do you hear, forester?

Very well: what would you?

Pray you, what is 't o'clock?

You should ask me, what time o'clock: there's no clock in the forest.

Then there is no true lover in the forest; else sighing every minute, and groaning every hour, would detect the lazy foot of Time as well as a clock.

And why not the swift foot of Time? had not that been as proper

By no means, Sir. Time travels in divers paces with divers persons: I'll tell you who Time ambles withal, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

I pr'ythee, who doth he trot withal?

Marry, he trots hard with a young maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemnized: if the interim be but a snemnight, Time's pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven years.

Who ambles Time withal?

By no means, Sir. With a thief to the gallows; for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Who stays it still withal?

With lawyers in the vacation; for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how Time moves.

Where dwell you, pretty youth?

With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Are you native of this place?

As the coney, that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

I have been told so of many: but indeed an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an inland man; one that knew courtship too well, for there he fell in love. I have heard him read many lectures against it; and I thank God, I am not a woman, to be touched with so many giddy offences, as he hath generally taxed their whole sex withal.

Can you remember any of the principal evils that he laid to the charge of women?

There were none principal: they were all like one another, as half-pence are; every one fault seeming monstrous, till his fellow fault came to match it.

I pray thee, recount some of them.

No, I will not cast away my physic, but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs odes upon hawthorns, and elegies on brambles; all, forsooth, defying the name of Rosalind: if I could meet that fancy-monger, I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotient of love upon him.

I am he that is so love-shaked. I pray you, tell me your remedy.

There is none of my uncle's marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love; in which cage of rushes I am sure you are not prisoner.

What were his marks?

A lean cheek,—which you have not; a blue eye, and sunken,—which you have not; an unquenchable spirit,—which you have not;—a beard neglected,—which you have not;—but I pardon you for that; for, simply, your having in beard is a younger brother's revenue:—then, your hose should be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbounded, your sleeve unbuckled, your shoe untied, and every thing about you demonstrating a careless dissolation; but you are no such man,—you are rather point-device in your accoutrements, as loving yourself, than seeming the lover of any other.

Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Me believe it! you may as soon make her that you love believe it; which, I warrant, she is as apter to the thought as you; for the one seeks easily, because he cannot study; and the other lives merrily, because he feels no pain: the one lacking the burden of lean and wasteful learning; the other knowing no burden of heavy tedious penury: these Time ambles withal.

Who doth he gallop withal?

With a thief to the gallows; for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Who stays it still withal?

With lawyers in the vacation; for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how Time moves.

Where dwell you, pretty youth?

With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Are you native of this place?

As the coney, that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

I have been told so of many: but indeed every passion something, and for no passion truly any thing. As men are, for the most part, cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loathe him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drave my suitor from his mad humour of love, to a living humour of madness; which was, to forswear the whole stream of the world, and to live in a nook, merely monastic. And thus I cured him; and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orol. I would not be cured, youth.

Res. I would care you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my cote, and woo me.

Orol. Now, by the faith of my love, I will: tell me where it is.

Res. Go with me to it, and I'll show it you: and, by the way, you shall tell me where in the forest you live. Will you go?

Orol. With all my heart, good youth.

Res. Nay, you must call me Rosalind.—Come, sister, will you go? [Exeunt.

Scene III.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey; Jaques behind.

Touch. Come apace, good Audrey: I will fetch up your goats, Audrey. And how, Audrey? am I the man yet? Dost my simple feature content you? And your features! Lord warrant us! what features?

Touch. I am here with thee and thy goats, as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.

[Aside.] O knowledge ill-inherited! worse than love in a thatch'd house!

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child, understanding, it strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room.—Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what poetical is: is it honest in deed and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly: for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry; and what they swear in poetry, may be said, as lovers, they do feign.

Aud. Do you wish, then, that the gods had made me poetical?

Touch. I do, truly; for thou swearest to me thou art honest: now, if thou wert a poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest?

Touch. No, truly, unless thou wert hard-favour'd; for honesty coupled to beauty, is to have honey a sauce to sugar.

[Aside.] A material fool!

Aud. Well, I am not fair; and therefore I pray the gods make me honest.

Touch. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut, were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I am foul.

Touch. Well, praised be the gods for thy foulness! sluttishness may come hereafter. But be it as it may be, I will marry thee: and to that end, I have been with Sir Oliver Martext, the vicar of the next village; who hath promised to meet me in this place of the forest, and to couple us.

[Aside.] I would fain see this meeting.

Aud. Well, the gods give us joy!

Touch. Amen. A man may, if be were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly but hornbeasts. But what thought? Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said,—many a man knows no end of his goods: right; many a man has good horns, and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife: 'tis none of his own getting. Horns! Even so:—Poor men alone!—No, no; the noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal. Is the single man therefore blessed? No: as a walled town is more worthier than a village, so is the forehead of a married man more honourable than the bare brow of a bachelor; and by how much defence is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want.—Here comes Sir Oliver.—

Enter Sir Oliver Martext.

Sir Oliver Martext, you are well met: will you dispatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel?

Sir Oli. Is there none here to give the woman?

Touch. I will not take her gift of any man.

Sir Oli. Truly, she must be given, or the marriage is not lawful.

[Coming forward.] Proceed, proceed: I'll give her.

Touch. Good even, good master What-ye-call'! how do you, Sir? You are very well met: God 'ild you for your last company: I am very glad to see you:—even a toy in hand here, Sir,—pray be covered.

[Aside.] Will you be married, motley?

Touch. As the ox hath his bow, Sir, the horse his carb, and the falcon her bells, so man hath his desires; and as pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibbling.

[Aside.] And will you, being a man of your breeding, be married under a bush, like a beggar? Get you to church, and have a good priest that can tell you what marriage is: this fellow will but join you together as they join wainscot; then one of you will prove a shrunk panel, and like green timber, warp, warp.

Touch. [Aside.] I am not in the mind but I were better to be married of him than of another: for he is not like to marry me well; and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

[Aside. Go thou with me, and let me counsel thee.

Touch. Come, sweet Audrey: We must be married, or we must live in bawdry. Farewell, good master Oliver;—not,—

O sweet Oliver, O brave Oliver, Leave me not behind thee—

but,—

Wend away, Bonge, I say, I will not to wedding with thee.

[Exeunt Touchstone, Jaques, and Audrey.

Sir Oli. 'Tis no matter: no'er a fantastical knave of them all shall flout me out of my calling. [Exit.
Scene IV.—A part of the Forest. Before a Cottage.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. Never talk to me; I will weep.

Cei. Do, I pray thee; but yet have the grace to consider, that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?

Cei. As good cause as one would desire; therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair is of the dissembling colour.

Cei. Something browner than Judas’s: marry, his kisses are Judas’s own children.

Ros. I’m faith, his hair is of a good colour.

Cei. An excellent colour: your chestnut was ever the only colour.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of his bread.

Cei. He hath bought a pair of cast lips of Diana: a nun of winter’s sisterhood kisses not more religiously; the very ice of chastity is in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Cei. Nay, certainly, there is no truth in him.

Ros. Do you think so?

Cei. Yes; I think he is not a pick-purse, nor a horse-stealer; but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet, or a worm-eaten nut.

Ros. Not true in love?

Cei. Yes, when he is in; but I think he is not in.

Ros. You have heard him swear downright, he was.

Cei. Was” is not “is”: besides, the oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confirners of false reckonings. He attends here in the forest on the duke your father.

Ros. I met the duke yesternight, and had much question with him. He asked me, of what parent-age I was; I told him, of as good as he; so he laughed, and let me go. But what talk we of fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando?

Cei. O, that’s a brave man! he writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite traverse, athwart the heart of his lover; as a puny litter, that spurs his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose: but all’s brave, that youth mounts, and folly guides.—Who comes here?

Enter Corin.

Cor. Mistress, and master, you have oft enquir’d After the shepherd that complain’d of love, Who you saw sitting by me on the turf, Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess That was his mistress.

Cei. Well, and what of him?

Cor. If you will see a pageant truly play’d, Between the pale complexion of true love, And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain, Go hence a little, and I shall conduct you, If you will mark it.

Ros. O, come, let us remove: The sight of lovers feedeth those in love.— Bring us to this sight, and you shall say I’ll prove a busy actor in their play. [Exeunt.

Scene V.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me; do not,

Phebe: Say that you love me not; but say not so In bitterness. The common execution Whose heart th’ accustom’d sight of death makes hard,

Falls not the axe upon the humble neck, But first begs pardon: will you sternly be Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin, behind.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner: I fly thee, for I would not injure thee.

They tell me there is murder in mine eye: ’Tis pretty, sure, and very probable, That eyes,—that are the frailst and softest things, Who shut their coward gates on atoms,— Should be call’d tyrants, butchers, murderers! Now I do frown on thee with all my heart; And, if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee: Now counterfeits to swoon; why, now fall down; Or, if thou canst not, O, for shame, for shame! Lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers. Now show the wound mine eye hath made in thee: Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains Some scar of it; lean but upon a rush, The cicatrice and capable impressure. Thy palm some moment keeps: but now mine eyes, Which I have.darted at thee, hurt thee not; Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes That can do hurt.

Sr. O dear Phebe, if ever, (as that ever may be near,) You meet in some fresh check the power of fancy, Then shall you know the wounds invisible That love’s keen arrows make. But, till that time, Come thou not near me: and, when that time comes, Afflict me with thy mock’d, pity me not; As, till that time, I shall not pity thee.

Ros. [Advancing.] And why, I pray you? Who might be your mother, That you insult, extol, and all at once, Over the wretched? What though you have no beauty, (As, by my faith, I see no more in you Than without candle may go dark to bed,) Must you be therefore proud and pitiless? Why, what means this? Why do you look on me? I see no more in you, than in the ordinary Of nature’s sale-work;—Od’s my little life! I think she means to tangle my eyes too. No, faith, proud mistress, hope not after it: ’Tis not your inky brows, your black-silk hair, Your bugle eye-balls, nor your check of cream, That can ename my spirits to your worship. You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow her, Like foggy south, puffing with wind and rain? You are a thousand times a proper man, Than she a woman: ’tis such fools as you, That make the world full of ill-favour’d children: ’Tis not her glass, but you, that fatten her; And out of you she sees herself more proper, Than any of her lineaments can show her. But, mistress, know yourself: down on your knees, And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man’s love: For I must tell you friendly in your ear, Sell when you can: you are not for all markets: Cry the man mercy; love him; take his offer: Fool is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer: So, take her to thee, shepherd:—fare you well.
SCENE I.]

AS YOU LIKE IT.

Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you, chide a year to-gather:
I had rather hear you chide, than this man woo.

Ros. He's fallen in love with your foulness:—[To Silvius] and she'll fall in love with my anger. If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce her with bitter words.—[To Phebe.]

Why look you so upon me?—

Phe. For no ill-will I bear you.

Ros. I pray you, do not fall in love with me,
For I am failer than vows made in wine:
 Besides, I like you not.—If you will know my house,
'Tis at the tuft of olives, here hard by. —
Will you go, sister?—Shepherd, ply her hard.
Come, sister.—Shepherdess, look on him better.
And be not proud: though all the world could see,
None could be so absurd in sight as he.—
Come, to our rock.

[Exeunt Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.

Phe. Dead shepherd, now I find thy saw of might,—

"Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?"

Sil. Sweet Phebe,—

Phe. Ha, what say'st thou, Silvius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me.

Phe. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.

Sil. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be:

If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love, your sorrow and my grief
Were both extermin'd.

Phe. Thou hast my love: is not that neighbourly?

Sil. I would have you.

Phe. Why, that were covetousness.

Silvius, the time was, that I hated thee;
And yet it is not, that I bear thee love:
But since that thou canst talk of love so well,
Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,
I will endure; and I'll employ thee too:
But do not look for farther recompense
Than thine own gladness that thou art employ'd.

Sil. So holy and so perfect is my love,
And I in such a poverty of grace,
That I shall think it a most plenteous crop
To glean the broken ears after the man
That the main harvest reaps; loose now and then
A scatter'd smile, and that I'll live upon.

Phe. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me erewhile?

Sil. Not very well, but I have met him oft;
And he hath bought the cottage and the bounds
That the old carlot once was master of.

Phe. Think not I love him, though I ask for him;
'Tis but a peevish boy—yet he talk well:—
But what care I for words? yet words do well,
When he that speaks them pleases those that hear.
It is a pretty youth—not very pretty:—[him
But, sure, he's proud; and yet his pride becomes He'll make a proper man: the best thing in him
Is his complexion; and faster than his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heal it up.
He is not very tall; yet for his years he's tall:
His leg is but so so; and yet'tis well:

There was a pretty redness in his lip,

A little riper and more lusty red [ence
Than that mix'd in his cheek; 'twas just the differ-
Betwixt the constant red, and mingled damask.

There be some women, Silvius, had they mark'd him
In parcels, as I did, would have gone near
To fall in love with him: but, for my part, hath clapped him o’ the shoulder, but I’ll warrant him heart-whole.

Orl. Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

Ros. Nay, an you be so tardy, come no more in my sight: I had as lief be woo’d of a snail.

Orl. Of a snail?

Ros. Ay, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head,—a better jointure, I think, than you make a woman: besides, he brings his destiny with him.

Orl. What’s that?

Ros. Why, horns; which such as you are fain to be beholden to your wives for: but he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.

Orl. Virtue is no horn-maker; and my Rosalind is virtuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.

Cei. It pleases him to call you so; but he hath a Rosalind of a better leer than you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a hint and hour. If you like, enough, you consent. What would you say to me now, an I were your very very Rosalind?

Orl. I would kiss me before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first; and when you were gravelled for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss. Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit; and for lovers, lacking (God warn us!) matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Orl. How if the kiss be denied?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matters.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved mistress?

Ros. Marry, that should you, if I were your mistress; or I should think my honesty ranker than my wit.

Orl. What of my suit?

Ros. Not out of your apparel, and yet out of your suit. Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say—I will not have you.

Orl. Then, in mine own person, I die.

Ros. No, ’faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love-cause. Troilus had his brains dashed out with a Grecian club; yet he did what he could to die before; and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have lived many a fair year, though Hero had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot midsommer night; for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and, being taken with the cramp, was drowned: and the foolish chroniclers of that age found it was—Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies: men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind; for, I protest, her frown might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly. But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition; and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind.

Ros. Yes, faith will I, Fridays and Saturdays and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. Ay, and twenty such.

Orl. What sayest thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Ros. Why, then, can one desire too much of a good thing?—Come, sister, you shall be the priest, and marry us.—Give me your hand, Orlando.—What do you say, sister?

Orl. Pray thee, marry us.

Cei. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin,—”Will you, Orlando,”—

Cei. Go to.—Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orl. I will.

Ros. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why now; as fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say,—”I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.”

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I might be with thee again commission; but,—I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband: there’s a girl goes before the priest; and, certainly, a woman’s thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts, they are winged.

Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have possessed her?

Orl. For ever and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever. No, no, Orlando; men are April when they woo, December when they wed:maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barborc cock-pigeon over his hen; more clamorous than a parrot against rain; more new-fangled than an ape; more giddy in my desires than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry; I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O, but she is wise.

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this: the wiser, the waywarder: make the doors upon a woman’s wit, and it will out at the casement; shut that, and ’twill out at the key-hole; stop that, ’twill fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

Orl. Why, Rosalind, that halts a wife with such a wit, he might say,—”Wit, whither wilt?”

Ros. Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wife’s wit going to your neighbour’s bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

Ros. Marrv, to say,—she came to seek you there. You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. O, that woman that cannot make her fault her husband’s occasion, let her never nurse her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool.

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours!

Orl. I must attend the duke at dinner: by two o’clock I will be with thee again.

Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways;—I knew what you would prove: my friends told me as much, and I thought no less:—that flattering tongue of yours won me:—his but one cast away, and so,—come, death!—Two o’clock is your hour?

Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.
SCENE III.

As You Like It.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most potheratical break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the gross band of the unfaithful: therefore, beware of my cen- sure, and keep your promise.

Ori. With no less religion than if thou wert indeed my Rosalind: so, adieu.

Ros. Well. Time is the old justice that examines all such offenders, and let Time try: adieu.

[Exit Orlando.

Cd. You have simply misused our sex in your love-prate: we must have your doublet and hose plucked over your head, and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded: my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

Cd. Or rather, bottomless; that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No, that same wicked bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceived of spleen, and born of madness; that blind rascally boy, that abuses every one’s eyes, because his own are out, let him be judge how deep I am in love—I’ll tell thee, Aliena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando: I’ll go find a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Cd. And I’ll sleep. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Jacques and Lords.

Jay. Which is he that killed the deer?

Lords. Sir, it was I.

Jay. Let’s present him to the duke, like a Roman conqueror; and it would do well to set the deer’s horns upon his head, for a branch of victory.—Have you no song, forester, for this purpose?

Lords. Yes, Sir.

Jay. Sing it: ’tis no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough.

SONG.

What shall he have that kill’d the deer?

His leather skin, and horns to wear.

Then sing him home.

[The rest shall bear this burden.

Take thou no scorn to wear the horn;

It was a great ere thou wast born:

Thy father’s father wore it,

And thy father bore it:

The horn, the horn, the lusty horn,

Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two

And here much Orlando!

Cd. I warrant you, with pure love and a troubled brain, he hath been his bow and arrows, and is gone forth—

To sleep. Look, who comes here.

Enter Stianus.

Sli. My errand is to you, fair youth;—

My gentle Phoebe did bid me give you this:

[Giving a letter.

I know not the contents; but, as I guess

By the stern brow and waipish action

Which she did use as she was writing of it,

It bears an angry tenor: pardon me,

I am but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter,

And play the swaggerer: bear this, bear all:

She says I am not fair; that I lack manners,

She calls me proud; and that she could not love me,

Were men as rare as Phoenix. Od’s my will!

Her love is not the hate that I do hunt:

Why writes she so to me?—Well, shepherd, well,

This is a letter of your own device.

Sli. No, I protest, I know not the contents:

Phoebe did write it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a fool,

And turn’d into the extremity of love.

I saw her hand: she has a leathern hand,

A freestone-colour’d hand; I verily did think

That her old glove was worn, in was her hands;

She has a housewife’s hand; but that’s no matter:

I say, she never did invent this letter;

This is a man’s invention, and his hand.

Sli. Sure, it is hers.

Ros. Why, ’tis a boisterous and a cruel style,

A style for challengers; why she defies me,

Like Turk to Christian: woman’s gentle brain

Could not drop forth such a giant-rule invention,

Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect

Than in their countenance.—Will you hear the letter?

Sli. So please you, for I never heard it yet; [ter?

Yet heard too much of Phoebe’s cruelty.

Ros. She Phoebe me: mark how the tyrant writes.

[Reads.

"Art thou god to shepherd turn’d,

That a maiden’s heart hath burn’d?"

Can a woman raiL thus?

Sli. Call you this railing?

Ros. [Reads.

"Why, thy godhead laid apart,

Warr’st thou with a woman’s heart?"

Did you ever hear such railing?

[Reads.

"While the eye of man did woo me,

That could do no vengeance to me."

Meaning me a beast.

[Reads.

"If the scorn of your bright eyene

Have power to raise such love in mine,

Alack, in me what strange effect

Would they work in mild aspect?

While you chid me, I did love;

How then might your prayers move!

He that brings this love to thee,

Little knows this love in me;

And by him seal up thy mind;

Whether that thy youth and kind

Will the faithful offer take

Of me, and all that I can make;

Or else by him my love deny,

And then I’ll study how to die."

Sli. Call you this chiding?

Cd. Alas, poor shepherd!

Ros. Do you pity him not, he deserves no pity.

—Wilt thou love such a woman?—What, to make thee an instrument, and play false strains upon thee?—
not to be endured!—Well, go your way to her, (for I see, love hath made thee a tame snake,) and say this to her:—that if she love me, I charge her to love thee; if she will not, I will never have her; unless thou entreat for her.—If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word; for here comes more company.

[Exit SIVILUS.]

Enter OLIUER.

Oli. Good morrow, fair ones: pray you, if you know, A sheepecoat, fenc'd about with olive-trees? Cel. West of this place, down in the neighbour bottom:
The rank of osiers, by the murmuring stream.
Left on your right hand, brings you to the place.
But at this hour the house doth keep itself;
There's none within.

Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description;
Such garments, and such years:—"The boy is fair,
Of female favour, and bestows himself
Like a ripe sister: but the woman low,
And browner than her brother." Are not you
The owner of the house I did enquire for?
Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say, we are.
Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both;
And to that youth he calls his Rosalind,
He sends this bloody napkin:—are you he?
Cel. I am: what must we understand by this?
Oli. Some of my shame; if you will know of me
What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkerchief was stain'd.

Cel. I pray you, tell it.

Oli. When last the young Orlando parted from me
He left a promise to return again,
You, Within an hour; and, pacing through the forest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,
Lo! what befell! he threw his eye aside,
And, mark, what object did present itself:
Under an old oak, whose boughs were moss'd with
And high top balm with dry antiquity,
A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,
Lay sleeping on his back: about his neck
A green and gilded snake had wraith'd itself,
Who with her head, nimble in threats, approach'd
The opening of his mouth; but suddenly,
Seeing Orlando, it unlik'd itself,
And with indented glides did slip away
Into a bush: under which bush's shade
A lioness, with udders all drawn dry,
Lay couching, head on ground, with catlike watch,
When that the sleeping man should stir; for 'is
The royal disposition of that beast,
To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead:
This seen, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Cel. O, I have heard him speak of that same brother;
And he did render him the most unnatural
That liv'd amongst men.

Oli. And well he might so do,

For well I know he was unnatural.

Cel. But, to Orlando—did he leave him there,
Food to be suck'd and hungry lioness?

Oli. Twice did he turn his back, and purpose'd so;
But kindness, nobler ever than revenge,
And nature, stronger than his just occasion,
Made him give battle to the lioness,
Who quickly fell before him: in which hurting,
From miserable slumber I awoke.'

Cel. Are you his brother?

Oli. Was it you he rescu'd?

Cel. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?

Oli. 'Twas I; but 'tis not I: I do not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.

Cel. But, for the bloody napkin?

Oli. By and by.

When from the first to last, betwixt us two,
Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd,
As, how I came into that desert place;—
In brief, he led me to the gentle duke,
Who gave me fresh array and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brother's love;
Who led me instantly unto his cave,
There stripp'd he himself, and here upon his arm
The lioness had torn some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,
And cried, in fainting, upon Rosalind.
Briefer, I recover'd him, bound up his wound;
And, after some small space, being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am,
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His broken promise, and to give this napkin,
Dyed in his blood, unto the shepherd youth
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.

[ROSALIND and Woman. Why, how now, Ganymede! sweet Ganymede!]

Oli. Many will swoon when they do look on blood.
Cel. There is more in it.—Cousin—Ganymede!

Oli. Look, he recover'd.

Cel. I would I were at home.

Cel. We'll lead you thither.—

I pray you, will you take him by the arm?

Oli. Be of good cheer, youth:—you a man? You
A man's heart.

Cel. I do so, I confess it. Ah, sirrah, a body
Would think this was well counterfeited: I pray you, tell your brother how well I counterfeited.—Heigh ho!—

Oli. This was not counterfeit: there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was a passion of earnest.

Cel. Counterfeit, I assure you.

Oli. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.

Cel. So I do: but, 'tis faith, I should have been a woman by right.

Cel. Come, you look paler and paler: pray you, draw homewards.—Good Sir, go with us.

Cel. That will I, for I must hear answer back
How you excuse my brother, Rosalind.

Cel. I shall devise something. But, I pray you, commend my counterfeiting to him:—will you go?

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Forest of ARDEN.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

TOUCH. We shall find a time, Audrey; patience, gentle Audrey.

AUD. 'Faith, the priest was good enough, for all the old gentleman's saying.
SCENE II. — Another part of the Forest.

Enter Orlando and Oliver.

Orl. Is't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her? and, loving, woo? and, wooing, she should grant? and will you persevere to enjoy her?

Oli. Neither call the goodness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor her sudden consenting; but say with me, I love Aliena; say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good; for my father's house, and all the revenue that was old Sir Rowland's, I will estate upon you, and here live and die a shepherd.

Orl. You have my consent. Let your wedding be to-morrow: thither will I invite the duke, and all his contented followers. Go you and prepare Aliena; for, look you, here comes my Rosalind.

Enter ROsalind.

Ros. God save you, brother.

Oli. And you, fair sister. [Exit.

Ros. O, my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf?

Orl. It is my arm.

Ros. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to swoon, when he showed me your handkerchief?

Orl. Ay, and greater wonders than that.

Ros. O, I know where you are:—nay, 'tis true: there was never any thing so sudden, but the fight of two rams, and Caesar's thraconal brag of:—"I came, saw, and overcame:” for your brother and my sister no sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed, but they asked one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else incontinent before marriage: they are in the very wrath of love, and they together: clubs cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to-morrow: and I will bid the duke to the nuptial. But, O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! By so much the more shall to-morrow be at the height of heart-heavyness, by how much I shall think your brother happy in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind.

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you, then, no longer with idle talking. Know of me, then, (for now I speak to some purpose,) that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit: I speak not this, that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insomuch I say I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good, and not to grace me. Believe them, if you please, that I can do strange things: I have, since I was three years old, conversed with a magician, most profound in his art, and yet not damnable. If you do love
Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her: I know into what straits of fortune she is driven; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to-morrow, human as she is, and without any danger.

_Orl._ Speakst thou in sober meanings?

_Ros._ By my life, I do; which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician. Therefore, put you in your best array, bid your friends; for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall; and to Rosalind, if you will.—Look, here comes a lover of mine, and a lover of hers.

_Enter SIILVUS and PHIS._

_Ph._ Youth, you have done me much ungentleness, To show the letter that I writ to you.

_Ros._ I care not, if I have: it is my study To seem despotic and ungentle to you: You are there follow’d by a faithful shepherd; Look upon him, love him; he worships you.

_Ph._ Good shepherd, tell this youth what tis to love.

_Sil._ It is to be all made of sighs and tears;—
And so am I for Phlebe.

_Ph._ And I for Ganymede.

_Orl._ And I for Rosalind.

_Ros._ And I for no woman.

_Sil._ It is to be all made of faith and service;—
And so am I for Phlebe.

_Ph._ And I for Ganymede.

_Orl._ And I for Rosalind.

_Ros._ And I for no woman.

_Sil._ It is to be all made of fantasy, All made of passion, and all made of wishes; All adoration, duty, and observance; All humbleness, all patience, and impatience; All purity, all trial, all obedience;

And so am I for Phlebe.

_Ph._ And so am I for Ganymede.

_Orl._ And so am I for Rosalind.

_Ros._ And so am I for no woman.

_Ph._ [To ROSALIND.] If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

_Sil._ [To PHIS.] If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

_Orl._ If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

_Ros._ Whom do you speak to,—"why blame you me to love you"?

_Orl._ To her, that is not here, nor doth not hear.

_Ros._ Pray you, no more of this: tis like the howling of Irish wolves against the moon.—[To SIILVUS.] I will help you, if I can.—[To PHIS.] I would love you, if I could.—To-morrow meet me all together.—[To PHIS.] I will marry you, if ever I marry woman, and I’ll be married to-morrow:—[To ORLANDO.] I will satisfy you, if ever I satisfied man, and you shall be married to-morrow:—[To SIILVUS.] I will content you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to-morrow.—[To ORLANDO.] As you love Rosalind, meet:—[To SIILVUS.] As you love Phlebe, meet: and as I love no woman, I’ll meet.—So, fare you well: I have left you commands.

_Sil._ I’ll not fail, if I live.

_Ph._ Nor I.

_Orl._ Nor I.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another part of the Forest.

_Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY._

_Touch._ To-morrow is the joyful day, Audrey; to-morrow will we be married.

_Aud._ I do desire it with all my heart; and I hope it is no dishonest desire, to desire to be a woman of the world. Here come two of the banished duke’s pages.

_Enter two Pages._

_1 Page._ Well met, honest gentleman.

_Touch._ By my troth, well met. Come, sit, sit, and a song.

_2 Page._ We are for you: sit i’ the middle.

_1 Page._ Shall we clap into’t roundly, without hawking, or spitting, or saying we are hoarse, which are the only prologues to a bad voice?

_2 Page._ I’ faith, i’ faith; and both in a tune, like two gypsies on a horse.

_Song._

It was a lover and his lass,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
That over the green corn-field did pass
In the spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding:
Sweet lovers love the spring.

Between the acres of the eyre,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
These pretty country folks would live,
In the spring time, &c.

This caroll they began that hour,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
How that a life was but a flower
In the spring time, &c.

And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino;
For love is crowned with the prime
In the spring time, &c.

_Touch._ Truly, young gentlemen, though there was no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untuneable.

_1 Page._ You are deceived, Sir: we kept time, we lost not our time.

_Touch._ By my troth, yes; I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song. God be wi’ you; and God mend your voices!—Come, Audrey. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Forest.

_Enter Duke Senior, AMIES, JACKEY, ORLANDO, OLIVER, and CLEIA._

_Duke S._ Dost thou believe, Orlando, that the boy Can do all this that he hath promised? [not; _Orl._ I sometimes do believe, and sometimes do As those that fear they hope, and know they fear.

_Entrant ROSALIND, SIILVUS, and PHIS._

_Ros._ Patience once more, whilst our compact is urg’d:—

[To the Duke.] You say, if I bring in your Rosalind, You will bestow her on Orlando here?

_Duke S._ That would I, had I 10 kingdoms to give with her.

_Ros._ [To ORLANDO.] And you say, you will have her, when I bring her?

_Orl._ That would I, were I 10 of all kingdoms king.

_Ros._ [To PHIS.] You say, you’ll marry me, if I be willing?

_Ph._ That will I, should I die the hour after.
Scene IV.

As You Like It.

Rut. But if you do refuse to marry me,
You'll give yourself to this most faithless herd?

Phr. So is the bargain.

Rut. [To Silvius.] You say, that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

Sil. Though to have her and death were both one Rut. I have promised to make all this matter even, Keep you your word, O duke, to give your daughter:—

You yours, Orlando, to receive his daughter:—
Keep your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me,
Or else, refusing me, to wed this shepherd:—
Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her,
If she refuse me:—and from hence I go,
To make these doubts all even.

Duke S. I do remember in this shepherd boy
Some lively touches of my daughter's favour.

Orl. My lord, the first time that I ever saw him,
Methought he was a brother to your daughter:
But, my good lord, this boy is forest-born,
And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments
Of many desperate studies by his uncle,
Whom he reports to be a great magician,
Obscured in the circle of this forest.

Joy. There is, sure, another flood toward,
And these couples are coming to the ark.
Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues
Are called fools.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Touch. Salutation and greeting to you all!

Joy. Good my lord, bid him welcome: this is the mote-eyed gentleman, that I have so often met in the forest: he hath been a courtier, he swears.

Touch. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I have trod a measure; I have flastered a lady; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone three tailors; I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Joy. And how was that ta'en up?

Touch. 'Faith, we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

Joy. How seventh cause?—Good my lord, like this fellow.

Duke S. I like him very well.

Touch. God ill you, Sir; I desire you of the like.
I press in here, Sir, amongst the rest of the country copulatives, to swear, and to forswear; according as marriage binds and blood breaks:—a poor virgin, Sir, an ill-favoured thing, Sir, but mine own; a poor humour of mine, Sir, to take that that no man else will: rich honesty dwells like a miser, Sir, in a poor house, as your pearl in your foul oyster.

Duke S. By my faith, he is very swift and sententials.

Touch. According to the fool's bolt, Sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Joy. But, for the seventh cause; how did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

Touch. Upon a lie seven times removed:—bear your body more seeming, Audrey:—as thus, Sir.
I did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard:
he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was; this is called the Retort courteous. If I sent him word again, it was not well cut, he would send me word, he cut it to please himself: this is called the Quip modest. If again, it was not well cut, he disabled my judgment:
this is called the Reply curtilsh. If again, it was not well cut, he would answer, I spake not true:
this is called the Reproof valiant. If again, it was not well cut, he would say, I lie: this is called the Countercheck quarrelsome: and so to the Lie cirsumstantial, and the Lie direct.

Joy. And how oft did you say, his beard was not well cut?

Touch. I durst go no farther than the Lie circumstantial, nor he durst not give me the Lie direct; and so we measured swords, and parted.

Joy. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

Touch. O Sir, we quarrel in print, by the book;
as you have books for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous;
the second, the Quip modest; the third, the Reply curtilsh; the fourth, the Reproof valiant; the fifth, the Countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with circumstance; the seventh, the Lie direct.
All these you may avoid, but the Lie direct; and you may avoid that too, with an "if." I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel; but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an "if," as if you said so, then I said so;
and they shook hands, and swore brothers. Your
"if" is the only peace-maker; much virtue in "if."

Joy. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? he's as good at any thing, and yet a fool.

Duke S. He uses his folly like a walking-horse, and under the presentation of that, he shoots his wit.

Still music. Enter Hymen, leading Rosalind in woman's clothes: and Celia.

Hym. Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even Atone together.

Good duke, receive thy daughter:
Hymen from heaven brought her;

Yes, brought her hither,

That thou mightst join her hand with his,
Whose heart within her bosom is.

Rut. [To Duke S.] To you I give myself, for I am
yours.

[To Orlando.] To you I give myself, for I am yours.

Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phr. If sight and shape be true,
Why then,—my love adieu!

Rut. [To Duke S.] I'll have no father, if you be not he:—

[To Orlando.] I'll have no husband, if you be not
he:—

[To Phebe.] Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be not she.

Hym. Peace, ho! I bar confusion:
'Tis I must make conclusion

Of these most strange events:
Here's eight that must take hands
To join in Hymen's bands,
If truth holds true contents.

[To Orlando and Rosalind.] You and you no cross that part.

[To Oliver and Celia.] You and you are heart in heart:—
[To PHEEB.] You to his love must accord,
Or have a woman to your lord:—
[To TOUCHSTONE and AUBREY.] You and you are sure together,
As the winter to foul weather.
While a wedlock-hymn we sing,
Feed yourselves with questioning;
That reason wonder may diminish,
How thus we met, and these things finish.

SONG.

Wedding is great Juno’s crown:
O blessed bond of board and bed!
* ‘Tis Hymen peoples every town:*
High wedlock, then, be honoured:
Honour, high honour and renown,
To Hymen, god of every town!

Duke S. O my dear niece, welcome thou art to me!
Even daughter, welcome in no less degree.

Phc. [To SILVIIUS.] I will not eat my word, now thou art mine;
Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine.

Entr’Jacques de Ber.

Jaq. de B. Let me have audience for a word or I am the second son of old Sir Rowland, [two:]
That bring these tidings to this fair assembly.—
Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day
Men of great worth resorted to this forest,
Address’d a mighty power; which were on foot,
In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here, and put him to the sword:
And to the skirts of this wild wood he came; Where, meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprise and from the world;
His crown bequeathing to his bastard brother,
And all their lands restor’d to them again,
That were with him exil’d. This to be true,
I do engage my life.

Duke S. Welcome, young man;
Thou offer’st fairly to thy brothers’ wedding:
To one, his lands withheld; and to the other,
A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.
First, in this forest, let us do those ends
That here were well begun, and well begun:
And after, every of this happy number,
That have endured shrewd days and nights with us,
Shall share the good of our returned fortune.
According to the measure of their states.
Meantime, forget this new-fall’n dignity,
And fall into our rustic revelry.—
Play, music!—and you, brides and bridegrooms all,
With measure heap’d in joy, to the measures fall.

Jaq. Sir, by your patience.—If I heard you
The duke hath put on a religious life, [nighly,
And thrown into neglect the pompous court—

Jaq. de B. He hath.

Jaq. To him will I; out of these converts
There is much matter to be heard and learnt.—

[To Duke S.] You to your former honour I bequeath;
Your patience, and your virtue, well deserve it:—

[To ORLANDO.] You to a love, that your true faith doth merit:—

[To OLIVER.] You to your land, and love, and great ally—

[To SILVIIUS.] You to a long and well deserved bed:—

[To TOUCHSTONE.] And you to wrangling; for thy loving voyage
Is but for two months virtu’al.—So, to your pleas-
I am for other than for dancing measures. [sures:

Duke S. Stay, Jaques, stay.

Jaq. To see no pastime, I:—what you would have,
I’ll stay to know at your abandon’d cave. [Exil.

Duke S. Proceed, proceed: we will begin these rites,
As we do trust they’ll end, in true delights.

EPILOGUE.

Rst. It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue; but it is no more unhandsome, than to see the lord the prologue. If it be true that good wine needs no bush, (‘tis true that a good play needs no epilogue: yet to good wine they do use good bushes; and good plays prove the better by the help of good epilogues. What a case am I in, then, that am neither a good epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good play! I am not furnished like a beggar, therefore to beg will not become me: my way is, to conjure you; and I’ll begin with the women. I charge you, O women, for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this play as please you: and I charge you, O men, for the love you bear to women, (as I perceive by your simpering none of you hate them,) that between you and the women, the play may please.
If I were a woman, I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleased me, compliances that liked me, and breaths that I desired not; and, I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will, for my kind offer, when I make court’s, bid me farewell. [Exunt.]

Grumio.
Hortensio; attendants on Lucentio.

Servants to Lucentio:
Grumio.
Curtez.
Pedant.

Katharina, the Shrew;
Daughter to Baptista.

Widow.

Tailor, Haberdasher, and Servants attending on Baptista and Petrucho.

SCENE,—Sometimes in Padua; and sometimes in Petrucho’s House in the Country.

INDUCTION.

Scene I.—Before an Alcoves on a Heath.
Enter Hostess and Sly.

Sly.  I’ll thee you, in faith.

Host.  A pair of stocks, you rogue!

Sly.  Y’are a baggage: the Slys are no rogues;
look in the chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueror.
Therefore, paucas pallabras: let the world slide: Scena!

Host.  You will not pay for the glasses you have burnt?

Sly.  No; not a denier. Go by, Saint Jeronin,—
Go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Host.  I know my remedy: I must go fetch the third borough.

Sly.  Third, or fourth, or fifth borough, I’ll answer him by law: I’ll not budge an inch, boy: let him come, and kindly.

[Exit.

[Exit.

Wind.  Horns.  Enter a Lord from hunting, with Huntsman and Servants.

Lord.  Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds:

Trash Merriman,—the poor cur is embossed;
And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth’d brach.
Saw’st thou not, boy, how Silver made it good
At the hedge corner, in the coldest fault?
I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

1 Hum.  Why, Belman is as good as he, my lord;
He cried upon it at the merest loss.
And twice to-day pick’d out the dullest scent:
Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord.  Thou art a fool: if Echo were as fleet,
I would esteem him worth a dozen such.
But sup them well, and look unto them all:
To-morrow I intend to hunt again.

1 Hum.  I will, my lord.

Lord.  [See Sly.] What’s here? one dead, or drunk?
See, doth he breathe?

2 Hum.  He breathes, my lord.  Were he not war’d with ale,
This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

Lord.  O monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies!—
Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine image!—

Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man.
What think you, if he were convey’d to bed,
Wrapp’d in sweet clothes, rings put upon his fingers,
A most delicious bassetet by his bed,
And brave attendants near him when he wakes,—
Would not the beggar then forget himself?

1 Hum.  Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.

2 Hum.  It would seem strange unto him when he wak’d.

Lord.  Even as a flattering dream, or worthless fancy.
Then take him up, and manage well the jest:—
Carry him gently to my fairest chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures:
Dalm his foul head in warm distill’d waters,
And burn sweet wood to make the lodging sweet:
Procure me music ready when he wakes,
To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound:
And if he chance to speak, be ready straight,
And, with a low submissive reverence,
Say,—What is it your honour will command?
Let one attend him with a silver beason
Full of rose-water, and bestrew’d with flowers;
Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper,
And say,—Will’t please your lordship cool your hands?
Some one be ready with a costly suit,
And ask him what apparel he will wear;
Another tell him of his hounds and horse,
And that his lady mourns at his disease:
Persuade him that he hath been lunatic;
And, when he says he, is say that he dreams,
For he is nothing but a mighty lord.
This do, and do it kindly, gentle Sirs:
It will be pastime passing excellent,
If it be husbanded with modesty.

[Enter. My Lord, I warrant you, we will play our part,
As he shall think, by our true diligence,
He is no less than what we say he is.

[Aside. Take him up gently, and to bed with him;
And each one to his office when he wakes.

[Sly is borne out. A trumpet sounds.
Sirrah, go see what trumpet 'tis that sounds:

[Exit Servant.

Belike, some noble gentleman, that means,
Travelling some journey, to repose him here.

[Re-enter Servant.

How now! who is it?

[Serv. An it please your honour,
Players that offer service to your lordship.

[Enter Players.

Now, fellows, you are welcome.
Players. We thank your honour.

[Lord. Do you intend to stay with me to-night?

[2 Serv. Play. So please your lordship to accept our duty.

[Lord. With all my heart.—This fellow I remember,
Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son:
'Twas where you wro'd the gentlewoman so well;
I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part
Was aptly fitted and naturally perform'd.

[1 Serv. Play. I think 'twas Soto that your honour means.

[Lord. 'Tis very true: thou didst it excellent.—
Well, you are come to me in happy times:
The rather for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
This is a lord will hear you play to-night:
But I am doubtful of your modesties;
Lest, over-eying of his odd behaviour,
(For yet his honour never heard a play,) You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him; for I tell you, Sirs,
If you should smile, he grows impatient.

[1 Serv. Fear not, my lord: we can contain our Weeds be the very best in the world. [selves,

[Lord. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one:
Let them want nothing that my house affords.—

[Exit Servant and Players.

[To a Servant.] Sirrah, go you to Bartholomew my page,

And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady:
That done, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber;
And call him madam, do him obeisance:
Tell him from me, (as he will win my love,) He bear himself with honourable action,
Such as he hath observ'd in noble ladies Unto their lords, by them accomplished:
Such duty to the drunkard let him do,
With soft low tongue and lowly courtesy;
And say,—What is't you honour will command,
Wherein your lady and your humble wife
May show her duty, and make known her love?
And then,—with kind embracements, tempting kisses,
And with declining head into his bosom,—
Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd
To see her noble lord restor'd to health,
Who for this seven years hath esteem'd him
No better than a poor and loathsome beggar;

And if the boy have not a woman's gift
To rain a shower of commanded tears,
An onion will do well for such a shift;
Which, in a napkin being close convey'd,
Shall in despite enforce a wat'ry eye.
See this dispatch'd with all the haste thou canst:
A anon I'll give thee more instructions.

I know the boy will well usurp the grace,
Voice, gait, and action of a gentlewoman:
I long to hear him call the drunkard husband;
And how my men will stay themselves from laughter,
When they do homage to this simple peasant.
I'll in to counsel them; 'ludly my presence
May well abate the over-merry spleen,
Which otherwise would grow into extremes.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber in the Lord's House.

Sly is discovered in a rich night gown, with Attendants; some with apparel, others with boxes, ears, and ornamentation, others with wine and sweetmeats. Enter Lord, dressed like a servant.

Sly. For God's sake, a pot of small ale.

[1 Serv. Will 't please your lordship drink a cup of sack?

[2 Serv. Will 't please your honour taste of these conserves?

[3 Serv. What raiment will your honour wear to-day?

[Serv. I am Christopher Sly; call not me honour, nor lordship: I me'er drank sack in my life; and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of beef: me'er ask me what raiment I'll wear; for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet,—nay, sometime more feet than shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the overleather.

Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour in your honour!

O, that a mighty man, of such descent,
Of such possessions, and so high esteem,
Should be imbued with so foul a spirit!

Sly. What, would you make me mad? Am not I Christopher Sly, old Sly's son, of Burton-health; by birth a pedlar, by education a card-maker, by transmutation a bear-herd, and now by present profession a tinker. Ask Marian Hacket, the fat aloc; wife of Wincoft, if she know me not: if she say I am not fourteen pence on the score for sheer ale, score me up for the lyingest knave in Christendom.

What: I am not bestraffed: here's—

[1 Serv. O, this it is that makes your lady mourn.

[2 Serv. O, this it is that makes your servants droop.

Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred shun your house,
As beaten hence by your strange lunacy.

O noble lord, bethink thee of thy birth!

Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,
And banish hence these abject lowly dreams.
Look how thy servants do attend on thee,
Each in his office restless thy beck.

Wilt thou have music? hark! Apollo plays,
And twenty caged nightingales do sing:

[Music.

Or wilt thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch
Softer and sweeter than the lustful bed.

On purpose trimm'd up for Semiramis.

Say thou wilt walk; we will betrost the ground:
SCENE I.

TAMING OF THE SHREW.

Or wilt thou ride, thy horses shall be trapp'd;
Their harness studied all with gold and pearl.
Dost thou love hawking? thou hast hawks will soon
Above the morning lark: or wilt thou hunt?
Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

1 Serv. Say thou wilt course; thy greyhounds are
As breathed stags, ay, fleeter than the roe. [swift
2 Serv. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight Adonis painted by a running brook,
And Cythera all in sedges hid,
Which seem to move and wanton with her breath,
Even as the waving sedges play with wind.

Lord. We'll show thee lo as she was a maid,
And how she was beguiled and surpris'd,
As lively painted as the deed was done. [wood
3 Serv. Or Daphne roaming through a thorny
Scratching her legs, that one shall swear she bleeds;
And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,
So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.

Lord. Thou art a lord, and nothing but a lord:
Thou hast a lady far more beautiful
Than any woman in this waning age.

1 Serv. And, till the tears that she hath shed for Like envious floods, o'er-ran her lovely face; [thee,
She was the fairest creature in the world;
And yet she is inferior to none.

Sly. Am I a lord? and have I such a lady?
Or do I dream? or have I dream'd till now?
I do not sleep: I see, I hear, I speak;
I smell sweet savours; and I feel soft things:—
Upon my life, I am a lord, indeed;
And not a tinker, nor Christopher Sly.

Well, bring our lady hither to our sight;
And once again, a pot of the smallest ale.

2 Serv. Will't please your mightiness to wash your hands?

[Servants present a ewer, basin, and napkin.

O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd!
O, that once more you knew but what you are!
These fifteen years you have been in dream;
Or, when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.

Sly. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap.
But did I never speak of all that time?

1 Serv. O, yes, my lord; but very idle words:
For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,
Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of door;
And railed upon the hostess of the house;
And say, you would present her at theleet,
Because she brought stone juggs and no seal'd quarts:
Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.

Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.

3 Serv. Why, Sir, you know no house, nor no such maid;
Nor no such men, as you have reckon'd up,—
As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turk, and Henry Pimpernel;
And twenty more such names and men as these,
Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Sly. Now, Lord be thanked for my good amends!
All. Amen.

Sly. I thank thee: thou shalt not lose by it.

Enter the Page, as a lady, with Attendants.

Page. How fares my noble lord?

Sly. Marry, I fare well; for here is cheer enough.

Where is my wife?

Page. Here, noble lord: what is thy will with her?
Vincentio's son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become, to serve all hopes conceiv'd,
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue, and that part of philosophy
Will I apply, that treats of happiness
By virtue specially to be achiev'd,
Tell me thy mind; for I have Pisa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow plash, to plunge him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.

\textit{Tra. Mi perdono, gentle master mine,}
I am in all affected as yourself;
Glad that you thus continue your resolve
To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy:
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stoics nor no stocks, I pray;
Or so devote to Aristotle's ethics,
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd:
Balk logic with acquaintance that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk;
Music and poetry use to quicken you;
The mathematics and the metaphysics,
Fall to them, as you find your stomach serves you;
No profit grows, where is no pleasure taken.
In brief, Sir, study what you most affect.

\textit{Luc.} Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.
If Blondello now were come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness;
And take a lodging, fit to entertain
Such friends as time in Padua shall beget.
But stay awhile: what company is this?

\textit{Tra.} Master, some show, to welcome us to town.

\textbf{Enter Baptista, Katharina, Bianca, Gremio, and Hortensio.} Luciento and Tranio stand aside.

\textit{Bap.} Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know;
That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter
Before I have a husband for the elder:
If either of you both love Katharina,
Because I know you well and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.

\textit{Gre.} To cart her rather: she's too rough for me.

\textit{There, there, Hortensio, will you any wife?}

\textit{Kath. \[To Bap.\]} I pray you, Sir, is it your will
To make a state of me amongst these mates?

\textit{Hor.} Mates, maid? how mean you that? no mates for you,
Unless you were of gentler, milder mould.

\textit{Kath.} I' faith, Sir, you shall never need to fear:
I wis, it is not half way to her heart;
But if it were, doubt not her care should be
To comb your noble with a three-legg'd stool,
And paint your face, and use you like a fool.

\textit{Hor.} From all such devils, good Lord deliver us!

\textit{Gre.} And me too, good Lord!

\textit{Tra.} Hush, master! here is some good pastime forward:
That wen is so dark mad, or wonderful froward.

\textit{Luc.} But in the other's silence do I see Maid's mild behaviour, and sobriety.

\textit{Peace, Tranio!}

\textit{Tra.} Well said, master; mum! and gaze your fill.

\textit{Bap.} Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said,--Bianca, get you in:
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca,
For I will love thee ne'er the less, my girl.

\textit{Kath.} A pretty feast! it is best
Put finger in the eye,--an she knew why.

\textit{Bian.} Sister, content you in my discontent.
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My books and instruments shall be my company,
On them to look, and practise by myself.

\textit{Luc.} Hatch, Tranio! thou may'st hear Minerva speak.

\textit{Hor.} Signior Baptista, will you be so strange?
Sorry am I, that our good-will effects
Bianca's grief.

\textit{Gre.} Why will you mew her up,
Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the penance of her tongue?

\textit{Bap.} Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv'd:
Go in, Bianca:

\textit{Exit Bianca.}
And for I know she taketh most delight
In music, instruments, and poetry,
Schoolmasters well I keep within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth.

\textit{Luc.} Why, and I trust I may go too, may I not?
What, shall I be appointed hours; as though, belike,
I knew not what to take, and what to leave, ha?

\textit{Gre.} You may go to the devil's dam: your gifts are so good, here's none will hold you.
Their love is not so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out: our cake's dough on both sides. Farewell:--yet, for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish her to her father.

\textit{Hor.} So will I, signior Gremio: but a word, I pray.
Though the nature of our quarrel yet never brooked parie, know now, upon advice, it toucheth us both,--that we may yet again have access to our fair mistress, and be happy rivals in Bianca's love, to labour and effect one thing specially.

\textit{Gre.} What's that, I pray?

\textit{Hor.} Marry, Sir, to get a husband for her sister.

\textit{Gre.} A husband: a devil.

\textit{Hor.} I say, a husband.

\textit{Gre.} I say, a devil. Thinkest thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a fool to be married to hell?

\textit{Hor.} Tush, Gremio! though it pass your patience and mine to endure her loud alouds, why, man, there be good fellows in the world, an a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and money enough.

\textit{Gre.} I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition,--to be whipped at the high-crown every morning.

\textit{Hor.} Faith, as you say, there's small choice in rotten apples. But, come; since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so far forth friendly maintained, till by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have to't a fetch.--Sweet Bianca!--Happy man be his dole! He that runs fastest gets the ring. How say you, signior Gremio?

\textit{Gre.} I am agreed; and 'would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing, that would thoroughly woo her, weal her, and bed her, and rid the house of her! Come on.

[Enter Gremio and Hortensio.]

Tra. [Advancing.] I pray, Sir, tell me,—is it possible
That love should of a sudden take such hold?

Luc. O Tranio, till I found it to be true,
I never thought it possible or likely;
But see! while Ily I stood looking on,
I found the effect of love in insleness:
And now in plainness do confess to thee,—
That art to me as secret and as dear
As Anna to the Queen of Carthage was,— Tranio, I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio,
If I achieve not this young modest girl.
Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst;
Assist me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

Tra. Master, it is no time to chide you now;
Affection is not rated from the heart:
If love have touch’d you, naught remains but so,—
*

Luc. Gramercies, lad; go forward; this content;
The rest will comfort, for thy counsel’s sound.

Tra. Master, you look’d so longly on the maid,
Perhaps you mark’d not what’s the pith of all.
Luc. O yes, I saw the beauty in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great Jove to humble him to her hand,
When with his knee’s he kiss’d the Cretan strand.

Tra. Saw you no more? mark’d you not how her Began to scold, and raise up such a storm, [sister
That mortal ear might hardly endure the din?
Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move,
And with her breath she did perfume the air;
Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her.

Tra. Nay, then, ‘tis time to stir him from his trance.—
I pray, awake, Sir: if you love the maid,
Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it
Her elder sister is so curst and shrewd, [stands:—
That, till the father rid his hands of her,
Master, your love must live a maid at home;
And therefore he has closely mewd her up,
Because she will not be annoy’d with suitors.
Luc. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father’s he!
But art thou not advis’d, he took some care
To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct her?

Tra. Ay, marry, am I, Sir; and now ’tis plotted.
Luc. I have it, Tranio. Tranio.

Tra. Master, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jump in one.
Luc. Tell me thine first.

Tra. You will be schoolmaster,
And undertake the teaching of the maid:
That’s your device.

Luc. It is: may it be done?

Tra. Not possible; for who shall bear your part,
And be in Padua here Vincentio’s son;
Keep house, and ply his book; welcome his friends;
Visit his countrymen, and banquet them?
Luc. Basta; content thee; for I have it fall.
We have not yet seen in any house;
Nor can we be distinguish’d, by our faces,
For man, or master: then, it follows thus:—
Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead,
Keep house, and port, and servants, as I should:
I will some other be; some Florentine,
Some Neapolitan, or some other man of I’ha.
’Tis hatch’d, and shall be so.—Tranio, at once
Uncase thee; take my colour’d hat and cloak:
When Biondello comes, he waits on thee;
But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.

Tra. So had you need. [They exchange habits.
In brief, Sir, sth it your pleasure is,
And I am tied to be obedient.
(For so your father charg’d me at our parting,—
"Be serviceable to my son," quoth he,
Although I think ’twas in another sense,) I am content to be Lucentio,
Because so well I love Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, be so, because Lucentio loves:
And let me be a slave, ’t achieve that maid
Whose sudden sight hath thril’d my wounded eye.
Here comes the rogue.—[Enter Biondello.] Sir
rah, where have you been?

Bion. Where have I been? Nay, how now! where are you?

Master, has my fellow Tranio stol’n your clothes,
Or you stol’n his? or both? pray, what’s the news?

Luc. Sirrah, come hither: ’tis no time to jest,
And therefore frame your manners to the time.
Your fellow Tranio, here, to save my life,
Puts my apparel and my countenance on;
And I for my escape have put on his;
For in a quarterly, where I came ahorse,
I kill’d a man, and fear I was descried;
Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,
While I make way from hence to save my life;
You understand me?

Bion. I, Sir! ne’er a whit.

Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth:
Tranio is chang’d into Lucentio.

Bion. The better for him; would I were so too!

Tra. So would I, faith, boy, to have the next wish after,
That Lucentio indeed had Baptista’s youngest daugh-
But, sirrah,—not for my sake, but your master’s,—
I advise
You use your manners discreetly in all kind of companies;
When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio;
But in all places else, your master, Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, let’s go:
One thing more rests, that thyself execute,—
To make one among these wooers: if thou ask me why,—
Sufficeth, my reasons are both good and weighty.

[Exeunt.]

I. Serv. My lord, you nod; you do not mind the play.

Sirv. Yes, by saint Anne, do I. A good matter, surely: comes there any more of it?

Page. My lord, ’tis but began.

Sirv. ’Tis a very excellent piece of work, madam lady: would ’twere done?

Enter Petruchio and Grumio.

Pet. Verona, for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua; but, of all,
My best beloved and approved friend,
Hortensio; and I know this is his house.
Here, sirrah Grumio; knock, I say.

Grou. Knock, Sir; whom should I knock? is there any man has refused your worship?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.
Gru. Knock you here, Sir! why, Sir, what am I, Sir, that I should knock you here, Sir? Pit. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate, and rap me well, or I'll knock your knaves pate.

Gru. My master is grown quarrelsome.—I should knock you first, and then I know after who comes by the worst.

Pit. Will it not be?

'Faith, sirrah, an you'll not knock, I'll wring it; I'll try how you can sob, sa, and sing it.

[He wrings GRUMIO by the ears.

Gru. Help, masters, help! my master is mad.

Pit. Now, knock when I bid you, sirrah villain!

Enter HORTENSIUS.

Hor. How now! what's the matter?—My old friend Grumio! and my good friend Petruchio!—How do you all at Verona? Pit. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray? Grumio. Ten tento, may I say.

Hor. Alia nostra casa e' vanto, molto onorato signor mio Petruchio.—Rise, Grumio, rise: we will compound this quarrel.

Gru. Nay, tis no matter, Sir; what he legges in Latin.—If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service,—look you, Sir,—he bid me knock him, and rap him soundly; Sir: well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so? being, perhaps, (for aught I see) two and thirty,—a pip out? Whom, 'would to God, I had well knock'd at first, then had not Grumio come by the worst.

Pit. A senseless villain!—Good Hortensio, I bade the rascal knock upon your gate, and could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gru. Knock at the gate!—O heavens! Spake you not these words plain,—"Sirrah, knock me here, rap me here, knock me well, and knock me soundly"? And come you now with—knocking at the gate?

Pit. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you.

Hor. Petruchio, patience; I am Grumio's pledge: Why, this a heavy chance! twixt him and you, your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio. And tell me now, sweet friend, what happy gale Blows you to Padua here, from old Verona?

Pit. Such wind as scatters young men through the world, to seek their fortunes farther than at home, Where small experience grows. But in a few, Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me:—Antonio, my lord; and I have thrust myself into this maze, Haply to wife and thrive as best I may: Crowns in my purse I have, and goods at home, And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hor. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly to thee, and wish thee to a shrewd ill-favour'd wife? Thou 'st thank me but a little for my counsel: And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich, and very rich:—but thou'rt too much my friend, And I'll not wish thee to her.

Pit. Signior Hortensio; mist such friends as we, Few words suffice; and therefore, if thou know One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife, (As wealth is burden of my wooing dance) Ilia she as foul as was Florentius' love, As old as Sibyl, and as curt and shrewd As Socrates' Xanthippse, or a worse, She moves me not, or not removes, at least, Affection's edge in me,—were she as rough As are the swelling Adriatic seas; I come to write it wealthily in Padua; If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Gru. Nay, look you, Sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is: why, give him gold enough, and marry him to a puppet or an aglet-baby; or an old troth With ne'er a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two and fifty horses: why, nothing comes amiss, so money comes within. Hor. Petruchio, since we are stepp'd thus far in, I will continue that I broach'd in jest. I can, Petruchio, help thee to a wife With wealth enough, and young and beauteous; Brought up as best becomes a gentlewoman: Her only fault, (and that is faults enough,) Is—that she is intolerant curt, and shrewd, and forward; so beyond all measure, That, were my state far worse than it is, I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Pit. Petruchio, peace! thou know'st not gold's effect:— Tell me her father's name, and 'tis enough; For I will board her, though she chide as loud As thunder, when the clouds in autumn crack. Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola, An affable and courteous gentleman: Her name is Katharina Minola, Renow'd in Padua for her scolding tongue. Pit. I know her father, though I know not her; And he knew my deceased father well. I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her; And therefore let me be thus bold with you, To give you over at this first encounter, Unless you will accompany me thither.

Gru. I pray you, Sir, let him go while the humour lasts. O' my word, an she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would do little good upon him: she may, perhaps, call him half a score knaves, or so: why, that's nothing: an he begin once, he'll rail in his rope-tricks. I'll tell you what, Sir,—an she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more eyes to see withal than a cat. You know him not, Sir.

Hor. Tarry, Petruchio, I must go with thee; For in Baptista's keep my treasure is: He hath the jewel of my life in hold, His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca; And her withheld from me, and other more, Suitors to her, and rivals in my love; Supposing it a thing impossible [For those defects I have before rehearse'd.] That ever Katharina will be wou'd; Therefore this order hath Baptista tae'n, That none shall have access unto Bianca, Till Katharine the curt have got a husband.

Gru. Katharine the curt. A title for a maid, of all titles the worst. Hor. Now shall my friend Petruchio do me grace; And offer me, disguis'd in sober robes, To old lady, and as a schoolmaster Well seen in music, to instruct Bianca; That so I may, by this device, at least Have leave and leisure to make love to her, And, unsuspected, court her by herself.

Gru. Here's no knavery! See, to beguile the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together!—
Enter Gremio; and Lucentio disguised, with books under his arm.

Master, master, look about you: who goes there, ha?

_Hor._ Peace, Gremio: 'tis the rival of my love.

_Petruchio_._ Stand by a while.

_Gru._ A proper strilling, and an amorous! [They retire.

_Gru._ O, very well! I have perus'd the note.

_Hark you, Sir;_ I'll have them very fairly bound:
All books of love, see that at any hand;
And see you read no other lectures to her:
You understand me,—over and beside Signior Baptista's liberalty,
I'll mend it with a largess,—take your papers too,
And let me have them very well perfum'd;
For she is sweeter than perfume itself,
To whom they go. What will you read to her?

_Luc._ Whate'er I read to her, I'll plead for you,
As for my patron, (stand you so assure,)d
As firmly as you were still in place:
Yea, and perhaps with more successful words
Than you, unless you were a scholar, Sir.

_Gru._ O this learning! what a thing it is!

_Gru._ O this woodeck! what an ass it is!

_Pet._ Peace, Sirrah!

_Hor._ Gremio, mum!—[Coming forward.] God save you, signior Gremio.

_Gru._ And you are well met, signior Hortensio.

_Trow you whither I am going?—To Baptista Minola.
I promis'd to enquire carefully
About a schoolmaster for the fair Bianca;
And, by good fortune, I have lighted well
On this young man; for learning and behaviour
Fit for her turn; well read in poetry,
And other books,—good ones, I warrant ye.

_Hor._ 'Tis well: and I have met a gentleman
Hath promis'd me to help me to another,
A fine musician to instruct our mistress;
So shall I no whit be behind in duty
To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

_Gru._ Belov'd of me,—and that my deeds shall _Gru._ And that his bags shall prove. [prove.

_Hor._ Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love:
Listen to me; and if you speak me fair,
I'll tell you news indifferent good for either.

Here is a gentleman, whom by chance I met,
Upon agreement from us to his liking,
Whom I undertake to woo curst Katharine,
Yea, and to marry her, if her dowry please.

_Gru._ So said, so done, is well:

_Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?

_Gru._ I know she is an irksome brawling scold:
If that be all, masters, I hear no harm.

_Gru._ No, say'st me so, friend? What country-

_Gru._ Born in Verona, old Antonio's son; [man?
My father dead, my fortune lives for me;
And I do hope good days and long to see.

_Gru._ O Sir, such a life, with such a wife, were stray.

But if you have a stomach, to 't o'clock's name:
You shall have me assisting you in all.

Will you woo this wild cat?

_Will I live?

_Gru._ Will he woo her? ay, or I'll hang her.

_Will I live? Will I live?

_Gru._ Why came I hither, but to that intent?

_Petr._ Think you a little din can daunt mine ears?

_Have I not in my time heard lions roar?

_Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds,

Rage like an angry hoar chafed with sweat?
Have I not heard great ordnance in the field,
And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies?

_Have I not in a pitched battle heard

_Loud 'larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?

And do you tell me of a woman's tongue?

_That gives not half so great a blow to hear,

_As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?

_Tush, tush! fear boys with bugs.

_Gru._ For he fears none.

_Gru._ Hortensio, hark:

_This gentleman is happily arriv'd,

_My mind presumes, for his own good, and ours._

_Hor._ I promis'd we would be contributors,

_And bear his charge of wooing, whatsoe'er._

_Gru._ And so we will,—provided that he win her.

_Gru._ I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter Tranio, bravely apparelled, and Biondello.

_Tran._ Gentlemen, God save you! If I may be held,
Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest way
To the house of signior Baptista Minola?

_Bion._ He that has the two fair daughters:—[To _Tran._ Is't he you mean?

_Tran._ Even he, Biondello.

_Gru._ Hark you, Sir; you mean not her to—

_Tran._ Perhaps him and her, Sir; what have you to do?

_Pet._ Not her that chides, Sir, at any hand, I pray.

_Tran._ I love no chiders, Sir,—Biondello, let's

_Away. Tranio, let's. Go._

_Hor._ Sir, a word ere you go:—

_Are you a suitor to the maild you talk of, yea or no?

_Tran._ An if be, Sir, is it any offence?

_Gru._ No; if without more words you will get you hence.

_Tran._ Why, Sir, I pray, are not the streets as free
For me as for you?

_Gru._ But so is not she.

_Tran._ For what reason, I beseech you?

_Gru._ For this reason, if you will know—

_That she's the choice love of signior Gremio,

_Hor._ That she's the choice of signior Hortensio.

_Tran._ Softly, my masters! if you be gentlemen,
Do me this right,—hear me with patience.

Baptista is a noble gentleman.
To whom my father is not all unknown;
And, were his daughter fairer than she is,
She may more suitors have, and me for one.

Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand woers;
Then well one more may fair Bianca have:
And so she shall; Lucentio shall make one,
Though Paris came in hope to speed alone.

_Gru._ What, this gentleman will out-talk us all!

_Luc._ Sir, give him heart: I know he'll prove a _jade.

_Pet._ Hortensio, to what end are all these words?

_Hor._ Sir, let me be so bold as ask you,

_Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?

_Tran._ No, Sir; but hear I do, that he hath two;

_The one as famous for a scolding tongue,

_As is the other for beauteous modesty.

_Pet._ Sir, the first's for me; let her go by.

_Gru._ Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules;

_And let it be more than Alcides' twelve.

_Pet._ Sir, understand you this of me, in sooth:

The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,
ACT II.

SCENE I.—PADUA. A Room in Baptista’s House. Enter Katharina and Bianca.

Bian. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wrong yourself, To make a bondmaid and a slave of me; That I disdain: but for these other gawds, Unbind my hands, I’ll pull them off myself, Yea, all my raiment, to my petticoat; Or, what you command me will I do, So well I know my duty to my elders. Kath. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee, tell Whom thou lov’st best: see thou dissemble not. Bian. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive, I never yet held that special face Which I could fancy more than any other. Kath. Minion, thou liest: is’t not Hortensio? Bian. If you affect him, sister, here I swear, I’ll plead for you myself, but you shall have him. Kath. O then, belike, you fancy riches more: You will have Gremio to keep you fair. Bian. Is it for him you do envy me so? Nay, then you jest: and now I well perceive You have but jested with me all this while: I pr’ythee, sister Kate, untie my hands. Kath. If that be jest, then all the rest was so. [Strikes her.

Enter Baptista.

Bap. Why, how now, dame! whence grows this insolence? Bianca, stand aside:—poor girl! she weeps:— Go ply thy needle; meddle not with her,— For shame, thou biding of a devilish spirit, Why dost thou wrong her that did ne’er wrong thee? When did she cross thee with a bitter word? Kath. Her silence flouts me, and I’ll be reveng’d. [Fires after Bianca.

Bap. What! in my sight?—Bianca, get thee in. [Exit Bianca.

Bian. What! will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see

She is your treasure, she must have a husband; I must dance barefoot on her wedding-day, And, for your love to her, lead apes in hell. Talk not to me: I will go sit and weep, Till I can find occasion of revenge.

Enter Gremio, with Lucrèce in the habit of a weam man; Petrucho, with Hortensio as a musician; and Tranio, with Bombelio bearing a lute and books.

Gre. Good-morrow, neighbour Baptista.
Bap. Good-morrow, neighbour Gremio.—God save you, gentle sir!

Pet. And you, good sir. Pray, have you not a call’d Katharina, fair and virtuous? [daughter Bap. I have a daughter, Sir, call’d Katharina. Gre. You are too blunt: go to it orderly. Pet. You wrong me, signior Gremio: give me leave.

[To BAP.] I am a gentleman of Verona, Sir, That,—hearing of her beauty and her wit, Her affability and bashful modesty, Her wondrous qualities and mild behaviour.— Am bold to show myself a forward guest Within your house, to make mine eye the witness Of that report which I so oft have heard. And, for an entrance to my entertainment, I do present you with a man of mine, [Presenting Hortensio. Cunning in music and the mathematics, To instruct her fully in those sciences, Whereof I know she is not ignorant: Accept of him, or else you do me wrong: His name is Lucio, born in Mantua. Bap. You’re welcome, Sir: and he, for your good sake. But for my daughter Katharine,—this I know, She is not for your turn, the more my grief. Pet. I see you do not mean to part with her; Or else you like not of my company. Bap. Mistake me not; I speak but as I find. Whence are you, Sir? and what may I call your name? Pet. Petruchio is my name; Antonio’s son, A man well known throughout all Italy. Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his Grace. Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray, [sake. Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too; Baccare! you are marvellous forward. Pet. O, pardon me, signior Gremio; I would fare wooring. Gre. I doubt it not, Sir; but you will curse your wooring.

Neighbour, this is a gift very grateful, I am sure of it. To express the like kindness myself, that have been more kindly beheld to you than any, I freely give unto you this young scholar, [Presenting Lucrèce,] that hath been long studying at Rheims; as cunning in Greek, Latin, and other languages, as the other in music and mathematics: his name is Cambio; pray accept his service. Bap. A thousand thanks, signior Gremio. Welcome, good Cambio.—[To Tranio.] But gentle Sir, methinks you walk like a stranger: may I be so bold to know the cause of your coming? Tran. Pardon me, Sir, the boldness is mine own; That, being a stranger in this city here, Do make myself a suitor to your daughter, Unto Bianca, fair and virtuous.
SCENE I.

TAMING OF THE SHREW.

Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me,
In the preferment of the eldest sister.
This liberty is all that I request,—
That, upon knowledge of my parentage,
I may have welcome 'mongst the rest that woo,
And free access and favour as the rest:
And, toward the education of your daughters,
I here bestow a simple instrument,
And this small packet of Greek and Latin books:
If you accept them, then their worth is great.

Bap. Lucentio is your name,—of whence, I pray?

Tra. Of Fiesa, Sir; son to Vincentio.

Bap. A mighty man of Fiesa; by report
I know him well; you are very welcome, Sir.—
[To Hor.] Take you the lute; [To Luc.] and you the set of books;
You shall go with your pupils presently.—
Hola, within!

Enter a Servant.

Sirrah, lead these gentlemen
To my daughters; and tell them both,
These are their tutors: bid them use them well.

[Exit Servant, with Hortensio, Lucentio, and Biondello.

We will go walk; for we hate the orchard,
And then to dinner. You are passing welcome,
And so I pray you all to think yourselves.

Pet. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste,
And every day I cannot come to woo.
You knew my father well; and in him, me,
Left solely heir to all his lands and goods,
Which I have better'd rather than decreas'd:
Then tell me,—if I get your daughter's love,
What dowry shall I have with her to wife?

Bap. After my death, the one half of my lands;
And, in possession, twenty thousand crowns.

Pet. And, for that dowry, I'll assure her of Her widowhood,—be it that she survive me,—
In all my lands and leases whatsoever:
Let specialties be therefore drawn between us,
That covenants may be kept on either hand.

Bap. Ay, when the special thing is well obtain'd,
That is, her love; for that is still in all.

Pet. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you, father,
I am as peremptory as she proud-minded;
And where two raging fires meet together,
They do consume the thing that feeds their fury:
Though little fire grows great with little wind,
Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all:
So I to her, and so she yields to me;
For I am rough, and woo not like a hare.

Bap. Well may't thou woo, and happy be thy speed!
But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.

Pet. Ay, to the proof; as mountains are for winds,
That shall not, though they blow perpetually.

Restorer Hortensio, with his hand broken.

Bap. How now, my friend? why dost thou look so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale.

Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good musician?

Hor. I think she'll sooner prove a soldier:
Iron may hold with her, but never lutes.

Bap. Why, then thou canst not break her to the Hor. Why so; for she hath broke the lute to me.
I did but tell her she mistook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering:

When, with a most impatient devilish spirit,
"Frets, call you these?" quoth she; "I'll use with them!":
And, with that word, she struck me on the head,
And through the instrument my plate made way;
And there I stood amazed for a while,
As on a pillory, looking through the lute;
While she did call me rascal fiddler,
And twangling Jack; with twenty such vile terms,
As she had studied to misuse me so.

Pet. Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench!
I love her ten times more than e'er I did:
O, how I long to have some chat with her!

Bap. [To Hor.] Well, go with me, and be not so disconsol'd:
Proceed in practice with my younger daughter;
She's apt to learn, and thankful for good terms.—
Signior Petruchio, will you go with us,
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you?

Pet. I pray you do; I will attend her here,

[Exeunt Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, and Hortensio.

And woo her with some spirit when she comes.
Say, that she rail; why, then I'll tell her plain,
She sings as sweetly as a nightingale.
Say, that she frown; I'll say she looks as clear
As morning roses newly wash'd with dew:
Say, be she mute, and will not speak a word;
Then I'll commend her volubility.
And say she uttereth piercing eloquence:
If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks,
As though she bid me stay by her a week:
If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day:
When I shall ask the banns, and when he married,—
But here she comes; and now, Petruchio, speak.

Enter Katharina.

Good-morrow, Kate; for that's your name, I hear.

Kath. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing:
They call me Katherine, that do talk of me. [Kate,

Pet. You lie, in faith; for you are call'd plain
And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst;
But, Kate, be prettier Kate in Christendom,
Kate of Kate-Hall, my super-dainty Kate,
For dainties are all cates,—and therefore, Kate,
Take this of me, Kate of my consolacion;
Hearing thy maidens' prate in every town.
Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded,
(Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs,) Myself am mov'd to woo thee for my wife.

Kath. Mov'd! in good time: let him that mov'd you hither,
Remove you hence: I knew you at the first,
You were a moveable.

Pet. Why, what's a moveable?

Kath. A joint-stool.

Pet. Thou hast hit it: come, sit on me.

Kath. Asses are made to bear, and so are you.

Pet. Women are made to bear, and so are you.

Kath. No such jade as you, if me you mean.

Pet. Alas, good Kate! I will not burden thee;
For, knowing thee to be but young and light,—
Kath. Too light for such a swain as you to catch;
And yet as heavy as my weight should be.

Pet. Should be! should buzz.

Kath. Well taken, and like a buzzard.

Pet. O slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?
Kath. Ay, for a turtle,—as he takes a buzzard.
Pet. Come, come, you wassp; ’tis faith, you are too angry.
Kath. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.
Pet. My remedy is then, to pluck it out.
Kath. Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.
Pet. Who knows not where a wasp does wear his sting?
Kath. In his tail.
Pet. In his tongue.
Kath. Whose tongue?
Pet. Yours, if you talk of tails; and so farewell.
Good Kate; I am a gentleman.
Kath. That I’ll try. [Striking him.
Pet. I swear I’ll cuff you, if you strike again.
Kath. So may you lose your arms:
If you strike me, you are no gentleman;
And if no gentleman, why then no arms.
Pet. A herald, Kate? O, put me in thy books!
Kath. What is your crest? a cockcomb?
Pet. A cockless cock, so Kate will be my hen.
Kath. No cock of mine; you crow too like a crow.
Pet. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not look so sour.
Kath. It is my fashion, when I see a crab.
Pet. Why, here’s no crab; and Kate therefore look not sour.
Kath. There is, there is. [sour.
Pet. Then show it me.
Pet. Had I a glass, I would.
Pet. What, you mean my face?
Kath. Well aim’d of such a young one.
Pet. Now, by Saint George, I am too young for you.
Kath. Yet you are wither’d. [you.
Pet. ’Tis with care.
Kath. I care not.
Pet. Nay, hear you, Kate: in sooth, you scape not so.
Kath. I chafe you, if you tarry: let me go.
Pet. No, not a whit: I find you passing gentle.
’Twas told me, you were rough, and coy, and sullen,
And now I find report a very liar;
For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous,
But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-time flowers:
Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look askance,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will;
Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk;
But thou, with mildness entertain’s thy woovers,
With gentle conference, soft and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limp?
O slanderous world! Kate, like the hazel-twig,
Is straight and slender; and as brown in hue
As hazel nuts, and sweeter than the kernels.
O! let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.
Kath. Go, fool, and whom thou keep’st, command.
Pet. Did ever Dian so become a grove,
As Kate this chamber with her princely guilt?
Pet. O, be thou Dian, and let her be Kate;
And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportful!
Kath. Where did you study all this goodly speech?
Pet. It is expostume, from my mother-wit.
Kath. A witty mother! wiles else her son.
Pet. Am I not wise?
Kath. Yes; keep you warm.
Pet. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katherine, in thy
And therefore, setting all this chat aside, [bed:
Thus in plain terms,—your father hath consented
That you shall be my wife; your dowry ‘greed on;
And, will you, nill you, I will marry you.
Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn;
For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,
(Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well.)
Thou must be married to no man but me:
For I am he, am born to tame you, Kate;
And bring you from a wild Kate to a Kate
Conformable, as other household Kate.
Here comes your father: never make denial;
I must and will have Katharine to my wife.

Re-enter Baptista, Gremio, and Tranio.
Bap. Now, signior Petruchio, how speed you with my daughter?
Pet. How but well, Sir? how but well?
It were impossible I should speed amiss.
Bap. Why, how now, daughter Katharine! in your dumps?
Kath. Call you me daughter? now, I promise you,
You have show’d a tender fatherly regard,
To wish me wed to one half lunatic;
A mad-cap ruffian, and a swearing Jack,
That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.
Pet. Father, ’tis thus:—yourself and all the world,
That talk’d of her, have talk’d amiss of her:
If she be curst, it is for policy,
For she’s not froward, but modest as the dove;
She is not hot, but temperate as the morn;
For patience she will prove a second Grissel,
And Roman Lucrece for her chastity:
And to conclude,—we have ‘greed so well together,
That upon Sunday is the wedding-day.
Kath. I’ll see thee hang’d on Sunday first.
Gre. Hark, Petruchio; she says she’ll see thee hang’d first.
Tra. Is this your speeding? say then, good night our part!
Pet. Be patient, gentlemen; I choose her for my-
If she and I be pleased, what’s that to you? [self;
’Tis bargain’d ‘twixt us twain, being alone,
That she shall still be curst in company.
I tell you, ’tis incredible to believe
How much she loves me: O, the kindest Kate!
She hung about my neck; and kiss on kiss
She vied so fast, protesting oath on oath,
That in a twink she won me to her love;
O, you are wise! ‘tis a world to see,
How tame, when men and women are alone,
A meazock wretch can make the curstiest shrew.—
Give me thy hand, Kate: I will unto Venice,
To buy apparel ‘gainst the wedding-day.—
Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests;
I will be sure my Katharine shall be fine.
Bap. I know not what to say; but give me your hands;
God send you joy, Petruchio! ’tis a match.
Gre. Tra. Amen, say we: we will be witnesses.
Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu; I will to Venice; Sunday comes apace:—
We will have rings, and things, and fine array;
And, kiss me, Kate, we will be married on Sunday.
[Exeunt PETRUCHIO and KATHARINA, severally.
Gre. Was ever match clapp’d up so suddenly?
Bap. Faith, gentlemen, now I play a merchant’s
And venture madly on a desperate mart. [part.
Tra. ’Twas a commodity lay fretting by you;
’Twill bring you gain, or perish on the seas.
Bap. The gain I seek is quiet in the match.
SCENE I.]
TAMING OF THE SHREW.

Now, on the Sunday following, shall Bianca
Be bride to you, if you make this assurance;
If not, to signior Gremio:
And so, I take my leave, and thank you both.

Grem. Adieu, good neighbour. [Exit Bap.] Now
I fear not:
Sirrah young gamester, your father was a fool
To give thee all, and in his waning age
Set foot under thy table. Tut, a toy!
An old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy. [Exit.

Tra. A vengeance on your crafty wither’d hide!
Yet I have fac’d it with a card of ten.
’Tis in my head to do my master good—
I see no reason, but suppo’d Lucentio
Must get a father, call’d—suppo’d Vincentio;
And that’s a wonder: fathers, commonly,
Do get their children; but in this case of wooing,
A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning. [Exit.

ACT III.
SCENE I.—PADUA. A Room in Baptista’s House.
Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.

Luc. Fiddler, forbear; you grow too forward, Sir:
Have you so soon forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katharine welcomed you withal?

Hor. But, wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heavenly harmony:
Then give me leave to have prerogative;
And when in music we have spent an hour,
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.

Luc. Preposterous ass, that never read so far.
To know the cause why music was ordain’d?
Was it not to refresh the mind of man,
After his studies, or his usual pain?
Then give me leave to read philosophy,
And while I pause, serve in your harmony.

Hor. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine.

Bian. Why, gentlemen, you do me double wrong,
To strive for that which resteth in my choice:
I am no breaching scholar in the schools;
I’ll not be tied to hours nor pointed times,
But learn my lessons as I please myself.
And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down:—
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles;
His lecture will be done, ere you have tun’d.

Hor. You’ll leave his lecture when I am in tune?

Luc. That will be never:—[Hortensio retires.

[Hor. That will be never:—tune your instrument.
Bian. Where let we last?

Luc. Here, madam:—
Hac sitto Sittie; hic est Sigia tellus;
His steterat Priami regia celsa senti.

Bian. Construe them.

Luc. Hac quod, as I told you before,—Sittie, I am Lucentio,—hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pian,— Sigia tellus, disguised thus to get your love:—Hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing,— Priami, is my man Tranio,—regia, bearing my port,—celsa senti, that we might beguile the old pantaloons.

Hor. [Coming forward.] Madam, my instrument’s
in tune.
Bian. Let’s hear.—
O fie! the treble jars.
Luc. Split in the hole, man, and tune again.
[Hor. again retire.
Bian. Now let me see if I can construe it:—
Haec simulita, I know you not;—haec est Sigilia telus, I trust you not;—Haec hestraat Priam, take heed he hear us not;—regia, presume not;—celsa semis, despair not.
[Hor. Again coming forward.] Madam, ‘tis now
in tune.
Luc. All but the base.
Hor. The base is right; ‘tis the base knave that jars.
How fiery and forward our pedant is!
[Aside.] Now, for my life, the knave doth court
my love:
Peloruce. I’ll watch you better yet.
Bian. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.
Luc. Mistrust it not; for, sure, Aspicides
Was Ajax,—call’d so from his grandfather.
Bian. I must believe my master; else, I promise
I should be arguing still upon that doubt: [you,
But let it rest.—Now, Licio, to you:—
Good masters, take it not unkindly, pray,
That I have been thus pleasant with you both.
[Hor. To Lucentio.] You may go walk, and give me leave awhile:
My lessons make no music in three parts.
Luc. Are you so formal, Sir? [Aside.] Well, I must wait,
And watch withal; for, but I be deciv’d,
Our fine musician groweth amorous.
Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To learn the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of art;
To teach you gamut in a brierless sort,
More pleasant, pithy, and effectual,
Than hath been taught by any of my trade:
And there it is in writing, fairly drawn.
Bian. Why, I am past my gamut long ago.
Hor. Yet read the gamut of Hortensio.
Bian. [Reads.]
"Gamut I am, the ground of all accord,
A key to plead Horatius’s passion,
B a i n a, Bianca, take him for thy lord,
C o n n a, that loves with all affection.
D e s e r e, one cliff, two notes here! I
E i n m i, show pity, or I die."
Call you this gamut? tut! I like it not:
Old fashions please me best; I am not so nice,
To change true rules for odd inventions.

Enter a Servant.
Serv. Mistress, your father prays you leave your books,
And help to dress your sister’s chamber up;
You know, to-morrow is the wedding-day.
Bian. Farewell, sweet masters, both; I must be gone.
[Exeunt Bianca and Servant.
Luc. ‘Faith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay.
[Exit.
Hor. But I have cause to pry into this pedant:
Methinks he looks as though he were in love:—
Yet if they thoughts, Bianca, be so humble,
To cast thy wand’ring eyes on every stare,
Seize thee that list: if once I find thee ranging,
Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing.
[Exit.

SCENE II.—PADUA. Before Baptista’s House.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katharina, Bianca, Lucentio, and Attendants.

Bap. [To Tranio.] Signior Lucentio, this is the pointed day
That Katharine and Petruchio should be married,
And yet we hear not of our son-in-law.
What will be said? what mockery will it be,
To want the bridegroom, when the priest attends
To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage?
What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?
Kath. No shame but mine: I must, forsooth, be ford’t.
To give my hand, oppos’d against my heart,
Unto a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleen;
Who wo’d in haste, and means to wed at leisure.
I told you, I, he was a frantic fool,
Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour;
And, to be noted for a merry man,
He’ll woo a thousand, point the day of marriage,
Make friends invited, and proclaim the banns;
Yet never means to wed where he hath wo’d.
Now must the world point out poor Katharine,
And say,—‘Lo, there is mad Petrucho’s wife,
If it would please him come and marry her!’

Tra. Patience, good Katharine, and Baptista too.
Upon my life, Petrucho means but well,
Whatever fortune stays him from his word:
Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise;
Though he be merry, yet withal he’s honest.

Kath. Would Katharine had never seen him though!
[Exit waging, followed by Bianca and
others.

Bap. Go, girl; I cannot blame thee now to weep;
For such an injury would vex a saint,
Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Enter Biondello.

Bian. Master, master! old news, and such news as you never heard of!

Bap. Is it new and old too? how may that be?

Bian. Why, is it not news to hear of Petrucho’s coming?

Bap. Is he come?

Bian. Why, no, Sir.

Bap. What then?

Bian. He is coming.

Bap. When will he be here?

Bian. When he stands where I am, and sees you
there.

Tra. But, say, what to thine old news?

Bian. Why, Petrucho is coming, in a new hat and an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches thrice turned; a pair of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another laced; an old rusty sword ta’en out of the town armoury, with a broken hilt, and chapeless; with two broken points: his horse hipped with an old mothy saddle, and stirrups of no kindred; besides, possessed with the slugs, and like to mose in the chine; troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions, full of windgulls, spied with sparrows, raised with the yellow past cure of the fives, stark spoiled with the stagger, beignaw with the bots, swayed in the back,
and shoulder-shotten; never-legged, before, and with a half-checked bit, and a head-stall of sheep’s leather;
which, being restrained to keep him from stumbling, hath been crosseth burst, and now repaired with knots; one girth six times pieced, and a woman's crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name fairly set down in stude, and here and there pieced with pack-thread.

Bap. Who comes with him?

Biam. O, Sir, his lackey, for all the world caparioned like the horse; with a linen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-bose on the other, garnished with a red and blue list; an old hat, and The humour of forty fancies pricked in't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparel; and not like a Christian footboy, or a gentleman's lackey.

Traf. 'Tis some odd humour pricks him to this fashion.

Yet oftentimes he goes but mean apparel'd.

Bap. I am glad he is come, howse'er he comes.

Biam. Why, Sir, he comes not.

Bap. Didst thou not say, he comes?

Biam. Who? that Petruchio came?

Bap. Ay, that Petruchio came.

Biam. No, Sir; I say his horse comes, with him on his back.

Bap. Why, that's all one.

Biam. Nay, by Saint James, I hold you a penny, a horse and a man is more than one, and yet not many.

Enter Petruchio and Grumio.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants? who is at home?

Bap. You are welcome, Sir.

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you halt not.

Traf. Not so well apparell'd, as I wish you were.

Pet. Were it better, I should rush in thus. But where is Kate? where is my lovely bride?— How does my father?—Gentles, methinks you frown; And wherefore gaze this godly company, As if they saw some wondrous monument, Some comet, or unusual prodigy? [day: Bap. Why, Sir, you know this is your wedding; First were we sad, fearing you would not come; Now suffer, that you come so unprovided. Fei, doff this habit, shame to your estate, An eye-sore to our solemn festival! Traf. And tell us, what occasion of import Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife, And sent you lither so unlike yourself?

Pet. Tedium it were to tell, and harsh to hear: Sufficeeth, I am come to keep my word, Though in some part enforced to digress; Which, at more leisure, I will so excuse As you shall well be satisfied withal. But where is Kate? I stay too long from her: The morning o'er, 'tis time we were at church.

Traf. See not your bride in these uneventful robes: Go to my chamber; put on clothes of mine.

Pet. Not I, believe me: thus I'll visit her.

Bap. But thus, I trust, you will not marry her.

Pet. Good sooth, even thus; therefore have done with words: To me she's married, not unto my clothes: Could I repair what she will wear in me, As I can change these poor accouterments, Trewere well for Kate, and better for myself. But what a fool am I to chat with you, When I should bid good-morrow to my bride, And seal the title with a lovely kiss!

[Exit Petruchio and Grumio.

Traf. He hath some meaning in his mad attire. We will persuade him, be it possible, To put on better ere he go to church.

Bap. I'll after him, and see the event of this.

[Exit Bap. Grumio.

Traf. But, Sir, to love concerneth us to add Her father's liking: which to bring to pass, As I before imparted to your worship, I am to get a man,—whate'er he be, It skills not much, we'll fit him to our turn,— And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa: And make assurance, here in Padua, Of greater sums than I have promised. So shall you quietly enjoy your goods, And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow schoolmaster Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly, Trewere good, methinks, to steal our marriage; Which once perform'd, let all the world say no, I'll keep mine own, despite of all the world. Traf. That by degrees we mean to look into, And watch our vantage in this business; We'll over-reach the grey-beard, Gremio, The narrow-prying father, Minolla, The quaint musician, amorous Licio; All for my master's sake, Lucentio.

Re-enter Gremio.

Signior Gremio, came you from the church?

Grem. As willingly as e'er I came from school. Traf. And is the bride, and bridgroom, coming home?

Grem. A bridgroom say you? 'tis a groom indeed, A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find. Traf. Curser than she? why, 'tis impossible. Grem. Why, he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend. Traf. Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam. Grem. Tut, she's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him! I'll tell you, Sir Lucentio: when the priest Should ask if Katharine should be his wife, "Ay, by gods-wounds!" quoth he; and swore so loud That, all amaz'd, the priest let fall the book; And, as he stood'd again to take it up, The mad-brain'd bridgroom took him such a cuff, That down fell priest and book, and book and priest: "Now take that up," quoth he, "a fool is he!" Traf. What said the wench when he arose again? Grem. Trembled and shook: for why, he stamp'd As if the vicar meant to coax him. [and swore, But after many ceremonies done, He calls for wine: "A health!" quoth he; as if He had been aboard, carousing to his mates After a storm: quaff'd off the muscadel, And threw the sops all in the sexton's face; Having no other reason But that his beard grew thin and hungerly, And seem'd to ask him sops as he was drinking. This done, he took the bride about the neck, And kiss'd her lips with such a klumous smack, That, at the parting, all the church did echo: And I, seeing this, came thence for very shame; And after me, I know, the rout is coming. Such a mad marriage never was before:— Hark! hark! I hear the minstreis play.

[Music.
PET. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your I know you think to dine with me to-day, [pains: And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer; But so it is, my haste doth call me hence, And therefore here I meant to take my leave. BAP. Is't possible you will away to night? PET. I must away to-day, before night come: Make it no wonder; if you knew my business, You would entreat me rather go then stay,— And, honest company, I thank you all, That have beheld me give away myself To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife: Dine with my father, drink a health to me; For I must hence; and farewell to you all. TRA. Let us entreat you stay till after dinner. PET. It may not be. GRO. Let me entreat you. PET. It cannot be. KATH. Let me entreat you. PET. I am content. KATH. Are you content to stay? PET. I am content you shall entreat me stay; But yet not stay, entreat me how you can. KATH. Now, if you love me, stay. PET. GRUM. Ay, Sir, they be ready: the oats have eaten the horses. KATH. Nay, then, Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day; No, nor to-morrow; not till I please myself. The door is open, Sir; there lies your way: You may be jogging while your boots are green; For me, I'll not be gone till I please myself: 'Tis like you'll prove a jolly early groom, That take it on you at the first so roundly. PET. O Kate, content thee; p'rythee, be not angry. KATH. I will be angry: what hast thou to do?— Father, be quiet: he shall stay my leisure. PET. Ay, marry, Sir, now it begins to work. KATH. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinner: I see, a woman may be made a fool, If she had not a spirit to resist. PET. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy command. Obey the bride, you that attend on her; [mand. Go to the feast, revel and domineer, Carouse full measure to her maidenhead, Be merry and merry,—go hang yourselves! But for my bonny Kate, she must with me. Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret; I will be master of what is mine own: She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house, My household-stuff, my field, my barn, My horse, my ox, my ass, my any thing; And here she stands, touch her whoever dare; I'll bring mine action on the proudest he That stops my way in Padua.—Grumio. Draw forth thy weapon, we're beset with thieves; Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man.— Fear not, sweet wench, they shall not touch thee, I'll buckler thee against a million. [Kate; [Exit PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, and GRUMIO. BAP. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones. GRU. Went they not quickly, I should die with laughing. TRA. Of all mad matches never was the like! LUC. Mistress, what's your opinion of your sister? BIAN. That, being mad herself, she's madly mated. GRO. I warrant him, Petruchio is fated. BAP. Neighbours and friends, though bride and bridegroom wants For to supply the places at the table, You know there wants no junkets at the feast.— Lucentio, you shall supply the bridegroom's place; And let Bianca take her sister's room. TRA. Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride it? BAP. She shall, Lucentio.—Come, gentlemen, let's go. [Exeunt. ACT IV. SCENE I.—A Hall in PETRUCHIO'S Country House. Enter GRUMIO. GRO. Fie, fie, on all tired jade, on all mad masters, and all foul ways! Was ever man so besotted? was ever man so cloyed? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warm them. Now, were not I a little pale, and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me: but, with blowing the fire, shall warm myself; for, considering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold. Ho, ho! Curtis! Enter CURTIS. CURT. Who is that calls so coldly? GRO. A piece of ice: if thou doubt it, thou mayst slide from my shoulder to my heel, with no greater a run but my head and my neck. A fire, good Curtis. CURT. Is my master and his wife coming, Grumio? GRO. O, ay, Curtis, ay: and therefore fire, fire; cast on no water. CURT. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported? GRO. She was, good Curtis, before this frost: but, thou knowest, winter tames man, woman, and beast; for it hath tamed my old master, and my new mistress, and myself, fellow Curtis. CURT. Away, you three-inch fool? I am no beast. GRO. Am I but three inches? why, thy horn is a foot: and so long am I at the least. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complain on thee to our mistress, whose hand (she being now at hand) thou shalt soon feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office? CURT. I pr'ythee, good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world? GRO. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine; and therefore, fire: do thy duty, and have thy duty, for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death. CURT. There's fire ready; and therefore, good Grumio, the news? GRO. Why, "Jack, boy! ho, boy!" and as much news as thou wilt. CURT. Come, you are so full of cony-catchings!— GRO. Why therefore, fire; for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? is supper ready, the house trimmed, rushes strewn, cobwebs swept; the serving-men in their new lustration, their white stockings, and every officer his wedding-garment on? Be the Jacks fair within, the Jills fair without, and carpets laid, and every thing in order?

_Curt._ All ready; and therefore, I pray thee, news?

_Gru._ First, know, my horse is tired; my master and mistress fallen out.

_Curt._ How?

_Gru._ Out of their saddles into the dirt; and thereby hangs a tale.

_Curt._ Let’s ha’t; good Grumio.

_Gru._ Lend thine ear.

_Curt._ Here.

_Curt._ This is to feel a tale, not to hear a tale.

_Gru._ And therefore ’tis called a sensible tale: and this cuff was but to knock at your ear, and be seech listening. Now I begin: _Imprimis_, we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress.

_Curt._ Both of one horse?

_Gru._ What’s that to thee?

_Curt._ Why, a horse.

_Gru._ Tell thou the tale—but hadst thou not crossed me, thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse; thou shouldst have heard, in how many a place; how she was bemoiled; how he left her with the horse upon her; how he beat me because her horse stumbled; how she wasted through the dirt to pluck him off me; how he swore; how she prayed—that never prayed before; how I cried; how the horses ran away; how her bridle was burst; how I lost my crupper;—with many things of worthy memory, which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienced to thy grave.

_Curt._ By this reckoning, he is more shrew than she.

_Gru._ Ay; and that, thou and the proudest of you all shall know, when he comes home. But what talk I of this? Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugasop, and the rest: let their heads be sleekly combed, their blue coats brushed, and their garters of an indifferent knit: let them court’sey with their left legs; and not presume to touch a hair of my master’s horse-tail, till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

_Curt._ They are.

_Gru._ Call them forth.

_Curt._ Do you hear? ho! you must meet my master, countenance my mistress.

_Gru._ Why, she hath a face of her own.

_Curt._ Who knows not that?

_Gru._ Thou, it seems, that callest for company to countenance her.

_Curt._ I call them forth to credit her.

_Gru._ Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

_Enter several Servants._

_Nath._ Welcome home, Grumio!

_Phil._ How now, Grumio?

_Tes._ What, Grumio?

_Nich._ Fellow Grumio!

_Guu._ How now, old lad?

_Gru._ Welcome, you—how now, you,—what, you,—fellow, you;—and thus much for greeting.

Now, my spruce companions, is all ready, and all things neat?

_Nath._ All things is ready. How near is our master?

_Gru._ E’en at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not,—Cock’s passion, silence!—I hear my master.

_Enter Petruchio and Katharina._

_Petr._ Where be these knives? What, no man at door,

To hold my stirrup, nor to take my horse!

Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip?

_All Serv._ Here, here, Sir; here, Sir; here, Sir.

_Petr._ Here, Sir! here, Sir! here, Sir! here, Sir!

You logger-headed and unpolish’d groom!

What, no attendance? no regard? no duty?

Where is the foolish knife I sent before?

_Gru._ Here, Sir; as foolish as I was before.

_Petr._ You peasanst swain! you whoreson salt-horse drudge!

Did I not bid thee meet me in the park,

And bring along these rascal knives with thee?

_Gru._ Nathaniel’s coat, Sir, was not fully made,

And Gabriel’s pumps were all unpin’d! the heel;

There was no link to colour Peter’s hat,

And Walter’s dagger was not come from sheathing:

There were none fine but Adam, Ralph, and Greg.

The rest were rapped, old, and beggared;

_as yet, as they are, here are they to come to meet you.

_Petr._ Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper in.—

_[Exeunt some of the Servants._

_Sing._ Where is the wife that late I wed?

_Are there those?—Sit down, Kate, and well-

Soud, soud, soud, soud!—

[Come._

_Enter Servants, with supper._

Why, when, I say?—Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry,—

Off with my boots, you rogues! you villains, when?

_Sing._ It was the fear of orders gray,

As he forth walk’d on his way!—

Out, you rogue! you pluck my foot awry;

_Takes that, and mend the plucking off the other.—

Be merry, Kate.—Some water, here; what, ho!—

Where is my spaniel Trolus?—Sirrah, get you hence,

And bid my cousin Fernland come hither:—

_[Exit Servant._

One, Kate, that you must kiss, and be acquainted with,

Where are my slippers?—Shall I have some water?

_Enter a Servant, with a basin and ever._

Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily.—

_Serv._ He that is the ever fair, _Petruchio_ _strikes him._

You whoreson villain! will you let it fall?

_Auth._ Patience, I pray you; ’twas a fault unwilling.

_Petr._ A whoreson, beeleeched, flap-car’d

_knave!—

Come, Kate; sit down; I know you have a stomach.

Will you give thanks, sweet Kate; or else shall I—

What’s this? mutton?—

_Ay._

_1 Serv._ Who brought it?

_Petr._ ’Tis burnt; and so is all the meat.

What dogs are these!—Where is the rascal cook?

How durst you, villains, bring it from the dresser,

And serve it thus to me that love it not?

_[Throws the meat, &c. at them._

There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all,

You heedless jollheads and unmann’d slaves!—

What, do you grumble? I’ll be with you straight.
Kath. I pray you, husband, be not so disquiet: The meat was well, if you were so contented.

Pet. I tell thee, Kate, 'twas burnt and dried away; And I expressly am forbid to touch it. For it engenders cholera, planteth anger; And better 'twere, that both of us did fast,— Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric,— Than feed it with such a verminous flesh. Be patient; to-morrow 't shall be mended, And, for this night, we'll fast for company:— Come, I will bring thee to thy bridal chamber.

[Exeunt PETRUCELLIO, KATHERINA, and CURTIS.

Nath. Peter, didst ever see the like?
Petr. He kills her in her own humour.

Re-enter CURTIS.

Gru. Where is he?

Cur. In her chamber,
Making a sermon of continency to her;
And rails, and swears, and rates, that she, poor soul,
Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak,
And sits as one new-risen from a dream.
Away, away! for he is coming hither.

[Exeunt.

Re-enter PETRUCELLIO.

Pet. Thus have I politicly begun my reign, And 'tis my hope to end successfully. My falcon now is sharp, and passing empty; And till she stoop, she must not be full-gorg'd, For then she never looks upon her lure. Another way I have to man my haggard, To make her come, and know her keeper's call; That is, to watch her, as we watch these kites That bate, and beat, and will not be obedient. She eat no meat to-day, nor none shall eat; Last night she slept not, nor to-night she shall not; As with the meat, some undeserved fault I'll find about the making of the bed; And here I'll fling the pillow, there the bolster, This way the coverlet, another way the sheets:— Ay, and amid this hurly, I intend That all is done in reverend care of her; And, in conclusion, she shall watch all night; And, if she chance to nod, I'll rail and bawl, And with the clamour keep her still awake. This is a way to kill a wife with kindness; And thus I'll curb her mad and headstrong humour.

He that knows better how to tame a shrew, Now let him speak: 'tis charity to show,

[Exit.

Scene II.—PADUA. Before Baptista's House.

Enter TRanio and Hortensio.

Tra. Is't possible, friend Licio, that mistress Bianca
Doth fancy any other but Lucentio? I tell you, Sir, she bears me fair in hand.

Her. Sir, to satisfy you in what I have said, Stand by, and mark the manner of his teaching.

[They stand aside.

Enter BLANCA and LUCENTIO.

Luc. Now, mistress, profit you in what you read?

Bian. What, master, read you? first resolve me that.

Luc. I read that thou professest, the Art to Love.

Bian. And may you prove, Sir, master of your art!

Luc. While you, sweet dear, prove mistress of my heart.

[They retire.

Her. [Coming forward] Quick proceeders, marry!

Now, tell me, I pray,

You that durst swear that your mistress Bianca
Lov'd none in the world so well as Lucentio.

Tra. O despicable love! unconstant womankind!— I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful.

Her. Mistake no more: I am not Licio,
Nor a musician, as I seem to be;
But one that scorns to live in this disguise,
For such a one as leaves a gentleman,
And makes a god of such a cullion:—

Know, Sir, that I am call'd Hortensio.

Tra. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca;
And since mine eyes are witness of her lightness,
I will with you,—if you be so contented,—

Forswear Bianca and her love for ever.

Her. See, how they kiss and court!—Signior Lu-
Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow [centio,

Never to woo her more; but I do forswear her,
As one unworthy all the former favours
That I have fondly flatter'd her withal.

Tra. And here I take the like unfeigned oath,
Never to marry with her, though she would entreat;
Fix on her! see, how beastly she doth court him.

Her. Would all the world, but he, have quite for-sworn! For me, that I may surely keep mine oath, I will be married to a wealthy widow,

Ere three days pass, which hath as long lov'd me,

As I have lov'd this proud, disdainful haggard.

And so farewell, signior Lucentio.

Kindness in women, not their beautiful looks,

Shall win my love;—and so I take my leave,

In resolution as I swore before.

[Exit Hortensio. LUCENTIO and BLANCA advance.

Tra. Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace
As 'longeth to a lover's blessed case!

Nay, I have ta'en you napping, gentle love; And have forsworn you, with Hortensio.

Bian. Tranio, you jest; but have you both for-sworn me?

Tra. Mistress, we have.

Then we are rid of Lucio.

Luc. I, faith, he 'll have a lusty widow now,

That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.

Bian. God give him joy!

Tra. Ay, and he 'll tame her.

He says so, Tranio,

Tra. 'Faith, he is gone unto the taming-school.

Bian. The taming-school! what, is there such a place?

Tra. Ay, mistress, and Petruchio is the master;

That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long,

to tame a shrew, and charm her chattering tongue.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. O master, master, I have watch'd so long;

That I'm dog-weak! but at last I spied

An ancient angel coming down the hill,

Will serve the turn.

Tra. What is he, Biondello?

Bion. Master, a mercantile, or a pedant,

I know not what; but formal in apparel,

In gait and countenance surely like a father.

Luc. And what of him, Tranio?
Scene III.—A Room in Petruchio’s House.

Enter Katharina and Grumio.

Kat. No, no, forsooth; I dare not, for my life.

Kru. The more it wrongs, the more he spite
What did he marry me to famish me? [appears:
Beggars, that come unto my father’s door,
Upon entreaty have a present alms;
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity;
But I,—who never knew how to entreat,
Nor never needed that I should entreat,
Am starv’d for meat, giddy for lack of sleep;
With oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed;
And that which spites me more than all these wants,
He does it under name of perfect love;
As who should say, if I should sleep, or eat,
Twere deadly sickness, or else present death.—
I pry thee go, and get me some repast;
I care not what, so it be wholesome food.

Gru. What say you to a neat’s foot?

Kat. ‘Tis passing good: I pray thee let me have it.

Gru. I fear it is too cholerick a meat.

Kat. How say you to a fat tripe, and bring it thee?

Kat. I like it well: good Grumio, fetch it me.

Gru. I cannot tell; I fear ‘tis cholerick.

What say you to a piece of beef, and mustard?

Kat. A dish that I do love to feed upon bravery,
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must here deliver them.

Kat. Well, Sir, to do you courtesy,
This will I do, and this I will advise you:
First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?

Pis. Ay, Sir, in Pisa have I often been;
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens.

Kat. Among them, know you one Vincentio?

Pis. I know him not, but I have heard of him;
A merchant of incomparable wealth.

Kat. He is my father, Sir; and, sooth to say,
In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.

Bien. [Aside.] As much as an apple doth an oyster,
And all one.

Kat. To save your life in this extremity,
This favour will I do you for his sake;
And think it not the worst of all your fortunes
That you are like to Sir Vincentio.
His name and credit shall you undertake,
And in my house you shall be friendly lodg’d:
Look that you take upon you as you should;
You understand me, Sir,—so shall you stay
Till you have done your business in the city:
If this be courtesy, Sir, accept of it.

Kat. O Sir, I do; and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and liberty.

Kat. Then go with me, to make the matter good.

Pis. This by the way, I let you understand;
My father is here look’d for every day,
To pass assurance of a dower in marriage
‘Twixt me and one Baptista’s daughter here:
In all these circumstances I’ll instruct you:
Go with me, to clothe you as becomes you.

[Exeunt.]
Hab. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.
Pet. Why, this was moulded on a porringier; a velvet dish:—fe, fie! 'tis lewd and filthy:
Why, 'tis a cockle or a walnut shell,
A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap:
Away with it! come, let me have a bigger.
Kath. I'll have no bigger; this doth fit the time,
And gentlewomen wear such caps as these.
Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one too;
And not till then.
Hor. [Aside.] That will not be in haste.
Kath. Why, Sir, I trust I may have leave to speak;
And speak I will; I am no child, no babe:
Your betters have endured me say my mind;
And if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart;
Or else my heart, concealing it, will break:
And rather than it shall, I will be free
Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.
Pet. Why, thou say'st true; it is a palty cap, a Custard-coffin, a babble, a silken pie:
I love thee well, in that thou lik'st it not.
Kath. Love me or love me not, I like the cap;
And it will have, or I will have none.
Pet. Thy gown? why, ay;—come, tailor, let us see it.
O mercy, God! what masking stuff is here?
What's this? a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon:
What! up and down, carv'd like an apple-tart?
Here's snip, and nip, and cut, and slash, and slash,
Like to a censer in a barber's shop:
Why, what, o' devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this?
Hor. [Aside.] I see, she's like to have neither cap nor gown.
Tui. You bid me make it orderly and well,
According to the fashion, and the time.
Pet. Marry, and did; but if you be remember'd,
I did not bid you mar it to the time.
Go, hop me over every kennel hole,
For you shall hop without my custom, Sir:
I'll none of it: hence! make your best of it.
Kath. Your fashion and your gown,
More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:
Belike you mean to make a puppet of me.
Pet. Why, true; he means to make a puppet of thee.
Pet. She says, your worship means to make a puppet of her.
Pet. O monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, thou
Thou think'st, thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard, quarter, nail! House to, thou nit, thou winter cricket thou!—
Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thread?
Away! thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant;
Or I shall so be mete thee with thy yard,
As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou livest! I tell thee, I, that thou hast mar'd her gown.
Tui. Your worship is deceived; the gown is made
Just as my master had direction:
Grumio gave order how it should be done.
Gru. I gave him no order; I gave him the stuff.
Tui. But how did you desire it should be made?
Tui. But did you not request to have it cut?
Gru. Thou hast faced many things.
Pet. I have.
Gru. Face not me: thou hast brazen many men;
brave not me; I will neither be faced nor brazen.
I say unto thee,—I bid thy master cut out the gown;
but I did not bid him cut it to pieces: ergo, thou liest.
Tui. Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.
Pet. Read it.
Gru. The note lies in 's throat, if he say I said so.
Tui. [Reads.] "Imprimis, a loose-bodied gown:"—
Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, Sew me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread: I said, a gown.
Tui. [Reads.] "With a small compassed cape:"—
Gru. I confess the cape.
Tui. [Reads.] "With a trunk sleeve:"—
Gru. I confess two sleeves.
Tui. [Reads.] "The sleeves curiously cut."—
Pet. Ay, there's the villany.
Gru. Error i' the bill, Sir; error i' the bill.
I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sewed up again; and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.
Tui. This is true that I say: an I had thee in place where thou shouldst know it.
Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.
Hor. God-a-mercy, Grumio! then he shall have no oaths.
Pet. Well, Sir, in brief, the gown is not for me.
Gru. You are i' the right, Sir; 'tis for my mistress.
Pet. Go, take it up unto thy master's use.
Gru. Villain, not for thy life: take up my mistress' gown for thy master's use!
Pet. Why, Sir, what's your conceive in that?
Gru. O, Sir, the conceive is deeper than you think for.
Take up my mistress' gown to his master's use!
O, fie, fie, fie!
Pet. [Aside.] Hortensio, say thou wilt see the tailor paid.
[To Tailor.] Go take it hence; be gone, and say no more.
Hor. [Aside to Tailor.] Tailor, I'll pay thee for thou never saw a better gown.
Take no unkindness of his hasty words:
Away, I say; commend me to thy master.
Exeunt Tailor and Haberdasher.
Pet. Well, come, my Kate; we will unto your father's,
Even in these honest mean habiliments.
Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor;
For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich:
And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
So honour preereth in the meanest habit.
What is the joy more precious than the lark,
Because his feathers are more beautiful?
Or is the adder better than the eel,
Because his painted skin contents the eye?
O, no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse
For this poor furniture and mean array.
If thou account'st it shame, lay it on me;
And therefore frollic: we shall henceforth,
To feast and sport us at thy father's house.—
Go, call my men, and let us straight to him;
And bring our horses unto Long-lane end;
There will we mount, and thither walk on foot.—
Let's see; I think 'tis now some seven o'clock,
And well we may come there by dinner-time.
Kath. I dare assure you, Sir, 'tis almost two;
And 'twill be supper-time ere you come there.

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant dressed like Vincentio.

Tra. Sir, this house: please it you, that I call it?

Ped. Ay, what else? and, but I be deceived, Signior Baptista may remember me, Near twenty years ago, in Genoa, Where we were lodgers at the Lusagas.

Tra. 'Tis well; and hold your own, in any case, With such austerity as long since to a father.

Ped. I warrant you. But, Sir, here comes your father.

Tra. Were good, he were school'd. [Joy; Enter Biondello.]

Tra. Fear you not him.—Signior Biondello, Now do your duty throughly, I advise you: Imagine twere the right Vincentio. Bion. Tut! fear not me.

Tra. Not hast thou done thy errand to Baptista? Bion. I told him that your father was at Venice; And that you look'd for him this day in Padua.

Tra. Thou'rt a tall fellow: [Gives money] hold thee that to drink. Here comes Baptista:—Set your countenance, Sir.—

[Exeunt Tranio, Pedant, and Baptista.]

Bion. Camillo!—

Luc. What say'st thou, Biondello? Bion. You saw my master wink and laugh upon you?

Luc. Biondello, what of that? Bion. 'Faith, nothing; but he has left me here behind, to expound the meaning or moral of his signs and tokens.

Luc. I pray thee, moralize them. Bion. Then thus. Baptista is safe, talking with the deceiving father of a deceitful son.

Luc. And what of him? Bion. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper.

Luc. And then?

Bion. The old priest at St Luke's church is at your command all this day.

Luc. And what of all this?

Bion. I cannot tell; expect they are busied about a counterfeit assurance: take you assurance of her, Cum privilegio ad imprimentum solus: to the church;—take the priest, clerk, and some sufficient honest witnesses. If this be not that you look for, I have no more to say, But bid Biondello farewell for ever and a day. [Going. Luc. Hearest thou, Biondello?

Bion. I cannot tarry; I knew a wench married in an afternoon as she went to the garden for parsley to stuff a rabbit; and so may you, Sir: and so, adieu, Sir. My master hath appointed me to go to St Luke's, to bid the priest be ready to come against you come with your appendix. [Exit.

Luc. I may, and will, if she be so contented: She will be pleas'd; then wherefore should I doubt? If what hap may, I may roundly go about her: It shall go hard, if Camillo go without her. [Exit.

Scene V.—A public Road.

Enter Petruchio, Katharina, and Hortensio.

Pet. Come on, o' God's name; once more toward our father's. Good lord, how bright and goodly shines the moon! Kath. The moon! the sun: it is not moonlight now.
Pet. I say it is the moon that shines so bright.
Kath. I know it is the sun that shines so bright.
Pet. Now, by my mother's son, and that's myself, It shall be moon, or star, or what I list, Or ere I journey to your father's house,— Go on, and fetch our horses back again.— Evermore cross'd, and cross'd; nothing but cross'd! Hor. Say as he says, or we shall never go.
Kath. Forward, I pray, since we have come so far. And be it moon, or sun, or what you please: An if you please to call it a rush candle, Henceforth, I vow, it shall be so for me.
Pet. I say it is the moon.
Kath. I know it is the moon.
Pet. Nay, then you lie; it is the blessed sun.
Kath. Then God be bless'd, it is the blessed But sun it is not, when you say it is not; [sun— And the moon changes, even as your mind. What you will have it sam'd, even that it is; And so, it shall be so for Katharine.
Hor. Petrucho, go thy ways; the field is won.
Pet. Well, forward, forward! thus the bowl shall And not unluckily against the bias. [run, But soft! company is coming here. Enter VINCENZO, in a travelling dress. [To VINCENZO.] Good-morrow, gentle mistress: where away?— Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too, Haist thou beheld a fresher gentlewoman? Such war of white and red within her cheeks! What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty, As those two eyes become that heavenly face?— Fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee.— Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake. Hor. 'A will make the man mad, to make a woman of him.
Kath. Young budding virgin, fair and fresh and Whither away; or where is thy abode? [sweet, Happy the parents of so fair a child; Happier the man, whom favourable stars Allot thee for his lovely bed-fellow! [mad: Pet. Why, how now, Kate? I hope thou art not This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd; And not a maiden, as thou say'st he is. Kath. Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes, That have been so bedazzled with the sun, That everything I look on seems' most green: Now I perceive thou art a reverend father; Pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking. Pet. Do, good old grandaule; and withal make known Which way thou travel'st: if along with us, We shall be joyful of thy company. Vin. Fair Sir, and you my merry mistresse, That with your strange encounter much amaz'd me, My name is call'd Vincenzo; my dwelling, Pis; And bound I am to Padus; there to visit A son of mine, which long I have not seen.
Pet. What is his name? Vin. Lucentio, gentle Sir. Pet. Happily met; the happier for thy son. And now by law, as well as reverence age, I may entitle thee my loving father: The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman, Thy son by this hath married. Wonder not, Nor be not grieve'd: she is of good esteem, Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth; Beside, so qualified as may becomen The spouse of any noble gentleman. Let me embrace with old Vinenzo:
Also wander we to see thy honest son, Who will of thy name, and will be full jovous. Vin. But is this true? or is it else your pleasure, Like pleasant travellers, to break a jest Upon the company you overtake? Hor. I do assure thee, father, so it is.
Pet. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof; For our first merriment hath made thee jealous.
[Exeunt PETRUChIO, KATHARINA, and VINCENTIO. Her. Well, Petrucho, this has put me in heart. Have to my widow! and if she be froward, Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward. [Exit. ACT V.

SCENE I.—PADUA. Before Lucentio's House. Enter on one side Biondello, Lucentio, and Bianca; GUARINO walking on the other side.
Bion. Softly and swiftly, Sir; for the priest is ready.
Luc. I fly, Biondello; but they may chance to need thee at home; therefore leave us.
Bion. Nay, faith, I 'll see the church of your back; and then come back to my master as soon as I can. [Exeunt Lucentio, Bianca, and BIONDELO.
Grz. I marvel Camillo comes not all this while.
[Enter PETRUChIO, KATHARINA, VINCENTIO, and Attendants.
Pet. Sir, here's the door, this is Lucentio's house; My father's bears more toward the market-place; Thither must I, and here I leave you, Sir. Vin. You shall not choose but drink before you I think I shall command your welcome here, [go: And, by all likelihood, some cheer is toward. [Knock.
Grz. They're busy within; you were best knock louder.
[Enter bedes above, at a window.
Pet. Nay, I told you your son was well beloved in Padua.—Do you hear, Sir?—to leave frivolous circumstances.—I pray you, tell signior Lucentio, that his father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him. Pet. Thou liest: his father is come from Pisa, and here looking out at the window.
Vin. Art thou his father? Pet. Ay, Sir; so his mother says, if I may believe her.
Pet. [To VINCENZO.] Why, how now, gentleman! why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.
Pet. Lay hands on the villain. I believe, 'a means to cozen somebody in this city under your countenance.
Scene II. — Taming of the Shrew.

Re-enter Biondello.

Bion. I have seen them in the church together: God speed 'er man good shipping! But who is here? mine old master, Vincentio! now we are undone, and brought to nothing.

Vin. [Seeing Bion.] Come hither, crack-hemp.

Bion. Hope I may choose, Sir.

Vin. Come hither, you rogue. What, have you forgot me?

Bion. Forgot you! no, Sir; I could not forget you, for I never seeth before in all my life.

Vin. What, you notorious villain, didst thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio?

Bion. What, my old, worshipful old master! yes, marry, Sir; see where he looks out of the window.

Vin. Is't so, indeed? [Beat Biondello.

Bion. Help, help, help! here's a madman will murder me.

Pet. Prythee, Kate, let's stand aside, and see the end of this controversy. [They retire.

Re-enter Pedant below: Baptistia, Tranio, and Servants.

Tranio. Sir, what are you, that offer to beat my servant?

Vin. What am I, Sir? nay, what are you, Sir?—O immortal gods! O fain villain! A silken doublet! A velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a capotain hat!—O, I am undone! I am undone! while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

Tranio. How now! what's the matter?

Baptistia. What, is the man lunatic?

Tranio. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you a madman.

Vin. Why, Sir, what seems it you if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Tranio. Thy father! O villain! he is a sail-maker in Bergamo.

Vin. I am a villain, Sir, most unfortunate, Sir. Pray, what do you think is his name?

Tranio. His name: as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio.

Pet. Away, away, mad ass! his name is Lucentio; and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, signior Vincentio.

Tranio. Lucentio? O, he hath murdered his master!—Lay hold on him, I charge you, in the duke's name.—O my son, my son!—tell me, thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

Tranio. Call forth an officer.

Enter one with an officer.

Vin. Carry this mad knave to the jail.—Father Baptistia, I charge you see that he be forthcoming.

Tranio. Carry me to the jail!

Gremio. Stay, officer: he shall not go to prison.

Vin. Talk not, signior Gremio: I say he shall go to prison.

Gremio. Take heed, signior Baptistia, lest you be cry-catch'd in this business: I dare swear this is the right Vincentio.

Pet. Swear, if thou darest.

Vin. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tranio. Then thou wast best say, that I am not Lucentio.

Vin. Yes, I know thee to be signior Lucentio.

Baptistia. Away with the dotard! to the jail with him!

Vin. Thus strangers may be haled and abused:—O monstrous villain! Re-enter Biondello, with Lucientio and Bianca.

Biondello. O, we are spoiled! and yonder he is: deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone.

Luc. [Kneeling.] Pardon, sweet father.

Bianca. [Kneeling.] Pardon, dear father.

Luc. How hast thou offended?—Where is Lucentio?

Luc. Here's Lucentio, Right son to the right Vincentio; that have by marriage made thy daughter mine, while counterfeit supposes bear'd thine eye.

Gremio. Here's packing, with a witness, to deceive us all!

Vin. Where is that damned villain Tranio, that fac'd and brav'd me in this matter so?

Baptistia. Why, tell me, is not this my Bianco? Bianco? Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love Made me exchange my state with Tranio, while he did bear my countenance in the town; and happily I have arrived at the last Unto the wished haven of my bliss.

What Tranio did, myself enforc'd him to; then pardon him, sweet father, for my sake.

Vin. I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me to the jail.

Baptistia. Do you hear, Sir? Have you married my daughter without asking my good-will?

Vin. Fear not, Baptistia; we will content you, go to; but I will in, to be revenged for this villain.

Tranio. And I, to sound the depth of this knavery.

Vin. Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown. [Exeunt Luc. and Bian.

Gremio. My cake is dough: but I'll in among the rest.

Out of hope of all, but my share of the feast. [Exit.

Petruccio and Katharina advance.

Kath. Husband, let's follow, to see the end of this ado.

Pet. First kiss me, Kate, and we will.

Kath. What, in the midst of the street?

Pet. What, art thou ashamed of me?

Kath. No, Sir, God forbid; but ashamed to kiss.

Pet. Why then, let's home again.—Come, sirrah, let's away.

Kath. Nay, I will give thee a kiss: now pray thee, love, stay.

Pet. Is not this well?—Come, my sweet Kate: Better once than never, for never too late.

[Exeunt.

Scene II. — A Room in Lucentio's House.

A Banquet set out. Enter: Baptistia, Vincentio, Gremio, the Pedant, Lucientio, Bianca, Petruccio, Katharina, Hortensio, and Widow. Tranio, Biondello, Gremio, and others, attending.

Luc. At last, though long, our jarring notes agree: And time it is, when raging war is done.

To smile at 'scapes and perils overthrown.—
My fair Bianca, bid my father welcome,
While I with self-same kindness welcome thine.
Brother Petruchio,—sister Katharina,—
And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow,—
Feast with the best, and welcome to my house:
My banquet is to close our stomachs up,
After our great good cheer. Pray you, sit down;
For now we sit to chat, as well as eat.

[They sit at table.

Petr. Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat!
Petruch. Padua affords nothing but what is kind.
Hor. For both our sakes, I would that word were true.

Petr. Now, for my life, Hortensio fears his widow.

Wid. Then never trust me, if I be afraid.

Petr. You are very sensible, and yet you miss my

I mean, Hortensio is afraid of you.

[She stands up.

Wid. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.

Petr. Roundly replied.

Kath. Mistress, how mean you that?

Wid. Thus I conceive by him.

Petr. Conceives by me!—How likes Hortensio that?

Hor. My widow says, thus she conceives her tale.

Wid. Very well mended.—Kiss him for that, good widow.

Kath. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round:

I pray you, tell me what you meant by that.

Wid. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew,
Measures my husband's sorrow by his woe:
And now you know my meaning.

Kath. A very mean meaning:

Wid. Right, I mean you.

Kath. And I am mean, indeed, respecting you.

Petr. To her, Kate!

Hor. To her, widow!

Petr. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her

Hor. That's my office.

Petr. Spoke as an officer:—Ha' to thee, lad.

[Drinks to Hortensio.

Bap. How likes Gremio these quick-witted folk?

Gre. Believe me, Sir, they butt together well.

Bian. Head and butt! a hasty-witted body.

Wid. Would say, your head and butt were head and horn.

Vin. Ay, mistress bride, hath that awakened you?

Bian. Ay, but not frightened me; therefore I'll sleep again.

Petr. Nay, that you shall not: since you have

Have at you for a bitter jest or two.

[Begun.

Bian. Am I your bird? I mean to shift my bush,
And then pursue you as you draw your bow.—

You are welcome all.

[Exeunt Bianca, Katharina, and Widow.

Petr. She hath prevented me.—Here, signior Tranio;

This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not;
Therefore a health to all that shot and miss'd.

Tranio. O Sir, Lucentio slip'd me like his greyhound,
Which runs himself, and catches for his master.

Petr. A good swift simile, but something curnish.

Tranio. 'Tis well, Sir, that you hunted for yourself;
'Tis thought your deer does hold you at a bay.

Bap. O ho, Petruchio! Tranio hits you now,

Luc. I thank thee for that gird, good Tranio.

Hor. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?

Petr. 'A has a little gall'd me, I confess;
And, as the jest did glance away from me,
'Tis ten to one it main'd you two outright.

Bap. Now, in good sadness, son Petruchio,
I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.

Petr. Well, I say no: and therefore, for assurance,
Let's each one send unto his wife;
And he whose wife is most obedient
To come at first when he doth send for her,
Shall win the wager which we will propose.

Hor. Content. What is the wager?

Luc. Twenty crowns!

Petr. Twenty crowns!

I'll venture so much of my hawk or hound,
But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Luc. A hundred then.

Hor. Content.

Petr. A match! 'tis done.

Hor. Who shall begin?

Luc. That will I.—

Go, Bianello, bid your mistress come to me.

Bian. I go.

Bap. Son, I will be your half, Bianca comes.

Luc. I'll have no halves: I'll bear it all myself.

Renier Bianello.

How now! what news?

Bian. Sir, my mistress sends you word
That she is busy, and she cannot come.

Petr. How! she is busy, and she cannot come?
Is that an answer?

Gre. Ay, and a kind one too:

Pray God, Sir, your wife send you not a worse.

Petr. I hope, better.

Hor. Sirrah Bianello, go and entreat my wife
To come to me forthwith.

[Exit Bianello.

Petr. O ho! entreat her!

Nay, then she must needs come.

Hor. I am afraid, Sir,

Do what you can, yours will not be entreated.

Renier Bianello.

Now, where's—my—wife?

Bian. She says you have some good jest in hand:
She will not come; she bids you come to her.

Petr. Worse and worse; she will not come! O

Intolerable, not to be endur'd!—[cile

Sirrah Gremio, go to your mistress; say,

I command her to come to me.

[Exit Gremio.

Hor. I know her answer.

Pet. What?

Hor. She will not.

Petr. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Bap. Now, by my holdisme, here comes Katharina.

Renier Katharina.

Kath. What is your will, Sir, that you send for me?

Pet. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife?

Kath. They sit conferring by the parlour fire.

Petr. Go, fetch them hither: if they deny to come,
Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands:
Away, I say, and bring them hither straight.

[Exit Katharina.

Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.

Hor. And so it is: I wonder what it bodes.

Pet. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life.

An awful rule, and right supremacy;
And, to be short, what not, that's sweet and happy.

Bap. Now, fair bellied thee, good Petruchio!

The wager thou hast won; and I will add unto their losses twenty thousand crowns;
Another dowry to another daughter,
For she is chang'd, as she had never been.

Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,
And show more sign of her obedience,
Her new-built virtue and obedience.
See, where she comes, and brings your froward
As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.— [wifes
Reciter KATHARINA, with BIANCA and Widow.

Katharine, that cap of yours becomes you not:
Off with that bauble, throw it under foot.

[KATHARINA pulls off her cap, and throws it down.

Wid. Lord! let me never have a cause to sigh,
Till I be brought to such a silly pass!

Bian. Fie! what a foolish duty call you this?

Luc. I would your duty were as foolish too:
The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca,
Hath cost me a hundred crowns since supper-time.
Bian. The more fool you, for laying on my duty.

Pet. Katharine, I charge thee, tell these headstrong women
What duty they do owe their lords and husbands.

Wid. Come, come, you're mocking: we will have no telling.

Pet. Come on, I say; and first begin with her.

Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say she shall—and first begin with her.

Kath. Fie, fie! unkind that threatening unkind brow;
And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,
To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor:
It blots thy beauty, as frosts do bite the meads;
Confounds thy fame, as whirlwinds shake fair buds;
And in no sense is meet or amiable.
A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;
And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip, or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sov'reign; one that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance; commits his body
To painful labour both by sea and land,
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure and safe;
And craves no other tribute at thy hands,
But love, fair looks, and true obedience,—
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the subject owes the prince,
Even such a woman owes to her husband;
And, when she's froward, peevish, sullen, sour,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foul contending rebel,
And graceless traitor to her loving lord?—
I am ashamed that women are so simple
To offer war, where they should kneel for peace;
Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth,
Unapt to toil and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions, and our hearts,
Should well agree with our external parts?
Come, come, you froward and unable worms!
My mind hath been as big as one of yours,
My heart as great, my reason, haply, more,
To bandy word for word, and frown for frown:
But now I see our lances are but straws;
Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare,—
That seeming to be most, which we indeed least are.
Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot;
And place your hands below your husband's foot:
In token of which duty, if he please,
My hand is ready, may it do him ease.

Pet. Why, there's a wenches!—Come on, and kiss me, Kate.

Luc. Well, go thy ways, old lad; for thou shalt ha't.

Viu. 'Tis a good hearing, when children are toward.

Luc. But a harsh hearing, when women are fro-

Pet. Come, Kate, we'll to bed.— [ward.

We three are married, but you two are still.
'Twas I won the wager, [To LUCENTIO.] though you hit the white;
And, being a winner, God give you good night!

[Exeunt PETRUUCHIO and KATH.

Hor. Now, go thy ways; thou hast tam'd a curt shrew.

Luc. 'Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so. [Exeunt:
ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

ACT I

SCENE I.—ROUILLON. A Room in the Countess's Mansion.

Enter Bertram, the Countess of Rouillon, Helena, and Laporte, all in black.

Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I, in going, Madam, weep o'er my father's death anew: but I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, Madam:—you, Sir, a father: he that so generally is at all times good, must of necessity hold his virtue to you: whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted, rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, Madam; under whose practices he hath persevered time with hope; and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a father,—O, that "had!" how sad a passage 'tis!—whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. Would, for the king's sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the king's disease.

Laf. How called you the man you speak of, Madam?

Count. He was famous, Sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so.—Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent, indeed, Madam: the king very lately spoke of him admiringly and mourningly: he was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.
SCENE I.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

Count. Heaven bless him!—

Farewell, Bertram.

[Exit. Bertram.

Ber. [To Hélène.] The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts be servants to you! Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her.

Lof. Farewell, pretty lady: you must hold the credit of your father.

[Escnt Bertram and Lofeu.

Hél. O, were that all!—I think not on my father; And these great tears grace his remembrance more Than those I shed for him. What was he like? I have forgot him: my imagination Carries no favour in’t but Bertram’s. I am undone: there is no living, none, If Bertram be away. It were all one, That I should love a bright particular star, And think to wed it, he is so above me: In his bright radiance and collaretal light Must I be comforted, not in his sphere. Th’ambition in my love thus plagues itself: The hind that would be mated by the lion Must die for love. ’Twas pretty, though a plague, To see him every hour, to sit and draw His arched brows, his hawking eye, his curls, In our heart’s table,—heart too capable Of every line and trick of his sweet favour: But now he’s gone, and my idolatrous fancy Must sanctify his relic.—Who comes here? One that goes with him: I love him for his sake; And yet I know him a notorious liar, Think him a great way fool, solely a coward; Yet these fix’d evils sit so fit in him, That they take place, when virtue’s steely bones Look bleak in the cold wind: withal, full oft we see Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Enter Paroles.

Par. There is none: man, sitting down before you, will undermine you, and blow you up. Hél. Bless our poor virginity from underminers and blowers up!—Is there no military policy, how virgins might blow up men?

Par. Virginity being blown down, man will quicker be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves made, you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to preserve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational increase; and there was never virgin got, till virginity was first lost. That you were made of, is metal to make virgins. Virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times found; by being ever kept, it is ever lost: ’tis too cold a companion; away with ’t! Hél. I will stand for a little, though therefore I die a virgin. Par. There’s little can be said in ’t; ’tis against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity, is to accuse your mothers; which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs himself is a virgin: virginity murders itself; and should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offensess against nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a cheese; consumes itself to the very purging, and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, virginity is pernicious, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it not; you cannot choose but lose by’t: out with ’t! within ten years it will make itself ten, which is a goodly increase; and the principal itself not much the worse: away with ’t!

Hél. How might one do, Sir, to lose it to her own liking?

Par. Let me see: marry, ill, to like him that ne’er it likes. ’Tis a commodity will lose the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth: off with ’t; while ’tis vendible; answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but unsuitable: just like the brooch and the tooth-pick, which wear not now. Your date is better in your pie and your porridge, than in your cheek: and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French withered pears,—it looks ill, it eats dryly; marry, ’tis a withered pear; it was formerly better; marry, yet ’tis a withered pear: will you any thing with it?

Hél. Not my virginity yet. There shall your master have a thousand loves, A mother, and a mistress, and a friend, A phoenix, captain, and an enemy, A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign, A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear; His humble ambition, proud humility, His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet, His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world Of pretty, fond, adoptive christendoms, That blinking Cupid gosips. Now shall he— I know not what he shall.—God send him well!— The court’s a learning-place; and he is one— Par. What one, faith? Hél. That’s a well.—’Tis pity— Par. What’s pity?

Hél. That wishing well had not a body in’t, Which might be felt; that we, the poorer born, Whose baser soul to that we put us in wishes, Might with effects of them follow our friends, And show what we alone must think; which never Returns us thanks.

Par. Little Helen, farewell: if I can remember I will think of thee at court. [Exit. Hél. Monsieur Paroles, you were born under a charitable star.

Par. Under Mars, I. Hél. I especially think, under Mars. Par. Why under Mars? Hél. The wars have so kept you under, that you must needs be born under Mars. Par. When he was predominant. Hél. When he was retrograde, I think, rather. Par. Why think you so? Hél. You go so much backward when you fight. Par. That’s for advantage. Hél. So is running away, when fear proposes the safety: but the composition, that your valour and fear makes in you, is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the way well.

Par. I am so full of businesses, I cannot answer thee accurately. I will return perfect courtesies; in the which, my instruction shall serve to neutralize thee, so thou wilt be capable of a courtier’s counsel, and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee; else thou diest in thine unthankfulness, and thine ignorance makes thee away: farewell. When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast none, remember thy friends: get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee: so, farewell.

Hel. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky
Gives us free scope; only, cloth backward pull
Our slow designs when we ourselves are dull.
What power is it which mounts my love so high;
That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune nature brings
To join like likes, and kiss like native things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those
That weigh their pains in sense; and do suppose
What hath been cannot be: who ever strove
To show her merit, that did miss her love?
The king’s disease,—my project may deceive me,
But my intents are fix’d, and will not leave me.

Exit.

SCENE II.—PARIS. A Room in the King’s Palace.
Flourish of cornets. Enter the King of France, with letters: Lords and others attending.

King. The Florentines and Senoys are by th’ ears;
Have fought with equal fortune, and continue
A brav’ning war.

1 Lord. So ‘tis reported, Sir.

King. Nay, ‘tis most credible, we here receive it;
A certainty, y’oud’m from our cousin Austria,
With caution, that the Florentine will move us
For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend
Prejudices the business, and would seem
To have us make denial.

1 Lord. His love and wisdom,
Approv’d so to your majesty, may plead
For ampler credence.

King. He hath arm’d our answer,
And Florence is denied before he comes;
Yet, for our gentlemen that mean to see
The Tuscan service, freely have they leave
To stand on either part.

2 Lord. It may well serve
A nursery to our gentry, who are sick
For breathing and exploit.

King. What’s he come here?

Enter Bertram, Lafeu, and Parolles.

1 Lord. It is the count Rousillon, my good lord,
Young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou hast’st thy father’s face;
Frank nature, rather curious than in haste,
Hath well compos’d thee. Thy father’s moral parts
Mayst thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your majesty’s.

King. I would I had that corporal soundness now,
As when thy father and myself in friendship
First tried our soldiership! He did look far
Into the service of the time, and war
Discipl’d the bravest: be last long;
But on us both did haggish age steal on,
And wore us out of act. It much repairs me
To talk of your good father. In his youth
He had the wit, which I can well observe
To-day in our young lords; but they may jest,
Till their own scorn return to them unnoted,
Ere they can hide their levity in honour
So like a courtier: contempt nor bitterness
Were in his pricks, or sharpness; if they were,
His equal had awak’d them; and his honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when Exception bid him speak, and at this time
His tongue obey’d his hand: who were below him
He us’d as creatures of another place;
And bow’d his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility,
In their poor praise he humbled. Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times;
Which, follow’d well, would demonstrate them now
But gone backward.

Ber. His good remembrance, Sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts, than on his tomb;
So in approv’d lives not his epitaph,
As in your royal speech. I way say,

King. Would I were with him! He would ni, (Methinks I hear him now; his plausible words
He scatter’d not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there, and to bear;)—"Let me not live,"—
Thus his good melancholy oft began,
On the catastrophe and heel of pastime,
When it was out,—"let me not live," quoth he,
"After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain; whose judgments are Mere fathers of their garments; whose constancies
Expire before their fashions:"—this he wish’d:
I, after him, do after him wish too,
Since I nor wax nor honey can bring home,
I quickly were dissolv’d from my hive,
To give some labourers room.

2 Lord. You are lov’d, Sir;
They, that least lend it you, shall lack you first.

King. I fill a place, I know’t. —How long ist?
Since the physician at your father’s, died? [count.
He was much fam’d.

Ber. Some six months since, my lord.

King. If he were living, I would try him yet;—
Lend me an arm— the rest have worn me out
With several applications:—nature and sickness
Debate it at their leisure. Welcome, count;
My son’s no dearer.

Ber. Thank your majesty.

SCENE III.—ROUSILLON. A Room in the COUNTLESS’S Mansion.

Enter Countess, Steward, and Clown.

Count. I will now hear: what say you of this gentlewoman?

Sir. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the calendar of my past endeavours; for then we wound our modesty, and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them.

Count. What does this knave here? Get you gone, sirrah: the complaints I have heard of you,
I do not all believe: ’tis my slowness, that I do not; for I know you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaverys
yours.
SCENE III.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you, Madam, I am a poor fellow.
Count. Well, Sir.
Clo. No, Madam, 'tis not so well, that I am poor, though many of the rich are damned: but, if I may have your ladyship's good-will to go to the world, Isbel, the woman, and I will do as we may.
Count. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?
Clo. I do beg your good-will in this case.
Count. In what case?
Clo. In Isbel's case and mine own. Service is no heritage: and I think I shall never have the blessing of God, till I have issue of my body; for they say, beans are blessings.
Count. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry.
Clo. My poor body, Madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh; and he must needs go, that the devil drives.
Count. Is this all your worship's reason?
Clo. Faith, Madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.
Count. May the world know them?
Clo. I have been, Madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are; and, indeed, I do marry that I may be very late more near her than, I think, she wished me; alone she was, and did communicate to herself, her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touched not any stranger sense. Her matter was, she loved your son: fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; love, no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; Diana, no queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight surprised, without rescue in the first assault, or ransom afterward. This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow, that ever I heard virgin exclaim in; which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal; sithein, in the loss that may happen, it concerns you something to know it.
Count. You have discharged this honestly; keep it to yourself: many likethers informed me of this before, which hang so trotting in the balance, that I could neither believe, nor misdoubt. Pray you, leave me: stall this in your bosom; and I thank you for your honest care: I will speak with you farther anon.
[Exit Steward.

Even so it was with me when I was young:

Clo. One good woman in ten, Madam; which is a purifying o' the song: would God would serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tythe-woman, if I were the parson; one in ten, quoth 'a an we might have a good woma born but for every blazing star, or an earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well: a man may draw his heart out, ere he pluck one.

Count. 'You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you?

Clo. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done!—Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart.—I am going, forsooth: the business is, for Helen to come hither. [Exit.

Count. Well now.

Sew. I know, Madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely.

Count. Faith, I do: her father bequeathed her to me: and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds: there is more owing her than is paid; and more shall be paid her than she'll demand.
Sew. Madam, I was very late more near her than, I think, she wished me; alone she was, and did communicate to herself, her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touched not any stranger sense. Her matter was, she loved your son: fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; love, no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; Diana, no queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight surprised, without rescue in the first assault, or ransom afterward. This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow, that ever I heard virgin exclaim in; which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal; sithein, in the loss that may happen, it concerns you something to know it.
Count. You have discharged this honestly; keep it to yourself: many likethers informed me of this before, which hang so trotting in the balance, that I could neither believe, nor misdoubt. Pray you, leave me: stall this in your bosom; and I thank you for your honest care: I will speak with you farther anon.
[Exit Steward.

Even so it was with me when I was young:

Count. Get you gone, Sir; I'll talk with you more anon.

Sew. May it please you, Madam, that he bid Helen come to you: of her I am to speak.
Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman I would speak with her; Helen I mean.
Clo. Was this fair face the cause, quoth she, Why the Grecians sakk'd Troy? Fend done, done fond, Was this king Priam's joy? With that she sigh'd as she stood, With that she sigh'd as she stood, And gave this sentence then; Among nine bad if one be good, Among nine bad if one be good, There's yet one good in ten.
Count. What, one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.
A native slip to us from foreign seeds:
You ne'er oppress'd me with a mother's groan,
Yet I express to you a mother's care:—
God's mercy, maiden! does it card thy blood,
To say, I am thy mother? What's the matter,
That this diyster'd messenger of wet,
The many-colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye?
Why?—that you are my daughter?
Hel. That I am not.
Count. I say, I am your mother.
Hel. Pardon, Madam; the count Roussillon cannot be my brother:
I am from humble, he from honour'd name;
No note upon my parents, all noble:
My master, my dear lord he is; and I
His servant live, and will his vassal die:
He must not be my brother.
Count. Nor I your mother?
Hel. You are my mother, Madam; would you were (So that my lord, your son, were not my brother)
Indeed my mother!—or were you both our mothers,
I care no more for, than I do for heaven,
So I were not his sister. Can't no other,
But, your daughter, he must be my brother?
Count. Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter—
For, God shield, you mean it not! daughter, and mother,
So strive upon your pulse. What, pale again?
My fear hath catch'd your fondness: now I see
The mystery of your loneliness, and find
Your salt tears' head: now to all sense 'tis gross,
You love my son; invention is asham'd,
Against the proclamation of thy passion,
To say thou dost not: therefore tell me true;
But tell me then, 'tis so:—for, look, thy checks
Confess it, th' one to the other; and thine eyes
See it so grossly shown in thy behaviours,
That in their kind they speak it: only sin
And hellish obstinacy tie thy tongue,
That truth should be suspected. Speak, is't so?
If it be so, you have wound a suddenly clause;
If it be not, forewarn't: however, I charge thee,
As heaven shall work in me for thine avail,
To tell me truly.
Hel. Good Madam, pardon me!
Count. Do you love my son?
Hel. Your pardon, noble mistress!
Count. Love you my son?
Hel. Do not you love him, Madam?
Count. Go not about; my love hath in it a bond,
Whereof the world takes note: come, come, disclose
The state of your affection; for your passions
Have to the full approach'd.
Hel. Then, I confess,
Here on my knee, before high heaven and you,
That before you, and next unto high heaven,
I love your son—
My friends were poor, but honest; so's my love:
Be not offended; for it hurts not him,
That he is lov'd of me: I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suit;
Nor would I have him till I do deserve him,
Yet never know how that desert should be.
I know I love in vain, strive against hope;
Yet, in this captious and intemible sieve,
I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to lose still: thus, Indian-like,
Religious in mine error, I adore
The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,
But knows of him no more. My dearest Madam,
Let not your hate encounter with my love,
For loving where you do: but, if yourself,
Whose aged honour cites a virtuous youth,
Did ever, in so true a flame of liking,
Wish chastely, and love dearly, that your Dian
Was both herself and love; O! then, give pity
To her, whose state is such, that cannot choose
But lend and give, where she is sure to lose;
That seeks not to find that her search implies,
But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies.
Count. Had you not lately an intent,—speak truly,—
To go to Paris?
Hel. Madam, I had.
Count. Wherefore? tell true.
Hel. I will tell truth; by grace itself, I swear.
You know my father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience had collected
For general sovereignty; and that he will'd me
In heedfulst reservation to bestow them,
As notes, whose faculties inclusive were,
More than they were in note: amongst the rest,
There is a remedy, prov'd, set down,
To cure the desperate languishings whereof
The king is render'd lost.
Count. This was your motive.
For Paris, was it? speak.
Hel. My lord your son made me to think of this;
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the king,
Had, from the conversation of my thoughts,
Haply been absent then.
Count. But think you, Helen,
If you shou'd tender your suppos'd aid,
He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of a mind; he, that they cannot help him,
They, that they cannot help: how shall they credit
A poor unlearn'd virgin, when the schools,
Embowed'l of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to itself?
Hel. There's something in't,
More than my father's skill, which was the greatest
Of his profession, that his good receipt
Shall, for my legacy, be sanctified
By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would your honour
But give me leave to try success, I'd venture
The well-lost life of mine on his grace's cure,
By such a day, and hour.
Count. Dest thou believe't?
Hel. Ay, Madam, knowingly.
Count. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave,
and love,
Means, and attendants, and my loving greetings
To those of mine in court: I'll stay at home,
And pray God's blessing into thy attempt:
Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this,
What I can help thee to, thou shalt not miss.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—PARIS. A Room in the King’s Palace.
Flourish. Enter King, with young Lords taking leave for the Florentine war: BERTRAND, PARROLES, and Attendants.

King. Farewell, young lords; these warlike principles [well;—
Do not throw from you—and you, my lord, farewell;
Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain all,
The gift doth stretch itself as ’tis receiv’d,
And is enough for both.

1 Lord. It is our hope, Sir,
After well-elder’d soldiers, to return
And find your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confess he owes the madady
That duty and life œuvres. Farewell, young lords;
Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy
(Those bated, that inherit but the fall
Of the last monarchy) see, that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it; when
The bravest questant shrinks, find what you seek,
That name may cry you loud: I say, farewell.

2 Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them:
They say, our French lack language to deny,
If they demand: beware of being captives,
Before you serve.

Both Lords. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewell.—[Retires to a couch, beckoning
Attendants.] Come hither to me.

1 Lord. O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!

Par. ’Tis not his fault, the spark.

2 Lord. Most admirable: I have seen those wars.

Ber. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with,— “Too young,” and “the next year,” and “’tis too too early.”

Par. An thy mind stand to’t, boy, steal away bravely.

Ber. I shall stay here the while the horse to a mock,
Creaking my shoes on the plain marasonry,
Till honour be bought up, and no sword worn
But one to dance with. By heaven! I’ll steal away.

1 Lord. There’s honour in the theft.

Par. Commit it, count.

2 Lord. I am your ascendant; and so, farewell.

Ber. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured

1 Lord. Farewell, captain. [Body.

2 Lord. Sweet monsieur Paroles!

Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin.

Good sparks and lustrous, a word, a good metal:—

you shall find in the regiment of the Spinii, one captain Sparrio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister: it was this very sword enchanted it: say to him, I live, and observe his reports for me.

2 Lord. We shall, noble captain.

Par. Mars dote on you for his novices!—[Exeunt Lords.] What will you do?

Ber. Stay; the king—

Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrained yourself within the list of too cold an aisle; be more expressive to them;

for they wear themselves in the cap of the time, there do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed: after them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows, and like to prove most sinewy swordsman.

[Exeunt BERTRAND and PARROLES.

Enter LAFEU.

Laf. [Kneeling.] Pardon, my lord, for me and for my tidings.

King. I’ll see thee to stand up.

Laf. Then here’s a man stands, that has brought his pardon.

I would you had kneeld’th, my lord, to ask me mercy;
And that, let it be my business; fare you well. [Retires.

King. I would I had; so I had broke thy pate,
And ask’d thee mercy for’t.

Laf. Good faith, across: but, my good lord, ’tis thus;

Will you be cur’d of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laf. O, will you eat no grapes, my royal fox?

Yes, but you will, my noble grapes, an if
My royal fox could reach them: I have seen
A medicine that’s able to breathe life into a stone,
Quickens a rock, and make you dance canary
With spritely fire and motion; whose simple touch
Is powerful to arouse king Pepin, nay,
To give great Charlemain a pen in ’s hand,
And write to her a love-line.

King. What is this?

Laf. Why, doctor she: my lord, there’s one arriv’d,
If you will see her:—now, by my faith and honour,
If seriously I may convey my thoughts
In this my light delivery, I have spoke
With one, that in her sex, her years, profession,
Wisdom, and constancy, hath sma’ted me more
Than I dare blame my weakness: will you see her,
(For that is her demand,) and know her business?
That done, laugh well at me.

King. Now, good Lafeu,
Bring in the admiration; that we with thee
May spend our wonder too, or take off thine,
By wond’ring how thou tookst it.

Laf. Nay, I’ ll fit you,
And not be all day neither.

[Exit.]

King. Thus he his special nothing ever prologues.

Re-enter LAFEU, with HELENA.

Laf. Nay, come your ways.

King. This haste hath wings indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your ways;

This is his majesty, say your mind to him:
A traitor you do look like; but such traitors
His majesty seldom fears: I am Cresant’s uncle;
That dare least go together; fare you well. [Exit.

King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?

Hel. Ay, my good lord.

Gerard de Narbon was my father;
In what he did profess, well found;

I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards him;
Knowing him is enough. On’s bed of death
Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one,
Which, as the dearest issue of his practice,
And of his old experience the only darling,
He grafted he made store up, as a triple eye,
Safer than mine own two, more dear: I have so:
And, hearing your high majesty is touch'd
With that malignant cause, wherein the honour
Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power,
I come to tender it, and my appliance,
With all bound humbleness.

King. We thank you, maiden; but may not be so credulous of cure,
When our most learned doctors leave us, and
The congregated college have concluded
That labouring art can never ransom nature
From her irreparable estate,—I say, we must not
So stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-care malady
To empirics; or to dissever so
Our great self and our credit, to esteem
A senseless help, when help past sense we deem.

Hel. My duty, then, shall pay me for my pains:
I will no more enforce mine office on you;
Humilily entreating from your royal thoughts
A modest one, to bear me back again.

King. I cannot give thee less, to be call'd grateful:
Thou think'st to help me; and such thanks I give,
As one near death to those that wish him live;
But, what at full I know, thou know'st no part;
I knowing all my peril, thou no art.

Hel. What I can do, can do no hurt to try,
Since you set up your rest, against remedy,
That of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister:
So holy writ in babes hath judgment shown,
When judges have been babes; great floods have flown
From simple sources; and great seas have dried,
When miracles have by the greatest been denied.
Oft expectation fails, and most oft there
Where most it promises; and oft it hits,
Where hope is coldest, and despair most fits.

King. I must not hear thee; fare thee well, kind maid.
Thy pains, not us'd, must by thyself be paid:
Profferers, not took, reap thanks for their reward.

Hel. Inspired merit so by breath is barr'd:
It is not so with Him that all things knows,
As 'tis with us that square our guess by shows;
But most it is presumption in us, when
The help of heaven we count the act of men.
Dear Sir, to my endeavours give consent;
Of heaven, not men, make an experiment.
I am not an impostor, that proclaim
Myself against the level of mine aim;
But know I think, and think I know most sure,
My art is not past power, nor you past cure.

King. Art thou so confident? Within what space
Hast thou my cure?

Hel. The greatest grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring;
Ere twice in murk and occidental damp
Moist Hesperus hath quench'd his sleepy lamp;
Or four and twenty times the pilot's glass
Hath told the thievish minutes how they pass;
What is infrum from your sound parts shall fly,
Health shall live free, and sickness freely die.

King. Upon thy certainty and confidence,
What dar'st thou venture?

Hel. Tax of impudence,—

A strumpet's boldness, a divulged shame,— Traduc'd by odious ballads; my maiden's name
Sear'd otherwise; nay, worse of worst extended,
With vilest torture let my life be ended.

King. Methinks in thee some blessed spirit doth speak,
His powerful sound within an organ weak:
And what impossibility would say
In common sense, sense saves another way.
Thy life is dear; for all, that life can rate
Worth name of life, in thee hath estimate,—
Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, all
That happiness and prime can happy call;
Thou this to hazard, needs must intimate
Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate.
Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try,
That ministers thine own death, if I die.

Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property
Of what I spoke, unaptly let me die,
And well d'avour; not helping, death's my fee;
But, if I help, what do you promise me?

King. Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it even?
King. Ay, by my sceptre, and my hopes of heaven.

Hel. Then shalt thou give me with thy kingly hand
What husband in thy power I will command:
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royal blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy state;
But such a one, thy vassal, whom I know
Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.

King. Here is my hand; the premises observ'd,
Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd;
So make the choice of thy own time; for I,
Thy resolv'd patient, on thee still rely.
More should I question thee, and more I must,— Though more to know could not be more to trust,—
From whence thou canst not, how tended on:
But rest Unquestion'd welcome, and undoubted blest.

[To Attendants.] Give me some help here, ho!—
[To Helena.] If thou proceed As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed.

[Flourish. Exit.]

SCENE II.—ROUSILLON. A ROOM IN THE COUNTESS'S MANSION.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. Come on, Sir; I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clo. I will show myself highly fed, and lowly taught: I know my business is but to the court.

Count. To the court! why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt? But to the court!

Clo. Truly, Madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court: he that cannot make a leg, put off's cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither legs, hands, lip, nor cap; and, indeed, such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court: but, for me, I have an answer will serve all men.

Count. Marry, that's a bountiful answer that fits all questions.

Clo. It is like a barber's chair, that fits all buttocks,—the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brown-buttock, or any buttock.
SCENE III.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

Count. Will your answer serve fit to all questions?

Clo. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your French crown for your taffeta punk, as Tib's rush for Tom's fore-finger, as a pancake for Shrove-Tuesday, a morris for May-day, as the nail to his hole, the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding queen to a wrangling knave, as the nun's lip to the friar's mouth; nay, as the pudding to his skin.

Count. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions?

Clo. From below your duke, to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

Count. It must be an answer of most monstrous size, that must fit all demands.

Clo. But a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it: here it is, and all that belongs to 't. Ask me, if I am a courtier: it shall do you no harm to learn.

Count. To be young again, if we could—I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. I pray you, Sir, are you a courtier?

Clo. O Lord, Sir! there's a simple putting off. More, more, a hundred of them.

Count. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

Clo. O Lord, Sir!—Thick, thick, spare not me.

Count. Sir, you can cat none of this homely meat.

Clo. O Lord, Sir!—Nay, put me to 't, I warrant you.

Count. You were lately whipped, Sir, as I think.

Clo. O Lord, Sir!—Spare not me.

Count. Do you cry, "O Lord, Sir!" at your whipping, and "Spare not me!" Indeed, your "O Lord, Sir!" is very sequent to your whipping: you would answer very well to a whipping, if you were but bound to 't.

Clo. I ne'er had worse luck in my life, in my "O Lord, Sir!" I see things may serve long, but not serve ever.

Count. I play the noble housewife with the time, to entertain it so merrily with a fool.

Clo. O Lord, Sir! why, there's serve well again.

Count. An end, Sir: to your business. Give me Helen this,

And urge her to a present answer back: Command me to your kinsman, and my son:

This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them.

Count. Not much employment for you: you understand me?

Clo. Most fruitfully: I am there before my legs.

Count. Haste you again. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE III.—PARIS. A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter Bertram, Lafun, and Parolles.

Laf. They say miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar, things supernatural and causeless. Hence is it, that we make trifes of terrors; ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.

Par. Why, 'tis the rarest argument of wonder that hath shot out in our latter-times.

Ber. And so 'tis.
Let the white death sit on thy check for ever;
We’ll ne’er come there again.”

King. Make choice; and, see,
Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me.

Hel. Now, Dian, from thy altar do I fly;
And to imperial Love, that god most high,
Do my sigils stream.—Sir, will you hear my suit?

1 Lord. And grant it.

Hel. Thanks, Sir; all the rest is mute.

Laf. I had rather be in this choice, than throw ascesse for my life.

Hel. The honour, Sir, that flames in your fair eyes,
Before I speak, too threateningly replies:
Love make your fortunes twenty times above
Her that so wishes, and her humble love!

2 Lord. No better, if you please.

Hel. My wish receive,
Which great Love grant! and so, I take my leave.

Laf. Do all they deny her? As they were sons of mine, I’d have them whipped; or I would send them to the Turk, to make emunctus of.

Hel. [To 3 Lord.] Be not afraid that I your hand should take;
I’ll never do you wrong for your own sake:
Blessing upon your vows: and in your bed
Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!

Laf. These boys are boys of ice; they’ll none have her; sure, they are bastards to the English; the French ne’er got them.

Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too good,
To make yourself a son out of my blood.

4 Lord. Fair one, I think not so.

Laf. There’s one grape yet,—I am sure, thy father drink wine—but if thou best not an ass, I am a youth of fourteen; I have known thee already.

Hel. [To Bertram.] I dare not say, I take you;
but I give
Me, and my service, ever whilst I live,
Into your guiding power.—This is the man.

King. Why then, young Bertram, take her; she’s thy wife.

Ber. My wife, my liege! I shall beseech your Majesty, to give me leave to use [bighness,
The help of mine own eyes.

King. Know’st thou not, Bertram,
What she has done for me?

Ber. Yes, my good lord;
But never hope to know why I should marry her.

King. Thou know’st she has rais’d me from my rickety bed.

Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me down
Must answer for your raising? I know her well;

She had her breeding at my father’s charge.
A poor physician’s daughter my wife,—Disdain
Rather corrupt me ever!

King. ’Tis only title thou disdain’st in her, the which I can build up. Strange it is, that our bloods,
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour’d all together,
Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off
In differences so mighty. If she be
All that is virtuous, (save what thou dislik’st,
A poor physician’s daughter,) thou dislik’st,
Of virtue for the name: but do not so:
From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by the doer’s deed:
Where great additions swell, and virtue none,
It is a dropt honours to the count Rousillon?
Is good, without a name; nilleness is so:
The property by what it is, should go,
Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair;
In these to nature she’s immediate heir;
And these breed honour: that is honour’s born,
Which challenges itself as honour’s born,
And is not like the sire: honours thrive,
When rather from our acts we them derive,
Than our foregoers: the mere word’s a slave,
Deborah’d on every tomb; on every grave,
A lying trophy; and as oft is dumb
Where dust and dead men’s oblation is the tomb
Of honour’d bones indeed. What shall be said?
If thou canst like this creature as a maid,
I can create the rest: virtue and she
Is her own dower; honour and wealth from me.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do’t.

King. Thou wrong’st thyself, if thou shouldn’t strive to choose.

Hel. That you are well restor’d, my lord, I am glad:
Let the rest go.

King. My honour’s at the stake, which to defeat
I must produce my power. Here, take her hand,
Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift:
That dost in vile misprision shackle up
My love, and her desert; that canst not dream,
We, poising us in her defective scale,
Shall weigh thee to the beam; that wilt not know,
It is in us to plant thine honour where
We please to have it grow. Check thy contempt:
Obey our will, which travels in thy good!
Believe not thy disdain, but presently
Do thine own fortunes that obedient right,
Which both thy duty owes, and our power claims;
Or I will throw thee from my care for ever,
Into the staggers, and the careless lapse
Of youth and ignorance; both my revenge and hate
Loosing upon thee, in the name of justice,
Without all terms of pity. Speak; thine answer.

Ber. Pardon, my gracious lord; for I submit
My fancy to your eyes: when I consider
What great creation, and what dote of honour,
Fies where you bid it, I find that she, which late
Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now
The praise of the king; who, so ennobled,
Is, as twere, born so.

King. Take her by the hand,
And tell her she is thine: to whom I promise
A counterpart, if not to thy estate,
A balance more replete.

Ber. Take her hand.

King. Good fortune, and the favour of the king,
Smile upon this contrast; whose ceremony
Shall seem expedient on the now-born brief,
And be perform’d to-night: the solemn feast
Shall more attend upon the coming space;
Expecting absent friends. As thou lov’st her,
Thy love’s to me religious; else, does err.

[Exeunt King, Bertram, Helena, Lords, and Attendants.

Laf. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleasure, Sir?

Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation!—My lord! my master!

Laf. Ay; is it not a language I speak?

Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding.

Laf. And you, Sir, commend the count Rousillon?
To any count,—to all counts,—to what is man.
SCENE IV.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure, my lord.
Laf. Go to, Sir; you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate; you are a vagabond, and no true traveller: you are more saucy with lords and honourable personages, than the heraldry of your birth and virtue gives you commission. You are not worth another word, else I'd call you knave. I leave you. [Exit.

Par. Good, very good; it is so then:—good, very good; let it be concealed a while.

Re-enter BERTRAM.

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever! Par. What is the matter, sweet heart? Ber. Although before the solemn priest I have sworn, Par. What, what, sweet heart? Ber. O my Parolles, they have married me!— I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her. Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits The tread of a man's foot: to the wars! Ber. There's letters from my mother: what the import is, Par. Ay, that would be known. To the wars, my boy, to the wars! He wears his honour in a box unseen, That hogs his kicky-wicky here at home, Spending his manly narrow in her arms, Which should sustain the bound and high curvet Of Mars's fiery steed. To other regions! France is a snare; I see that dwell in't, jades; Therefore, to the war! Ber. It shall be so: I'll send her to my house, Acquaint my mother with my hate to her, And wherefore I am glad; write to the king That which I durst not speak: his present gift Shall furnish me to those Italian fields, Where noble fellows strike: war is no strife To the dark house and the detested wife, Par. Will this capriccio hold in thee, art sure? Ber. Go with me to my chamber, and advise me. I'll send her straight away: to-morrow I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow. Par. Why, these balls bound; there's noise in it. —Tis hard: A young man married is a man that's marr'd: Therefore away, and leave her bravely; go; The king has done you wrong; but, hush! 'tis so. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—PARIS. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter HELena and ClOESIN.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly: is she well? Clo. She is not well; but yet she has her health: she's very merry; but yet she is not well: but thanks be given, she's very well, and wants nothing in the world; but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be very well, what does she say, that she's not very well? Clo. Truly, she's very well indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One, that she's not in heaven, whither God send her quickly; the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Bless you, my fortunate lady!
Hel. I hope, Sir, I have your good will to have mine own good fortunes.
Par. You had my prayers to lead them on; and to keep them on, have them still.—O, my knave,—how does my old lady?
Clo. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.
Par. Why I say nothing.
Clo. Marry, you are the wiser man; for many a man’s tongue shakes out his master’s undoing: to say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title; which is within a very little of nothing.
Par. Away! thou’rt a knave.
Clo. You should have said, Sir, before a knave thou’rt a knave; that is, before me thou’rt a knave: this had been truth, Sir.
Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool; I have found thee.
Clo. Did you find me in yourself, Sir? or were you taught to find me? The search, Sir, was profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world’s pleasure, and the increase of laughter.
Par. A good knave, I faith, and well fed.—Man, my lord will go away to-night; A very serious business calls on him.
The great prerogative and rite of love, Which, as your due, time claims, he does acknowledge—but puts it off to a compell’d restraint; [ledge, Whose want, and whose delay, is strew’d with Which they distil now in the curbed time, [sweets, To make the coming hour o’erflow with joy, And pleasure drown the brim.

Hel. What’s his will else?
Par. That you will take your instant leave of the king.
And make this haste as your own good proceeding, Strengthen’d with what apology you think May make it probable need.
Hel. What more commands he?
Par. That, having this obtain’d, you presently Attend his farther pleasure.
Hel. In every thing I wait upon his will.
Par. I shall report it so.
Hel. I pray you.—Come, sirrah. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another Room in the Palace.

Enter LAFEU and BERTRAM.

Laf. But I hope your lordship thinks not him a soldier.
Ber. Yes, my lord, and of very valiant approce.
Laf. You have it from his own deliverance.
Ber. And by other warranted testimony.
Laf. Then my dial goes not true: I took this lark for a bunting.
Ber. I do assure you, my lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.
Laf. I have, then, sinned against his experience, and transgressed against his value; and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent. Here he comes: I pray you, make us friends; I will pursue the amity.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. [To BERTRAM.] These things shall be done, Sir.
Laf. Pray you, Sir, who’s his tailor?
SCENE II.—ROUSILLON. A Room in the Countess's Mansion.

Count. It hath happened all as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her.

Clo. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

SCENE III.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—FLORENCE. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Duke. So that, from point to point, now have you The fundamental reasons of this war; [heard Whose great decision hath much blood let forth, And more thunders after.

1 Lord. Holy seems the quarell Upon your grace's part; black and fearful On the opposer.

Duke. Therefore we marvel much our cousin France Would, in so just a business, shut his bosom Against our borrowing prayers.

1 Lord. Good my lord, The reasons of our state I cannot yield, But like a common and an outward man, That the great figure of a council frames By self-unable motion: therefore dare not Say what I think of it, since I have found Myself in my uncertain grounds to fail As often as I guess'd.

Duke. Be it his pleasure.

2 Lord. But I am sure, the younger of our nature, That surfeit on their ease, will day by day Come here for physic.

Duke. Welcome shall they be; And all the honours that can fly from us Shall on them settle. You know your places well; When better fail, for your avails they fell; To-morrow to the field. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

Count. By what observance, I pray you? Clo. Why, he will look upon his boot, and sing; mend the ruff, and sing; ask questions, and sing; pick his teeth, and sing. I know a man, that had this trick of melancholy, sold a goodly manor for a song.

Count. [Opening a letter.] Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come.

Clo. I have thought to Isabel, since I was at court; our old ling and our Isabels o' the country are nothing like your old ling and your Isbels o' the court; the brains of my Cupid's knocked out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Count. What have we here?

Clo. E'en that you have there. [Exit. Count. [Reads.] 'I have sent you a daughter-in-law; she hath recovered the king, and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make the not eternal. You shall hear I am run away: know it before the report come. It there be breath enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.

Your unfortunate son,

BERTRAM.'

This is not well, rash and unbridled boy, To fly the favours of so good a king; To pluck his indignation on thy head, By the misprizing of a maid so virtuous For the contempt of empire.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O Madam, yonder is heavy news within, between two soldiers and my young lady.

Count. What is the matter?

Clo. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort; your son will not be killed so soon as I thought he would.

Count. Why should he be kill'd?

Clo. So say I, Madam, if he run away, as I hear he does: the danger is in standing to't; that's the loss of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more: for my part, I only hear your son was run away.

[Exit. Enter Helena and two Gentlemen.

1 Gen. Save you, good Madam. Hel. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone.

2 Gen. Do not say so.

Count. Think upon patience. —'Pray you, gentlemen—

I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief, That the first face of neither, on the start, Can woman me unto't—where is my son, I pray you?

2 Gen. Madam, he's gone to serve the duke of Florence:

We met him thitherward; for thence we came, And, after some despatch in hand at court, Thither we bend again.

Hel. Look on his letter, Madam; here's my passport.

[Reads.] 'When thou canst get the ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a child begotten of thy body, that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a then I write a never.'

This is a dreadful sentence.

Count. Brought you this letter, gentlemen?

1 Gen. Ay, Madam; And, for the contents' sake, are sorry for our pains.

Count. I pr'ythee, lady, have a better cheer;
If thou engrossest all the griefs are thine, Thou robb'st me of a moiety: he was my son; But I do wash his name out of my blood, And thou art all my child. —Towards Florence is he? 2 Gen. Ay, Madam. Count. And to be a soldier? 2 Gen. Such is his noble purpose: and, believe't, The duke will lay upon him all the honour That good convenience claims. Count. Return you thither: 1 Gen. Ay, Madam, with the swiftest wing of speed. Hel. [Reads.] "Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France." 'Tis bitter. Count. Find you that there? Hel. Ay, Madam. 1 Gen. 'Tis but the boldness of his hand, haply, Which his heart was not consenting to. Count. Nothing in France, until he have no wife! There's nothing here that is too good for him, But only she; and she deserves a lord, That twenty such rude boys might tend upon, And call her hourly mistress. —Who was with him? 2 Gen. A servant only, and a gentleman Which I have some time known. Count. Parolles, was it not? 1 Gen. Ay, my good lady, he. Count. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickedness. My son corrupts a well-derived nature With his inducement. 1 Gen. Indeed, good lady, The fellow has a deal of that too much, Which holds him much to have. Count. You are welcome, gentlemen. I will entreat you, when you see my son, To tell him, that his sword can never win The honour that he loses: more I'll entreat you Written to bear along: 2 Gen. We serve you, Madam, In that and all your worstiest affairs. Count. Not so, but as we change our courtesies. Will you draw near? [Exeunt COUNTESS and Gentlemen. Hel. "Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France," Nothing in France, until he has no wife! Thou shalt have none, Rouillon, none in France; Then hast thou all again. Poor lord! is 't I That chase thee from thy country, and expose Those tender limbs of thine to the event Of the none-sparing war? and is it I That drive thee from the sportive court, where thou Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark Of smoky muskets? 0 you leaden messengers, That ride upon the violent speed of fire, Fly with false aim; move the still-piercing air, That sings with piercing; do not touch my lord! Whoever shoots at him, I set him there; Whoever charges on his forward breast, I am the caiffatt that do hold him to't; And, though I kill him not, I am the cause His death was so effected: better twere I met the ravin lion when he roar'd With sharp constraint of hunger; better twere That all the miseries which nature owes Were mine at once. No, come thou home, Rouillon, Whence honour but of danger wins a scar, [Jon, As oft it loses all: I will be gone; My being here it is that holds thee hence: Shall I stay here to do't? no, no, although The air of paradise did fan the house, And angels o'ertid all: I will be gone, That pitiful rumour may report my flight, To consolate thine ear. Come, night; end, day! For with the dark, poor thief, I'll steal away. [Exit.

SCENE III.—FLORENCE. Before the DUKE'S Palace. FLOURI. Enter the DUKE of FLORENCE, BERTRAM, PAROLLES, LORDS, OFFICERS, SOLDIERS, and others. Duke. The general of our horse thou art; and we, Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence Upon thy promising fortune. Ber. Sir, it is A charge too heavy for my strength; but yet We'll strive to bear it, for thy worthy sake, To th' extreme edge of hazard. Duke. Then go thou forth; And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm, As thy auspicious mistress! Ber. This very day, Great Mars, I put myself into thy file; Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove A lover of thy drum, hater of love. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—ROUSILLON. A Room in the Countess's Mansion. Enter COUNTESS and Steward. Count. Alas! and would you take the letter of her? Might you not know, she would do as she has done, By sending me a letter? Read it again. Stew. [Reads.] "I am Saint Jacques' pilgrim, thither gone. Ambitious love hath so in me offended, That bare-foot Iod I the cold ground upon, With painted vow my faults to have amended. Write, write, that from the bloody course of war My dearest master, your dearest son, may bie: Bless him at home in peace, whilst I from far His name with zealous fervour sanctify; His taken labours bid him me forgive; I, his de Sieul Jano, sent him forth From courtly friends, with camping foes to live, Where death and danger dog the heels of worth. He is too good and fair for death and me; Whom I myself embrace, to set him free." Count. Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest words!— Rinaldo, you did never lack advice so much, As letting her pass so: had I spoken with her, I could have well diverted her intents, Which thus she hath prevented. Stew. Pardon me, Madam: If I had given you this at over-night, She might have been o'erta'en; and yet she writes, Pursuit would be but vain. Count. What angel shall Bless this unworthy husband? he cannot thrive, Unless her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear, And loves to grant, reprieve him from the wrath Of greatest justice.—Write, write, Rinaldo, To this unworthy husband of his wife; Let every word weigh heavy of her worth, That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief, Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.
Scene V.

All's Well That Ends Well.

Scene V.—Without the walls of Florence.

Enter a Widow of Florence, DIANA, VIOLENTA, MARIANA, and other Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach the city, we shall lose all the sight.

Dia. They say the French count has done most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their greatest commander: and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. [A tucket after.] We have lost our labours; they are gone a contrary way: hark! you may know by their trumpets.

Mar. Come, let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl: the honour of a maid is her name; and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mar. I know that knave; hang him! one Parrolles: a filthy officer he is in those suggestions for the young earl:—Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wreck of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twigs that threaten them. I hope I need not to advise you farther; but I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no farther danger known but the modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Wid. I hope so. Look, here comes a pilgrim: I know she will lie at my house; thither they send one another: I'll question her.

Enter Helena, in the dress of a Pilgrim.

God save you, pilgrim!

Whither are you bound?

Hel. To Saint Jaques le grand.

Wid. Where do the palmer lodge, I do beseech you?

Hel. At the Saint Francis here, beside the port.

Wid. Is this the way?

Hel. Ay, marry, is 't.[A march afar off.] Hark you!

They come this way.—

If you will tarry, holy pilgrim,
But till the troops come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd;
The rather, for I think I know your hostess
As ample as myself.

Wid. Is it yourself?

Hel. If you shall please so, pilgrim.

Wid. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Hel. You came, I think, from France?

Wid. I did so.

Hel. Here you shall see a countryman of yours,
That has done worthy service.

Hel. His name, I pray you.

Dia. The count Roussillon: know you such a one?

Hel. But by the ear, that bears most nobly of him:

His face I know not.

Dia. Whatsoever he is,
He's bravely taken here. He stole from France,
As 'tis reported, for the king had married him
Against his liking: think you it is so?

Hel. Ay, surely, mere the truth: I know his lady.

Dia. There is a gentleman, that serves the count,
Reports but coarsely of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parrolles.

Hel. O, I believe with him,
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated: all her deserving
Is a reserved honesty, and that
I have not heard examin'd.

Dia. Alas, poor lady!

'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife
Of a detesting lord.

Wid. Ay, right; good creature, wheresoe'er she is,
Her heart weighs sadly: this young maid might do
A shrewd turn, if she pleas'd.

Hel. How do you mean?

May be, the amorous count solicits her
In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does, indeed;
And brokes with all that can in such a suit
Corrupt the tender honour of a maid:
But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.

Mar. The gods forbid else!

Wid. So, now they come.—

Enter, with drum and colours, a party of the Florentine army, BERTRAM, and PARROLES.

That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son;
That, Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia. He;

That with the plume: 'tis a most gallant fellow,
I would he lov'd his wife: if he were honest,
He were much goodlier: 'tis not a handsome gentle-

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'Tis pity he is not honest: yond's that same knave
That leads him to these places: were I his lady,
I would poison that vile rascal.

Which is he?

Dia. That jackanapes with scars: why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i' the battle.

Par. Lose our drum! well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vexed at something: look,
He has spied us.

Wid. Marry, hang you!

Mar. And your courtesy, for a ring-carrier!

[Exeunt BERTRAM, PARROLES, Officers, and Soldiers.

Wid. The troop is past. Come, pilgrim, I will bring you
Where you shall host: of enjoin'd penitents.
There's four or five, to great Saint Jaques bound,
Already at my house.

1 Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to't: let him have his way.
2 Lord. If your lordship find him not a hagling, hold me no more in your respect.
1 Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble.
Ber. Do you think I am so far deceived in him?
1 Lord. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my kinsman, he's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertainment.
2 Lord. It were fit you knew him; lest, reposing too far in his virtue, which he hath not, he might at some great and trusty business, in a main danger, fail you.
Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.
1 Lord. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.
1 Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him; such I will have, whom, I am sure, he knows not from the enemy: we will bind and hoodwink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the lager of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents. Be but your lordship present at his examination: if he do not, for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgment in any thing.
2 Lord. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch off his drum; he says he has a stratagem for't: when your lordship sees the bottom of his success in't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed.—Here he comes.
1 Lord. O, for the love of laughter, hinder not the humour of his design: let him fetch off his drum in any hand.

Enter Parolles.

Ber. How now, monsieur! this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.
2 Lord. A posh on't, 'tis but a drum.
Par. But a drum! Is't but a drum? A drum so lost!—There was excellent command,—to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own soldiers!
2 Lord. That was not to be blamed in the command of the service; it was a disaster of war that Caesar himself could not have prevented, if he had been there to command.
Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success: some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum; but it is not to be recovered.
Par. It might have been recovered.
Ber. It might; but it is not now.
Par. It is to be recovered: but that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drum or another, or his face.
Ber. Why, if you have a stomach to't, monsieur, if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise, and go on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speed well in it, the duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what farther becomes his greatness, even to the utmost syllable of your worthiness.
Par. BY the hand of a soldier, I will undertake it.
Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.
Par. I'll about it this evening: and I will presently pen down my dilemmas, encourage myself in my certainty, put myself into my mortal preparation; and by midnight, look to hear farther from me.
Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it?
Par. I know not what the success will be, my lord; but the attempt I vow.
Ber. I know thou art valiant; and, to the possibility of thy soldiership, will subscribe for thee.
Farewell.
Par. I love not many words. [Exit.
1 Lord. No more than a fish loves water.—Is not this a strange fellow, my lord, that so candidly seems to undertake this business, which he knows is not to be done, damns himself to do, and dares better be damned than to do't?
2 Lord. You do not know him, my lord, as we do: certain it is, that he will steal himself into a man's favour, and for a week escape a great deal of discoveries; but when you find him out, you have him ever after.
Ber. Why, do you think, he will make no deed at all of this, that so seriously he does address himself unto?
1 Lord. None in the world; but return with an invention, and clap upon you two or three probable lies. But we have almost embossed him,—you shall see his fall to-night; for, indeed, he is not for your lordship's respect.
2 Lord. We'll make you some sport with the fore, ere we case him. He was first smoked by the old lord Lafen: when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall find him; which you shall see this very night.
1 Lord. I must go look my twigs: he shall be caught.
Ber. Your brother, he shall go along with me.
1 Lord. As't please your lordship: I'll leave you.
[Exit.
Par. Now will I lead thee to the house, and show you
The less I spoke of.
Ber. But you say she's honest.
2 Lord. That's all the fault: I spoke with her but once,
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the Florentine Camp.

Enter first French Lord, with five or six Soldiers in ambush.

1 Lord. He can come no other way but by this hedge corner. When you sally upon him, speak what terrible language you will,—though you understand it not yourselves, no matter; for we must not seem to understand him, unless some one among us, whom we must produce for an interpreter.

1 Sold. Good captain, let me be the interpreter.

1 Lord. Art not acquainted with him? know he not thy voice?

1 Sold. No, Sir, I warrant you.

1 Lord. But what fine-sounding hast thou to speak to us again?

1 Sold. Even such as speak to me.

1 Lord. He must think us some band of strangers; the adversary's entertainment. Now, he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages; therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak one to another; so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose: chough's language, gabbble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very politic. But couch, here he comes,—to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Ten o'clock: within these three hours 'twILL be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done? It must be a very plausible invention that carries it: they begin to smoke me; and disgraces have of late knocked too often at my door.

I find my tongue is too foolishly; but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

1 Lord. [Aside.] This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of.

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum, being not ignorant of the possibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say I got them in exploit: yet slight ones will not carry it; they will say, "Came you off with so little!" and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore, what's the instance? Tongue, I must put you into a butterwoman's mouth, and buy myself another of Bajazet's mule, if you prattle me into these perils.

1 Lord. [Aside.] Is it possible he should know what he is, and be that he is?

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

1 Lord. [Aside.] We cannot afford you so.

Par. Or the baring of my beard; and to say it was in stragam.

1 Lord. [Aside.] 'Twould not do.

Par. Or to drown my clothes, and say I was stripped.

1 Lord. [Aside.] Hardly serve.

Par. Though I swore I leaped from the window of the citadel—

1 Lord. [Aside.] How deep?

Par. Thirty fathom.

1 Lord. [Aside.] Three great oaths would scarce make that be believed.
Par. I would I had any drum of the enemy’s: I would swear I recovered it.

1 Lord. [Aside.] You shall hear one anon.

Par. A drum, now, of the enemy’s! [Alarum within.

1 Lord. Throca moscuntus, cargo, cargo, cargo.
All. Cargo, cargo, villianda par corvo, cargo.

[They sene and blindfold him.

Par. O, ransom, ransom!—Do not hide mine eyes.

1 Sold. Bebkas threnumido bebes.

Par. I know you are the Muskel regiment;
And I shall lose my life for want of language:
If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch,
Italian, or French, let him speak to me;
I will discover that which shall undo
The Florentine.

1 Sold. Bebkas vosvades:
I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue:—
Kerdelbous.—Sir,
Betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen pontiards
Are at thy bosom.

Par. O, pray, pray, pray!—
Manka revmun duiche.

1 Lord. Ocorbi duichus volisvoro.

1 Sold. The general is content to spare thee yet;
And, hoodwink’d as thou art, will lead thee on
To gather from thee: haply thou mayst inform
Something to save thy life.

Par. O, let me live!
And all the secrets of our camp I’ll show,
Their force, their purposes; nay, I’ll speak that
Which you will wonder at.

1 Sold. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I do not, damn me.

1 Sold. Acoro inta:
Come on; thou art granted space.

[Exit, with PAROLLES guarded.

1 Lord. Go, tell the count Rouillon, and my brother,
We have caught the woodock, and will keep him
Till we do hear from them. [muffled
2 Sold. Captain, I will.
1 Lord. He will betray us all unto ourselves:—
Inform on that.

2 Sold. So I will, Sir.
1 Lord. Till then, I’ll keep him dark, and safely lock’d.

SCENE II.—Florence. A Room in the Widow’s House.

Enter BERTRAND and DIANA.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontibell.

Dia. No, my good lord, Diana.

Ber. That is goddess!!

Dia. And worth it, with addition! But, fair soul,
In your fine frame hath love no quality?
If the quick fire of youth light not your mind,
You are no maiden, but a monument:
When you are dead, you should be such a one
As you are now, for you are cold and stern;
And now you should be as your mother was,
When your sweet self was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No:

Ber. My mother did but duty; such, my lord,
As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more o’ that.

Dia. I pr’ythee, do not strive against my vows:
I was compell’d to her; but I love thee
By love’s own sweet constraint, and will for ever
Do thee all rights of service.

Dia. Ay, so you serve us,
Till we serve you; but when you have our roses,
You hardly leave our thorns to prick ourselves,
And mock us with our barreness.

Ber. How have I sworn!

Dia. ’Tis not the many oaths that make the truth,
But the plain single vow, that is vow’d true.
What is not holy, that we swear not by,
But take the Highest to witness: then, pray you, tell
If I should swear by Jove’s great attributes, [me,
I lov’d you dearly, would you believe my oaths,
When I did love you ill? this has no holding,
To swear by him whom I protest to love,
That I will work against him: therefore, your oaths
Are words and poor conditions; but unseal’d,—
At least, in my opinion.

Ber. Change it, change it.

Dia. Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy:
And my integrity ne’er knew the crafts
That you do charge men with. Staud no more off,
But give thyself unto my sick desires,
Who then recover: say thou art mine, and ever
My love, as it begins, shall so persevere.

Dia. I see that men make hopes, in such a case,
That we’ll forsake ourselves. Give me that ring:
Ber. I’ll lend it thee, my dear; but have no power
To give it from me.

Dia. Will you not, my lord?

Ber. It is an honour ‘longing to our house,
Bequeathed down from many ancestors;
Which were the greatest obloquy i’the world
In me to lose.

Dia. Mine honour’s such a ring:—
My chastity’s the jewel of our house,
Bequeath’d down from many ancestors;
Which were the greatest obloquy i’the world
In me to lose: thus your own proper wisdom
Brings in the champion, honour, on my part,
Against your vain assault.

Ber. Here, take my ring:
My house, mine honour, yes, my life be thine,
And I’ll be bid by thee.

Dia. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber-window:
I’ll order take my mother shall not hear.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
When you have conquer’d my yet maiden bed,
Remain there but an hour, nor speak to me:
My reasons are most strong; and you shall know them
When back again this ring shall be deliver’d:
And on your finger, in the night, I’ll put Another ring, that, what in time proceeds,
May token to the future our past deeds.

Dia. So should you be.

Ber. My mother told me just how he would woo,
As if she sat in his heart; she says all men
Have the like oaths: he had sworn to marry me
When his wife’s dead; therefore I’ll lie with him
When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are so bruid, Marry that will, I live and die a maid:
Only, in this disguise, I think 'tis no sin
To cozen him, that would unjustly win.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—The Florentine Camp.

Enter the two French Lords, and two or three Soldiers.

1 Lord. You have not given him his mother's letter?
2 Lord. I have delivered it an hour since: there is something in't that stings his nature; for, on the reading it, he changed almost into another man.
1 Lord. He has much worthy blame laid upon him, for shaking off so good a wife, and so sweet a lady.
2 Lord. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who had even tuned his bounty to sing happiness to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.
1 Lord. When you have spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.
2 Lord. He hath perverted a young gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown; and this night he fleshes his will in the spoil of her honour: he hath given her his monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.
1 Lord. Now, God delay our rebellion: as we are ourselves, what things are we!
2 Lord. Merely our own traitors. And in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorred ends, so he that in this action contrives against his own nobility, in his proper stream o'erflows himself.
1 Lord. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to-night?
2 Lord. Not till after midnight; for he is diction to his hour.
1 Lord. That approaches space: I would gladly have him see his company anathematized, that he might make a measure of his own judgments, wherein so curiously he had set this counteriet.
2 Lord. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.
1 Lord. In the mean time, what hear you of these wars?
2 Lord. I hear there is an overtune of peace.
1 Lord. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded.
2 Lord. What will count Roussillon do then? will he be travel higher, or return again into France?
1 Lord. I perceive, by this demand, you are not altogether of his council.
2 Lord. Let it be forbid, Sir; so should I be a great deal of his act.
1 Lord. Sir, his wife, some two months since, fled from his house: her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jaques le grand; which holy undertaking, with most austere sanctimony, she accomplished; and, there residing, the tenderness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath; and now she sings in heaven.
2 Lord. How is this justified?
1 Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letters; which make her story true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her office to say, is come.—was faithfully confirmed by the rector of the place.
2 Lord. Hath the count all this intelligence?

1 Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.
2 Lord. I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this.
1 Lord. How mightily, sometimes, we make us comforts of our losses!
2 Lord. And how mightily, some other times, we drown our gain in tears! The great dignity, that his valour hath here acquired for him, shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.
1 Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud, if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair, if they were not cherished by our virtues.—

Enter a Servant.

How now! Where's your master?

Serv. He met the duke in the street, Sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave: his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the king.
2 Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.
1 Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tattiness. Here's his lordship now.—[Enter Bertram.]

How now, my lord! is't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to-night despatched sixteen busi- nesses, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success: I have cong'd with the duke, done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife, mourned for her; writ to my lady mother I am returning; entertained my convoy; and between these main parcels of despatch, effect'd many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

2 Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

Ber. I mean, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter. But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier? Come, bring forth this counterfeit model: he has deceived me, like a double-meaning preacher.
2 Lord. Bring him forth: [Exeunt Soldiers.] he has sat in the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

1 Lord. I have told your lordship already,—the stocks carry him. But, to answer you as you would be understood; he weeps like a wench that had shed her milk: he hath confessed himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance, to this very instant disaster of his setting; the stocks: and what think you he hath confessed?

Ber. Nothing of me, has he?

2 Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Re-enter Soldiers with Parolles.

Ber. A plague upon him! muffled! he can say nothing of me. Bush, bush!
1 Lord. Hoodman comes.—[Pertu tartarossa.

2 Lord. He calls for the tortures: what will you say without en?

Par. I will confess what I know without con- straint: if ye pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more.
All's well that ends well.

Act IV.

Sold. Beke chimurco.

Lord. Bobbindo chisumeurco.

Sold. You are a merciful general.—Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

Sold. "First, demand of him how many horse the duke is strong." What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor ruffians, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

Sold. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do: I' ll take the sacrament on 't, how and which way you will.

Ber. [Apart.] All's one to him. What a past-saving slye is this!

Lord. [Apart.] You are deceived, my lord: this is monsieur Paroles, the gallant militarist, (that was his own phrase,) that had the whole theorick of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger.

Lord. [Apart.] I will never trust a man again for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have every thing in him by wearing his apparel neatly.

Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said,—I will say true,—or thereabouts, set down,—for I'll speak truth.

Lord. [Apart.] He's very near the truth in this.

Ber. [Apart.] But I con him no thanks for't, in the nature he delivers it.

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you, say.

Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, Sir: a truth 's a truth, the rogues are marvellous poor.

Sold. "Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foot. What say you to that?"

Par. By my troth, Sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see: Spurio, a hundred and fifty; Sebastian, so many; Corambo, so many; Jaques, so many; Guilliam, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Guzman, two hundred fifty each; mine own company, Chipoter, Vamond, Bentio, two hundred fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of which dare not shake the snow off from their cassocks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. [Apart.] What shall be done to him?

Lord. [Apart.] Nothing, but let him have thanks.—Demand of him my condition, and what credit I have with the duke.

Sold. Well, that's set down. "You shall demand of him, whether one captain Duminain be in the camp, a Frenchman; what his reputation is with the duke; what his valour, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighing sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt." What say you to this? what do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the interrogatories demand them singly.

Sold. Do you know this captain Duminain?

Par. I know him: he was a bochter's prentice in Paris, from whom he was whipped for getting the sheriff's fool with child,—a damn innocent, that could not say him nay.

[1 Lord lifts up his hand in anger.]

Ber. [Apart.] Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though I know his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

Sold. Well, is this captain in the duke of Florence's camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge, he is, and lousy.

Lord. [Apart.] Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

Sold. What is his reputation with the duke?

Par. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine; and writ to me this other day to turn him out of the band: I think I have his letter in my pocket.

Sold. Marry, we'll search.

Par. In good sadness, I do not know; either it is there, or it is upon a file, with the duke's other letters, in my tent.

Sold. [Finis one on him.] Here 'tis; here's a paper: shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no.

Ber. [Apart.] Our interpreter does it well.

Lord. [Apart.] Excellently.

Sold. [Reads.] "Dian, the count's a fool, and fall of gold."

Par. That is not the duke's letter, Sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurement of one count Rousillon, a foolish idle boy, but for all that, very ruttih: I pray you, Sir, put it up again.

Sold. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.

Par. My meaning in 't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid; for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to virginity, and devours all the fry it finds.

Ber. [Apart.] Damnable, both sides rogue!

Sold. [Reads.] "When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it; after he scores, he never pays the score: Half won is match well made; match, and well make he ne'er pays after debts, take it before; [it; And say a soldier, Dian, told thee this, Men are to all with, boys are not to kiss: For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it, Who pays before, but not when he does owe it. Thine, as he vow'd to thee in thine ear, PAROLLES."

Ber. [Apart.] He shall be whipped through the army, with this rhyme in 's forehead.

Lord. [Apart.] This is your devoted friend, Sir, the manifold linguist, and the armipotent soldier.

Ber. [Apart.] I could endure any thing before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

Sold. I perceive, Sir, by our general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, Sir, in any case! not that I am afraid to die; but that, my offences being many, I would repent the remainder of nature: let me live, Sir, in a dungeon, I' the stocks, or any where, so I may live.

Sold. We'll see what may be made, so you confess freely; therefore, once more to this captain Duminain: you have answered to his reputation with the duke, and to his valour: what is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, Sir, an egg out of a cloister: for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus: he professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking them he is stronger than Hercules: he will lie, Sir, with such voluptuities, that you would think truth were a fool: drunkenness is his best virtue; for he will be swine-drunk; and in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, Sir, of his honesty: he has every thing that an honest man should not have; what an honest man should have, he has nothing.
1 Lord. [Aside.] 1 begin to love him for this.
Ber. [Aside.] For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him for me, he is more and more a cad.
1 Sold. What say you to his expertness in war?
Par. Faith, Sir, he has led the drum before the English tragedians,—to belle him, I will not,—and more of his soldiership 1 know not; except, in that country, he had the honour to be the officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of flies: I would do the man what honour
I can, but of this I am not certain.
1 Lord. [Aside.] He hath out-villanyed villany so far, that the rarity redeems him.
Ber. [Aside.] A pox on him, he's a cat still.
1 Sold. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not ask you, if gold will corrupt him to revolt.
Par. Sir, for a quart d'eau he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and the entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually.
1 Sold. What's his brother, the other captain Dumain?
1 Lord. [Aside.] Why does he ask him of me?
1 Sold. What's he?
Par. E'en a crow o' the same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil: he excels his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is: in a retreat he out-runs any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the cramp.
1 Sold. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentines?
Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, count
Rouillon.
1 Sold. So, sold. I'll whisper with the general, and know his pleasure.
Par. [Aside.] I'll no more drumming; a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy, have I run into this danger: yet, who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken?
1 Sold. There is no remedy, Sir, but you must die: the general says, you, that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such petrifying reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honor; therefore you must die.—Come, headman, off with his head.
Par. O Lord, Sir, let me live, or let me see my death!
1 Sold. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends. [Unmuffling him.
So, look about you: know you any here?
Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.
1 Lord. God bless you, captain Parolles.
1 Lord. God save you, noble captain.
1 Lord. Captain, what greeting will you to my lord Lafaye? I am for France.
1 Lord. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the count Rouillon? an I were not a very coward,
I'd compel it of you: but fare you well.
[Exeunt Bertram, Lords, &c.
1 Sold. You are undone, captain; all but your scarf, that has a knot on 't yet.
Par. Who cannot be crushed with a plot?
1 Sold. If you could find out a country where but women were, that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare you well, Sir; I am for France too: we shall speak of you there.
Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great,
'Twould burst at this. Captain I'll be no more;
But I will eat, and drink, and sleep as soft
As captain shall: simply the thing I am
Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart,
Let him fear this; for it will come to pass,
That every braggart shall be found an ass.
Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and Paroles, live
Safest in shame! being fool'd, by folly's thrive!
There's place and means for every man alive.
I'll after them. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—FLORENCE. A Room in the Widow's
House.

Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,
One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne, 'tis needful,
Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel:
Time was I did him a desired office,
Dear almost as his life; which gratitude
Through flinty Tartar's bosom would peep forth,
And answer, thanks: I duly am inform'd,
His grace is at Marseilles; to which place
We have convenient convey. You must know,
I am supposed dead: the army breaking,
My husband hies him home; where, heaven aiding,
And by the leave of my good lord the king,
We'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle Madam,
You never had a servant, to whose trust
Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor you, mistress,
Ever a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompense your love: doubt not, but heaven
Hath brought me up to be your daughter's dower,
As it hath lately heretofore been your motive
And helper to a husband. But, O strange men!
That can such sweet use make of what they hate,
When saucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night? so last doth play
With what it loathes, for that which is away:
But more of this hereafter.—You, Diana,
Under my poor instructions, yet must suffer
Something in my behalf.

Dia. Let death and honesty
Go with your impositions, I am yours
Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet, I pray you:
But, with the word, the time will bring on summer,
When briers shall have leaves as well as thorns,
And be as sweet as sharp. We must away;
Our waggon is prepar'd, and time revives us;
All's well that ends well: still the fine's the crown;
What'ere the course, the end is the renown.

[Exeunt.]
SCENE V.—ROUSILLON. A Room in the Countess’s Mansion.

Enter Countess, Lafeu, and Clown.

Laf. No, no, no, your son was misled with a snipp-taffeta fellow there, whose villainous saffron would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanced by the king, than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would I had not known him! It was the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman, that ever nature had praise for creating: if she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. ’Twas a good lady, ’twas a good lady: we may pick a thousand salads, ere we light on such another herb.

Clo. Indeed, Sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of the salad, or rather, the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not salad-herbs, you know; they are rose-herbs.

Clo. I am no great Neuchadnezzar, Sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether thou dost profess thyself—a knave, or a fool?

Clo. A fool, Sir, at a woman’s service, and a knave at a man’s.

Laf. Your distinction?

Clo. I would cowze the man of his wife, and do his service.

Laf. So you were a knave at his service, indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, Sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and fool.

Clo. At your service.

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, Sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who’s that? A Frenchman?

Clo. Faith, Sir; a has an English name; but his physiognomy is more hotter in France, than there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clo. The black prince, Sir; alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil.

Laf. Hold thee, there’s my purse: I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talkest of; serve him still.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, Sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of, ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world; let his nobility remain in his court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter: some that humble themselves, may; but the many will be too chill and tender, and they’ll be for the flowery way that leads to the broad gate and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be a weary of thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways: let my horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon ’em, Sir, they shall be jades’ tricks; which are their own right by the law of nature. [Exeunt.

Laf. A shrewd knave, and an unhappy.

Count. So he is. My lord, that’s gone, made himself much sport out of him: by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his suavity; and, indeed, he has no pace, but runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well; ’tis not amiss. And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady’s death, and that my lord, your son, was upon his return home, I moved the king, my master, to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose: his highness hath promised me to do it; and, to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord; and I wish it happily effect’d.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty: he will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here to-night: I shall beseech your lordship to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted.

Count. You need but plead your honourable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but, I thank my God, it holds yet.

Enter Clown.

Clo. O Madam, wonder’s my lord your son with a patch of velvet on’s face: whether there be a scar under it, or no, the velvet knows; but ’tis a goodly patch of velvet: his left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour; so belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonadoed face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you: I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clo. ’Faith, there’s a dozen of ’em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—MARSEILLES. A Street.

Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting, day and night, Must wear your spirits low; we cannot help it: But, since you have made the days and nights as one, To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs, Be bold you do so grow in my requital, As nothing can unroot you.—In happy time;—

Enter a gentle Stranger.

This man may help me to his majesty’s ear, If he would spend his power.—God save you, Sir. Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France. Gent. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, Sir, that you are not fall’n From the report that goes upon your goodness; And therefore, goaded with most sharp occasions,
Which lay nice manner by, I put you to,
The use of your own virtues, for the which
I shall continue thankful.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
To give this poor petition to the king;
And aid me with that store of power you have
To come into his presence.

Gent. The king's not here.

Hel. Not here, Sir?

Gent. Not, indeed:
He hence remov'd last night, and with more haste
Than is his use.

Wid. Lord, how we lose our pains!

Hel. All's well that ends well yet,
Though time seem so adverse, and means unfit.—
I do beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marry, as I take it, to Rosaline;
Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you, Sir,
Since you are like to see the king before me,
Commend the paper to his gracious hand;
Which, I presume, shall render you no blame,
But rather make you thank your pains for it.
I will come after you, with what good speed
Our means will make us means.

Gent. This I'll do for you.

Hel. And you shall find yourself to be well thank'd,
Whatever falls more.—We must to horse again:—
Go, go, provide.

SCENE II.—ROUSILLON. The inner Court of the Countess's Mansion.

Enter Clown and Pages.

Par. Good monsieur Lavatch, give my lord Lafen this letter: I have ere now, Sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher clothes; but I am now, Sir, muddied in fortune's mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clo. Truly, fortune's displeasure is but sluttish, if it smell so strongly as thou speakest of: I will henceforth eat no fish of fortune's buttering. Pr'ythee, allow the wind.

Par. Nay, you need not to stop your nose, Sir; I speak this but by a metaphor.

Clo. Indeed, Sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose; or against any man's metaphor. Pr'ythee, get thee farther.

Par. Pray you, Sir, deliver me this paper.

Clo. Foh! pr'ythee, stand away: a paper from fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself.

Enter Lafen.

Here is a pur of fortune's, Sir, or of fortune's cat, (but not a musk-cat,) that has fallen into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddied within: pray you, Sir, use the carp as you may; for he looks like a poor, decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my smiles of compass, and leave him to your lordship.

[Exit.]

Par. My lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratched.

Laf. And what would you have me to do? 'tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knaves with fortune, that she should scratch you, who of herself is a good lady, and would not have knaves thrive long under her? There's a quaint d'vers for you: let the justices make you and fortune friends; I am for other business.

Par. I beseech your honour to hear me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more: come, you shall ha' it; save your word.

Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

Laf. You beg more than one word, then.—Cox! my passion! give me your hand;—how does your drum?

Par. O, my good lord! you were the first that found me.

Laf. Was I in sooth? and I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out.

Laf. Out upon thee, knave! dost thou put upon me at once both the office of God and the devil? one brings thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. [D Trumpets sound.] The king's coming; I know by his trumpets.—Sirrah, enquire farther after me: I had talk of you last night: though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat; go to, follow.

Par. I praise God for you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—ROUSILLON. A Room in the Countess's Mansion.

Flourish. Enter King, Countess, Lafen, Lords, Gentlemen, Guards, &c.

King. We lost a jewel of her; and our esteem Was made much poorer by it: but your son, As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know Her estimation home.

Count. 'Tis past, my liege;
And I beseech your majesty to make it
Natural rebellion, done it the blaze of youth;
When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force,
Overbears it, and burns on.

King. My honour'd lady,
I have forgiven and forgotten all;
Though my revenges were high bent upon him,
And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say,—
But first I beg my pardon,—the young lord Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady, Offence of mighty note; but to himself.
The greatest wrong of all: he lost a wife,
Whose beauty did astonish the survey
Of richest eyes; whose words all ears took captive;
Whose dear perfection, hearts that soon'd to serve,
Humbly call'd mistress.

King. Praising what is lost Makes the remembrance dear.—Well, call him hither;
We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill All repetition.—let him not ask our pardon;
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper than oblivion we do bury
The incensing relics of it: let him approach,
A stranger, no offender; and inform him,
So 'tis our will he should.

Gent. I shall, my liege. [Exit.]

King. What says he to your daughter? have you spoke?

Laf. All that he is hath reference to your highness. Then shall we have a match. I have let That set him high in fame. [Exit Lafen.]

iers sent me,
Enter BERTRAM.

Laf. He looks well on't.

KING. I am sure I saw her wear it.

Laf. You are deceiv'd, my lord; she never saw it:
In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it: noble she was, and thought
I stood in danger: but when I had subscrib'd
To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully
I could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture, she cease'd,
In heavy satisfaction, and never Receive the ring again.

KING. Plutus himself,
That knows the tint and multiplying medicine,
Hath not in nature's mystery more science,
Than I have in this ring: 'twas mine, 'twas Helen's,
Whoever gave it you. Then, if you know
That you are well acquainted with yourself,
Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her: she call'd the saints to surety,
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to yourself in bed,
(Where you have never come,) or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.

BERTRAM. She never saw it.

KING. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine
Honour:
And make their conjectural fears to come into me,
Which I would fain cut short. If it should prove That thou art so inhuman,—'twill not prove so:—
And yet I know not,—thou didst hate her deadly,
And she is dead; which nothing, but to close
Her eyes myself, could win me to believe,
More than to see this ring.—Take him away.—

GUARDS rise BERTRAM.

My fore-past proofs, how'er the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly fear'd too little.—Away with him!—
We'll lift this matter farther.

BERTRAM. If you shall proved
This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy
Prove that I husbands her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was. [Exit guards.]

KING. I am wrapp'd in dismal thinking.

Enter the gentle ASTRIGERI.

GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN,
Whether I have been to blame, or no, I know not:
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath, for four or five removes, come short
To tend it herself. I undertook it,
Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this, I know,
Is here attending: her business looks in her
With an importating visage; and she told me,
In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern
Your highness with herself.

KING. [Reads.] "Upon his many protestations to Marry me when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the count Roussillon a widower; his vows are forfeited to me, and my Honour's paid to him. He stole from Florence,
Taking no leave, and I follow him to his country
For justice: grant it me, O king! in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone." DIANA CAPULET.

BERTRAM. Lai. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and toll for this: I'll none of him.

KING. The heavens have thought well on thee,
SCENE III.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

To bring forth this discovery.—Seek these suitors:—
Go speedily, and bring again the count.
[Exeunt the gentle Astringer, and some Attendants.
I am afraid the life of Helen, lady,
Was foully snatch’d.
Count. Now, justice on the doers!

Re-enter BERTRAM, guarded.

King. I wonder, Sir, since wives are monsters to you,
And that you fFly them as you swear them lordship,
Yet you desire to marry.—

Re-enter the gentle Astringer, with Widow and DIANA.

What woman’s that?

Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine,
Deriv’d from the ancient Capulet:
My suit, as I do understand, you know,
And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

Wid. I am her mother, Sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer under this complaint we bring:
And both shall cease, without your remedy.

King. Come hither, count; do you know these women?

Ber. My lord, I neither can nor will deny
But that I know them: do they charge me farther?

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?

Ber. She’s none of mine, my lord.

Dia. If you shall marry,
You give away this hand, and that is mine;
You give away heaven’s vows, and those are mine;
You give away yourself, which is known mine;
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you must marry me,—
Either both or none.

Laf. [To Bertram.] Your reputation comes too short for my daughter; you are no husband for her.

Ber. My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature,
Whom sometime I have laugh’d with: let your highness
Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour,
Than for to think that I would sink it here.

King. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend,
Till your deeds gain them: fairer prove your honour,
Than in my thought it lies.

Dia. Good my lord,
Ask him upon his oath, if he does think
He had not my virginity.

King. What sayst thou to her?
Ber. She’s impudent, my lord;
And was a common gamester to the camp.

Dia. He does me wrong, my lord; if I were so,
He might have bought me at a common price:
Do not believe him: O, behold this ring,
Whose high respect and rich validity
Did lack a parallel; yet, for all that,
He gave it to a commoner o’ the camp,
If I be one.

Count. He blushes, and tis it:
Of six preceding ancestors, that gem
Conferr’d by testament to the sequent issue,
 Hath it been ow’d and worn. This is his wife;
That ring’s a thousand proofs.

King. Methought you said
You saw one here in court could witness it.

Dia. I did, my lord, but loath am to produce
So bad an instrument: his name’s Parolles.

Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man he be.

King. Find him, and bring him hither.

[Exit an Attendant.

Ber. What of him?

He’s quoted for a most perfidious slave,
With all the spots o’ the world tax’d and debosh’d;
Whose nature sickens but to speak a truth.
Am I for that, or this, for what he’ll utter,
That will speak any thing?

King. She hath that ring of yours.

Ber. I think she has: certain it is, I lik’d her,
And boarded her i’ the wanton way of youth:
She knew her distance, and did angle for me,
Madding my eagerness with her restraint,
As all impediments in fancy’s course
Are motives of more fancy; and, in fine,
Her infinite cunning, with her modern grace,
Subdued me to her rate: she got the ring;
And I had that, which any inferior might
At market-price have bought.

Dia. I must be patient: you,
That have turn’d off a first so noble wife,
May justly diet me. I pray you yet,
(Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband,) Send for your ring, I will return it home,
And give me mine again.

Ber. I have it not.

King. What ring was yours, I pray you?

Dia. Sir, much like
The same upon your finger.

King. Know you this ring? this ring was his of late.

Dia. And this was it I gave him, being a-bed.

King. The story then goes false, you threw it him
Out of a casement.

Ber. I have spoke the truth.

Dia. My lord, I do confess, the ring was hers.

King. You begg’d shrewdly, every feather starts you.—

Re-enter an Attendant with Parolles.

Is this the man you speak of?

Dia. Ay, my lord.

King. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true, I charge you,
Not fearing the displeasure of your master,
(Which, on your just proceeding, I’ll keep off,) By him, and by this woman here, what know you?

Par. So please your majesty, my master hath been an honourable gentleman: tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have.

King. Come, come, to the purpose: did he love this woman?

Par. ’Faith, Sir, he did love her; but how?

King. How, I pray you?

Par. He did love her, Sir, as a gentleman loves a woman.

King. How is that?

Par. He loved her, Sir, and loved her not.

King. As thou art a knave, and no knave.—

What an equivocal companion is this!

Par. I am a poor man, and at your majesty’s command.

Laf. He’s a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator.
Dian. Do you know he promised me marriage?
Par. 'Faith, I know more than I'll speak.
King. But wilt thou not speak all thou knowest?
Par. Ye, so please your majesty. I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her,—for, indeed, he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed; and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things which would derive me ill-will to speak of; therefore I will not speak what I know.

King. Thou hast spoken all already,unless thou canst
Say they are married: but thou art too fine
In thy evidence; therefore stand aside.—
This ring, you say, was yours?

Dian. Ay, my good lord.

King. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you?

Dian. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.

King. Who lent it you?

Dian. It was not lent me neither.

King. Where did you find it, then?

Dian. I found it not.

King. If it were yours by none of all these ways, How could you give it him?

Dian. I never gave it him.

Lafe. This woman's an easy glove, my lord; she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine; I gave it his first wife.

Dian. It might be yours, or hers, for aught I

King. Take her away; I do not like her now; To prison with her: and away with him.—

unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this ring,

Thou diest within this hour.

Dian. I'll never tell you.

King. Take her away.

Dian. I'll put in bail, my liege.

King. I think thee now some common customer.

Dian. By love, if ever I knew man, 'twas you.

King. Wherefore hast thou accused him all this while?

Dian. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty:

He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to't;

I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not.

Great king, I am no trumpeter, by my life!

I am either maid, or else this old man's wife.

[Exeunt K. & LAFEU.

King. She does abuse our ears: to prison with her.

Dian. Good mother, fetch my ball.—[Exit Widow.

Stay, royal Sir;

The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for,

And he shall surety me. But for this lord,

Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself,

Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit him:

He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd;

And at that time he got his wife with child:

Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick:

So there's my riddle,—One that's dead is quick:

And now behold the meaning.

Re-enter Widow, with Helena.

King. Is there no exorcist

Beguiles the truer office of mine eyes?

Is't real that I see?

Hel. No, my good lord;

'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see,

The name, and not the thing.

Ber. Both, both:—O, pardon!

Hel. O my good lord, when I was like this maid,

I found you wondrous kind. There is your ring;

And, look you, here's your letter; this it says:

"When from my finger you can get this ring,

And are by me with child, etc." This is done:

Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

Ber. If she, my liege, can make me know this clearly,

I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue,

Deadly divorce step between me and you!—

O my dear mother, do I see you living?

Lafe. Mine eyes smell onions; I shall weep anon:—

[To PAROLLES.] Good Tom Drum, lend me a handkerchief: so, I thank thee: wait on me home, I'll make sport with thee: let thy courtesies alone, they are scarcey ones.

King. Let us from point to point this story know,

To make the even truth in pleasure flow.—

[To DIANA.] If thou be'st yet a fresh uncropp'd flower,

Choose thou thy husband, and I'll pay thy dowry;

For I can guess, that by thy honest aid,

Thou kept'st a wife herself, thyself a maid.—

Of that, and all the progress, more or less,

Resolve not more leisure shall express:

All yet seems well; and if it end so meet,

The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.

[Flourish.]

The king's a beggar, now the play is done:

All is well ended, if this suit be won,

That you express content; which we will play,

With strife to please you, day exceeding day:

Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts;

Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts.

[Exeunt.]
TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

OSENIO, Duke of Illyria.
SEBASTIAN, a young Gentleman, Brother to VIOLA.
ANTONIO, a Sea Captain, Friend to SEBASTIAN.
A Sea Captain, Friend to VIOLA.
VALENTINE, Gentlemen attending on the Duke.
CHRISTIAN, a Hiding-man.
SIR TONY BELCH, Uncle to OLIVIA.
SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEIRE.
MALVOLIA, Steward to OLIVIA.

FABIAN,
FESTUS, a Clown, } Servants to OLIVIA.
OLIVIA, a rich Countess.
VIOLA, in love with the Duke.
MARIA, OLIVIA’s serving-woman.
Lords, Priests, Sailors, Officers, Musicians, and other Attendants.

SCENE.—A City in ILLYRIA; and the Sea-coast near it.

ACT I.

Enter Duke, Curio, Lords; Musicians attending.

Duke. If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it, that surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken, and so die:
That strain again;—it had a dying fall:
O, it came o’er my ear like the sweet south,
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing, and giving odour.—Enough; no more:
’Tis not so sweet now, as it was before.
O spirit of love, how quick and fresh art thou!
That, notwithstanding thy capacity
Receiveth as the sea, naught enters there,
Of what validity and pitch so’er,
But falls into abatement and low price,
Even in a minute! so full of shapes is fancy,
That it alone is high-fantastical.

Cur. Will you go hunt, my lord?
Duke. What, Curio?
Cur. The hart.

Duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have:
O, when mine eyes did see Olivia first,
Methought she pur’d the air of pensiveness:
That instant was I turn’d into a hart;
And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds,
E’er since pursue me.—

Enter VALENTINE.

VALENTINE. How now! what news from her?

VIOLA. So please my lord, I might not be admitted; But from her handmaid do return this answer: The element itself, till seven years’ heat, Shall not behold her face at ample view; But, like a cloistress, she will walk, And water once a day her chamber round With eye-offending brine: all this, to season A brother’s dead love, which she would keep fresh And lasting in her sad remembrance.

Duke. O, she that hath a heart of that fine frame, To pay this debt of love but to a brother,

How will she love, when the rich golden shaft Hath kill’d the flock of all affections else That live in her,—when liver, brain, and heart, These sovereign thrones, are all supplied and fill’d (Her sweet perfection) with one self king,— Away before me to sweet beds of flowers: Love-thoughts lie rich, when copied with bowers. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Sea-coast.

Enter VIOLA, Captain, and Sailors.

VIOLA. What country, friends, is this?

CAPTAIN. This is Illyria, lady.

VIOLA. And what should I do in Illyria?

CAPTAIN. My brother he is in Elysium.

PERCHANCE, he is not drown’d:—what think you,

CAPTAIN. It is perchance that you yourself were sav’d.

VIOLA. O my poor brother! and so perchance may he be.

CAPTAIN. True, Madam: and, to comfort you with Assure yourself, after our ship did split, [chance,

When you, and those poor number sav’d with you, Hung on our driving boat, I saw your brother, Most provident in peril, bind himself (Courage and hope both teaching him the practice) To a strong mast, that liv’d upon the sea;

Where, like Arion on the dolphin’s back, I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves So long as I could see.

VIOLA. For saying so, there’s gold: Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope, Whereeto thy speech serveth for authority, The like of him. Know’st thou this country?

CAPTAIN. Ay, Madam; well; for I was bred and born Not three hours’ travel from this very place.

VIOLA. Who governs here?

CAPTAIN. A noble duke, nature

VIOLA. What is his name?

CAPTAIN. Orsino.

As in name.
ACT L

Vio. Orsino! I have heard my father name him:
He was a bachelor then.

Cap. And so is now, or was so very late;
For but a month ago I went from hence,
And then 'twas fresh in murmurs (as, you know,
What great ones do, the less will prattle of)
That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.

Vio. What's she?

Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count
That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving her
In the protection of his son, her brother,
Who shortly also died: for whose dear love,
They say, she hath abjur'd the company
And sight of men.

Vio. O that I serv'd that lady!
And might not be deliver'd to the world,
Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
What my estate is.

Cap. That were hard to compass;
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No, not the duke's.

Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, captain;
And though that nature with a beauteous wall
Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee
I will believe, thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward character.
L'pythees, (and I'll pay thee bounteously,) I Conceal me what I am; and be my aid
For such disguise as haply shall become
The form of my intent. I'll serve this duke:
Thou shalt present me as a eunuch to him:
It may be worth thy pains; for I can sing,
And speak to him in many sorts of music,
That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap, to time I will commit;
Only, shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his eunuch, and your mute I'll be:
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see.

Vio. I thank thee: lead me on. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Room in OLIVIA'S House.

Enter SIR TOBY BELCH and MARIA.

Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take The death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth, Sir Toby, you must come in earlier o' nights: your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

Sir To. Why, let her except before excepted.

Mar. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.

Sir To. Confine! I'll confine myself no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drink in; and so be these boots too; an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you:
I heard my lady talk of it yesterday: and of a foolish knight, that you brought in one night here to be her wooer.

Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Ague-check!

Mar. Ay, he.

Sir To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Mar. What's that to the purpose?

Sir To. Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.

Mar. Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these ducats: he's a very fool, and a prodigal.

Sir To. Fie, that you'll say so! he plays o' the viol-de-gamboys, and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath, indeed,—almost natural: for, besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller; and, but that he hath the gift of a coward to allay the gust he hath in quarreling, 'tis thought among the prudent he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Sir To. By this hand, they are scoundrels and substractors that say so of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that add, moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.

Sir To. With drinking healths to my niece: I'll drink to her, as long as there is a passage in my throst, and drink in Illyria. He's a coward, and a covetish, that will not drink to my niece, till his brain turn o' the toe like a parish-top. What, wench!
Castillian vulgo; for here comes Sir And-drew Ague-face.

Enter SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir And. Sir Toby Belch, how now, Sir Toby Belch?

Sir To. Sweet Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Bless you, fair shrew.

Mar. And you too, Sir.

Sir To. Accost, Sir Andrew, accost.

Sir And. What's that?

Sir To. My niece's chamber-maid.

Sir And. Good mistress Accost, I desire better acquaintance.

Mar. My name is Mary, Sir.

Sir And. Good mistress Mary Accost,—

Sir To. You mistake, knight: accost, is, front her, board her, woo her, assail her.

Sir And. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of accost?

Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.

Sir To. An thou let part so, Sir Andrew, would thou mightst never draw sword again!

Sir And. An you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword again. Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

Mar. Sir, I have not you by the hand.

Sir And. Marry, but you shall have; and here's my hand.

Mar. Now, Sir, thought is free: I pray you, bring your hand to the buttery-bar, and let it drink.

Sir And. Wherefore, sweet heart? what's your metaphor?

Mar. It's dry, Sir.

Sir And. Why, I think so: I am not such an ass, but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Mar. A dry jest, Sir.

Sir And. Are you full of them?

Mar. Ay, Sir, I have them at my fingers' ends:
marry, now I let go your hand, I am barren. [Exit.

Sir To. O knight! thou lackest a cup of canary:
when did I see thee so put down?

Sir And. Never in your life, I think; unless you see canary put me down. Methinks sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian, or an ordinary man has; but I am a great eater of beef, and I believe that does harm to my wit.

Sir To. No question.

Sir And. An I thought that, I'd forswear it.

I'll ride home to-morrow, Sir Toby.
SCENE V.

TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

Sir To. Pourquoi, my dear knight?

Sir And. What is pourquoi? do or not do? I would I had bestowed that time in the tongues, that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting: O, had I but followed the arts!

Sir To. Then hadst thou an excellent head of hair.

Sir And. Why, would that have mended my hair? Sir To. Past question: for thou seest it will not curl by nature.

Sir And. But it becomes me well enough, does't not?

Sir To. Excellent; it hangs like flax on a distaff; and I hope to see a housewife take thee between her legs, and spin it off.

Sir And. 'Faith, I'll home to-morrow, Sir Toby: your niece will not be seen; or if she be, it's four to one she'll none of me: the count himself, here hard by, woos her.

Sir To. She'll none o' the count: she'll not match above her degree, neither in estate, years, nor wit; I have heard her swear it. Thou, there's life in't, man.

Sir And. I'll stay a month longer. I am a fellow o' the strangest mind i' the world; I delight in masks and revels sometimes altogether.

Sir To. Art thou good at these kick-shaws, knight?

Sir And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, under the degree of my betters; and yet I will not compare with an old man.

Sir To. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

Sir And. 'Faith, I can cut a caper.

Sir To. And I can cut the mutton to't.

Sir And. And I think I have the back-trick, simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

Sir To. Wherefore are these things hid? wherefore have these gifts a curtain before them? are they like to take dust, like mistress Mall's picture? why dost thou not go to church in a galliard, and come home in a coranto? My very walk should be a jig: I would not so much as make water, but in a sink-a-place. What dost thou mean? is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think, by the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was formed under the star of a galliard.

Sir And. Ay, tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a flame-coloured stock. Shall we set about some revels?

Sir To. What shall we do else? were we not born under Taurus?

Sir And. Taurus: that's sides and hearts.

Sir To. No, Sir; it is legs and thighs. Let me see thee caper: ha! higher: ha, ha!—excellent! [Exeunt.

Duke. Stand you awhile aloof.—Cesario, Thou know'st no less but all; I have unclasp'd To thee the book even of my secret soul: Therefore, good youth, address thy gait unto her; Be not denied access, stand at her doors, And tell them, there thy fixed foot shall grow, Till thou have audience.

Vio. Sure, my noble lord, If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow, As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

Duke. Be summisious, and leap all civil bounds, Rather than make unprofited return.

Vio. Say I do speak with her, my lord, what then? Duke. O, then unfold the passion of my love, Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith: It shall become thee well to act my woes; She will attend it better in thy youth, Than in a nunclo of more grave aspect.

Vio. I think not so, my lord.

Duke. Dear lad, believe it; For they shall yet belie thy happy years, That say thou art a man: Diana's lip Is not more smooth and rubious; thy small pipe Is as the maiden's organ, shrill and sound; And all is semblative a woman's part. I know thy constellation is right apt For this affair:—some four or five attend him; All, if you will; for I myself am best, When least in company—prosper well in this, And thou shalt live as freely as thy lord, To call his fortunes thine.

Vio. I'll do my best To woo your lady: [Aside] yet, a barful strife! Whoe'er I woo, myself would be his wife. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A Room in OLIVIA'S House.

Enter MARIA and CLOWN.

Mar. Nay, either tell me where thou hast been, or I will not open my lips so wide as a bristle may enter in way of thy excuse: my lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Clo. Let her hang me: he is that is well hanged in this world needs to fear no colours.

Mar. Make that good.

Clo. He shall see none to fear.

Mar. A good lenient answer: I can tell thee where that saying was born, of, I fear no colours.

Clo. Where, good mistress Mary?

Mar. In the wars; and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.

Clo. Well, God give them wisdom, that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents. (Mar. Yet you will be hanged for being so long absent; or, to be turned away: is not that as good as a hanging to you?)

Clo. Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and, for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Mar. You are resolute, then?

Clo. Not so, neither; but I am resolved on two points.

Mar. That if one break, the other will hold; or, if both break, your gaskins fall.

Clo. Aпт, in good faith; very apt. Well, go thy way; if Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou werst as witty a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace, you rogue, no more o' that. Here comes my lady: make your excuse wisely, you were best. [Exit.
TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

ACT I.

Clo. Wit, an't be thy will, put me into good feeling! Those wise, that think they have thee, do very oft prove fools; and I, that am sure I lack thee, may pass for a wise man: for what says Quinquainus? Better a witty fool, than a foolish wit.—[Enter OLIVIA and MALVOLIO.] God bless thee, lady! Oli. Take the fool away. Clo. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady. Oli. Go to, you're a dry fool: I'll no more of you: besides, you grow dishonest. Clo. Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amends: for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry: bid the dishonest man mend himself; if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the butcher mend him: say thing that's mended is but patched: virtue that transgresses is but patched with sin; and sin that amends is but patched with virtue; if that: this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true cackold but calamity, so beauty's a flower.—The lady bade take away the fool: therefore, I say again, take her away. Oli. Sir, I base them take away you. Clo. Misprision in the highest degree!—Lady, cuiculus non facit monachum; that's as much to say, as I wear not motley in my brain. Good madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool. Oli. Can you do it? Clo. Dexteriously, good madonna. Oli. Make your proof. Clo. I must catch thee for it, madonna: good my mouse of virtue, answer me. Oli. Well, Sir, for want of other idleness, I'll hide your proof. Good madonna, why mournest thou? Oli. Good fool, for my brother's death. Clo. I think his soul is in hell, madonna. Oli. I know his soul is in heaven, fool. Clo. The more fool, madonna, to mourn for your brother's soul being in heaven.—Take away the fool, gentlemen. Oli. What think you of this fool, Malvolio? doth he not mend? Mal. Yes, and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever make the better fool. Clo. God send you, Sir, a speedy infirmity, for the better increasing your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no fox; but he will not pass his word for twopenny that you are no fool. Oli. How say you to that, Malvolio? Mal. I marvel your ladyship takes delight in such a barrenascal: I saw him put down the other day with an ordinary fool, that has no more brain than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already; unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagged. I protest, I take these wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, no better than the fools' bastards. Oli. O, you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distempered appetite. To be generous, guiltless, and of free disposition, is to take those things for bird-bolts, that you deem common-bullets: there is no slander in an allowed fool, though he do nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man. Clo. Now Mercury endue thee with lossing, for thou speakest well of fools!

Re-enter MARIA.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate a young gentleman much desires to speak with you. Oli. From the count Osorio, is it? Mar. I know not, Madam: 'tis a fair young man, and well attended. Oli. Who of my people hold him in delay? Mar. Sir Toby, Madam, your kinsman. Oli. Fetch him off, I pray you; he speaks nothing but madman: set me on him! [Exit MARIA.] Go you, Malvolio: if it be a suit from the count, I am sick, or not at home; what you will, to fashion it. [Exit MALVOLIO.] Now you see, Sir, how your fooling grows old, and people dislike it. Clo. Thou hast spoken for us, madonna, as if thy eldest son should be a fool,—whose skull jove cramm with brains! for here he comes, one of thy kin, has a most weak pie matter.

Enter Sir Toby Belch.

Oli. By mine honour, half drunk.—What is he at the gate. Sir To. A gentleman. Oli. A gentleman! what gentleman? Sir To. 'Tis a gentleman here,—a plague o' these pickle-herring!—How now, now, now! Oli. Good Sir Toby!— Oli. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lechery? Sir To. Lechery! I defy lechery. There's one at the gate. Oli. Ay, marry, what is he? Sir To. Let him be the devil, an he will, I care not: give me faith, say I! Well, it's all one. [Exit.] Oli. What's a drunken man like, fool? Clo. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a madman: one, bawd makes him a fiend; the second mads him; and a third drowns him. Oli. Go thou and seek the coroner, and let him sit o' my cos; for he's in the third degree of drink, —he's drown'd; go, look after him, and see if he have not some lechery. Clo. He is bet mad yet, madonna; and the fool shall look to the madman. [Exit.]

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Madam, yond' young fellow swears he will speak with you. I told him you were sick; he takes on him to understand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you: I told him you were asleep; he seems to have a fore-knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? he's forti'd against any denial. Oli. Tell him, he shall not speak with me. Mal. He has been told so; and he says, he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's post, and he the supporter to a bench, but he'll speak with you. Oli. What kind of man is he? Mal. Why, of man kind. Oli. What manner of man? Mal. Of very ill manner; he'll speak with you, will you, or no. Oli. Of what personage, and years is he? Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squaw is before 'tis a peascod, or a codling when 'tis almost an apple; 'tis with him e'en standing water, between boy and man. He is very well-favoured, and he speaks very shrively; one would think, his mother's milk were scarce out of him.
Oli. Let him approach: call in my gentlewoman.
Mel. Gentlewoman, my lady calls. [Exit.

Maria. Oli. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er my face.
We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Enter Viola.

Vio. The honourable lady of the house, which is she?
Oli. Speak to me; I shall answer for her. Your will?

Vio. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty,—I pray you, tell me if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her: I would be loath to cast away my speech; for, besides that it is excellently well penned, I have taken great pains to con it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn; I am very comely, even to the least sinister usage.

Oli. Whence came you, Sir? I can say no more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Oli. Are you a comedian?

Vio. No, my profound heart: and yet, by the very fangs of malice I swear, I am not that I play. Are you the lady of the house?

Oli. If I do not usurp myself, I am.

Vio. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp yourself; for, what is yours to bestow, is not yours to reserve. But this is from my commission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Oli. Come to what is important in't: I forgive you the praise.

Vio. Alas, I took great pains to study it; and 'tis poetical.

Oli. It is the more like to be feigned: I pray you, keep it in. I heard you were saucy at my gates; and allowed your approach, rather to wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of month with me to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Maria. Will you hoist sail, Sir? here lies your way.

Vio. No, good swabber; I am to hull here a little longer.—Some mollification for your giant, sweet lady.

Oli. Tell me your mind.

Vio. I am a messenger.

Oli. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful. Speak your office.

Vio. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no outcry of war, no taxation of homage: I hold the olive in my hand; my words are as full of peace as matter.

Oli. Yet you began rudely. What are you? what would you?

Vio. The rudeness that hath appeared in me, have I learned from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maidenhead; to your ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

Oli. Give us the place alone: we will hear this divinity. [Exit Maria.] Now, Sir, what is your text?

Vio. Most sweet lady,—

Oli. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your text?

Vio. In Orsino's bosom.

Oli. In his bosom! In what chapter of his bosom?

Vio. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

Oli. O, I have read it: it is hereby. Have you no more to say?

Vio. Good Madam, let me see your face.

Oli. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? you are now out of your text; but we will draw the curtain, and show you the picture. [Unveiling.] Look you, Sir, such a one I was as this presents: 'tis not well done?

Vio. Exceedingly done, if God did all.

Oli. 'Tis in grain, Sir; 'twill endure wind and weather.

Vio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on:
Lady, you are the cruelest she alive,
If you will lead those graces to the grave,
And leave the world no copy.

Oli. O, Sir, I will not be so hard-hearted; I will give out divers graces of my beauty: it shall be inventoried, and every particle and utensil labelled to my will:—as, item, two lips, indifferent red; item, two grey eyes, with lids to them; item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Vio. I see you what you are,—you are too proud;
But, if you were the devil, you are fair.
My lord and master loves you: O, such love Could be but recompens'd, though you were crown'd
The nonpareil of beauty!

Oli. How does he love me?

Vio. With adorations, with fertile tears,
With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire.

Oli. Your lord does know my mind: I cannot love him:
Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble,
Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth; In voices well divul'd, free, learn'd, and valiant; And, in dimension and the shape of nature, A gracious person: but yet I cannot love him; He might have took his answer long ago.

Vio. If I did love you in my master's flame, With such a suff'ring, such a deadly life, In your denial I would find no sense;
I would not understand it.

Oli. Why, what would you?

Vio. Make me a willow cabin at your gate, And call upon my soul within the house; Write loyal cantos of consterned love, And sing them loud even in the dead of night; Hollo your name to the reverberate hills, And make the babbling gossip of the air Cry out, Olivia! O, you should not rest Between the elements of air and earth, But you should pity me!

Oli. You might do much. What is your parent?

Vio. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well: I am a gentleman.

Oli. Get you to your lord; I cannot love him: let him send no more;
Unless, perchance, you come to me again, To tell me how he takes it. Fare you well;
I thank you for your pains: spend this for me.

Vio. I am noeec'd post, lady; keep your purse;
My master, not myself, lacks recompense:
Love make his heart of flint, that you shall love; And let your servant, like my master's, be Plac'd in contempt! Farewell, fair cruelty. [Exit.
Oli. "What is your parentage?"
"Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
I am a gentleman."—I'll be sworn thou art;
Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit,
Do give thee five-fold blazon—not too fast—soft, soft!

Unless the master were the man.——How now!
Even so quickly may one catch the plague?
Methinks I feel this youth's perfecions,
With an invisible and subtle stealth,
To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.—
What ho, Malvolio!——

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

MALV. Here, Madam, at your service.
OLI. Run after that same peevish messenger,
The county's man: he left this ring behind him,
Would I, or not: tell him I'll none of it.
Desire him not to flatter with his lord,
Nor hold him up with hopes; I am not for him:
If that the youth will come this way—to-morrow,
I'll give him reasons for't. Hie thee, Malvolio.

MALV. Madam, I will. [Exit.

OLI. Do I do know not what; and fear to find
Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind.
Fate, show thy force: ourselves we do not owe;
What is decreed must be, and be this so! [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Sea-coast.

Enter ANTONIO and SEBASTIAN.

ANT. Will you stay no longer? nor will you not that I go with you?

SEB. By your patience, no. My stars shine darkly over me: the malignancy of my fate might, perhaps, distemper yours; therefore, I shall crave of you your leave, that I may bear my evils alone: it were a bad recompense for your love, to lay any of them on you.

ANT. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

SEB. No, 'sooth, Sir: my determinate voyage is mere extravagance. But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keep in; therefore, it charges me in manners the rather to express my self. For I am now of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I called Rodrigo. My father was that Sebastian of Messaline, whom I know you have heard of. He left behind him myself and a sister, both born in an hour: if the heavens had been pleased, would we had so ended! but you, Sir, alter'd that; for some hour before you took me from the breach of the sea was my sister drowned.

ANT. Alas, the day!

SEB. A lady, Sir, though it was said she much resembed me, was yet of many accounted beautiful:
but, though I could not, with such estimable wonder,
overfear believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her,—she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair. She is drowned already, Sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again and more.

ANT. Pardon me, Sir, your bad entertainment.

SEB. O good Antonio, forgive me your trouble!

ANT. If you will not murder me for my love, let me be your servant.

SEB. If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him whom you have recovered, desire it not. Fare ye well at once: my bosom is full of kindness; and I am yet so near the manners of my mother, that, upon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me. I am bound to the count
Orsino's court: farewell.

ANT. The gentleness of all the gods go with thee!
I have many enemies in Orsino's court,
Else would I very shortly see thee there:
But, come what may, I do adore thee so,
That danger shall seem sport, and I will go. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter VIOLA; MALVOLIO following.

MALV. Were not you even now with the countess Olivia?

VIOL. Even now, Sir; on a moderate pace I have since arrived but hither.

MALV. She returns this ring to you, Sir: you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds, moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him: and one thing more,—that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this: receive it so.

VIOL. She took the ring of me;—I'll none of it.

MALV. Come, Sir, you peevishly threw it to her;
and her will is, it should be so returned: if it be worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. [Exit.

VIOL. I left no ring with her: what means this lady?

Fortune forbids, my outside have not charm'd her!
She made good view of me; indeed, so much,
That methought her eyes had lost her tongue,
For she did speak in starts distractedly.
She loves me, sure; the cunning of her passion
Invites me in this churlish messenger.
None of my lord's ring! why, he sent her none.
I am the man,—if it be so,—as 'twas,
Poor lady, she were better love a dream.

Disguise, I see, thou art a wickedness,
Wherein the pregnant enemy does much.

How easy is it for the proper-false
In women's waxen hearts to set their forms!
Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we!
For, such as we are made of, such we be.

How will this fadge?—My master loves her dearly;
And I poor monster, fond as much on him;
And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me.
What will become of this? As I am man,
My state is desperate for my master's love;
As I am woman,—now alas the day!—

What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe!
O time, thou must untangle this, not I;
It is too hard a knot for me to untie. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in OLIVIA'S House.

Enter SIR TONY BULBEE and SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

SIR TOB. Approach, Sir Andrew: not to be a-bed after midnight is to be up betimes; and diluculo
surgere, thou knowest,

SIR AND. Nay, by my troth, I know not: but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.
Sir Th. A false conclusion: I hate it as an unfilled can. To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then, is early: so that, to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. Does not our life consist of the four elements?
Sir And. 'Faith, so they say; but, I think, it rather consists of eating and drinking.
Sir Th. Thou art a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink. — Marian, I say! — a stoup of wine!
Sir And. Here comes the fool, 'faith.

Enter Clown.

Clo. How now, my hearts! Did you never see the picture of we three?
Sir Th. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a catch.
Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. I had rather than forty spillings I had such a leg, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spokest of Pigrogrumitus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Queebus: 'twas very good, 'faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy leman: hadst it?
Clo. I did impetuously thy gratitability; for Malvolio's nose is no whipstock: my lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.
Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now, a song.
Sir Th. Come on; there is sixpence for you: let's have a song.
Sir And. There's a testril of me too: if one knight give a —

Clo. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?
Sir Th. A love-song, a love-song.
Sir And. Ay, ay; I care not for good life.

SONG.
O mistress mine, where are you roaming?
O, stay and hear; your true love's coming.
That can sing both high and low:
Truly, my song sweet and my melody true.
Journeys end in lovers' meeting,
Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, 'faith.
Sir Th. Good, good.

Clo. What is love? 'Tis not hereafter;
Present mirth hath present laughter;
What's come is come and is unsure:
In delay there lies no plenty;
Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty,
Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.
Sir Th. A contagious breath.
Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, 'faith.
Sir Th. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the wellkin dance indeed? Shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch, that will draw three souls out of one weaver? shall we do that?
Sir And. An you love me, let's do't: I am dog at your heels.
Clo. By'r lady, Sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Most certain. Let our catch be, "Thou kneave."
Clo. "Hold thy peace, thou kneave, knight! I shall be constrain'd in't to call thee kneave, knight."
Sir And. 'Tis not the first time I have constrain'd one to call me kneave. Begin, fool: it begins, "Hold thy peace."
Clo. I shall never begin, if I hold my peace.
Sir And. Good, 'faith. Come, begin.

[They sing a catch.

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a caterwauling do you keep here! If my lady have not called up her steward, Malvolio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.
Sir Th. My lady's a Catanian, we are politicians; Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey, and "Three merry men are we."
Am I not consanguineous? Am I not of her blood? Tilly-valley, lady! [Singing.] "There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady!"
Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Sir And. Ay, he does well enough, if he be disposed, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.
Sir Th. [Singing.] "O, the twelfth day of December;"
Mar. For the love o' God, peace!

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. My masters, are you mad? or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to guggle like tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an alehouse of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your coziers' catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time, in you?
Sir Th. We did keep time, Sir, in our catches. Sneak up!

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you, that, though she harbours you as her kinman, she's nothing allied to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanours, you are welcome to the house; if not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.
Sir Th. [Singing.] "Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone."
Mar. Nay, good Sir Toby.

Clo. [Singing.] "His eyes do show his days are almost done."

Mal. Is't even so?
Sir Th. [Singing.] "But I will never die."
Clo. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Mal. This is much credit to you.
Sir Th. [Singing.] "Shall I bid him go?"
Clo. [Singing.] "What an if you do?"
Sir Th. [Singing.] "Shall I bid him go, and spare not?"
Clo. [Singing.] "O! no, no, no, no, you dare not."

Sir Th. Out o' time, Sir? ye lie. — Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?
Mal. Yes, by Saint Anne; and ginger shall be hot i' the mouth too.

Sir Th. Thou'rt i' the right. — Go, Sir, rub your chain with crumbs. — A stoup of wine, Maria!
Mal. Mistress Maria, if you prized my lady's favour at any thing more than contempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule: she shall know of it, by this hand.

[Exit.
Mar. Go shake your ears.
Sir And. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a man's a-hungry, to challenge him to the field, and then to break promise with him, and make a fool of him.

Sir To. Do't, knight; I'll write thee a challenge; or I'll deliver thy indignantation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for to-night; since the youth of the count's was to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not gull him into a mayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed: I know, I can do it.

Sir To. Possess us, possess us; tell us something of him.

Mar. marry, Sir, sometimes he is a kind of puritan.

Sir And. O, if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog!

Sir To. What, for being a puritan? thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

Sir And. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

Mar. The devil a puritan that he is, or any thing constantly, but a time-pleaser; an affected ass, that cons state without book, and utter it by great swaths: the best persuaded of himself, so crammed, as he thinks, with excellencies, that it is his ground of faith, that all that look on him love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

Sir To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love; wherein, by the colour of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expression of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated: I can write very like my lady, your niece; on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

Sir To. Excellent! I smell a device.

Sir And. I have't in my nose, too.

Sir To. He shall think, by the letters that thou wilt drop, that they come from my niece, and that she is in love with him.

Mar. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that colour.

Sir And. And your horse, now, would make him an ass.

Mar. Ass, I doubt not.

Sir And. O, 'twill be admirable!

Mar. Sport royal, I warrant you: I know my music will work with him. I will plant you two, and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter: observe his construction of it. For this night, to bed, and dream on the event. Farewell.

Sir To. Good night, Penthesilea. [Exit MARIA.

Sir And. Before me, she's a good wench.

Sir To. She's a beagle, true-bred, and one that adores me: what o' that?

Sir And. I was adored once too.

Sir To. Let's to bed, knight.—Thou hadst need send for more money.

Sir And. If I cannot recover your niece, I am a foul way out.

Sir To. Send for money, knight: if thou hast her not? the end, call me cut.

Sir And. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will.

Sir To. Come, come; I'll go burn some sack, 'tis too late to go to bed now; come, knight; come, knight.

Scene IV.—An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and others.

Duke. Give me some music:—now, good morrow, friends:—

Now, good Cesiario, but that piece of song,
That old and antique song, we heard last night;
Methought it did relieve my passion much,
More than light airs, and recolleced terms,
Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times:
Come, but one verse.

Cur. He is not here, so please your lordship, that should sing it.

Duke. Who was it?

Cur. Feste, the jester, my lord; a fool, that the lady Olivia's father took much delight in: he is about the house.

Duke. Seek him out:—and play the tune the while. [Exit CURIO. Music.

Come hither, boy: if ever thou shalt love,
In the sweet pangs of it, remember me;
For such as I am, all true lovers are,— Unsaid and unuttered in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature,
That is below'd.—How dost thou like this tune?

Vio. It gives a very echo to the seat
Where Love is thrum'd.

Duke. Thou dost speak masterly:
My life upon't, young though thou art, thine eye
Hath stay'd upon some favour that it loves;—
Hath it not, boy?

Vio. A little, by your favour.

Duke. What kind of woman is it?

Vio. Of your complexion.

Duke. She is not worth thee, then. What years,
I'll faith?

Vio. About your years, my lord.

Duke. Too old, by heaven: let still the woman take
An elder than herself; so wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart:
For, boy, however we do praise ourselves, Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn, Than women's are.

Vio. I think it well, my lord.

Duke. Then, let thy love be younger than thyself, Or thy affection cannot hold the bent; For women are as roses, whose fair flower Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.

Vio. And so they are: alas, that they are so,—
To die, even when they to perfection grow!

Re-enter CURIO with Clown.

Duke. O, fellow, come, the song we had last night.—

Mark it, Cesiario; it is old and plain:
The spinners and the knitters in the sun,
And the free maid's that weave their thread with bones,
Do use to chant it: it is silly sooth,
And dally with the innocence of love,
Like the old age.

Clown. Are you ready, Sir?

Duke. Ay; pray thee, sing.
TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL

SCENE V.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, and Fabian.

Sir To. Come thy ways, signior Fabian.

Fab. Nay, I'll come: if I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boiled to death with melancholy.

Sir To. Wouldst thou not be good to have the niggardly rascally sheep-biter come by some notable shame?

Fab. I would exult, man: you know, he brought me out o' favour with my lady about a bear-baiting here.

Sir To. To anger him, we'll have the bear again; and we will fool him black and blue:—shall we not, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. An we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Sir To. Here comes the little villain. [Enter Maria.] How now, my nettle of India!

Mar. Get ye all three into the box-tree: Malvolio's coming down this walk: he has been yonder i' the sun, practising behaviour to his own shadow this half hour: observe him, for the love of mockery; for I know this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. Close, in the name of jesting! [The men hide themselves.] Lie thou there; [Throw down a letter.] for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling. [Exit.]

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. 'Tis but fortune; all is fortune. Maria once told me she did affect me; and I have heard herself come thus near, that should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect than any one else that follows her. What should I think on't?

Sir To. Here's an over-weaning rogue!

Fab. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him: how he jets under his advanced plumes!

Sir And. 'Slight, I could so beat the rogue!

Sir To. Peace! I say.

Mal. To be count Malvolio,—

Sir To. Ah, rogue!

Sir And. Pistol him, pistol him.

Sir To. Peace, peace!

Mal. There is example for't; the lady of the Strachy married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

Sir And. Fie on him, Jezebel!

Fab. O, peace! now he's deeply in: look how imagination blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state,— Sir To. O, for a stone-bow, to hit him in the eye!

Mal. Calling my officers about me, in my branched velvet gown; having come from a day-bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping,—

Sir To. Fire and brimstone!

Fab. O, peace, peace! Peace!

Mal. And then to have the humour of state; and after a demure travel of regard,—telling them I know my place, as I would they should do theirs,—to ask for your kinsman Toby,—

Sir To. Bolts and shackles!—

Fab. O, peace, peace, peace! now, now.

Mal. Seven of my people, with an obedient start, make out for him: I frown the while; and per-chance wind up my watch, or play with some rich jewel. Toby approaches; court’sie there to me,—

Sir To. Shall this fellow live?

Fab. Though our silence be drawn from us with care, yet peace!

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control.

Sir To. And does not Toby take you a blow o’ the lips then?

Mal. Saying, “Cousin Toby, my fortunes, having cast me on your niece, give me this prerogative of speech.”—

Sir To. What, what?

Mal. “You must amend your drunkenness.”—

Sir To. Out, scab!

Fab. Nay, patience, or we break the sinews of our plot.

Mal. “Besides, you waste the treasure of your time with a foolish knight.”—

Sir And. That’s me, I warrant you.

Mal. “One Sir Andrew”—

Sir And. I know ‘twas I; for many do call me fool.

Mal. [Seeing the letter.] What employment have we here?

Fab. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

Sir To. O, peace! and the spirit of humours intimate reading aloud to him!

Mal. By my life, this is my lady’s hand: these be her letters, her U’s, and her T’s; and thus makes she her great F’s. It is, in contempt of question, her hand.

Sir And. Her C’s, her U’s, and her T’s: why that?

Mal. [Reads.] “To the unknown beloved, this, and my good wishes: her very phrases!—By your leave, wax.—Soft!—and the impressure her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal: ’tis my lady. To whom should this be?

Fab. This wins him, liver and all.

Mal. [Reads.] “Jove knows, I love; / But who? / Lips do not move; / No man must know.”

“No man must know.”—What follows? the numbers altered?—“No man must know!”—if this should be thee, Malvolio?

Sir To. Marry, hang thee, brock!

Mal. [Reads.] “I may command where I adore; / But silence, like a Lucrece knife, / With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore: / M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.”

Fab. A lustian riddle!

Sir To. Excellent wench, say I.

Mal. “M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.”—Nay, but first, let me see, —let me see, —let me see.

Fab. What a dish of poison has she dressed him!

Sir To. And with what wing the stannyl eyes at it?

Mal. “I may command where I adore.” Why, she may command me: I serve her; she is my lady. Why, this is evident to any formal capacity: there is no obstruction in this:—and the end,—what should that alphabetical position portend? if I could make that resemble something in me,—Softly!—

M, O, A, I,—

Sir To. O, ay, make up that:—he is now at a cold scent.

Fab. Sower will cry upon’t, for all this, though it be as rank as a fox.

Mal. M,—Malvolio;—M,—why, that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say he would work it out? the cur is excellent at fault.

Mal. M,—But then there is no consonancy in the sequel; that suffers under probation: A should follow, but O does.

Fab. And O shall end, I hope.

Sir To. Ay, or I’ll cudgel him, and make him cry, O!

Mal. And then I comes behind.

Fab. Ay, you had any eye behind you, you might see more detection at your heels, than fortunes before you.

Mal. M, O, A, I,—this simulation is not as the former:—and yet, to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of these letters are in my name. Soft! here follows prose.—[Reads.] “If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my stars I am above thee; but be not afraid of greatness: some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. Thy fates open their hands; let thy blood and spirit embrace them. And, to incur thyself to such things thou art like to be, that thou shalt be humble and slow-mouth, and appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants; let thy tongue hang arguments of state; put thyself into the trick of singularity, thy thus advise thee, that sighs for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings, and wished to see thee ever cross-gartered: I say, remember. Go to, thou art made, if thou desirest to lose thee; if not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch Fortune’s fingers. Farewell. She that would alter services with thee, The Fortunate Unhappy.”

Daylight and champain discovers not more: this is open. I will be proud, I will read politic authors, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be point-device the very man. I do not now fool myself, to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to this, that my lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, she did praise my leg being cross-gartered; and in this she manifests herself to my love, and, with a kind of injunction, drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars, I am happy. I shall be strange, stout, in yellow stockings, and cross-gartered, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove and my stars be praised!—Here is yet a postscript. [Reads.]
ACT III.

SCENE I.—OLIVIA'S GARDEN.

Enter VIOLA, and Clown with a taber.

Vio. Save thee, friend, and thy music: dost thou live by thy tabor?
Clo. No, Sir, I live by the church.

Vio. Art thou a churchman?

Clo. No such matter, Sir: I do live by the church; for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

Vio. So thou mayst say, the king lies by a beggar, if a beggar dwell near him: or, the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church.

Clo. You have said, Sir,—To see this age!—A sentence is but a chevrel glove to a good wit: how quickly the wrong side may be turned outward!

Vio. Nay, that's certain; they that dally nicely with words, may quickly make them wanton.

Clo. I would, therefore, my sister had had no name, Sir.

Vio. Why, man?

Clo. Why, Sir, her name's a word; and to dally with that word, might make my sister wanton. But, indeed, words are very rascals, since bonds disgraced them.
Enter Olivia and Maria.

Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain odours on you!

Sir And. That youth's a rare courtier: "Rain odours!" well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.

Sir And. "Odours," "pregnant," and "vouchsafed"—I'll get 'em all three all ready.

Oli. Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing.

[Exit Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Maria.]

Give me your hand, Sir.

Vio. My duty, Madam, and most humble service.

Oli. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.

Oli. My servant, Sir! 'Twas never merry world, since lowly feigning was call'd compliment! You're servant to the count Orsino, youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours: Your servant's servant is your servant, Madam.

Oli. For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts, 'Would they be blanks, rather than fill'd with me.'

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts on his behalf:—

Oli. O, by your leave, I pray you. I bade you never speak again of him: But, would you undertake another suit, I had rather hear you to solicit that, Than music from the spheres.

Vio. Dear lady,—

Oli. Give me leave, 'beech you. I did send, After the last enchantment you did here, A ring in chase of you: so did I abuse Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you: Under your hard construction must I sit, To force that on you, in a shamefull cunning, Which you knew none of yours: what might you think?

Have you not set mine honour at the stake, And baited it with all th' unmuzzled thoughts That tyrannous heart can think? To one of your receiving, Enough is shown: a cypress, not a bosom, Hides my heart. So, let me hear you speak.

Vio. I pity you.

Oli. That's a degree of love.

Vio. No, not a grise; for 'tis a vulgar proof, That very oft we pity enemies.

Oli. Why, then, methinks, 'tis time to smile again. O world, how apt the poor are to be proud! If one should be a prey, how much the better To fall before the lion, than the wolf! [Clock strikes.]

The clock upbraids me with the waste of time.—

Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you: And yet, when wit and youth is come to harvest, Your wife is like to reap a proper man: There lies your way, due west.

Vio. Then westward ho! Grace and good disposition 'tend your ladyship! You'll nothing, Madam, to my lord by me?

Oli. Stay: I pr'ythee, tell me what thou think'st of me.

Vio. That you do think you are not what you are. Oli. If I think so, I think the same of you.

Vio. Then think you right: I am not what I am. Oli. I would you were as I would have you be!

Vio. Would it be better, Madam, than I am, I wish it might; for now I am your fool.

Oli. O, what a deal of scorn looks beautiful In the contempt and anger of his lip! A murderous guilt shows not itself more than love that would seem hid: love's night is noon. Cesario, by the roses of the spring, By maidshead, honour, truth, and every thing, I love thee so, that, manse all thy pride, nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide. Do not extort thy reasons from this clause, For that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause; But, rather, reason thus with reason fitter,—

Love sought is good, but given unsought is better. Vio. By innocence I swear, and by my youth, I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth,—

And that no woman has; nor never none Shall mistress be of it, save I alone. And so, ahem, good Madam: never more Will I my master's tears to you deplore.

Oli. Yet come again; for thou perhaps mayst That heart, which now abhors, to like his love. [Move to Olivia.]

Scene II.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, and Fabian.

Sir And. No faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.

Sir To. Thy reason, dear venom, give thy reason.

Fab. You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Marry, I saw your niece do more favours to the count's serving-man, than ever she bestowed upon me; I saw 't i' the orchard.

Sir To. Did she see thee the while, old boy? tell me that.

Sir And. As plain as I see you now. I: This was a great argument of love in her to warn you.

Sir And. 'Slight, will you make an ass o' me? Fab. I will prove it legitimate, Sir, upon the oaths of judgment and reason.

Sir To. And they have been grand-jury-men since before Noah was a sailor.

Fab. She did show favour to the youth in your sight only to exasperate you, to swathe your dormant mouse courage, to put fire in your heart, and brimstone in your liver. You should then have accosted her: and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have hanged the youth into dumness. This was looked for at your hand, and this was baulked: the double gift of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my lady's opinion; where you will hang like an icle on a Dutchman's beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt, either of valour, or policy.

Sir And. An't be any way, it must be with valour; for policy I hate: I had as lief be a Brownist as a politician.

Sir To. Why, then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour. Challenge me the count's youth to fight with him; hurt him in eleven places: my niece shall take note of it; and assure thyself, there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in man's commendation with woman, than report of valour.

Fab. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.
TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

Sir And. Will either of you hear me a challenge to him?
Sir To. Go, write it in a martial hand; be curt and brief; it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent, and full of invention: taunt him with the licence of ink; if thou "thou'st" him some thrice, it shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England, set 'em down; go, about it. Let there be gall enough in thy ink; though thou write with a goose-quin, no matter; about it.
Sir And. Where shall I find you?
Sir To. We'll call thee at the cubiculo: go.

[Exit Sir Andrew.]

Fab. This is a dear manakin to you, Sir Toby.
[Exit Fab.]

Sir And. I have been dear to him, lad,—some two thousand strong, or so.
Fab. We shall have a rare letter from him; but you'll not deliver it.
Sir And. Never trust me, then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think oxen and wainropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were opened, and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of the anatomy.

Fab. And his opposite, the youth, bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.
Sir To. Look, where the youngest wren of nine comes.

Enter Maria.

Maria. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me. Your dull Malvolio is turn'd heathen, a very renegado; for there is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness. He's in yellow stockings.

Sir To. And cross-gartered?
Maria. Most villainously; like a pedant that keeps a school I the church,—I have dogged him like his murderer. He does obey every point of the letter that I dropped to betray him; he does smile his face into more lines than are in the new map, with the augmentation of the Indies: you have not seen such a thing as 'tis; I can hardly forbear hurling things at him. I know my lady will strike him: if she do, he'll smile, and take't for a great favour.
Sir To. Come, bring us, bring us where he is.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Street.

Enter Sebastian and Antonio.

Seb. I would not, by my will, have troubled you; but, since you make your pleasure of your pains, I will no farther chide you.
Ant. I could not stay behind you: my desire, more sharp than filed steel, did spur me forth; and not I, but you, (though so much as might have drawn one to a longer voyage,) but jealousy what might befall your travel, Being skillless in these parts; which to a stranger, being unbridled and unconfined, Being rough and inhospitable: my willing love, The rather by these arguments of fear, Set forth in your pursuit.
Seb. My kind Antonio, I can no other answer make, but thanks, And thanks, and ever thanks; and oft good turns Are shuffled off with such uncourteous pay:
But, were my worth, as is my conscience, firm, You should find better dealing. What's to do? Shall we go see the relics of this town?
Ant. To-morrow, Sir: best first go see your lodging.
Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night: I pray you, let us satisfie our eyes With the memorials, and the things of fame, That do renown this city.
Ant. Would you'd pardon me; I do without danger walk these streets: Once, in a sea-fight, 'gainst the count his galleys, I did some service; of such note, indeed, That, were I 't en here, it would scarce be answer'd.
Seb. Belike, you slew great number of his people? Ant. The offence is not of such a bloody nature; albeit the quality of the time, and quarel, Might well have given us bloody argument. It might have since been answer'd in repaying What we took from them; which, for traffic's sake, Most of our city did: only myself stood out; For which, if I be laps'd in this place, I shall pay dear.
Seb. Do not, then, walk too open.
Ant. It doth not fit me. Hold, Sir, here's my purse.
Seb. In the south suburbs, at the Elephant, I lost to lodge: I will bespeak our diet, Whiles you biquile the time, and feed your know ledge, With viewing of the town: there shall you have me.
Ant. Haply your eye shall light upon some toy You have desire to purchase; and your store, I think, is not for idle markets, Sir.
Seb. I'll be your purse-bearer, and leave you for an hour.

[Exit.

Ant. To the Elephant.]

Seb. I do remember.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Oli. I have sent after him: he says he'll come: How shall I feast him? what bestow of him? For youth is bought more oft, than begg'd, or borrow'd. I speak too loud. Where is Malvolio?—he is sad and civil, And suited well for a servant with my fortunes:— Where is Malvolio?—
Maria. He's coming, Madam; but in very strange manner. He is, sure, possessed, Madam.
Oli. Why, what's the matter? does he rave?
Maria. No, Madam, he does nothing but smile: your ladyship were best to have some guard about you, if he come; for sure, the man is tainted in his wits.
Oli. Go call him hither.—[Exit Maria.] I am as mad as he, If sad and merry madness equal be.

Re-enter Maria, with Malvolio.

How now, Malvolio! [Smile fantastickally.] Sweet lady, ho, ho.
Oli. Smile thou? I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

Mal. Sad, lady? I could be sad: this does make TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL. [ACT III]

some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering; but what of that? if it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true sonnet is, "Please one, and please all."

Oli. Why, how dost thou, man? what is the matter with thee?
Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs. It did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed; I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.

Oli. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?
Mal. To bed? ay, sweet-heart; and I'll come to thee.

Oli. God comfort thee! Why dost thou smile so, and kiss thy hand so oft?
Mar. How do you, Malvolio?
Mal. At your request! Yes; nightingales answer does.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?
Mal. "Be not afraid of greatness."—'Twas well writ.

Oli. What meanest thou by that, Malvolio?
Mal. "Some are born great, —"

Oli. Ha?
Mal. "Some achieve greatness, —"

Oli. What say'st thou?
Mal. "And some have greatness thrust upon them."

Oli. Heaven restore thee!
Mal. "Remember, who commended thy yellow stockings, —"

Oli. Thy yellow stockings!
Mal. "And wish'd to see thee cross-garter'd."

Oli. Cross-garter'd!
Mal. "Go to, thou art made, if thou desirest to be so; —"

Oli. Am I made?
Mal. "If not, let me see thee a servant still."

Oli. Why, this is very midsummer madness.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, the young gentleman of the count Orino's is returned: I could hardly entreat him back: he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

Oli. I'll come to him. [Exit Servant.] Good Maria, let this fellow be looked to. Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of my people have a special care of him: I would not have him miscarry, for the half of my dowry. [Exit Servant Olivia and Maria.
Mal. Oh, ho! do you come near me now? no worse man than Sir Toby to look to me? This concurs directly with the letter: she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him; for she incites me to that in the letter. "Cast thy humble slouch," says she; "be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants; let thy tongue tang with arguments of state; put thyself into the trick of singularity;"—and consequently sets down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some Sir of note, and so forth. I have limed her; but it is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankful! And when she went away now, — Let this fellow be looked to;? fellow? not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but fellow. Why, everything adheres together, that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incalculable or unsafe circumstance—What can be said? Nothing, that can be, can come between me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-enter Maria, with Sir Toby Beltch and Faman.

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity! If all the devils of hell be drawn in little, and Legion himself possessed him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fam. Here he is, here he is. —How is't with you, Sir? how's it with you, man?
Mal. Go off; I discard you; let me enjoy my private: go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you?—Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.
Mal. Ah, ha! does she so?
Sir To. Go to, go to; peace, peace! we must deal gently with him; let me alone.—How do you, Malvolio? how's it with you? What, man! defy the devil: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.
Mal. Do you know what you say?
Mar. La you! an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart! Pray God, he be not bewitched!

Fam. Carry his water to the wise woman.
Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.
Mal. How now, mistress!
Mar. O lord!
Sir To. P'rythee, hold thy peace; this is not the way: do you not see you move him? let me alone with him.
Fam. No way but gentleness; gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used.
Sir To. Why, how now, my bailowick! how dost thou, chucker?
Mal. Sir!
Sir To. Ay, Riddly, come with me. What, man! 'tis for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan: hang him, foul collar! Mar. Get him to say his prayers; good Sir Toby, get him to pray.
Mal. My prayers, minx!
Sir To. No, I warrant you, he will not hear of godliness.
Mal. Go, hang yourselves all! you are idle shallow things: I am not of your element: you shall know more hereafter. [Exit. Sir To. Is't possible?
Fam. If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.
Sir To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.
Mar. Nay, pursue him now, lest the device take air, and talent.
Fam. Why, we shall make him mad indeed.
Mar. The house will be the quieter.
Sir To. Come, we'll have him in a dark room, and bound. My niece is already in the belief that he's mad: we may carry it thus, for our pleasure and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him; at which time, we will bring the device to the barley, and crown thee for a finder of madmen.—But see, but see.
Fam. More matter for a May morning.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Sir And. Here's the challenge, read it: I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in 't.
Fam. Is 't so saucy?
Sir And. Ay, is 't, I warrant him: do but read.
Scene IV.

TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

Sir To. Give me. [Reads.] "Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvish fellow."

Farb. Good, and valiant.

Sir To. [Reads.] "Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for 't."

Farb. A good note: that keeps you from the blow of the law.

Sir To. [Reads.] "Thou comest to the lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly; but thou liest in thy throat; that is the matter I challenge thee for."

Farb. Very brief, and exceeding good sense-less.

Sir To. [Reads.] "I will way-lay thee going home; where, if it be thy chance to kill me," Farb. Good.

Sir To. [Reads.] "Thou killest me like a rogue and a villain."

Farb. Still you keep o' the windy side of the law: good.

Sir To. [Reads.] "Fare thee well; and God have mercy upon one of our souls! He may have mercy upon mine; but my hope is better, and so look to thyself. Thy friend, as thou usest him, and thy sworn enemy, Andrew Aque-cheek."

If this letter meets him not, his legs cannot: I'll give 't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for 't: he is now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

Sir To. Go, Sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the orchard, like a bum-baile: so soon as ever thou seest him, draw; and, as thou drawest, swear horrible; for it comes to pass oft, that a terrible oath, with a swagg'ring accent sharply twanged off, gives manhood more approbation than ever proof itself would have earned him. Away! Sir And. Nay, let me alone for swearing. [Exit. Sir To. Now, will not I deliver his letter: for the behaviour of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding; his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less: therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth,—he will find it comes from a cudgole. But, Sir, I will deliver his duty to you: he hath ground to set upon Aque-cheek a notable report of valour; and drive the gentleman (as I know his youth will aptly receive it) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and invetuerity. This will so fright them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices. Farb. Here he comes with your niece: give them way, till he take leave, and presently after him.

Sir To. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a challenge.

[Exeunt Sir Toby, Fabian, and Maria.]

Re-enter Olivia, with VIOLA.

Oli. I have said too much unto a heart of stone, And laid mine honour too uncharily out: There's something in me that reproves my fault; But such a headstrong potent fault it is, That it but mocks reproof.

Vio. With the same 'haviour that your passion Go on my master's griefs. [bears, Oli. Here, wear this jewel for me,—'tis my picture; Refuse it not; it hath no tongue to vex you: And, I beseech you, come again to-morrow. What shall you ask of me that I'll deny, That honour, sav'd, may upon asking give?

Vio. Nothing but this,—your true love for my master.

Oli. How with mine honour may I give him that Which I have given to you?

Vio. I will acquit you.

Oli. Well, come again to-morrow; fare thee well: A fiend like thee might bear my soul to hell. [Exit.

Re-enter Sir Toby Belch and Fabian.

Sir To. Gentleman, God save thee.

Vio. And you, Sir.

Sir To. That defence thou hast, betake thee to 't: of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy intercepter, full of despirit, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard end: dignam thy tuck, be yare in thy preparation; for thy assailant is quick, skillful, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake, Sir, I am sure; no man hath any quarrel to me: my remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

Sir To. You'll find it otherwise, I assure you, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard; for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish withal.

Vio. I pray you, Sir, what is he?

Sir To. He is knight, dubbed with unhatch'd ra-pier, and on carpet consideration; but he is a devil in private brawl: souls and bodies hath he divorced three; and his incensement at this moment is so implicable, that satisfaction can be none but by pains of death and sepulture: hob, nob, is his word: give 't or take 't.

Vio. I will return again into the house, and desire some conduct of the lady. I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men, that put quarrels purposely on others, to taste their valor: belike this is a man of that quirk.

Sir To. Sir, no; his indignation derives itself out of a very competent injury: therefore, get you on, and give him his desire. Hack shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me, which with as much safety you might answer him: therefore, on, or strip your sword stark naked: for middile you must, that's certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

Vio. This is as uncivil, as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is: it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

Sir To. I will do so.—Signior Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. [Exit. Vio. Pray you, Sir, do you know of this matter?

Farb. I know the knight is incensed against you, even to a mortal arbitrement; but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you, what manner of man is he?

Farb. Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is, indeed, Sir, the most skillful, bloody, and fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria. Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall be much bound to you for 't: I am one that would rather go with sir priest, than sir knight: I care not who knows so much of my matter.
Sir To. Why, man, he's a very devil; I have not seen such a fang. I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stick in, with such a mortal motion, that it is inevitable; and on the answer, sue pays you as surely as your foot hits the ground they step on: they say, he has been forcer to the Sophy.

Sir And. Fox on 't, I'll not meddle with him.

Sir To. Ay, but he will not now be pacified: Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

Sir And. Plague on 't, an I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I shall have seen him dangerous I'd have challenged him. Let him let the matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, grey Capulet.

Sir To. I'll make the motion: stand here, make a show on 't: this shall end without the peril of souls.—[Aside] Marry, I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Re-enter Fabian and Viol. [To Far.] I have his horse to take up the quarrel: I have persuaded him to ride the youth's a devil.

Fab. [To Sir Toby.] He is as horribly concerted of him; and pants, and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels.

Sir To. [To Viol.] There's no remedy, Sir; he will fight with you for a oath sake: marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: therefore draw, for the supportance of his vow; he protests he will not hurt you.

Viol. [Aside] Pray God defend me! A little thing would make him tell them how much I lack of a man.

Fab. [To Viol.] Give ground, if you see him furious.

Sir To. Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy; that gentleman will, for his honour's sake, have one bout with you; he cannot by the duello avoid it: but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on; to 't.

Sir And. [Aside] Pray God, he keep his oath! [Draws.

Viol. [To Fabian.] I do assure you, 'tis against my will.

Enter Antonio.

Ant. Put up your sword.—If this young gentleman have done offence, I take the fault on me: if he offend him, I for him defy you. [Drawing.

Sir To. You, Sir! why, what are you?

Ant. One, Sir, that for his love dares yet do more, than you have heard him brag to you he will.

Sir To. Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you. [Draws.

Fab. O, good Sir Toby, hold! here comes the officers.

Sir To. [To Ant.] I'll be with you anon.

Viol. [To Sir And.] Pray, Sir, put your sword up, if you please. Sir And. Marry, will I, Sir—and, for that I promised you, I'll be as good as my word: he will bear you easily, and reins well.

Enter Officers.

1 Off. This is the man; do thy office.

2 Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit of count Orsino.
MAL. [Within.] As hell, Sir Topas.

CLO. Why, it hath bay-windows transparent as barricades, and the clear stories toward the south-north are as lustrous as ebony; and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

MAL. [Within.] I am not mad, Sir Topas: I say to you, this house is dark.

CLO. Madman, thou errest: I say, there is no darkness but ignorance; in which thou art more puzzled than the Egyptians in their fog.

MAL. [Within.] I say, this house is as dark as ignorance, though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I say, there was never man thus abused. I am no more mad than you are: make the trial of it in any constant question.

CLO. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wild-fowl?

MAL. [Within.] That the soul of our grandam might haply inhabit a bird.

CLO. What thinkest thou of his opinion?

MAL. [Within.] I think nobly of the soul, and no way approve his opinion.

CLO. Fare thee well. Remain thou still in darkness: thou shalt hold the opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits; and fear to kill a woodcock, lest thou dispossess the soul of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

MAL. [Within.] Sir Topas! Sir Topas!—Sir Topas! My most exquisite Sir Topas!

CLO. Nay, I am for all waters.

MAR. Thou wast hast done this without thy beard and gown: he sees thee not.

Sir Topas. To him in thine own voice, and bring me word how thou findest him: I would we were both rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently delivered, I would he were; for I am now so far in offence with my niece, that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to the upshot. Come by and by to my chamber.

ENAMET SIR TORY AND MARYA.

CLO. [Singing.] "Hey Robin, jolly Robin, Tell me how thy lady does."-

MAL. [Within.] Fool,—

CLO. [Singing.] "My lady is unkind, perdy."—

MAL. [Within.] Fool.—

CLO. [Singing.] "Alas, why is she so?"—

MAL. [Within.] Fool, I say,—

CLO. [Singing.] "She loves another"—Who calls, hat?—

MAL. [Within.] Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink, and paper: as I am a gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for't.

CLO. Master Malvolio!

MAL. [Within.] Ay, good fool.

CLO. Alas, Sir, how fell you beside your five wits?

MAL. [Within.] Fool, there was never man so notoriously abused: I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.

CLO. But as well? thou are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.

MAL. [Within.] They have here propounded me in darkness, send ministers to me, asses! and do all they can to face me out of my wits.

CLO. Advise you what you say; the minister is here.—[As Sir Topas.] Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restore! endeavour thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain babble babble.

MAL. [Within.] Sir Topas,—

CLO. [As Sir Topas.] Maintain no words with him, good fellow.—[At Clo.] Who, I, Sir? not I, Sir. God b'w' you, good Sir Topas.—[As Sir Topas.] Marry, amen.—[At Clo.] I will, Sir, I will.

MAL. [Within.] Fool, fool, fool, I say,—

CLO. Alas, Sir, be patient. What say you, Sir? I am afool for speaking to you.

MAL. [Within.] Good fool, help me to some light, and some paper: I tell thee, I am as well in my wits as any man in Illyria.

CLO. Well a-day, that you were, Sir!

MAL. [Within.] By this hand, I am. Good fool, some ink, paper, and light; and convey what I will set down to my lady: it shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did.

CLO. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?

MAL. [Within.] Believe me, I am not; I tell thee true.

CLO. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman till I see his brains. I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink.

MAL. [Within.] Fool, I'll require it in the highest degree: I pr'ythee, be gone.

CLO. [Singing.]—

I am gone, Sir, And anon, Sir, I'll be with you again In a truce. Like to the old Vice, Your seed to sustain; Who, with dagger of lath, In his rage and his wrath, The King, Abas to the devil: Like a mad lad, Fare thy nails, dad; Advise, goodman drivell.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—OLIVIA'S GARDEN.

Enter Sebastian.

SAT. This is the sir; that is the glorious sun.

Enter Sebastian.

SAT. This pearl she gave me, I do feel 't and see 't: And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus, Yet 'tis not madness. Where's Antonio, then? I could not find him at the Elephant: Yet there he was, and there I found this credit, That he did range the town to seek me out. His counsel now might do me golden service: For though my soul disputes well with my senses, That this may be some error, but no madness, Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune So far exceed all instance, all discourse, That I am ready to distrust mine eyes, And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me To any other trust but that I am mad,— Or else the lady's mad; yet, if we were so, She could not sway her house, command her followers, Take and give back affairs, and their despacht, With such a smooth, discreet, and steady bearing, As I perceive she does; there's something in't That is deceivable. But here the lady comes.

Enter Olivia and a Priest.

OLI. Blame not this haste of mine. If you mean well, Now go with me and with this holy man Into the chantry by: there, before him, And underneath that consecrated roof,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith;
That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
May live at peace: he shall conceal it,
Whiles you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keep,
According to my birth.—What do you say?
Scb. I'll follow this good man, and go with you;
And, having sworn truth, ever will be true.
Oly. Then lead the way, good father; and heavens
so shine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine!

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Grounds adjoining OLIVIA'S House.

Enter Clown and FABIAN.

Fab. Now, how the news is? I will see his letter.
Clo. Good master Fabian, grant me another request.
Fab. Any thing.
Clo. Do not desire to see this letter.
Fab. This is, to give a dog, and, in recompense, desire my dog again.

Enter Duke, VIOL. and Attendants.

Duk. Belong you to the lady Olivia, friends?
Clo. Ay, Sir; we are some of her trappings.
Duk. I know thee well: how dost thou, my good fellow?
Clo. Truly, Sir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Duk. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

Clo. No, Sir, the worse.
Duk. How can that be?

Clo. Marry, Sir, they praise me, and make an ass of me; now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass: so that by my foes, Sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself; and by my friends I am abused: so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make you two affirmatives, why then, the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Duk. Why, this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth, Sir, no; though it please you to be of my friends.

Duk. Thou shalt not be the worse for me: there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double-dealing, Sir, I would you could make it another.

Duk. O, you give me ill counsel.
Clo. Put your grace in your pocket, Sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duk. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double-dealer: there's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tercio, is a good play; and the old saying is, The third pays for all: the triplics,
Sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of St.
Bennet, Sir, may put you in mind.—One, two, three.

Duk. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty farther.

Clo. Marry, Sir, lullaby to your bounty, till I come again. I go, Sir; but I would not have you to think that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness; but, as you say, Sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon.

[Exit.

Vio. Here comes the man, Sir, that did rescue me.

Enter Officers with ANTONIO.

Duk. That face of his I do remember well;
Yet, when I saw it last, it was besmear'd
As black as Vulcan in the smoke of war:
A bawling vessel was he captain of,
For shallow draught and bulk unprizable;
With which such craftless grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet;
That very envy, and the tongue of loss,
Cried fame and honour on him.—What's the matter?

Oli. Orsino, this is that Antonio
That took the Phoebus and her fraught from Candy;
And this is he that did the Tiger board,
When your young nephew Titus lost his leg:
Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state,
In private I know did we apprehend him.

Vio. He did me kindness, Sir; drew on my side;
But, in conclusion, put strange speech upon me,—
I know not what 'twas, but distraction.

Duk. Noble pirate! thou salt-water thief!
What foolish boldness bring thee to their merci,
Whom thou, in terms so bloody and so dear,
Hast made thine enemies?

Ant. Orsino, noble Sir,
Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give me:
Antonio never yet was thief or pirate,
Though, I confess, on base and ground enough,
Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither:
That most ingrateful boy there, by your side,
From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeem; a wreck past hope he was:
His life I gave him, and did thereto add
My love, without retention or restraint,
All his in dedication; for his sake
Did I expose myself, pure for his love,
Into the danger of this adverse town;
Drew to defend him when he was beset:
Where being apprehended, his false cunning
(Not meaning to partake with met a danger)
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,
And grew a twenty-years-removed thing,
While one would wink; denied me mine own purs;
Which I had recommended to his use
Not half an hour before.

Vio. How can this be?

Duk. When came he to this town?

Ant. To-day, my lord; and for three months be [fore, But both day and night did we keep company.

Duk. Here comes the countess: now heaven walks on earth.—

But for thee, fellow,—fellow, thy words are madness:
Three months this youth hath tended upon me;
But more of that anon.—Take him aside.

Enter OLIVIA and Attendants.

Oli. What would my lord,—but that he may not

Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable?

Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.

Vio. Madam?

Duk. Gracious Olivia,—

Oli. What do you say, Cesario?—Good my lord,—

Vio. My lord would speak; my duty hushes me.

Oli. If it be sought to the old tune, my lord,
It is as fat and fulsome to mine ear,
As howling after music.

Duk. Still so cruel?

Oli. Still so constant, lord.
Duke. What, to perverseness! you uncivil lady, To whose ingrate and unapposing altars
My soul the faithful'st offerings hath brent; out, That e'er devotion tender'd? What shall I do?
Oli. Even what it please my lord, that shall be Come him.

Duke. Why should I not, had I the heart to do it,
Like to the Egyptian thief at point of death,
Kill what I love? a savage jealousy,
That sometimes savours nobly.—But hear me this;
Since you to non-regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screws me from my true place in your favour,
Live you, the marble-breasted tyrant, still;
But this your minion, whom I know you love,
And whom, by heaven I swear, I tender dearly,
Him will I tear out of that cruel eye,
Where he sits crowned in his master's spite.—
Come, boy, with me; my thoughts are ripe in mischief.
I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love,
To splice a raven's heart within a dove. [Going.

Vio. Aye, I, most jocund, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.

[Following.

Oli. Where goes Cesario?

Vio. After him I love
More than I love these eyes, more than my life,
More, by all mores, than e'er I shall love wife.
If I do feign, you witnesses above
Punish my life for tainting of my love!
Oli. Ah me, detested! how am I beguil'd!
Vio. Whose does beguiile you? who does do you wrong?
Oli. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long?—
Call forth the holy father. [Exit an Attendant.

Duke. Where Viola, Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, with his head broken.

Sir And. For the love of God, a surgeon! send one presently to Sir Toby. [Exit.

Oli. What's the matter?

Sir And. He has broke my head across, and has given Sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too; for the love of God, your help? I had rather than forty pound
I were at home.

Oli. Who has done this, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. The count's gentleman, one Cesario:
we took him for a coward, but he's the very devil incardinate.

Duke. My gentleman, Cesario?

Sir And. O'd my life, here he is!—You broke my head for nothing; and that that I did, I was set on to do it by Sir Toby. [you.

Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt
You drew your sword upon me, without cause;
But I bespeak you fair, and hurt you not.

Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me; I think you set nothing by a bloody cox-comb.—Here comes Sir Toby halting,—you shall hear more; but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickled you othergates than he did.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, drunk, led by the Clown.

Duke. How now, gentleman! how is 't with you?

Sir To. That's all one: he has hurt me, and there's the end of it. —So I did see Dick surgeon, spot

Clow. O, he's drunk, Sir Toby, an hour ago;
his eyes were set, at eight I the morning.

Sir To. Then he's a rogue, and a passy-measure pavin: I hate a drunken rogue.

Oli. Away with him! Who hath made this havock with them?

Sir To. He will help you, Sir Toby, because we'll be dressed together.

Sir To. Will you help?—An ass-head, and a cox-comb, and a knave! a thin-faced knave, a gull!

Vio. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to.

[Exit Clown, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. I am sorry, Madam, I have hurt your knees.
But, had it been the brother of my blood, (man;
I must have done no less with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that I do perceive it hath offended you:

Pardon me, sweet one, even for the worse
We made each other but so late ago.

Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons,—

A natural perspective, that is, and is not!
Seb. Antonio! O my dear Antonio!
How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee?

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that, Antonio?

Ant. How have you made division of yourself?—

An apple, cleft in two, is not more twin
Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Oli. Most welcomeUnto your choice?

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother;
Nor can there be that deity in my nature,
Of here and every where. I had a sister,
Whom the blind waves and surges have devour'd.—
Duke. Why should I not, had I the heart to do it, Like to the Egyptian thief at point of death, Kill what I love? a savage jealousy, That sometimes savours nobly.—But hear me this: Since you to non-regardance cast my lord, And that I partly know the instrument That screws me from my true place in your favour, Live you, the marble-breasted tyrant, still; But this your minion, whom I know you love, By heaven I swear, I tender dearly, Him I will tear out of that cruel eye, Where he sits crowned in his master's spite. —Come, boy, with me; my thoughts are ripe in mischief.
I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love, To sport a sower's heart within a dove. [Going. Vio. A most sound, apt, and willingly, To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die. [Following.

Ant. Sebastian are you? Sest. Fear'st thou that, Antonio? Ant. How have you made division of yourself?— An apple, cleft in two, is not more twin Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian? Oli. Not with the devil! Sest. Do I stand there? I never had a brother; Nor can there be that deity in my nature, Of here and every where. I had a sister, Whom the blind waves and surges have devour'd.—
Duke. What, to perverseness? you uncivil lady, To whose ingrate and unsuspicious alms My soul the faithful'st offerings hath brimful'd out, That e'er devotion tender'd? What shall I do? Oli. Even what it please my lord, that shall be- come him.

Duke. Why should I not, had I the heart to do it, Like to the Egyptian chief at point of death, Kill what I love? a savage jealousy, That sometimes savours nobly.—But hear me this: Since you to non-regardance cast my faith, And that I partly know the instrument That screws me from my true place in your favour, Live you, the marble-breasted tyrant, still; But this your minion, whom I know you love, And whom I hope by heaven I shall love dearly, Him will I tear out of that cruel eye, Where he sits crowned in his master's spite.— Come, boy, with me; my thoughts are ripe in mis-chief. I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love, To spite a raven's heart within a dove. [Going. Vio. Aye, sir, second, apt, and willingly, To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die. [Following.

Oli. Where goes Cesario?

Vio. After him I love More than I love these eyes, more than my life, More, by all more, than e'er I shall love wife. If I do feign, you witness above Punish my life for tainting of my love! Oli. Ah me, detested! how am I beguil'd! Vio. Who does beguile you? who does do you wrong? Oli. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long?— Call forth the holy father. [Exit an Attendant.

Sir And. For the love of God, a surgeon! send one presently to Sir Toby. Oli. What's the matter? Sir And. He has broke his head across, and has given Sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too: for the love of God, your help! I had rather than forty pound I were at home.

Oli. Who has done this, Sir Andrew? Sir And. The count's gentleman, one Cesario: we took him for a coward, but he's the very devil incardinate. Duke. My gentleman, Cesario? Sir And. Oli's lifelings, here he is,—You broke my head for nothing: and that that I did, I was set on to do't by Sir Toby. [You: Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt You drew your sword upon me, without cause; But I bespeak you fair, and hurt you not. Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me; I think you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb.—Here comes Sir Toby halting,—you shall hear more: but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickled you othergates than he did.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, drunken, led by the Clown.

Duke. How now, gentleman! how is't with you? Sir To. That's all one: he has hurt me, and there's the end of it. Vio. Did you see Dick surgeon, sir? Clo. O, he's drunk, Sir Toby, an hour agone; his eyes were set, at eight Y? the morning. Sir To. Then he's a rogue, and a passy-measures pount: I hat a drunken rogue. Oli. Away with him! Who hath made this havock with them? Sir And. I'll help you, Sir Toby, because we'll be dressed together. Sir To. Will you help?—An ass-head, and a coxcomb, and a knave! a thin-faced knave, a gull! Oli. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to. [Exit Clown. Sir Toby, and SIR ANDREW. Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. I am sorry, Madam, I have hurt your kins- But, had it been the brother of my blood, [man; I must have done no less with wit and safety. You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that I do perceive it hath offended you: Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows We made each other but so late ago. Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons,— A natural perspective, that is, and is not! Seb. Antonio? O my dear Antonio! How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me, Since I have lost thee? Ant. Sebastian are you? Seb. Fear'st thou that, Antonio? Ant. How have you made division of yourself?— An apple, cleft in two, is not more twin Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian? Oli. That man. Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother; Nor can there be that deify in my nature, Of here and every where. I had a sister, Whom the blind waves and surges have devour'd.—
DUKE. What, to perverseness? you uncivil lady, To whose ingrate and unauspicious altar My soul the faithful’st offerings hath breath’d out, That e’er devotion tender’d? What shall I do? OLI. Even what it please my lord, that shall be come him.

DUKE. Why should I not, had I the heart to do it, Like to the Egyptian thief at point of death, Kill what I love? a savage jealousy, That sometimes savours nobly.—But hear me this: Since you to non-regardance cast my faith, And that I partly know the instrument That screws me from my true place in your favour, Live you, the marble-breasted tyrant, still; But this your minion, whom I know you love, And wherewith by heart you swear, I tender dearly, Him will I tear out of that cruel eye, Where he sits crowned in his master’s spite.— Come, boy, with me; my thoughts are ripe in mischief. I’ll sacrifice the lamb that I do love, To spite a raven’s heart within a dove. [Going.

VIO. Away, and you, and all, and willingly, To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die. [Following.

OLI. Where goes Cesario?

VIO. After him I love More than I love these eyes, more than my life, More, by all mores, than e’er I shall love wife.

DUKE. If I do seem, you witnesses above Punish my life for tainting of my love! OLI. Ah me, detested! how am I beguil’d! VIO. Who doth beguile you? who doth do you wrong?

OLI. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long?— Call forth the holy father. [Exit an Attendant. DUKE. [To VIO.} Come away.

OLI. Whither, my lord?—Cesario, husband, stay.

DUKE. Husband! OLI. Ay, husband: can he be that deny? DUKE. Her husband, sirrah! VIO. No, my lord, not I.

OLI. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear That makes thee stande strangle thy propriety: Fear not, Cesario; take thy fortunes up; Be that thou know’st thou art, and then thou art As great as that thou fear’st.—

Re-enter Attendant with Priest.

VIO. My lord, I do protest,— OLI. O, do not swear! Hold little faith, though thou hast too much fear.

Sir AND. For the love of God, a surgeon! send one end on’t to Sir Toby. OLI. What’s the matter?

Sir AND. He has broke his head across, and has given Sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too: for the love of God, your help? I had rather than forty pound I were at home.

OLI. Who has done this, Sir Andrew? Sir AND. The count’s gentleman, one Cesario: we took him for a coward, but he’s the very devil incardinade.

DUKE. My gentleman, Cesario?

Sir AND. Oli’s life-long, here he is!—You broke my head for nothing; and that that I did, I was set on to do it by Sir Toby. [You.

VIO. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt You drew your sword upon me, without cause; But I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Sir AND. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me: I think you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb,—Here comes Sir Toby halting,—you shall hear more; but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickled you othergates than he did.

Sir AND. Cease, let’s go. [Exit Sir Toby, and by the Clown.

DUKE. How now, gentleman! how is’t with you? Sir To. That’s all one: he has hurt me, and there’s a side of Dian, and I did see Dick surgeon, soil.

Clo. O, he’s drunk, Sir Toby, an hour agone; his eyes were set, at eight I the morning.

Sir To. Then he’s a rogue, and a passy-measures pavin: I hate a drunken rogue.

OLI. Away with him! Who hath made this havock with them? Sir AND. I’ll help you, Sir Toby, because we’ll be dressed together.

Sir To. Will you help?—An ass-head, and a coxcomb, and a knave! a thin-faced knave, a gull! OLI. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look’d to. [Exit Clown, Sir Toby, and Sir ANDREW.

Enter Sebastian.

SEB. I am sorry, Madam, I have hurt your kins- But, had it been the brother of my blood, I must have done no less with wit and safety. You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that I do perceive it hath offended you: Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows We made each other but so late ago.

DUKE. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons,— A natural perspective, that is, and is not! SEB. Antonio! O my dear Antonio! How have the hours rack’d and tortured me, Since I have lost thee?

ANT. Sebastian are you?

SEB. Fear’st thou that, Antonio? ANT. How have you made division of yourself? An apple, cleft in two, is not more twin Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian? OLI. Most wonderfull.

SEB. Do I stand there? I never had a brother; Nor can there be that deity in my nature, Of here and every where. I had a sister, Whom the blind waves and surges have devour’d.—
SCENE 1.

TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

[To Viola.] Of charity, what kin are you to me? What countryman? what name? what parentage?

Vio. Of Messalina: Sebastion was my father; Such a Sebastian was my brother too,
So went he suited to his wat’ry tomb:
If spirits can assume but form and suit,
You come to fright us.

Scl. A spirit I am indeed;
But am in that dimension grossly clad,
Which from the womb I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest goes even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,
And say—Thrice welcome, drown’d Viola!

Vio. My father had a mole upon his brow,—

Scl. And so had mine.

Vio. And died that day, when Viola from her birth
Had number’d thirteen years.

Scl. That day that made my sister thirteen years.

Vio. If nothing lets to make us happy both
But this my masculine usurp’d attire,
Do not embrace me till each circumstance
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere and jump,
That I am Viola: which to confirm,
I bring you to a captain in this town,
Where lie my maiden weeds; by whose gentle help
I was preserv’d, to serve this noble count.

Vio. All the occurrence of my fortune since
Had been between this lady and this lord.

Scl. [To Olivia.] So comes it, lady, you have been mistook:
But nature to her bias dwelt in that.
You would have been contracted to a maid;
Now are you therein, by my life, deceiv’d,—
You are betroth’d both to a maid and man.

Duke. Be not amaz’d; right noble is his blood,—
If this be so, as yet the glass seems true.
I shall have share in this most happy wreck.—

[To Viola.] Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times,
You never should dost love woman like to me.

Vio. All and those sayings will I over-swear;
And all those swearings keep as true in soul,
As doth the cloudless continent the fire
That severs day from night.

Duke. Give me thy hand,
And let me see thee in thy woman’s weeds.

Vio. The captain, that did bring me first on shore,
Hath my maid’s garments: he, upon some action,
Is now in durance, at Malvolio’s suit.

A gentleman, and follower of my lady’s.

Oli. He shall enlarge him:—fetch Malvolio hither:
And yet, alas, now I remember me,
They say, poor gentleman, he’s much distract’d.

[To Wiliam.] A most extracting frenzy of mine own
From my remembered dearly banish’d him.—

Oli. How does he, sirrah?

Clo. Truly, Madam, he holds Belzebub at the stave’s end, as well as a man in his case may do: he has here writ a letter to you; I should have given it you to-day morning; but as a madman’s epistles are no gospels, it skills not much when they are delivered.

Oli. Open it, and read it.

Clo. Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the madman.—[Reads.] “By the Lord, Madam,—"

Oli. How now! art thou mad?

Clo. No, Madam, I do but read madness: an your ladyship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow ear.

Oli. Prythee, read’t thy right wits.

Clo. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits, is to read thus: therefore peerend, my princess, and give ear.

Oli. [To Fabian.] Read it you, sirrh.

Fab. [Reads.] “By the Lord, Madam, you wrong me,
And here the world shall know it: though you have put me into darkness, and given your drunken cousin rule over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship. I have one own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with which I doubt not but to do myself much right, or you much shame. Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury.”

The madly-used Malvolio.”

Oli. Did he write this?

Clo. Ay, Madam.

Duke. This savours not much of distraction.

Oli. See him deliver’d, Fabian: bring him hither. [Exit Fabian.]

My lord, so please you, these things farther thought
To think me as well a sister as a wife; [on,
One day shall crown the alliance on’t, so please you,
Here at my house, and at my proper cost.

Duke. Madam, I am most apt to embrace your offer.—

[To Viola.] Your master quits you; and, for your service done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex,
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call’d me master for so long,
Here is my hand: you shall from this time be
Your master’s mistress.

Oli. A sister:—you are she.

[To Wiliam] Your master quits you; and, for your service done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex,
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call’d me master for so long,
Here is my hand: you shall from this time be
Your master’s mistress.

Oli. A sister:—you are she.

Duke. Is this the madman?

Oli. Ay, my lord, this same.—

How now, Malvolio!

Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,

Notorious wrong.

Mal. Lady, you have. Pray you, peruse that letter;
You must not now deny it is your hand,—
Write from it, if you can, in hand, or phrase;
Or say ’tis not your seal, nor your invention:
You can say none of this: well, grant it then,
And tell me, in the modesty of honor,
Why you have given me such clear lights of favour,
Bade me come smiling and cross-garter’d to you,
To put on yellow stockings, and to frown
Upon Sir Toby and the lighter people;
And, acting this in an obdient hope,
Why have you suffer’d me to be imprison’d,
Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest,
And made the most notorious geek and gull
That e’er invention play’d on? tell me why.

Oli. Sirs, Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though, I confess, much like the character:
But, out of question, 'tis Maria’s hand.

And now I do bethink me, it was she
First told me thou wast mad; then cam'st in smiling,
And in such forms which here were presuppos'd
Upon thee in the letter. Pr'ythee, be content:
This practice hath most shrively pass'd upon thee;
But when we know the grounds and authors of it,
Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge
Of thine own cause.

Duke. Good Madam, hear me speak;
And let no quarrel, nor no brawl to come,
Taint the condition of this present hour,
Which I have wonder'd at. In hope it shall not,
Most freely I confess, myself and Toby
Set this device against Malvolio here,
Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceived against him: Maria writ
The letter at Sir Toby's great importance;
In recompense whereof, he hath married her.
How with a sportful malice it was follow'd,
May rather pluck on laughter than revenge;
If that the injuries be justly weigh'd,
That have on both sides past.

Oli. Alas, poor fool, how have they baffled thee!
Clo. Why, "some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrown upon them." I was one, Sir, in this interlude,—one Sir Topas, Sir; but that's all one.—"By the Lord, fool, I am not mad!"—but do you remember? "Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal? an you smile not, he's gagg'd!" and thus the whirling of time brings in his revenge.

Mal. I'll be reveng'd on the whole pack of you.
Oli. He hath been most notoriously abus'd.

Duke. Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace:—
He hath not told us of the captain yet:
When that is known, and golden time convents,
A solemn combination shall be made
Of our dear souls.—Meantime, sweet sister,
We will not part from hence.—Cesario, come;
For so you shall be, while you are a man,
But when in other habits you are seen,
Orsino's mistress, and his fancy's queen.
Exeunt all except Clown.

Song.

Clo. When that I was and a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to man's estate,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came, alas! to wife,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
By swaggering could I never thrive,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came unto my bed,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
With tos-sops still had drunken head,
For the rain it raineth every day.

A great while ago the world begun,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain:—
But that's all one, our play is done,
And we'll strive to please you every day.
Exit.
THE WINTER'S TALE.

ACT I.

Leontes. We'll part the time between 's then: and in I'll no gain-saying. [that
Pol. Press me not, Beseech you, so.
There is no tongue that moves, none, none i' the world.
So soon as yours, could win me: so it should now,
Were there necessity in your request, although
'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs
Do even drug me homeward: which to hinder,
Were in your love a whip to me; my stay
To you a charge and trouble: to save both,
Farwell, our brother.
Leontes. Tongue-tied our queen? speak you.
Her. I had thought, Sir, to have held my peace until
You had drawne oaths from him not to stay. You,
Sir,
Charge him too coldly. Tell him, you are sure
All in Bohemia 's well; this satisfaction
The by-gone day proclaim'd: say this to him,
He's beat from his best ward.
Leontes. Well said, Hermione. Her. To tell, he longs to see his son, were strong:
But let him say so then, and let him go;
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay,
We'll thwack him home with distaffs. —
[70 POLIXENES.] Yet of your royal presence I'll adventure
The borrow of a week. At Bohemia
You take my lord, I 'll give him my commission,
To let him there a month behind the great
Prefix'd for 's parting;—yet, good deed, Leontes,
I love thee not a jar o' the clock behind.
What lady she her lord. You'll stay?
Pol. Nay, but you will?
Her. I may not, verily.
Pol. Verily! You verily put off with limber vows; but I,
Though you would seek t' unsphere the stars with Should yet say, "Sir, no going." Verily, [oaths,
You shall not go: a lady's verily is
As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet?
Force me to keep you as a prisoner,
Not as a guest; like you shall pay your fees
When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?
My prisoner, or my guest? by your dread verily,
One of them you shall be.
Pol. Your guest, then, Madam:
To be your prisoner should import offending;
Which is for me less easy to commit,
Then you to punish.
Her. Not your gaoler, then,
But your kind hostess. Come, I 'll question you
Of my lord's tricks and yours when you were boys;
You were pretty lordlings then.
Pol. We were, fair queen,
Two lads that thought there was no more behind,
But such a day to-morrow as to-day,
And to be boy eternal.
Her. Was not my lord the verier wag o' the two? Pol. We were as twin'd lambs that did frisk i' the sun,
And bleat the one at th' other: what we chang'd,
Was innocence for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, nor dreamed
That any did. Had we purs'd that life,
And our weak spirits 'er been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should have answer'd heaven
Boldly, "Not guilty;" the imposition clear'd,
Hereditary ours.
Her. By this we gather,
You have tripp'd since.
Pol. O, my most sacred lady,
Temptations have since then been born to us; for
In those unbridled days was my wife a girl;
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes
Of my young play-fellow.
Her. Grace to boot!
Of this make no conclusion, lest you say
Your queen and I are devils: yet, go on:—
Th' offences we have made you do, we'll answer;
If you first sint' with us, and that with us
You did continue fault, and that you shipp'd not
With any, but with us.
Leontes. Is he won yet?
Her. He 'll stay, my lord.
Leontes. At my request he would not.
Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.
Her. Never.
Leontes. Never, but once.
Her. What! have I twice said well? when was 't before?
I pr'ythee tell me; cram's with praise, and make's
As fat as tame things; one good deed, dying tongue-
Slaughter a thousand waiting upon that. [less,
Our praises are our wages: you may ride's
With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs, ere
With spur we heat an acre. But to the goal:—
My last good deed was to entreat his stay:
What was my first? it has an elder sister,
Or I mistake you: O, would her name were Grace!
But once before I spoke to the purpose: when?
Nay, let me have 't; I long.
Leontes. Why, that was when Three crabb'd months had sour'd themselves to death,
Ere I could make you open thy white hand,
And clap thyself my love: then didst thou utter,
"I am yours for ever."
Her. It is Grace indeed.—
Why, lo you now, I have spoken to the purpose twice:
The one for ever earn'd a royal husband;
Th' other for some while a friend. [Giving her hand to POLIXENES.
Leontes. [Aside.] Too hot, too hot!
To mingle friendship far, is mingling bloods.
I have irremediables on me,—my heart dances;
But not for joy,—not joy.—This entertainment
May a free face put on; derive a liberty
From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,
And well become the agent; it may, I grant:
But to be paddling palms and pinching fingers,
As now they are; and making practis'd smiles,
As in a looking-glass; and then to sigh, as thare
The most o' the deer; O, that is entertainment
My bosom likes not, nor my brows—Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?
Man. Ay, my good lord.
Leontes. I feakes?
Man. Why, that's my bawcock. What, hast smutich'd thy nose?—
They say, it is a copy out of mine.
Come, captain,
We must be neat;—not neat, but cleanly, captain:
Leon. Ay, but why

Cam. To satisfy your highness, and the entreaties Of our most gracious mistress.

Leon. Satisfy
The entreaties of your mistress!—satisfy!—
Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo, With all the nearest things to my heart, as well My chamber-councils; wherein, priest-like, thou hast cleans'd my bosom,—I from thee departed Thy penitent reform'd: but we have been Deceive'd in thy integrity, deceit'd
In that which seems so.

Cam. Be it forbid, my lord!

Leon. To hide upon't,—thou art not honest; or, If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward, Which boxes honesty behind, restraining From course requir'd; or else thou must be counted A servant grafted in my serious trust. And therein negligent; or else a fool, That seest a game play'd home, the rich stake drawn, And tak'st it all for jest.

Cam. My gracious lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful; In every one of these no man is free, But that his negligence, his folly, fear, Among the infinite doings of the world, Sometime puts forth: in your affairs, my lord, If ever I were willful-negligent, It was my folly; if industriously I play'd the fool, it was my negligence, Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful To do a thing, where I the issue doubted, Whereof the execution did cry out Against the non-performance, twas a fear Which oft infects the wisest: these, my lord, Are such allow'd infirmities, that honesty Is never free of. But, beseech your grace, Be plainer with me; let me know my trespass By its own visage: if 't then deny it, 'Tis none of mine.

Leon. Have not you seen, Camillo,
(But that's past doubt,—you have, or your eye-glass Is thicker than a cuckold's horn,) or heard, (For, to a vision so apparent, rumour Cannot be mute,) or thought, (for cogitation Resides not in that man that does not think,) My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess, (Or else be impudently negative,) To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought, then say My wife's a hobbyhorse; deserves a name As rank as any tax-wench, that puts to Before her broth-plight: say 't, and justify 't. Cam. I would not be a stander-by, to hear My sovereign mistress clouded so, without My present vengeance taken: 'shrew my heart, You never spoke what did become you less Than this; which to retreate, were sin As deep as that, though true.

Leon. Is whispering nothing?
A leaning check to check? a meeting noses? Kissing with inside lip? stopping the career Of laughter with a sigh? (a note infallible Of breaking honesty) horseing foot on foot? Skulking in corners? wishing clocks more swift? Hours, minutes? noon, midnight? and all eyes blind With the pin and web, but theirs, theirs only, That would unseen be wicked? is this nothing? Why, by the world, and all that 's in't, is nothing; The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing; My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these nothing, If this be nothing.

Cam. Good my lord, be cur'd
Of this diseas'd opinion, and betimes;
For 'tis most dangerous.

Leon. Say it be, 'tis true.

Cam. No, no, my lord.
Leon. It is; you lie, you lie;
I say thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee;
 Pronounce thee a gross lost, a mindless slave;
Or else a hovering temporizer, that Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil, Inclining to them both: were my wife's liver Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one glass.

Leon. Who does infect her?
Leon. Why, he that wears her like her medal, her crown;
About his neck, Bohemia: who—if I Had servants true about me that bare eyes To see alike mine honour as their profits, Their own particular thrills,—they would do that Which should undo more doing: ay, and thou, His cup-bearer,—whom I from meaner form Have bench'd, and rear'd to worship; who mayst see Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees heaven.
How I am called,—mightest bespice a cup, [yen, To give mine enemy a lasting wick;
Which draught to me were cordial.

Cam. Sir, my lord, I could do this, and that with no rash potion, But with a lingering dram, that should not work Maliciously, like poison: but I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress, So sovereignly being honourable. I have lov'd thee.

Leon. Make that thy question, and go rot! Dost think I am so muddy, so unsettled, To appoint myself in this vexation; solly The purity and whiteness of my sheets,— Which to preserve is sleep, which being spotted Is goads, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps; Give scandal to the blood o' the prince, my son, (Who, I do think is mine, and love as mine,) Without ripe moving to 't? Would I do this? Could man so brench? I must believe you, Sir: I do; and will fetch off Bohemia for 't:
Provided, that when he's remov'd, your highness Will take again your queen, as yours at first, Even for your son's sake; and thereby for sealing The injury of tongues, in courts and kingdoms Known and allied to yours.

Leon. Thou dost advise me, Even so as I mine own course have set down: I'll give no blemish to her honour, none.

Cam. My lord, Go then; and with a countenance as clear As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia, And with your queen. I am his cup-bearer: If from me he have wholesome beverage, Account me not your servant.

Leon. This is all;—
Do 't, and thou hast the one half of my heart; Do 't not, thou split'st thine own.

Cam. I'll do 't, my lord.

Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd me.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—SICILIA. A Room in the Palace.

Enter HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, and Ladies.

Herm. Take the boy to you: he so troubled me,
'Tis past enduring.

1 Lady. Come, my gracious lord,
Shall I be your play-fellow?

Mam. No, I'll none of you.

1 Lady. Why, my sweet lord?

Mam. You'll kiss me hard; and speak to me as if I were a baby still.—I love you better.

2 Lady. And why so, my lord?

Mam. Not for because
Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, they say,
Become some women best, so that there be not Too much hair there, but in a semi-circle,
Or a half-moon made with a pen.

2 Lady. Who taught you this?

Mam. I learn'd it out of women's faces.—Pray now,
What colour are your eyebrows?

1 Lady. Blue, my lord.

Mam. Nay, that's a mock: I have seen a lady's nose
That has been blue, but not her eyebrows.

2 Lady. Hark ye; The queen, your mother, rounds space: we shall Present our services to a fine new prince, One of these days; and then you'll wanton with us, If we would have you.

1 Lady. She is spread of late Into a goodly bulk: time enough encounter her!

Mam. Merry, or sad, shall't be?

Herm. As merry as you will.

Mam. A sad tale's best for winter. I have one of sprites and goblins.

Herm. Let's have that, good Sir. Come on; sit down:—come on, and do your best To fright me with your sprites; you're powerful at it.

Mam. There was a man,—

Her. Nay, come, sit down; then on.

Mam. Dwelt by a churchyard:—I will tell it softly;
Yond' crickets shall not hear it.

Herm. Come on, then, And give't me in mine ear.

Enter LEONTES, ANTIGONUS, LORDS, AND GUARDS.

Leont. Was he met there? his train? Camillo with him?

1 Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them; never Saw I men scour so on their way: I'ey them Even to their ships.

Leont. How bless'd am I In my just censure, in my true opinion!— Alack, for lesser knowledge! How accrues'd In being so blest!—There may be in the cup A spider steep'd, and one may drink, depart, And yet partake no venom; for his knowledge Is not infected: but if one present The abhor'd ingredient to his eye, make known How he hath drunk, he cracks his gage, his sides, With violent hefts:—I have drunk, and seen the spider.

Camillo was his help in this, his pander:— There is a plot against my life, my crown; All's true that is mistrusted:—that false villain, Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him; He has discover'd my design, and I Remain a pinch'd thing; yes, a very trick For them to play at will.—How came the postern So easily open?

1 Lord. By his great authority; Which often hath no less prevail'd than so, On your command.

Leon. I know 'tis too well.

[To HERMIONE.] Give me the boy: I am glad you did not nurse him: Though he does bear some signs of me, you yet Have too much blood in him.

Herm. What is this sport?

Leon. Bear the boy hence; he shall not come about her; Away with him!—[Exit MAMILLIUS, attended.] and Let her sport herself With that she's big with; for 'tis Polixenes Has made thee swell thus.

Herm. But I'd say he had not; And I'll be sworn you would believe my saying, Howe'er you lean to the Hayward.

Leon. You, my lords; Look on her, mark her well; be but about To say, "she is a goodly lady," and The justice of your hearts will thereto add, "'Tis pity she's not honest, honourable!" Praise her but for this her without-door form, (Which, on my faith, deserves high speech,) and straight The shrug, the hum, or ha, (these petty brands That calumny doth use,—O, I am out,— That mercy does; for calumny will wear Virtue itself)—these shrugs, these hums, and ha's, When you have said "she's goodly," come between Ere you can say "she's honest:" but he's known, From him that has most cause to grieve it should be, She's an adultress.

Herm. Should a villain say so, The most replenish'd villain in the world, He were as much more villain: you, my lord, Do but mistake.

Polix. You have mistook, my lady, Polixenes for Leontes: O thou thing! Which I'll not call a creature of thy place, Least barbarism, making me the precedent, Should a like language use to all degrees, And mannerly distinction leave out Betwixt the prince and beggar!—I have said She's an adultress; I have said with whom: More, she's a traitor; and Camillo is A federacy with her; and one that knows What she should shame to know herself, But with her most vile principal, that she's A bed-sweaver, even as bad as those That vulgar's best at titles; ay, and privy To this their late escape.

Herm. No, by my life, Privy to none of this. How will this grieve you, When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that You thus have publish'd me! Gentle my lord, You scarce can right me throughly then, to say You did mistake.

Leon. No; if I mistake In those foundations which I build upon,
THE WINTER'S TALE.

Scene III.—Sicilia. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords, and Attendants.

Leom. Now night, nor day, no rest: it is but weakness
To bear the matter thus,—mere weakness. If
The cause were not in being,—part o' the cause,
She, th' adulteress; for the harlot king
Is quite beyond my mind, out of the blank
And level of my brain, plot-proof; but she
I can hook to me:—say, that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest
Might come to me again.—Who's there?
1 Att. [Advancing.] My lord!

Leom. How does the boy?
2 Att. He took good rest to-night;
'Tis hop'd his sickness is discharge'd.
Leom. To see his nobleness!
Conceiving the diabolour of his mother,
He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply,
Fasten'd and fix'd the shame on't in himself,
Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep,
And downright languish'd.—Leave me solely:—go,
See how he fares. [Exit Attendant.—] Fie, fie! no thought of him;
The very thought of my revenges that way
Recoil upon me: in himself too mighty,
And in his parties, his alliance,—let him be,
Until a time may serve: for present vengeance,
Take it on her. Camilo and Polixenes
Laugh at me, make their pastime at my sorrow:
They should not laugh, if I could reach them; nor Shall she, within my power.

Enter Paulina, with a child.

Paul. Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas, [me:
Than the queen's life? a gracious innocent soul,
More free than he is jealous.

Ant. That's enough.

Paul. Madam, he hath not slept to-night; com-
None should come at him. [manned
Paul. Not so hot, good Sir:
I come to bring him sleep. 'Tis such as you,—
That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh
At each his needless heaving,—such as you
Nourish the cause of his awaking: I
Do come with words as med'cinal as true,
Honest as either, to purge him of that humour
That presses him from sleep.

Leom. What noise there, ho? Paul. No noise, my lord; but needful conference
About some gossips for your highness.

Leom. How!—
Away with that audacious lady!—Antigonus,
I charg'd thee that she should not come about me:
I knew she would.

Ant. I told her so, my lord,
On your displeasure's peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.

Leom. What! canst not rule her?
Paul. From all dishonesty he can: in this,
(Unless he take the course that you have done, Commit me for committing honour,) trust it,
He shall not rule me.

Ant. Lo, you now! you hear:
When she will take the rein, I let her run;
But she'll not stumble.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—SICILIA. A Street in some Town.

Enter Cleomenes and Dion.

Cleo. The climate’s delicate; the air most sweet;
Fertile the isle; the temple much surpassing
The common praise it bears.

Dion. I shall report,
For most it caught me, the celestial habits
(Methinks I so should term them) and the reverence
Of the grave wearers. O, the sacrifice!
How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly
It was! the offering!

Cleo. But, of all, the burst
And the ear-deafening voice o’ the oracle,
Kin to Jove’s thunder, so surpris’d my sense,
That I was nothing.

Dion. If that event o’ the journey
Prove as successful to the queen,—O, be’t so!—
As it hath been to us rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on’t.

Cleo. Great Apollo
Turn all to the best! These proclamations,
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.

Dion. The violent carriage of it
Will clear, or end, the business; when the oracle
(Thus by Apollo’s great divine sent’d up)
Shall the contents discover, something rare,
Even then, will rush to knowledge.—Go,—fresh horses!
And gracious be the issue!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—SICILIA. A Court of Justice.

Enter Lords, and Officers, attended.

Lem. This sessions (to our great grief, we pronounce)
Even pushes against our heart;—the party tried,
The daughter of a king, our wife, and one,
Of us too much belov’d. Let us be clear’d
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in justice; which shall have due course,
Even to the guilt, or the purgation. —
Produce the prisoner.

Offi. It is his highness’ pleasure that the queen
Appear in person here in court.—Silence!

HERMIONE is brought in, guarded: Paulina and Ladies attending.

Lem. Read the indictment.

Offi. [Reading.] “Hermione, queen to the worthy Leonides, king of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, king of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take away the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety, to fly away by night.”

Her. Since what I am to say, must be but that Which contradicts my accusation, and
The testimony on my part no other
But what comes from myself, it shall scarce boot me
To say, “Not guilty!” mine integrity
Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,
Be so receiv’d. But thus,—if powers divine
Behold our human actions, (as they do,)
I doubt not, then, but innocence shall make False accusation blush, and tyranny
Tremble at patience. —You, my lord, best know
(Who least will seem to do so) my past life
Hath been a continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy: which is more
Than history can pattern, though devils’d
And play’d to take spectators; for, behold me,—
A fellow of the royal bed, which owe
A moiety of the throne, a great king’s daughter,
The mother to a hopeful prince,—here standing
To prate and talk for life and honour, yore
Who please to come and hear! For life, I prize it
But that the good mind of Camillo tarded
My swift command, though I with death and with Reward did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done: be, most humane,
And fill’d with honour, to my kingly guest
Unclass’d my practice; quit his fortunates here,
Which you knew great; and to the certain hazard
Of all incontinences himself commended.
No richer than his honour. —How he glister,
Thorough my rust! and how his piety
Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter Paulina.

Paul. Woe the while! O cut my lace, lest my heart; cracking it, Break too!

1 Lord. What fit is this, good lady?
Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?
In leads, or oils? what old, or newer torture
Must I receive, whose every word deserves
To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyranny,
Together working with thy jealousies,
Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle
For girls of nine,—O, think what they have done,
And then run mad indeed,—stark mad! for all
Thy by-gone folteries were but spices of it.
That thou betray’dst Polixenes, ‘twas nothing,—
That did but show thee of a fool, inconstant,
And damnable ungrateful; nor was’t much,
Thou wouldst have poison’d good Camillo’s honour,
To have him kill a king;—poor trespasses,
More monstrous standing by: whereof I reckon
The casting forth to crowns thy baby daughter,
To be or none, or little,—though a devil
Would have shed water out of fire, ere done ’t; nor Is’t directly laid to thee, the death
Of the young prince, whose honourable thoughts
(Thoughts high for one so tender) cleft the heart
That could conceive a gross and foolish sire
Blemish’d his gracious dam: this is not, no,
Laid to thy answer: but the last,—O lords,
When I have said, ery, woe!—the queen, the queen,
The sweetst, dearst creature’s dead; and vengeance
Not drop’d down yet.

[For’rt 1 Lord. The higher powers forbid!
Paul. I say she’s dead; I’ll swear it: if word nor Prevail not, go, and see: we have brought Tincture, or lustre, in her lip, her eye,
Heart outwardly, or breath within, I’ll serve you
As it would do the gods. —But, O thou tyrant!
Do not repent these things; for they are heavier
Than all thy woes can stir: therefore betake thee
To nothing but despair. A thousand knees
Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
Upon a barren mountain, and still winter
In storm perpetual, could not move the gods
To look that way thou wert.

Lom. Go on, go on:
Thou canst not speak too much; I have deserv’d
All tongues to talk their bitterness.

1 Lord. Say no more:
Howe’er the business goes, you have made fault
’Tis the boldness of your speech.
Paul. I am sorry for’t:
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent. Alas, I have show’d too much
The rashness of a woman! He is touch’d [help,
To the noble heart.—What’s gone, and what’s past

Should be past grief: do not receive affliction
At my petition; I beseech you, rather
Let me be punish’d, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege,
Sir, royal Sir, forgive a foolish woman:
The love I bore your queen,—lo, fool again!—
I’ll speak of her no more, nor of your children;
I’ll not remember you of my own lord,
Who is lost too: take your patience to you,
And I’ll say nothing.

Lom. Thou didst speak but well,
When most the truth; which I receive much better,
Than to be pitted of thee. Pr’ythee, bring me
To the dead bodies of my queen and son:
One grave shall be for both; upon them shall
The causes of their death appear, unto
Our shame perpetual. Once a day I’ll visit
The chapel where they lie; and tears shed there Shall be my recreation: so long as nature
Will bear, I’ll do this exercise, so long
I daily vow to use it. Come, and lead me
To these sorrows.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—BOHEMIA. A desert Country near the Sea.

Enter Antigonus, with the babe; and a Mariner.

Ant. Thou art perfect, then, our ship hath touch’d
The deserts of Bohemia?

Mar. Ay, my lord; and fear
We have landed in ill time: the skies look grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,
The heavens with that we have in hand are angry,
And frown upon us.

Ant. Their sacred wills be done! — Go, get aboard;
Look to thy bark: I’ll not be long before
I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best haste; and go not Too far i’ the land: ‘tis like to be loud weather;
Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
Of prey that keep upon’t.

Ant. Go thou away:
I’ll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o’ the business.

[Exit.

Ant. Come, poor babe:
I have heard, (but not believ’d,) the spirits o’ the dead
May walk again: if such thing be, thy mother
Appeard to me last night; for ne’er was dream
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head on one side, some another;
I never saw a vessel of like sorrow,
So full’d, and so becoming: in pure white robes,
Like very sanctity, she did approach
My cabin where I lay; thrice bow’d before me;
And, gasping to begin some speech, her eyes
Became two spouts: the fury spent, anon
Did this break from her: "Good Antigonus,
"Since fate, against thy better disposition,
"Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
"Of my poor child, according to thine oath,—
"Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
"There weep, and leave it crying; and, for the babe
"Is count’d lost for ever, Perdita,
"I pr’ythee, call ‘t. For this ungentle business,
"Put on by me, thy lord, thou ne’er shalt see
"Thy wife Paulina more:"—and so, with shrieks
Scene III.

The Winter's Tale.

Pol. Masterly done:
The very life seems warm upon her lip,
Leon. The figure of her eye has motion in’t,
As we are mock’d with art.
Paul. My lord’s almost so far transported, that He’ll think anon it lives.
Leon. O sweet Paulina,
Make me to think so twenty years together!
No settled senses of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let it alone.
Paul. I am sorry, Sir, I have thus far stirr’d you:
I could afflict you farther. [but Leon. Do, Paulina;
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort.—Still, methinks,
There is an air comes from her: what fine chisel
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kiss her.
Paul. Good my lord, forbear:
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet;
You’ll mar it, if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting. Shall I draw the curtain?
Leon. No, not these twenty years.
Paul. So long could I
Stand by, a looker on.
Paul. Either forbear,
Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you
For more amazement. If you can behold it,
I’ll make the statue move indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand: but then you’ll think (Which I protest against) I am assisted
By wicked powers.
Leon. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak,
I am content to hear; for ‘tis as easy
To make her speak, as move.
Paul. It is requir’d
You do awake your faith. Then, all stand still;
Or those that think it is unlawful business
I am about, let them depart.
Leon. Proceed;
No foot shall stir.
Paul. Music, awake her; strike!—[Music.
’Tis time; descend; be stone no more; approach;
Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come;
I’ll fill your grave up: stir; nay, come away;
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him
Dear life redeems you.—You perceive, she stirs:
[HerMione descends from the pavement.
Start not; her actions shall be holy, as
You hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her,
Until you see her die again; for then
You kill her double. Nay, present your hand:
When she was young, you woo’d her; now, in age,
Is she become the suitor.
Leon. [Embracing her.] O, she’s warm!
If this be magic, let it be an art
Lawful as eating.
Paul. She embraces him.
Cass. She hangs about his neck:
If she pertain to life, let her speak too.
Pol. Ay, and make it manifest where she has liv’d,
Or how stol’n from the dead.
Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old tale: but it appears she lives,
Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while.—
Please you to interpose, fair Madam: kneel,
And pray your mother’s blessing.—Turn, good lady;
Our Perdita is found.
[Presenting Perdita, who kneels to
Her.
Her. You gods, look down,
And from your sacred visis pour your graces
Upon my daughter’s head!—Tell me, mine own,
Where hast thou been preserv’d? where liv’d? how Thy father’s court! for thou shalt hear, that I—
Knowing by Paulina that the oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being,—have preserv’d
Myself to see the issue.
Paul. There’s time enough for that;
Least they desire, upon this push, to trouble
Your joys with like relation.—Go together,
You precious winners all; your exultation
Partake to every one. I, an old turtle,
Will wing me to some wither’d bough, and there
My mate, that’s never to be found again,
Lament till I am lost.
Leon. O peace, Paulina!
Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine, a wife; this is a match,
And made between’s by vows. Thou hast found mine;
But how, is to be question’d.—for I saw her,
As I thought, dead; and have in vain said many
A prayer upon her grave. I’ll not seek far
(For him, I partly know his mind) to find thee
An honourable husband.—Come, Camillo,
And take her by the hand, whose worth and honesty
Is richly noted, and here justified
By us, a pair of kings.—Let’s from this place.—
What! look upon my brother,—both your pardons,
That e’er I put between your holy looks
My ill suspicion.—This your son-in-law,
And son unto the king, (whom heavens directing),
Is truth-plight to your daughter.—Good Paulina,
Lead us from hence; where we may leisurely
Each one demand, and answer to his part Perform’d in this wide gap of time, since first
We were dissever’d: hastily lead away. [Exeunt.
KING JOHN.

Scene I.

Elr. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame thy mother,
And wound her honour with this diffluence.

Bast. I, Madam? no, I have no reason for it,
This is my brother’s plea and none of mine;
The which if he can prove, ’a pops me out
At least from fair five hundred pound a-year;
Heaven guard my mother’s honour, and my land!
K. John. A good blunt fellow.—Why, being younger born,
Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Bast. I know not why, except to get the land.
But once he slander’d me with bastardy:
But where’s I be as true begot, or no,
That still I lay upon my mother’s head;
But, that I am as well begot, my liege,
(Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me!) Compare our faces, and be judge yourself.
If old Sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this son like him,—
O, old Sir Robert, father, on my knee
I give heaven thanks, I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why, what a madcap heaven lent us here?

Elr. He hath a trick of Cœur-de-lion’s face;
The accent of his tongue affecteth him:
Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard.—Sirehah, speak,
What doth move you to claim your brother’s land?

Bast. Because he hath a half-face, like my father,
With that half-face would he have all my land:
A half-face’d great five hundred pound a-year.

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father liv’d,
Your brother did employ my father much,—

Bast. Well, Sir, by this you cannot get my land:
Your tale must be, how he employ’d my mother.
Rob. And once despatch’d him in an embassy
To Germany, there, with the emperor,
To treat of high affairs touching that time.
The advantage of his absence took the king,
And in the mean time sojourn’d at my father’s;
Where how he did prevail, I shamed to speak,—
But truth is truth: large lengths of seas and shores
Between my father and my mother lay,
(As I have heard my father speak himself,) When this same lusty gentleman was got Upon his death-bed he by will bequeathed that
His lands to: and took it, on his death,
That this, my mother’s son, was none of his;
And if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father’s land, as was my father’s will.

K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate,—
Your father’s wife did after wedlock bear him;
And if she did play false, the fault was hers;
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands
That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother,
Who, as you say, took pains to get this son,
Had of your father claim’d this son for his?
In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This call, bred from his cow, from all the world;
In sooth, he might: then, if he were my brother’s,
My brother might not claim him; nor your father,
Being none of his, refuse him: this concludes,—
My mother’s son did get your father’s heir;
Your father’s heir must have your father’s land.

Rob. Shall then, my father’s will be of no force
To dispossess that child which is not his?

Bast. Of no more force to dispossess me, Sir,
Than was his will to get me, as I think.

Elr. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And like thy brother, to enjoy thy land, [bridge,
Or the reputed son of Cœur-de-lion,
Lord of thy presence, and no land beside?
Bast. Madam, an if my brother had my shape,
And I had his, Sir Robert his, like him;
And if my legs were two such riding-roads,
My arms such eel-skins stuff’d; my face so thin,
That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose,
Least men should say, “Look, where three-farthings goes!”
And, to his shape, were heirs to all this land,—
Would I might never stir from off this place,
I’d give it every foot to have this face;
I would not be Sir Nob in any case.

Elr. I like thee well: wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a soldier, and now bound to France.

Bast. Brother, take you my land, I’ll take my chance.
Your face hath got five hundred pounds a-year;
Yet sell your face for five pence, and ’tis dear.—
Madam, I’ll follow you unto the death.

Elr. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.

Bast. Our country manners give our betters way.

K. John. What is thy name?

Bast. Philip, my liege,—so is my name begun,—
Philip, good Sir Robert’s eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name whose form thou bearest:
Kneel thou down Philip, but arise more great,
Arise Sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

Bast. Brother, by the mother’s side, give me your
My father gave me honour, yours gave land.—
Now blessed be the hour, by night or day,
When I was got, Sir Robert was away.

Elr. The very spirit of Plantagenet!
I am thy grandson, Richard; call me so.

Bast. Madam, by chance, but not by truth: what Something about, a little from the right. [thought
In at the window, or else o’er the latch;
Who dares not stir by day, must walk by night;
And have is have, however men do catch;
Nur or far off well long is still well shot;
And I am I, how’er I was begot. [desire

K. John. Go Faulconbridge: now hast thou thy
A landless knight makes thee a landed squire.—
Come, Madam,—and come, Richard; we must speed
For France, for France; for it is more than need.

Bast. Brother, adieu: good fortune come to thee!
For thou wast got i’ the way of honesty.

[Exeunt all except the Bastard.
A foot of honour better than I was;
But many a many foot of land the worse.
Well, now can I make any Joan a lady;
“Good den, Sir Richard?”—“God-a-mercy, fol
And if his name be George, I’ll call him Peter;
For new-made honour doth forget men’s names,—
’Tis too respective, and too sociable,
For your conversation. Now your traveller,—
He and his tooth-pick at my worship’s mess;
And, when my knotty stomach is suff’d,
Why then I sack my teeth, and catechize.
My picked man of countries:—“My dear Sir,”
In sooth, I would you were a little sick,
That I might sit all night, and watch with you:
I warrant, I love you more than you do me.

Hub. [Aside.] His words do take possession of my bosom.

Read here, young Arthur. [Shewing a paper.]
[Aside.] How now, foolish rheum!
Turning dispituous torture out of door!
I must be brief, lest resolution drop
Out at mine eyes in tender womanish tears.
Can you not read it? is it not fair writ?

Arth. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect:
Must you with hot irons burn out both mine eyes?

Hub. Young boy, I must.

Arth. And will you?

Hub. And I will.

Arth. Have you the heart? When your head did knit my handkerchief about your brows,
(The best I had, a princess wrought it me,) And I did never ask it you again;
And with my hand at midnight held your head;
And, like the watchful minutes to the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time, Saying, "What lack you?" and, "Where lies your grit?"

Or, "What good love may I perform for you?"
Many a poor man's son would have lain still,
And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you;
But you at your sick service had a prince.
Nay, you may think my love was crafty love,
And call it cunning:—do, an if you will;
If heaven be pleas'd that you must use me ill,
Why, then you must.—Will you put out mine eyes?
These eyes that never did, nor never shall
So much as frown on you?

Hub. I have sworn to do it;
And with hot irons must I burn them out.

Arth. Ah, none but in this iron age would do it!
The iron of itself, though heat-red-hot,
Approaching near these eyes, would drink my tears,
And quench this fiery indignation,
Even in the matter of mine innocence;
Nay, after that, consume away in rust,
But for containing fire to harm mine eye.
Are you more stubborn-hard than hammer'd iron?
An if an angel should have come to me,
And told me Hubert should put out mine eyes,
I would have not believ'd him,—no tongue but Hubert's.

Hub. [Stamps.] Come forth.

Re-enter Attendants, with sword, crow, &c.

Do as I bid you do.

Arth. O! save me, Hubert, save me! my eyes are out
Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.

Hub. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him here.

Arth. Alas! what need you be so boisterous-rough?
I will not struggle, I will stand stone-still.
For heaven's sake, Hubert, let me not be bound!
Nay, hear me, Hubert!—drive these men away,
And I will sit as quiet as a lamb;
I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word,
Nor look upon the iron angrily:
Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive you,
Whatever torment you do put to me.

Hub. Go, stand within; let me alone with him.

I Attend. I am most pleas'd to be from such a dread.

Arth. Alas! I then have chid away my friend;
He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart:—
Let him come back, that his compassion may Give life to yours.

Hub. Come, boy, prepare yourself.

Arth. Is there no remedy?

Hub. None, but to lose your eyes.

Arth. O heaven!—that there were but a mote in
A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wandering hair, [yours,]
Any annoyance in that precious sense:
Then, feeling what small things are boisterous there,
Your vile intent must needs seem horrible.

Is this your promise? go to, hold your tongue.

Arth. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues
Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes:
Let me not hold my tongue,—let me not, Hubert;
Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my tongue,
So I may keep mine eyes: O, spare mine eyes,
Though to no use but still to look on you!—
Lo! by my troth, the instrument is cold,
And would not harm me.

Hub. I can heat it, boy.

Arth. No, in good sooth; the fire is dead with Being create for comfort, to be u'd [grief,
in undeserv'd extremest: see else yourself;
There is no malice in this burning coal;
The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out,
And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can reviv'e it, boy.

Arth. And if you do, you will but make it blush,
And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert:
Nay, it, perchance, will sparkle in your eyes;
And, like a dog that is compelld to fight,
Snatch at his master that doth tarre him on.
All things that you should use to do me wrong,
Deny their office: only you do lack
That mercy, which fierce fire, and iron, extends,
Creatures of note for mercy-lacking uses.

Hub. Well, see to live; I will not touch thine eyes
For all the treasure that thine uncle owes:
Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy,
With this same very iron to burn them out.

Arth. O, now you look like Hubert! all this while
You were disguised.

Hub. Peace! no more. Adieu. Your uncle must not know but you are dead;
I'll fill these dogged spies with false reports:
And, pretty child, sleep doubtless and secure,
That Hubert for the wealth of all the world
Will not offend thee.

Arth. O heaven!—I thank you, Hubert.

Hub. Silence! no more: go closely in with me:
Much danger do I undergo for thee.

Scene II.—Northampton. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King John, crowned: Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lords. The King takes his state.

K. John. Here once again we sit, once again
crown'd,
And look as once upon, I hope, with cheerful eyes.

Pemb. This "once again," but that your highness pleas'd,
Was once superious: you were crown'd before,
And that high royalty was ne'er plac'd off;
I, by the honour of my marriage-bed,
After young Arthur, claim this land for mine;
And, now it is half-conquer'd, must I back,
Because that John hath made his peace with Rome?
Am I Rome's slave? What penn'yi hath Rome borne,
What men provided, what munition sent,
To underprop this action? 'tis not I,
That undergo this charge! who else but I,
And such as to my claim are liable,
Sweat in this business, and maintain this war?
Have I not heard these islanders shout out,
Vive le roy! as I have bank'd their towns?
Have I not here are the best cards for the game,
To win this easy match, play'd for a crown?
And shall I now give o'er the yielded set?
No, no, on my soul, it never shall be said.

Pand. You look but on the outside of this work.

Lev. Outside or inside, I will not return
Till my attempt so much be glorified,
As to my ample hope was promised.
Before I drew this gallant head of war,
And call'd these fiery spirits from the world,
To outlook conquest, and to win renown
Even in the jaws of danger and of death. —

(Trompet sounds.

What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us?

Enter the Bastard, attended.

Bast. According to the fair play of the world,
Let me have audience; I am sent to speak:—
My holy lord of Milan, from the king
I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;
And, as you answer, I do know the scope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dauphin is too wishful-opposite,
And will not temporize with my entreaties;
He flatly says, he'll not lay down his arms.

Bast. By all the blood that ever fury breath'd,
The youth does well.—Now, hear our English king;
For thus his royalty doth speak in me.
He is prepar'd; and reason too, he should;
This apish and unmanly approach,
This harness'd mask, and undiress'd revel,
This unhair'd sauciness, and boyish troops,
The king doth smile at; and is well prepar'd
To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms,
From out the circle of his territories;
That hand, which had the strength, even at your door,
To cudgel you, and make you take the hatch;
To dive, like buckets, in concealed wells;
To crouch in litter of your stable planks;
To lie, like paws, lock'd up in chests and trunks;
To hug with vice; to seek sweet safety out
In vaults and prisons; and to thrill, and shako,
Even at the crying of your nation's crown,
Thinking this voice an armed Englishman;—
Shall that victorious hand be feebled here,
That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
No! Know, the gallant monarch is in arms;
And, like an eagle o'er his airy, towers,
To噪se annoyance that comes near his nest,—
And you degenerate, you ingrate revoltists,
You bloody Neroes, ripping up the womb
Of your dear mother England, blush for shame;
For your own ladies, and pale-visag'd maids,
Like Amazons, come tripping after drums,—
Their thimbles into armed gauntlets change,
Their needs to lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

Lev. There end thy brave, and turn thy face in peace;
We grant thou canst outcounsel us: fare thee well:
We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabbler.

Bast. No, I will speak.

Lev. We will attend to neither.—
Strike up the drums; and let the tongue of war
Plead for our interest, and our being here.

Bast. Indeed, your drums, being beaten, will cry out;
And so shall you, being beaten: do but start
An echo with the clamour of thy drum,
And even at hand a drum is ready braid'd,
That shall reverberate all as loud as thine;
Sound but another, and another shall,
As loud as thine, rattle the wellkin's ear,
And mock the deep-mouth'd thunder: for at hand
(Not trusting to this halting legate here, Whom he hath us'd rather for sport than need)
Is warlike John; and in his forehead sits
A bare-rib'd death, whose office is this day
To feast upon whole thousands of the French.

Lev. Strike up your drums, to find this danger out.

Bast. And thou shalt find it, Dauphin, do not doubt.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Near ST EDMUND'S-BURY. A Field of Battle.

Alarms. Enter King JOHN and Hubert.

K. John. How goes the day with us? O, tell me, Hubert.

Hub. Badly, I fear. How fares your majesty?

K. John. This fever, that hath troubled me so long,
Lies heavy on me;—O, my heart is sick!

Enter a Messenger.

Mass. My lord, your valiant kinman, Faulconbridge,
Desires your majesty to leave the field,
And send him word by me which way you go.

K. John. Tell him, toward Swinstead, to the almy there.

Mass. Be of good comfort; for the great supply,
That was expected by the Dauphin here,
Are wrack'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands.
This news was brought to Richard but even now:
The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.
K. John. Ah me! this tyrant fever burns me up,
And will not let me welcome this good news.
Set on toward Swinstead: to my litter straight;
Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Near ST EDMUND'S-BURY. Another Part of the Field.

Enter SALISBURY, PEMBROKE, BICKST, and others.

Sal. I did not think the king so staid with friends.

Pem. Up once again; put spirit in the French:
If they miscarry, we miscarry too.
SCENE VII.

KING JOHN.

Whose bowels suddenly burst out: the king
Yet speaks, and, peregrinare, may recover.

Bast. Whom didst thou leave to tend his majesty?

Hub. Why, know you not the lords are all come

And brought prince Henry in their company;
At whose request the king hath pardon’d them,
And they are all about his majesty.

Bast. Withhold thine indignation, mighty heaven,
And tempt us not to bear above our power!—
I’ll tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night,
Passing these flats, are taken by the tide,—
These Lincoln washes have devoured them;
Mysly, well-mounted, hardly have escap’d.
Away, before! conduct me to the king;
I doubt he will be dead or ere I come. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Orchard of Swinsteard-Abbey.

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot.

P. Hen. It is too late: the life of all his blood
Is touch’d corruptibly; and his pure brain
(Which some suppose the soul’s frail dwelling-house)
Doth, by the idle comments that it makes,
Foretell the ending of mortality,

Enter Pembroke.

Pem. His highness yet doth speak; and holds belief,
That, being brought into the open air,
It would abate the burning quality
Of that foul poison which assaileth him.

P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard here.—

Doth he still rage?

Pem. He is more patient
Than when you left him; even now he sung.

P. Hen. O, vanity of sickness! fierce extremes
In their continuance will not feel themselves.
Death, having prey’d upon the outward parts,
Leaves them insensible; and his siege is now
Against the mind, the which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of strange vanities,
Which, in their throng and press to that last hold,
Confound themselves. “Tis strange that death should sing,—

I am the cymnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,
And from the organ-pipe of frailty sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.
Sal. Be of good comfort, prince: for you are born
To set a form upon that indigest,
Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

Re-enter Bigot and Attendants, who bring in King John in a chair.

K. John. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room;
It would not out at windows, nor at doors.
There is so hot a summer in my bosom,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust:
I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen
Upon a parchment; and against this fire
Do I shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your majesty?

K. John. Poison’d,—ill-fare;—dead, forsook, cast off;
And now of you will bid the winter come,
To thrust his icy fingers in my jaw;
Nor let my kingdom’s rivers take their course
Through my burn’d bosom; nor entreat the north
To make his bleak winds kiss my parch’d lips,
And comfort me with cold:—I do not ask you much,
I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait,
And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

P. Hen. O, that there were some virtue in my tears,
That might relieve you!

K. John. The salt in them is hot.—
Within me is a hell; and there the poison
Is, as a fiend, confin’d to tyrannize
On unreparable condemned blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. O, I am scal’d with my violent motion,
And spleen of speed to see your majesty.

K. John. O cousin, thou art come to set mine eye
The tackle of my heart is crack’d and burn’d;
And all the shrouds, wherewith my life should sail,
Are turn’d to one thread, one little hair:
My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be uttered;
And then all this thou seest is but a cloud,
And model of confounded royalty.

Bast. The Dauphin is preparing hitherward,
Where, heaven he knows, how we shall answer him;
For, in a night, the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the wastes, all unwarily,
Devour’d by the unexpected flood. [The King dies.

Sal. You breathe these dead news in as dead an ear:—
My liege! my lord!—But now a king,—now thus.

P. Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a king, and now is clay?
Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behind
To do the office for thee of revenge,
And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven,
As it on earth hath been thy servant still.
Now, now, you stars, that move in your right spheres,
Where be your powers? Show now your mended faiths;
And instantly return with me again,
To push destruction, and perpetual shame,
Out of the weak door of our fainting land.
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought;
The Dauphin ranges at our very heels.
Sal. It seems you know not, then, so much as we:
The cardinal Pandulph is within at rest;
Who half an hour since came from the Dauphin,
And brings from him such offers of our peace
As we with honour and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leave this war.

Bast. He will the rather do it, when he sees Ourselves well sinewed to our defence.
Sal. Nay, it is in a manner done already;
For many carriages he hath despatch’d
To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
To the disposing of the cardinal:
With whom yourself, myself, and other lords,
If you think meet, this afternoon will post
To consummate this business happily.
Bast. Let it be so:—and you, my noble prince,
With other princes that may best be spur’d,
Shall wait upon your father’s funeral.

P. Hen. At Worcester must his body be inter’d;
For so he will’d it.

DUCHESS OF YORK.

SCENE.—Dispersed in England and Wales.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—LONDON. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Richard, attended: John of Gaunt, and other Nobles.

K. Rich. Old John of Gaunt, time-honour'd Lancaster,
Hast thou, according to thy oath and bond,
Brought lieth here Henry Hereford thy bold son,
Here to make good the boisterous late appeal
Which then our leisure would not let us hear;
Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?
Gaunt. I have, my liege.
K. Rich. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded
If he appeal the duke on ancient malice; him,
Or worthy, as a good subject should,
On some known ground of treachery in him?
Gaunt. As near as I could sift him on that argu
On some apparent danger seen in him, [ment,—
Aim'd at your highness,—no invertebrate malice.
K. Rich. Then call them to our presence: face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear
Th' accuser, and th' accused, freely speak: —
[Exeunt some Attendants.

Boling. Many years of happy days befall
My gracious sovereign, in most loving liege!
Nor. Each day still better other's happiness;
Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap,
Add an immortal title to your crown!
K. Rich. We thank you both: yet one but flatters us,
As well appeareth by the cause you come;
Namely, to appeal each other of high treason.—
Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object
Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Boling. First, (heaven be the record to my
In the devotion of a subject's love, [speech]
Tendering the precious safety of my prince,
And free from other misbegotten hate,
Come I appeal to this princely presence.—
Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well; for what I speak,
My body shall make good upon this earth,
Or my divine soul answer it in heaven.
Thou art a traitor and a miscreant,
Too good to be so, and too bad to live,—
Since the more fair and crystal is the sky,
The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly.
Once more, the more to aggravate the note,
With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat;
And wish, (so please my sovereign,) ere I move,
What my tongue speaks, my right-born sword may prove.
Nor. Let not my cold words here accuse my seal:
'Tis not the trial of a woman's war,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain;
The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this;
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be hush'd, and naught at all to say:
First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs me
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech;
Which else would post, until it had return'd
These terms of treason doubled down his throat.
Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
I do defy him, and I spit at him;
Call him a sland'rous coward, and a villain:
Which to maintain, I would allow him odds;
And meet him, were I tied to run a-foot
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where-ever Englishman durst set his foot.
SCENE III.

K. Rich. We were not born to sue, but to command;—
Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be ready, as your lives shall answer it,
At Coventry, upon Saint Lambert’s day:
There shall your swords and lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate:
Since we cannot stone you, we shall see
Justice design the victor’s chivalry.—
Lord Marshal, command our officers at arms
Be ready to direct these home alarms. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—LONDON. A Room in the Duke of Lancaster’s Palace.

Enter Gaunt and Duchess of Gloster.

Gaunt. Alas! the part I had in Gloster’s blood
Doth more solicit me, than your exclamations,
To stir against the butchers of his life:
But since correction lieth in those hands
Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven;
Who, when they see the hours ripe on earth,
Will iron out the fruit of vengeance on offender’s heads.

Duch. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spur?
Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?
Edward’s seven sons, wereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those seven are dried by nature’s course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut;
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloster,
One phial full of Edward’s sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root,
Is crack’d, and all the precious liquor spilt,
Is hack’d down, and his summer leaves all faded,
By envy’s hand, and murder’s bloody axe.
Ah, Gaunt, his blood was thine! that bed, that bomb,
That mettle, that self-mould, that fashion’d thee,
Made him a man; and though thou livest and breath’st,
Yet art thou slain in him: thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father’s death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father’s life.
Call it not patience, Gaunt,—it is despair:
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughtered,
Thou show’st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee:
That which in mean men we entitle patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.
What shall I say? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is to venge my Gloster’s death.

Gaunt. God’s is the quarrel; for God’s substitute,
His deputy appointed in his sight,
Hath caus’d his death: the which, if wrongfully,
Let heaven revenge; for I may never lift
An angry arm against his minister.

Duch. Where then, alas! may I complain myself?

Gaunt. To God, the widow’s champion and defence.

Duch. Why then, I will. Farewell, old Gaunt.

Gaunt. I go to Coventry, there to behold
Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray’s flight:
O, sit my husband’s wrongs on Hereford’s spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbray’s breast!
Or if misfortune miss the first time,
Be Mowbray’s sins so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming courser’s back,
And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A castiff recreant to my cousin Hereford!
Farewell, old Gaunt: thy sometimes brother’s wife
With her companion grief must end her life.

Gaunt. Sister, farewell; I must to Coventry:
As much good stay with thee, as go with me!

Duch. Yet one word more,—Grief boundeth where it falls,
Not with the empty hollowness, but weight:
I take my leave before I have begun;
For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done.
Commend me to my brother, Edmund York.
Lo! this is all:—nay, yet depart not so;
Though this be all, do not so quickly go;
I shall remember more. Bid him,—O, what?—
With all good speed at Flashy visit me.
Alack! and what shall good old York there see,
But empty lodgings and unfurnished walls,
Unpeopled offices, untrodden stones?
And what hear there for welcome, but my groans?
Therefore commend me; let him not come there,
To seek out sorrow that dwells every where.
Desolate, desolate, will I hence, and die:
The last leave of thee takes my weeping eye.

SCENE III.—Gosford Green, near Coventry.

Lists set out, and a Throne. Heralds, &c., attending. Enter the Lord Marshal and Aumerle.

Mar. My lord Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arm’d?

Aum. Yes, at all points; and longs to enter in.

Mar. The duke of Norfolk, sprightfully and bold,
Stays but the summons of the appellant’s trumpet.

Aum. Why then, the champions are prepar’d, and stay
For nothing but his majesty’s approach.

Flourish of Trumpets. Enter King Richard, who takes his seat on his Throne; Gaunt, Bury, Baccot, Grims, and others, who take their places. A Trumpet is sounded, and answered by another Trumpet within. Then enter Norfolk, in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder champion
The cause of his arrival here in arms:
Ask him his name; and orderly proceed
To swear him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In God’s name and the king’s, say who thou
And why thou com’st thus knightly clad in arms;
Against what man thou com’st, and what thy quarrel:
Speak truly, on thy knighthood and thine oath;
As so defend thee heaven and thy valour!

Nor. My name is Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk;
Who hither come engaged by my oath.
(Which, God defend, a knight should violate!) Both to defend my loyalty and truth
To God, my king, and his succeeding issue,
Against the duke of Hereford that appeals me;
And, by the grace of God and this mine arm,
To prove him, in defending of myself,
A traitor to my God, my king, and me:
And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Trum. Takes his seat.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder knight in arms,
Both who he is, and why he cometh hither
Thus plated in habiliments of war;
And formally, according to our law,
Depose him in the justice of his cause.
The slow hours shall not determine
The dateless limit of thy dear exile;—
The hopeless word of—"never to return."
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.

\textit{Nor}. A heavy sentence, my most sovereign liege,
And all unlook'd for from your highness' mouth;
A dearer merit, not so deep a main;
As to be cast forth in the common air,
Have I deserved at your highness' hands.
The language I have learn'd these forty years,
My native English, now I must forgo,
And now my tongue's use is to me no more,
Than an unstrung'd viol, or a harp;
Or like a cunning instrument cas'd up,
Or, being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony:
Within my mouth you have engag'd my tongue,
Doubl'y portcullis'd with my teeth and lips;
And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance
Is made my gazer to attend on me.
I am too old to fawn upon a nurse,
Too far in years to be a pupil now:
What is thy sentence, then, but speechless death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing native breath?

\textit{K. Rich.} It boos thee not to be compassionate: Aft'er our sentence plain'ting comes too late.\[Retiring,\] \textit{K. Rich.} Return again, and take an oath with thee.

Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that you owe to God,
(Our part therein we banish with yourselves,)
To keep the oath that we administer:—
You never shall (to help you truth and God!) Embrace each other's love in banishment;
Nor never look upon each other's face;
Nor never write, regret, nor reconcile
This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate;
Nor never by advised purpose meet
To plot, contrive, or compilot any ill
Gainst us, or state, our subjects, or our land.

\textit{Boling.} I swear.

\textit{Nor.} And I, to keep all this.

\textit{Boling.} Norfolk, so far, as to mine enemy;—
By this time, had the king permitted us,
One of our souls had wander'd in the air,
Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from this land:
Confess thy treasons, ere thou fly the realm;
Since thou hast far to go, bear not along
The clogging burden of a guilty soul.

\textit{Nor.} No. Bolingbroke: if ever I was traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of life,
And from heaven banish'd, as from hence! But what thou art, God, thou, and I know;
And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rue.—
 Farewell, my liege.—Now no way can I stray:
Save back to England, all the world's my way.

[Exeunt.]

\textit{K. Rich.} Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy grieved heart: thy sad aspect
Hath from the number of his banish'd years Pluck'd four away.—[To Boling.] Six frozen winsome homes.

Return with welcome home from banishment.

\textit{Boling.} How long a time lies in one little word! Four lagging winters, and four wanton springs,
End in a word: such is the breath of kings.

\textit{Gaunt.} I thank my liege, that in regard of me
He shortens four years of my son's exile:
But little vantage shall I reap thereby;
For, ere the six years that he hath to spend,
Can change their moons and bring their times about,
My oil-dried lamp and time-bewisted light,
Shall be extinct with age and endless night;
My inch of taper will be burnt and done,
And blindfold death not let me see my son.

\textit{K. Rich.} Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live.

\textit{Gaunt.} But not a minute, king, that thou canst
Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow;
And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow;
Thou canst not help time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage;
Thy word is current with him for my death,
But, dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

\textit{K. Rich.} Thy son is banish'd upon good advice,
Where'er thy tongue a party verdict gave.
Why at our justice seem'st thou, then, to lower?

\textit{Gaunt.} Things sweet to taste prove in digestion
You urg'd me as a judge; but I had rather
You would have bid me argue like a father.
O, had it been a stranger, not my child,
To smooth his fault I should have been more mild;
A partial slander sought I to avoid,
And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.
Alas, I look'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict, to make mine own away;
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Against my will, to do myself this wrong.

\textit{K. Rich.} Cousin, farewell! and, uncle, bid him
Six years we banish him, and he shall go.

[Flourish. Exeunt King Richard and train.

\textit{Anw.} Cousin, farewell; what presence must not
From where you do remain, let paper show.
[Know, Mar. My lord, no leave take I; for I will ride,
As far as land will let me, by your side.\[words,\]

\textit{Gaunt.} O! to what purpose dost thou haud thy
That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?

\textit{Boling.} I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongue's office should be prodigal
To breathe th' abundant doleour of the heart.

\textit{Gaunt.} Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

\textit{Boling.} Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

\textit{Gaunt.} What is six winters? they are quickly gone.

\textit{Boling.} To men in joy; but grief makes one hour ten.

\textit{Gaunt.} Call it a travel, that thou tak'st for plea-Boling. My heart will sigh when I misconceal it so,
Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.

\textit{Gaunt.} The sullen passage of thy weary steps
Esteem a foil, wherein thou art to set
The precious jewel of thy home-return.

\textit{Boling.} Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make
Will but remember me, what a deal of world
I wander from the jewels that I love.
Must I not serve a long apprenticehood
To foreign passages; and in the end,
Having my freedom, boast of nothing else
But that I was a journeyman to grief?

\textit{Gaunt.} All places that the eye of heaven visits,
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.
Teach thy necessity to reason thus;
SCENE 1. KINGS RICHARD II.

Gard. Depress'd he is already; and depo'st, 'Tis doubt, he will be: letters came last night To a dear friend of the good duke of York's, That tell black tidings.

Queen. O, I am press'd to death, through want of speaking! [Coming forward, with Ladies.
Thou, old Adam's likeness, set to dress this garden, How dares thy harsh rude tongue sound this unpleasing news?

What Eve, what serpent, hath suggested thee To make a second fall of cursed man? Why dost thou say king Richard is depo'st? Dar'st thou, thou little better thing than earth, Divine his downfall? Say, where, when, and how, Can'tst thou by these ill tidings? speak, thou wretch.

Gard. Pardon me, Madam: little joy have I To breathe these news; yet what I say is true. King Richard, he is in the mighty hold Of Bolingbroke: their fortunes both are weigh'd: In your lord's scale is nothing but himself, And some few vanities that make him light; But in the balance of great Bolingbroke, Besides himself, are all the English peers, And with that odds he weigh's king Richard down. Post you to London, and you'll find it so; I speak no more than every one doth know.

Queen. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot, Dost not thy embassy belong to me, And am I last that knows it? O! thou think'st To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast.—Come, ladies, go, To meet at London London's king in wo'.—
What was I born to this, that my sad look Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke?— Gardener, for telling me these news of woe, I would the plants thou graft'st may never grow. [Exeunt Queen and Ladies.

Gard. Poor queen! so that thy state might be no worse, I would my skill were subject to thy curse.— Here did she fall a tear; here, in this place, I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace: Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen, In the remembrance of a weeping queen. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—LONDON. Westminster Hall.

The Lords spiritual on the right side of the Throne; the Lords temporal on the left; the Commons below. Enter Bolingbroke, Aumerle, Surrey, Northumberland, Percy, Fitzwater, another Lord, the Bishop of Carlisle, the Abbot of Westminster, and Attendants. Officers behind with Bagot.

Boling. Call forth Bagot.—

Now, Bagot, freely, speak thy mind; What thou dost know of noble Gloster's death, Who wrought it with the king, and who perform'd The bloody office of his timeless end.

Bagot. Then set before the face the lord Aumerle. Boling. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man.

Bagot. My lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue Scorns to unsay what once it hath deliver'd. In that dead time when Gloster's death was plotted, I heard you say,—'Tis not my arm of length,

That reacheth from the restful English court As far as Caiais, to my uncle's head!' Amidst much other talk, that very time, I heard you say, that you had rather refuse The offer of a hundred thousand crowns, Than Bolingbroke's return to England;

Adding withal, how blest this land would be In this your cousin's death. [Aum.

Princes, and noble lords, What answer shall I make to this base man? Shall I so much dishonour my fair stars, On equal terms to give him chastisement? Either I must, or have mine honour soil'd With the attainted of his sordid's rous lips.— There is my gage, the manual seal of death, That marks thee out for hell: I say, thou liest, And will maintain what thou hast said is false In thy heart-blood, though being all too base To stain the temper of my knightly sword.

Boling. Bagot, forbear; thou shalt not take it up.

Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best In all this presence, that hath mov'd me so.

Fis. If that thy valour stand on sympathy, There is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine: I'ly that fair sun which shows me where thou stand'st, I heard thee say, and vauntingly thou spak'st it, That thou wert cause of noble Gloster's death. If thou deny'st it twenty times, thou liest; And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart, Where it was forg'd, with my rapier's point.

Aum. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.

Fis. Now, by my soul, I would it were this hour.

Aum. Fitzwater, thou art damn'd to hell for this.

Percy. Aumerle, thou liest; his honour is as true In this appeal, as thou art all unjust; And, that thou art so, there I throw my gage, To prove it on thee to th' extremest point Of mortal breathing: seize it if thou dar'st.

Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off, And never brandish more revengeful steel Over the glittering helmet of my foe!

Lord. I task the earth to the like, forsworn Au- And spurn thee on with as many lies as [merle; As may be hol'd in thy treacherous ear From sun to sun: there is my honour's pawn; Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

Fis. Who sets me else? by heaven, I'll throw I have a thousand spirits in one breast, [at all: To answer twenty thousand such as you.

Surrey. My lord Fitzwater, I do remember well The very time Aumerle and you did talk.

Fis. 'Tis very true: you were in presence then; And you can witness with me this is true.

Surrey. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is true.

Fis. Surrey, thou liest.

Surrey. Dishonourable boy! That lie shall lie so heavy on my sword, That it shall render vengeance and revenge, Till thou, the lie-giver, and that lie, do lie In earth as quiet as thy father's skull: In proof whereof, there is my honour's pawn; Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.

Fis. How loudly dost thou spur a forward horse! If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe, or live, I dare meet Surrey in a wilderness, And spit upon him, whilst I say he lies, And lies, and lies: there is my bond of faith, To tie thee to my strong correction.— As I intend to thrive in this new world, York. [Kneels.] Against them both, my true joints bended be.
Il mayst thou thrive, if thou grant any grace!
Duck. Plead's he in earnest? look upon his face;
His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in jest;
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast:
He prays but faintly, and would be doted;
We pray with heart and soul, and all beside;
His weary joints would gladly rise, I know;
Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they grow:
His prayers are full of false hypocrisy;
Ours of true zeal and deep integrity.
Our prayers do out-pray his; then let them have
That mercy which true prayers ought to have.
Boling. Good aunt, stand up.
Duck. Nay, do not say—"stand up;"
But, "pardon" first, and afterwards, "stand up."
An I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach,
"Pardon" should be the first word of thy speech.
I never long'd to hear a word till now;
Say—"pardon," king; let pity teach thee how:
The word is short, but not so short as sweet;
No word like "pardon," for kings' mouths so meet.
York. Speak it in French, king; say, pardonnez.
Duck. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy?
A h'm, my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord,
That sett'st the word itself against the word!—
Speak "pardon" as it's current in our land,
The choppèd French we do not understand.
Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there;
Or in thy piteous heart plant thou thine ear;
That hearing how our plaints and prayers do pierce,
Pity may move thee "pardon" to rehearse.
Boling. Good aunt, stand up.
Duck. I do not sue to stand;
Pardon is all the suit I have in hand.
Boling. I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.
Duck. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee!
Yet am I sick for fear; speak it again;
Twice saying "pardon" doth not pardon twain,
But makes one pardon strong.
Boling. With all my heart
I pardon him.
Duck. A god on earth thou art.
Boling. But for our trusty brother-in-law, and the Aribot.
With all the rest of that distressed crew,
 Destruction straight shall dog them at the heels.—
Good uncle, help to order several powers
To Oxford, or where'er these traitors are:
They shall not live within this world, I swear,
But I will have them, if I once know where.
Uncle, farewell,—and cousin too, adieu:
Your mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true.
Duck. Come, my old son;—I pray God make thee new.

KING RICHARD II.

Exton. "Have I no friend?" quoth he: he spake it twice,
And urg'd it twice together,—did he not?
Serv. He did.
Exton. And speaking it, he wistly looked on me;
As who should say,—I would thou wert the man
That would divorce this terror from my heart,— Meaning the king at Pomfret. Come, let's go:
I am the king's friend, and will rid his foe. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—POMFRET. The Dungeon of the Castle.

Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. I have been studying how I may compare
This prison, where I live, unto the world:
And, for because the world is populous,
And here is not a creature but myself,
I cannot do it;—yet I'll hammer't out.
My brain I'll prove the female to my soul;
My soul, the father: and these two beget
A generation of still-breeding thoughts,
And these same thoughts people this little world;
In humours, like the people of this world.
For no thought is contented. The better sort,—
As thoughts of things divine,—are intermix'd
With scruples, and do set the word itself
Against the word:
As thus,—"Come, little ones!" and then again,—
"It is as hard to come, as for a camel
To thread the postern of a needle's eye.
Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot
Unlike wonders; how these vain weak nails
May tear a passage through the flinty ribs
Of this hard world, my rugged prison walls;
And, for they cannot, die in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to content, flatter themselves
That they are not the first of fortune's slaves,
Nor shall not be the last; like silly beggars,
Who, sitting in the stocks, refuse their shame,
That many have, and others must sit there;
And in this thought they find a kind of ease,
Bearing their own misfortune on the back.
Of such as have before endured the like.
Thus play I, in one person, many people,
And none contented; sometimes am I king;
Then, treason makes me wish myself a beggar,
And so I am: then, crushing penury
Persuades me I was better when a king;
Then, am I king'd again: and, by and by,
Think that I am unknight'd by Bolingbroke,
And straight am nothing,—but whate'er I am,
Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,
With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd
With being nothing.—[Music.] Music do I hear?
Ha, ha! keep time,—how sour sweet music is,
When time is broke, and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives.
And here have I the daintiness of ear
To check time broke in a disorder'd string;
But, for the concord of my state and time,
Had not an ear to hear my true time broke.
I wasted time, and now doth time waste me;
For now hath time made me his numbering clock;
My thoughts are minutes; and, with sighs, they jar
Their watches on unto mine eyes, the outward watch,
Where to my finger's like a dial's point,
Is pointing still, in cleansing them from tears.
Now, Sir, the sounds that tell what hour it is,
Scene II.-London. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter Prince Henry and Falstaff.

Fal. Now, Hal, what time of day is it, lad?

F. Hen. Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking of old sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper, and sleeping upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly, which thou wouldst truly know. What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes gospons, and clockes the tongues of bawds, and dial the signs of leaping-houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-colour'd taffeta,—I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfuse to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed, you come near me now, Hal; for we that take purses, go by the moon and the seven stars, and not by Phoebe,—he, "that wandering knight so fair." And, I pr'ythee, sweet wagt, when thou art king,—as, God save thy grace, (majesty, I should say, for grace thou wilt have none),—

F. Hen. What! none!
I’ll so offend, to make offence a skill;
Re redeeming time, when men think least I will.
   [Exit.

SCENE III.—London. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Northumberland, Worcester, Hertford, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

K. Hen. My blood hath been too cold and tem-
Unapt to stir at these indignities, [peral,
And you have found me; so for accordingly,
You tread upon my patience: but, be sure,
I will from henceforth rather be myself.
Mighty, and to be feared, than my condition;
Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young down,
And therefore lost that title of respect,
Which the proud soul ne’er pays but to the proud.

Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves
The secrecy of greatness to be used on it;
And that same greatness, too, which our own hands
Have holf to make so portly.

North. My lord,

K. Hen. Worcester, get thee gone, for I do see Danger and disobedience in thine eye:
O, Sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,
And majesty never yet endure
The moody frontier of a servant brow.
You have good leave to leave us: when we need
Your use and counsel, we shall send for you.

   [Exit Worcester.

[To North.] You were about to speak.

North. Yea, my good lord,

Those prisoners in your highness’ name demanded,
Which Harry Percy here, at Holmenden took,
Were, as he says, not with such strength denied.
As is deliver’d to your majesty:
Either envy, therefore, or misprision,
Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.

Hot. My liege, I did deny no prisoners:
But I remember, when the fight was done,
When I was dry with rage and extreme toil,
Breathless and on my sword,
Came there a certain lord, neat, trimly dress’d,
Fresh as a bridegroom; and his chin, new reap’d,
Show’d like a stubble-land at harvest-home;
He was perfum’d like a milliner;
And ‘twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A pounce-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose, and took it away again—
Who, therewith angry, when it next came there,
Took it in snuff;—and still be smil’d and talk’d;
And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,
He call’d them untaught knaves, unmanfully,
To bring a slovenly unhandsome corse
Betwixt the wind and his nobility.
With many holiday and idle terms
To question’d me; among the rest, demanded
My prisoners in your majesty’s behalf;
I then, all smarting, with my wounds being cold,
To be so pester’d with a popinjay,
Out of my grief and my impatience,
Answer’d negligently, I know not what,—
He should, or he should not;—for he made me mad
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman,
Of guns, and drums, and wounds.—God save the mark!—
And telling me, the sovereign’s thing on earth
Was parmaclai for an inward bruise;
And that it was great pity, so it was,
This villainous villain should be digg’d
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy’d
So cowardly; and, but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a solider.
This bold unjointed chaf of his, my lord,
I answer’d distinctly, as I said;
And I beseech you, let not his report
Come current for an accusation,
Betwixt my love and your high majesty.

Blunt. The circumstance consider’d, good my lord,
Whate’er Lord Harry Percy then had said
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest re-told,
May reasonably die, and never rise
To do him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so he unaid it now.

K. Hen. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners,
But with proviso and exception,—

That we, at our own charge, shall ransom straight
His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer;
Who, on my soul, I bath wilfully betray’d
The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against the great magician, damn’d Glendower,
Whose daughter, as we hear, the earl of March,
Hath lately married. Shall our coffers, then,
Be emptied to redeem a traitor home?
Shall we buy treason and indent with fears,
When they have lost and forfeited themselves?
No, on the barren mountains let him starve;
For I shall never hold that man my friend,
Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost,
To ransom home revolted Mortimer.

Hot. Revol’ted Mortimer!
He never did fall off, my sovereign liege,
But by the chance of war—to prove that true,
Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds,
Those mouth’d wounds, which valiantly he took,
When on the gentle Scarn’s sedgy bank,
In single opposition, hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an hour.
In changing hardiment with great Glendower:
Three times they breath’d, and three times did they Upon agreement, of swift Scarn’s flood;
[drink,
Then, affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds,
And hid his crisp head in the hollow bank,
Blood-stain’d with these valiant combattants.
Never did base and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
Nor never could the noble Mortimer
Receive so many, and all willingly;
Then, let him be stern’d with revolt.

K. Hen. Thou dost belive him, Percy, thou dost
believe him;
He never did encounter with Glendower:
I tell thee,
He durst as well have met the devil alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
Art thou not ashamed? but, sirs, henceforth
Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer:
Send me your prisoners with the speediest means,
Or you shall hear in such a kind from me,
As will displease you.—My lord Northumberland,
We license your departure with your son,—
Send us your prisoners, or you’ll hear of it.
   [Exit King Henry, Blunt, and train.
Scene I]

First Part of King Henry IV.

Look,—"when his infant fortune came to age," And,—"gentle Harry Percy."—and, "kind cousin." O, the devil take such consensers!—God forgive Good uncle, tell your tale; for I have done. [me!— Wor. Nay, if you have not, to 't again; We'll stay your leisure. Hot. I have done, I faith. Wor. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners. Deliver them up without their ransom straight, And make the Douglas' son your only mean For powers in Scotland; which, for divers reasons Which I shall send you written, be assured, Will easily be granted.—[To North.] You, my Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd, lord, Shall secretly into the bosom creep, Of that same noble prince, well belov'd, The archbishop.

Hot. Of York, is it not? Wor. True; who bears hard His brother's death at Bristol, the lord Scroop. I speak not this in estimation, As what I think might be, but what I know Is ruminate, plotted, and set down; And only stays but to behold the face Of that occasion that shall bring it on. Hot. I smell it; upon my life, it will do well. North. Before the game's afoot, thou still let'st slip. Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot;— And then the power of Scotland, and of York,— To join with Mortimer, ha?— Wor. And so they shall. Hot. In faith, it is exceedingly well ain'd. Wor. And 'tis a little hint bids us speed, To save our heads by raising of a head; For, bear ourselves as even as we can, The king will always think him in our debt, And think we think ourselves unsatisfied, Till he hath found a time to pay us home: And see already how he doth begin To make us straggers to his looks of love. Hot. He does, he does: we shall be reveng'd on him. Wor. Cousin, farewell:—No farther go in this, Than by letters shall direct your course. When time is ripe, (which will be suddenly,) I'll steal to Glendower and lord Mortimer; Where you and Douglas, and our powers at once, (As I will fashion it,) shall happily meet, To rear our fortunes in our own strong arms, Which now we hold at much uncertainty. North. Farewell, good brother: we shall thrive, I trust.

Hot. Uncle, adieu;—O, let the hours be short, Till fields, and blows, and groans applaud our sport! [Exeunt.

Act II.

Enter a Carrier, with a lantern in his hand.

1 Car. Heigh ho! An' be not four by the day, I'll be hanged: Charles' wain is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not packed.—What, ostler! [Within.] Anon, anon.

1 Car. I pr'ythee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle, put a few flocks in the point; the poor jade is wrung in the withers out of all cess.

Enter another Carrier.

2 Car. Peas and beans are as dank here as a dog, and that is the best way to give poor jades the bota: this house is turned upside down, since Robin ostler died.

1 Car. Poor fellow! never joyed since the price of oats rose; it was the death of him.

2 Car. I think this be the most villainous house in all London road for fleas: I am stung like a teench.

1 Car. Like a teench! by the mass, there is ne'er a king in Christendom could be better bit than I have been since the first cock.

2 Car. Why, they will allow us ne'er a jorden, and then we leak in your chimney; and your chamber-lie breeds fleas like a loach.

1 Car. What, ostler! come away and be hanged; come away.

2 Car. I have a gammon of bacon, and two razes of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-cross.

1 Car. 'Oddsbody! the turkeys in my pannier are quite starved.—What, ostler!—A plague on thee! last thou never an eye in thy head? canst not hear? An' twere not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee. I am a very villain.—Come, and be hanged:—hast no faith in thee?

Enter Gadshill.

Gads. Good morrow, carriers. What's o'clock? 1 Car. 1 think it be two o'clock.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thy lantern, to see my gelding in the stable.

1 Car. Nay, soft, I pray ye: I know a trick worth two of that, I faith.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thine.

2 Car. Ay, when? canst tell?—Lend me thy lantern, quoth a't—marr, I'll see thee hanged first.

Gads. Sirrah carrier, what time do you mean to come to London?

2 Car. With a strong party to go to bed with a candle, I warrant thee.—Come, neighbour Mugs, we'll call up the gentlemen: they will along with company, for they have great charge. [Exeunt Carriers.

Gads. What, ho! chamberlain! Cham. [Within.] At hand, quoth pick-purse, Cham. That's even as fair as—at hand, quoth the chamberlain; for thou variest no more from picking of purses, than giving direction doth from labouring; thou layest the plot how.

Enter Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, master Gadshill. It holds current, that I told you yesternight:—there's a franklin in the wild of Kent hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company, last night at supper; a kind of auditor; one that hath abundance of charge too, God knows what. They are up already, and call for eggs and butter: they will away presently.

Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with saint Nicholas' clerks, I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it: I pr'ythee, keep that for the hangman; for I know thou worship'st saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may.

Gads. What tallkest thou to me of the hangman? if I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallowas; for if I
I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave
To tell you once again,—that at my birth,
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes;
The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds
Were strangely clamorous to the frightened fields.
These signs have made me extraordinary;
And all the courses of my life do show,
I am not in the roll of common men.
Where is he living,—clipp'd in with the sea?
That chides the banks of England, Scotland,
Wales,—
Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?
And bring him out, that is but woman's son,
Can trace me in the tedious ways of art,
And hold me pace in deep experiments.
Hot. I think there is no man speaks better Welsh.—
I'll to dinner.
Mort. Peace, cousin Percy! you will make him mad.
Glen. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.
Hot. Why, so can I, or so can any man;
But will they come, when you do call for them?
Glen. Why, I can teach thee, cousin, to command the devil.
Hot. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil,—
By telling truth: tell truth, and shame the devil.
If thou hast power to raise him, bring him hither,
And I'll be sworn, I have power to shame him hence.
O, while you live, tell truth, and shame the devil!
Mort. Come, come, no more of this unprofitable chat.
Glen. These three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head Against my power; twice from the banks of Wye,
And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him
Bootsless home, and weather-beaten back.
Hot. Home without boots, and in foul weather too!
How 'scapes he agues, in the devil's name?
Glen. Come, here's the map: shall we divide our right,
According to our three-fold order ta'en?
Mort. The archdeacon hath divided it
Into three limits, very equally—England, from Trent and Severn hitherto,
By south and east is to my part assign'd;
All westward, Wales, beyond the Severn shore,
And all the fertile land within that bound,
To Owen Glendower,—and, dear coz, to you
The remnant northward, lying off from Trent.
And our indentures tripartite are drawn;
Which being sealed interchangingly,
(A business that this night may execute,)
To-morrow, cousin Percy, you, and I,
And my good lord of Worcester, will set forth
To meet your father and the Scottish power,
As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.
My father Glendower is not ready yet,
Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days:

[To Glen. Within that space you may have drawn together
Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentlemen.
Glen. A shorter time shall send me to you, lords:
And in my conduct shall your ladies come;
From whom you now must steal, and take no leave;
For there will be a world of water shed,
Upon the parting of your wives and you.
Mort. Methinks my moiety, north from Burton here,
In quantity equals not one of yours:

See how this river comes me cranking in,
And cuts me from the best of all my land
A huge half-moon, a monstrous castle out.
I'll have the current in this place damm'd up;
And here the snug and silver Trent shall run
In a new channel, fair and evenly:
It shall not wind with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottom here.

Hot. Glen. Not wind it shall, it must; you see, it Mort. Yea, but mark, how he bears his course, and runs me up
With like advantage on the other side;
Gelding the opposed continent as much,
As on the other side it takes from you.

Hot. Glen. But a little charge will trench him here,
And on this north side win this cape of land;
And then he runs straight and even.
Hot. I'll have it so; a little charge will do it.

Glen. I will not have it alter'd.
Hot. Glen. No, nor you shall not.
Hot. Whoso shall say me nay?
Glen. Why, that will I.
Hot. Let me not understand you, then;
Speak it in Welsh.

Glen. I can speak English, lord, as well as you;
For I was train'd up in the English court;
Where, being but young, I fram'd to the harp
Many an English ditty, lovely well,
And gave the tongue a helpful ornament,—
A virtue that was never seen in you.

Hot. Marry, and I'm glad of it with all my heart:
I had rather be a kitchen, and cry mew,
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers;
I had rather hear a brazen canstick turn'd,
Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree;
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,
Nothing so much as mincing poetry:—
'Tis like the forc'd gait of a shuffling nag.

Glen. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd,
Hot. I do not care: I'll give thrice so much land to any well-deserving friend;
But in the way of bargain, mark ye me,
I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair.
Are the indentures drawn? shall we be gone?

Glen. The moon shines fair; you may away by night.
I'll haste the writer, and withal,
Break with your wives of your departure hence.
I am afraid my daughter will run mad,
So much she doteth on her Mortimer.

[Exit. Mort. Fie, cousin Percy! how you cross my father!
Hot. I cannot choose: sometimes he angers me
With telling me of the moldarp and the ant,
Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies,
And of a dragon and a finless fish,
A clip-wing'd griffin and a moulen raven,
A couching lion and a ramping cat,
And such a deal of skimmable-skimmable stuff
As puts me from my faith. I tell you what,—
He held me, last night, at least nine hours,
In reckoning up the several devils' names,
That were his lackeys: I cried, "H'm," and "Well, go to."

But mark'd him not a word. O, he's as tedious
As a tired horse, a railing wife;
Worse than a smoky house:—I had rather live
With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far,
I know not whether God will have it so,
For some displeasing service I have done,
That, in his secret doom, out of my blood
He'll breed revenges and a scourge for me;
But thou dost, in thy passages of life,
Make me believe that thou art only mark'd
For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven,
To punish my mistreadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts,
Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art match'd withal and granted to,
Accompany the greatness of thy blood,
And hold their level with thy princely heart?

P. Hen. So please your majesty, I would I could Quit all offences with as clear excuse,
As well as, I am doubtful, I can purge
Myself of many I am charg'd withal:
Yet such extenuation let me beg,
As, in reproof of many tales devis'd,
Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear,—
By smiling pick-thanks and base newsmongers,
I may, for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faulty wander'd and irregular,
Find pardon on my true submission.

K. Hen. God pardon thee!—yet let me wonder,
Harry,
At thy affections, which do hold a wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy younger brother is supplied;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the court, and princes of my blood:
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd; and the soul of every man
Prophetically does forethink thy fall.
Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar company,—
Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
Had still kept loyal to possession,
And left me in repose banishment,
A fellow of no mark nor likelihood.
By being seldom seen, I could not sit,
But, like a comet, I was wonder'd at;
That men would tell their children, "This is he;"
Others would say, "Where? which is Bolingbroke!"
And then they stole all courtesy from me,
And dress'd myself in such humility,
That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,
Even in the presence of the crowned king.
Thus did I keep my person fresh and new;
My presence, like a robe pontifical,
Nor seen, but wonder'd at: and so my state,
Seldom, but sumptuous, shew'd like a feast;
And won, by rareness, such solemnity.
The skipping king, he ambled up and down
With shallow jesters and rash harum-scarum,
Soon kindled, and soon burn'd; carded his state;
Mingled his royalty with carping fools;
Had his great name profan'd with their scorns;
And gave his countenance, against his name,
To laugh at gibing boys, and stand the push
Of every beardless vain comparative;
Grew a companion to the common streets,
Endeavou'd himself a common purity,
That, being daily swallow'd by men's eyes,
They surfeited with honey, and began
To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little More than a little is by much too much.
So, when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the cockoo in June,
Heard, not regarded,—seen, but with such eyes,
As, sick and blunted with community,
Aford no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on sun-like majesty,
When it shines seldom in admiring eyes;
But rather draw'd, and hung their eyelids down,
Slept in his face, and render'd such aspect
As cloudy men use to their adversaries,
Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full.
And in that very line, Harry, stand'st thou;
For thou hast lost thy princely privilege,
With vile participation: not an eye
But is a weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more;
Which now doth that I would not have it do,—
Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

P. Hen. I shall hereafter, my thrice-gracious lord,
Be more myself.

K. Hen. For all the world, as thou art to this hour, was Richard then,
When I from France set foot at Ravensprug;
And even as I was then, is Percy now,
Now, by my sceptre, and my soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the state,
Than thou, the shadow of succession:
For, of no right, nor colour like to right,
He doth fill fields with harness in the realm;
Turns head against the lion's armed jaws;
And, being no more in debt to years than thou,
Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops on
To bloody battles, and to bruising arms.
What never-dying honour hath he got Against renowned Douglas! whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions, and great name in arms,
Holds from all soldiers chief majority,
And military title capital,
Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Christ.
Thrice hath this Hotspur, Mars in swathing clothes,
This infant warrior, in his enterprises
Discomfited great Douglas; ta'en him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep defiance up,
And shake the peace and safety of our throne.
And what said to this? Percy, Northumberland,
The archbishop's grace of York, Douglas, Mortimer,
Capitulate against us, and are up.
But wherefore do I tell these news to thee?
Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,
Which art my nearest and dearest enemy?
Thou that art like enough,—through vassal fear,
Base inclination, and the start of spleen,—
To fight against me under Percy's pay,
To dog his heels, and court'sy at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate.

P. Hen. Do not think so; you shall not find it so:
And God forgive them, that so much have sway'd
Your majesty's good thoughts away from me!
I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
And in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you that I am your son;
When I will wear a garment all of blood,
And stain my favours in a bloody mask,
Which, wash'd as oft as all scour my shame with it;
And that shall be the day, when'er it lights,
That this same child of honour and renown,
Scene III.}

First Part of King Henry IV.

Enter Prince Henry and Pains, marching. Falstaff meets the Prince, playing on his truncheon like a fife.

Fal. How now, lad! is the wind in that door, I' faith? must we all march?

Bard. Yes, two and two, Newgate-fashion.

Host. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

P. Hen. What saiest thou, mistress Quickly? How does thy husband? I love him well; he is an honest man.

Host. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Pr'ythee, let her alone, and list to me.

P. Hen. What saiest thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here, behind the arras, and had my pocket picked: this house is turned bawdy-house; they pick pockets.

P. Hen. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece, and a seal-ring of my grandfather's.

P. Hen. A trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my lord; and I said I heard your grace say so: and, my lord, he speaks most allively of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is; and said, he would cudgel you.

P. Hen. What? he did not?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune; nor no more truth in thee, than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing? why, a thing to thank God on.

Host. I am no thing to thank God on, I would thou shouldst know it: I am an honest man's wife: and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave thou?

P. Hen. An otter, Sir John! why an otter?

Fal. Why? she's neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so: thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave thou!

P. Hen. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanderst thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

P. Hen. Sirrah! do I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal! a million: thy love is worth a million; thou owest me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said he would cudgel you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, Sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yes,—if he said my ring was copper.

P. Hen. I say, 'tis copper: darest thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare: but as thou art prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

P. Hen. And why not, as the lion?

Fal. The king himself is to be feared as the lion: dost thou think, I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? nay, an I do, I pray God, my girdle break.

P. Hen. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine,—it is all filled up with guts and mudrift. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, embossed rascal, if there were any thing in thy pocket but tavern reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-candy to make thee long-winded,—if thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries but these, I am a villain: and yet you will stand to it; you will not pocket up wrong. Art thou not ashamed?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest in the state of innocency, Adam fell; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do, in the days of villany? Thou seest, I have more flesh than another man; and therefore more frailty. You confess, then, you picked my pocket?

P. Hen. It appears so by the story.

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee: go, make ready breakfast; love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests: thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason: thou seest, I am pacified.—Still!—Nay, pr'ythee, be gone. [Exit Hostess.] Now, Hal, to the news at court: for the robbery, lad,—how is that answered?

P. Hen. O, my sweet beef, I must still be good angel to thee:—the money is paid back again.

Fal. O, I do not like that paying back; 'tis a double labour.

P. Hen. I am good friends with my father, and may do any thing.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou dost, and do it with unwashed hands too.

Bard. Do, my lord.

P. Hen. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of food.

Fal. I would it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O for a fine thief, of the age of two and twenty, or three breakouts! I am heinously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels,—they offend none but the virtuous: I laud them, I praise them.

P. Hen. Bardolph, [coster.

Fal. My lord!—[Exit Bardolph.

P. Hen. Go bear this letter to lord John of LanCASTER.

To my brother John; this to my lord of WestmoreLAND.—[Exit Bardolph.

Go, Pains, to horse, to horse; for thou and I have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time.—[Exit Pains.

Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple-ball.

At two o'clock in the afternoon:

There shalt thou know thy charge; and there receive Money, and order for their furniture.

The land is burning; Percy stands on high;

And either they, or we, must lower lie.—[Exit.

Fal. Rare words! brave world!—Hostess, my breakfast; come:—

O, I could wish this tavern were my drum! [Exit.
Scene III.

First Part of King Henry IV.

Who is to bear me, like a thunderbolt, Against the bosom of the prince of Wales: Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse, Meet, and ne'er part, till one drop down a corse. — O that Glendower were come! Ver. There is more news: I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along, He cannot draw his power this fourteen days. Doug. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet. Werr. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound. Hot. What may the king's whole battle reach unto? Ver. To thirty thousand. Hot. Forty let it be: My father and Glendower being both away, The powers of us may serve so great a day. Come, let us take a master speedily: Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily. Doug. Talk not of dying; I am out of fear Of death, or death's hand, for this one half year. [Exeunt.

Scene II. — A Public Road near Coventry.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry; fill me a bottle of sack: our soldiers shall march through; we'll to Sutton-Cophill to-night. Bard. Will you give me money, captain? Fal. Lay out, lay out. Bard. This bottle makes an angel. Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all; I'll answer the coinage. Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at the town's end. Bard. I will, captain: farewell. [Exit. Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soured gurnet. I have misused the king's press damnable. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons; enquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the bans; such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver, worse than a Struck fowl, or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such toastas and butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the glutton's dogs licked his sores; and such as, indeed, were never soldiers, but discarded unjust serving men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tapsters, and ostlers trade-fallen; the cankers of a calm world and a long peace; ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old flayed ancient; and such have I, to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tattered prologues, lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draff and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the giblets, and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat:—nay, and the villains march wide between the legs, as if they had gaves on; for, indeed, I had the most of them out of prison. There's but a shirt and a half in all my company; and the half shirt is two napkins tacked together, and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at St Albans, or the red-nose inn-keeper of Dainty. But that's all one; they'll find linens enough on every hedge. Enter Prince Henry and Westmoreland.

P. Hen. How now, blowed Jack! how now, quiet! Fal. What, Hal! How now, mad wag! what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire?—My good lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy: I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury. West. 'Faith, Sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already. The king, I can tell you, looks for us all: we must away all night. Fal. Tut, never fear me: I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

P. Hen. I think, to steal cream, indeed; for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack, whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine. P. Hen. I did never see such pitiful rascals. Fal. Tut, tut! good enough to toss; food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better: turf, man, mortal men, mortal men. West. Ay, but, Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare;—too beggarly. Fal. 'Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their bareness, I am sure, they never learned that of me. P. Hen. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ribs, bare. But, sirrah, make haste: Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What is the king encamped? West. He is, Sir John: I fear we shall stay too long.

Fal. Well, To the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of a feast. Fits a dull fighter, and a keen guest. [Exeunt.

Scene III. — The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

And there's my lord of Worcester; and a head of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Arch. And so there is: but yet the king hath drawn the special head of all the land together.—

The prince of Wales, lord John of Lancaster, The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt; And many more corvills, and dear men Of estimation and command in arms.

Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well oppos'd.

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear; And, to prevent the worst, Sir Michael, speed: For, if lord Percy thrive not, ere the king Dismiss his power, he means to visit us, For he hath heard of our confederacy,— And 'tis but wisdom to make strong against him: Therefore, make haste; I must go write again To other friends; and so farewell, Sir Michael.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The King's Camp near Shrewsbury.

K. Hen. How bloodily the sun begins to peer Above yond' bosky hill! the day looks pale At his dis temperature.

P. Hen. The southern wind Doth play the trumpet to his purposes; And by his hollow whistling in the leaves, Foretells a tempest, and a bustling day.

K. Hen. Then, with the losers let it sympathise, For nothing can seem foul to those that win.—

[Trumpet sounds.

Enter Worcester and Vernon.

How now, my lord of Worcester! 'tis not well, That you and I should meet upon such terms As now we meet. You have deceived our trust, And made us doff our easy robes of peace, To crush our old limbs in urgent steel: This is not well, my lord, this is not well. What say you to it? you are again unknit This churlish knot of all-abhorred war? And move in that obdient orb again, Where you did give a fair and natural light; And be no more an exhal'd meteor, A prodigy of fear, and a portent Of broached mischief to the unborn times?

Wor. Hear me, my liege. For mine own part, I could be well content To entertain the lag-end of my life With quiet hours; for, I do protest I have not sought the day of this dislike. [then] P. Hen. You have not sought it? how comes it Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.

P. Hen. Peace, chewet, peace!

Wor. It pleases your majesty to turn your looks Of favour from myself and all our house; And yet I must remember you, my lord, We were the first and dearest of your friends. For you my staff of office did I break In Richard's time; and posted day and night To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand, When yet you were in place, and in account,
SCENE IV.
FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV.
To spend that shortness basely, were too long,
If he did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at the arrival of an hour.
An if we live, we live to tread on kings;
If die, brave death, when princes die with us!
Now, for our consciences,—the arms are fair,
When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My Lord, prepare; the king comes on space.

Hot. I thank him, that he cuts me from my tale,
For I profess not talking; only this—
Let each man do his best; and here draw I
A sword, whose temper I intend to stain
With the best blood that I can meet withal.
In the adventure of this perilous day,
Now,—Expectance!—Percy!—and set on.—
Sound all the lofty instruments of war,
And by that music let us all embrace;
For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall
A second time do such a courtesy.

[The trumpets sound. They embrace, and excurst.

SCENE III.—Plain near SHREWSBURY.

Excursions, and Partial fighting. Alarums to the Battle.
Then enter DOUGLAS and BLUNT, (who is accounted like the King,) meeting.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in the battle thus Thou crossest me? what honour dost thou seek Upon my head?

Doug. Know, then, my name is Douglas;
And I do haunt thee in the battle thus,
Because some tell me that thou art a king.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Doug. The lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought Thy likeness; for, instead of thee, king Harry,
This sword hath ended him: so shall it thee,
Unless thou yield thee as thy prisoner.

Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot;
And thou shalt find a king that will revenge
Lord Stafford's death.

[They fight, and BLUNT is slain.

Enter Hotspur.

Hot. O Douglas! hadst thou fought at Holmedon
I never had triumph'd upon a Scot. [thus, Doug. All's done, all's won: here breathless lies the king.

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here.

Hot. This, Douglas? no; I know this face full well:
A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt;
Smallest furnish'd like his kingdom.

Doug. A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes!
A borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear:
Why didst thou tell me that thouwert a king?
Hot. The king hath many marching in his coats.
Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats;
I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece,
Until I meet the king.

Hot. Up, and away!

Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day. [Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Though I could 'scape shot-free at London,
I fear the shot here; here's no scoring, but upon the pate.—Soft! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt?

—there's Honour for you! here's no vanity—I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too: God keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels.—I have led my ragamuffins where they are peppered: there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive; and they are for the town's end, to beg during life.—But who comes here?

Enter PRINCE HENRY.

P. Hen. What! stand'st thou idle here? lend me thy sword:
Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff
Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies,
Whose deaths are unreveng'd. Pr'ythee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. O Hal! I pr'ythee, give me leave to breathe a while.—Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms, as I have done this day. I have paid Percy,
I have made him sure.

P. Hen. He is, indeed; and living to kill thee.
I pr'ythee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou get'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

P. Hen. Give it me: what, is it in the case?

Fal. Ay, Hal; 'tis hot, 'tis hot; there's that will sack a city.

[The Prince draws out a battle of sack.

P. Hen. What! is't a time to jest and daily now?

[Jest to him, and exit.

Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him. If he do come in my way, so; if he do not, if I come in his, willingly, let him make a carbado of me. I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath:
give me life; which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlook'd for, and there's an end. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter King HENRY, PRINCE HENRY, PRINCE JOHN, and WESTMORELAND.

K. Hen. I pr'ythee, Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleed'st too much.
Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

P. John. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

P. Hen. I beseech your majesty, make up,
Lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

K. Hen. I will do so.—My lord of Westmoreland,
Lead him to his tent.

Wett. Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

P. Hen. Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help:
And God forbid, a shallow scratch should drive
The prince of Wales from such a field as this,
Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on,
And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

P. John. We breathe too long: come, cousin
Westmoreland;
Our duty this way lies: for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt PRINCE JOHN and WESTMORELAND.

P. Hen. By heaven, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster!

I did not think thee lord of such a spirit;
Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John;
But now, I do respect thee as my soul.

K. Hen. I saw him hold lord Percy at the point,
With lustier maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrawen warrior.
P. Hen. I did; I saw him dead, breathless, and bleeding.
On the ground.
Art thou alive? or is it fantasy
That plays upon our eyesight? I pr'ythee, speak;
We will not trust our eyes, without our ears:
Thou art not what thou seem'st.
Fal. No, that's certain; I am not a double man:
but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack.
There is Percy: [Throwing the body down.] If your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you.
P. Hen. Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead.
Fal. Didst thou?—Lord, lord, how this world is given to lying!—I grant you I was down, and out of breath; and so was he; but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock.
If I may be believed, so; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, 'tounds, I would make him eat a piece of my sword.
P. John. This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard.
P. Hen. This is the strangest fellow, brother
John.—
Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back:
For my part, if a lie may do thee grace,
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.
                              [A retreat is sounded.
The trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours.
Come, brother, let us to the highest of the field,
To see what friends are living, who are dead.
[Exit Prince Henry and Prince John.
Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do.
[Exit, bearing off the body.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

The trumpets sound. Enter King Henry, Prince Henry, Prince John, Westmoreland, and others, with Worcester and Vernon, prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.—
Ill-spirited Worcester! did we not send grace,
Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenor of thy kinsman's trust?
Three knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl, and many a creature else,
Had been alive this hour,
If, like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne
Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Wor. What I have done, my safety urg'd me to;
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to avoid it falls on me.
K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too:
Other offenders we will pause upon. — [Exeunt Worcester and Vernon, guarded.

How goes the field?
P. Hen. The noble Scot, Lord Douglas, when he saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear,—fled with the rest;
And falling from a hill, he was so bruis'd,
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is; and I beseech your grace,
I may dispose of him.
K. Hen. With all my heart.
P. Hen. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you
This honourable bounty shall belong:
Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless, and free:
His valour, shown upon our crests to-day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosom of our adversaries.
P. John. I thank your grace for this high courtesy,
Which I shall give away immediately.
K. Hen. Then this remains,—that we divide our power.—
You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland, Towards York shall bend you, with your dearest speed,
To meet Northumberland, and the prelate Scoop,
Who, as we hear, are busily in arms:
Myself, and you, son Harry, will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower and the earl of March.
Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day:
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won.
[Exeunt.]
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

SCENE I.

Enter Northumberland.

North. What news, lord Bardolph? every minute Should be the father of some stratagem: The times are wild: contention, like a horse Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose, And bears down all before him.

Bard. Noble earl, I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

North. Good, an God will! As good as heart can wish:—The king is almost wounded to the death; And, in the fortune of my lord your son, Prince Harriet slain outright; and both the Blunts Kill’d by the hand of Douglas; young prince John, And Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the field; And Harry Monmouth’s brawn, the half Sir John, Is prisoner to your son: O, such a day, So fought, so follow’d, and so fairly won, Came not till now to dignify the times, Since Caesar’s fortunes!

North. How is this deriv’d? Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

Bard. I spoke with one, my lord, that came from thence;

A gentleman well bred, and of good name, That freely render’d me these news for true.

North. Here comes my servant, Travers, whom I sent

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

Bard. My lord, I over-rod him on the way; And he is furnish’d with no certainties, More than he haply may retail from me.

Enter Travers.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?

Travers. My lord, Sir John Umfraville turn’d me back

With joyful tidings; and, being better hors’d, Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard A gentleman, almost forspent with speed, That stopp’d by me to breathe his bloodied horse. He ask’d the way to Chester; and of him I did demand, what news from Shrewsbury: He told me that rebellion had bad luck, And that young Harry Percy’s spur was cold. With that, he gave his able horse the head, And, bending forward, struck his arm’d heels Against the panting sides of his poor jade Up to the rowel-head; and, starting so, He seem’d in running to devour the way, Staying no longer question.

North. Ha!—Again: Said he, young Harry Percy’s spur was cold? Of Hotspur, oldspur? that rebellion Had met ill luck?

Bard. My lord, I’ll tell you what; If my young lord your son have not the day, Upon mine honour, for a silken point, I’ll give my barony: never talk of it.

North. Why should the gentleman, that rode by Travers, Give, then, such instances of loss?

Bard. Who, he? He was some hilding fellow, that had stolen The horse he rode on; and, upon my life, Spoke at a venture.—Look, here comes more news.

Enter Morton.

North. Yes, this man’s brow, like to a title-leaf, Foretells the nature of a tragic volume: So looks the stern, wherefore’ th’ imperious flood Hath left a witness’d usurpation. Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Morton. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord; Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask, To fright our party.

North. How doth my son and brother? Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand. Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone, Drew Praim’s curtain in the dead of night, And would have told him, half his Troy was burn’d; But Praim found the fire, ere he his tongue, And I my Percy’s death, ere thou report’st it. This thou wouldst say,—Your son did thus, and thus;

Your brother, thus; so fought the noble Douglas; Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds: But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed, Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, Ending with—brother, son, and all are dead.

Douglas is living, and your brother, yet;

But, for my lord your son,— Why, he is dead. See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath! He that but fears the thing he would not know, Hath, by instinct, knowledge from others’ eyes, That what he fear’d is chang’d. Yet speak, Morton; Tell thou thy ear his divination lies, And I will take it as a sweet disgrace, And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Morton. You are too great to be by me gainsaid: Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy’s dead.— I see a strange confession in thine eye: Thou shak’st thy head, and hold’st it fear, or sin, To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so; The tongue offends not, that reports his death: And he doth sin that doth believe the dead; Not he which says the dead is not alive. Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news Hath but a losing office; and his tongue Sounds ever after as a sullen bell, Remember’d knobbing a departing friend.

Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Morton. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to heaven I had not seen; But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state, Rendering faint quittance, weared and outbreath’d, To Harry Monmouth; whose swift-wraith beat down The never-dantied Percy to the earth, From whence with life he never more sprung up. In few, his death, (whose spirit lent a fire Even to the dullest peasant in his camp,) Being bruised once, took fire and heat away From the best-tumer’d courage in his troops; For from his metal was his party scald’d; Which once in him abated, all the rest Turn’d on themselves, like dull and heavy head: And as the thing’s heavy in itself, Upon enforcement file with greatest speed, So did our men, heavy in Motspur’s loss, Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear, That arrows fly’d not swifter toward their aim, Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety, in hand, and then stand upon security!—The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is thorough with them in honest taking up, then they must stand upon security. I had as lief they would put rathsbane in my mouth, as offer to stop it with security. I looked he should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, as offer to stop it with security. I looked he should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, as offer to stop it with security.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield: as I could get me but a wife in the streets, we were married, hanged, and wived.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice and an Attendant.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Att. Falstaff; is not he your lordship.

Ch. Just. He was that question in the robbery?

Att. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury: and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the lord John of Lancaster.

Att. Sir John Falstaff?

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder; my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of any thing good.—Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Att. Sir John,—

Fal. What! a young knave, and begging! Is there no law? is there not employment? doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side; worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it tell.

Att. You mistake me, Sir.

Fal. Why, Sir, did I say you were an honest man? say I not, my lord, ye have got the height and my soldiers side, I have had in my throat, if I had had so.

Att. I pray you, Sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiers side; and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou gettest any leave of me, hang me; if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt-counter, hence! avant! The hunt-counter, hence! avant! Your lordship is sick: I hope, your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your father, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the sainess of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health.

Page. Sir John Falstaff, is not he your lordship? He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty:—you would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, heaven mend him!—I pray you, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, isn't it your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Ch. Just. What tell you of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief, from study, and perturbation of the brain: I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease; for you bear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels, would amend the attention of your ears: and I care not if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minster the potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a scruple itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. Ic he that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer.

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The youth of Prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and be my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gall a new-healed wound: your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little glided over my ear, and my soldiers exploit on Gad's-hill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'er-posting that action.

Fal. My lord,—

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf, is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord; all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face, but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravity, grave, grave.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel.

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light; but I hope he that looks upon me, will take me without weighing; and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go,—I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these company-making times, that true valor is turned bear-herd: pregnancy is made a tapster, and
SCENE I.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Then must we rate the cost of the creation;
Which if we find outweighs ability,
What do we then, but draw anew the model
In fewer offices, or, at least, distress,
To build at all? Much more, in this great work,
(Which is, almost, to placque a kingdom down,
And set another up,) should we survey
The plot of situation, and the model;
Consent upon a sure foundation;
Question surveyors; know our own estate,
How able such a work to undergo,
To weigh against his opposite: or else,
We fortify in paper, and in figures,
Using the names of men, instead of men:
Like one that draws the model of a house
Beyond his power to build it; who, half through,
Gives o'er, and leaves his part-created cost
A naked subject to the weeping clouds,
And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

-Hast. Grant, that our hopes (yet likely of fair birth)
Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd
The utmost man of expectation;
I think we are a body strong enough,
Even as we are, to equal with the king.

L. Bard. What! is the king but five and twenty thousand?

-Hast. To us, no more; nay, not so much, lord Bardolph.

For his divisions, as the times do bawl,
Are in three heads: one power against the French,
And one against Glendower; perforce, a third
Must take up us: so is the unfirm king
In three divided; and his coffer's sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.

-Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together,
And come against us in full pittance,
Need not be dreaded.

-Hast. If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarmed, the French and Welsh
Buying him at the heels: never fear that.

L. Bard. Who, is it like, should lead his forces hither?

-Hast. The duke of Lancaster, and Westmoreland;
Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Monmouth;
But who is substituted against the French,
I have no certain notice.

-Arch. Let us on,
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited:
A habituation giddy and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond many! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke,
Before he was what thou wouldst have him be!
And being now trimm'd to thine own desires,
Thou, beauty feeling, art so full of him,
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy gullion's bottom of the royal Richard;
And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And bowl't to find it. What trust is in these times?
They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die,
Are now become enamour'd on his grave:
Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head,
When through proud London he came sighing on
After th' admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cry'st now, "O earth, yield us that king again,
And take thou this!" O, thoughts of men assure Past, and to come, seem best; things present, were Most. Shall we go draw our numbers, and see
-Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids gone. [Exeunt

ACT II.

SCENE I.—LONDON. A Street.

Enter Hostess Quickly; Fang, and his Boy, with his and Snare following.

-Hast. Master Fang, have you entered the actio Fang. It is entered.
-Hast. Where's your yeoman? Is it a lusty ye man? will he stand to't?
-Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?
-Hast. O Lord, ay, good master Snare.
-Snare. Here, here.
-Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Falstaff.
-Hast. Yes, good master Snare; I have enter him and all.
-Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives for he will stab.
-Hast. Alas the day! take heed of him; he stabb me in mine own house, and that most beastly.
-Fang. He is a man of good faith, he cares not what mischief he do'th, his weapon be out; he will foin like any devil; will spare neither man, woman, nor child.
-Fang. If I can cloy with him, I care not for all trust.

-Hast. No, nor I neither; I'll be at your elbow.
-Fang. An I but fist him once; an he come b within my vice,—
-Hast. I am undone by his going; I warrant yo he's an insomniac thing upon my score;—good mast Fang, hold him sure;—good master Snare, let hi not'scape. He comes continually to Fle-corns (saving your manhoods,) to buy a saddle; and he indited to dinner to the Lubber's head in Lumbe street, to master Smooth's the silkworm: I pray y since my exion is entered, and my case so open known to the world, let him be brought in to answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a po lone woman to bear: and I have borne, and born and borne; and have been fobbed off, and fobbed off, and fobbed off, from this day to that day, th it is a shame to be thought on. There is no horses in such dealing; unless a woman should be mas an ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong. Yonder he comes; and that arrant malice-no knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, master Fang and master Snare; do me do me, do me your offices.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Paga, and Bardolph.

-Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? what's t matter?
-Sir John. I, Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of mi tress Quickly.

-Fal. Away, varlets!—Draw, Bardolph; cut me the villain's head; throw the quenin in the channel Heat. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw th th' channel. Wilt thou wilt thou? thou be tardy rogue!—Murder, murder! I, thou home suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers, and t fal. My lord!
ch. Just. What's the matter?
fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner?
govt. I must wait upon my good lord here,—I thank you, good Sir John.
ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go.
fal. Will you sup with me, master Gower?
ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?
fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me.—This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair.
ch. Just. Now, the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool.
[Exeunt.]

Scene II.—London. Another Street.

Enter Prince Henry and Poins.
P. Hen. Trust me, I am exceeding weary.
Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought, weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

P. Hen. 'Faith, it does me; though it discounters the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it.
Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?
Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied, as to remember so weak a composition.

P. Hen. Belike then, my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me, to remember thy name? or to know thy face to-morrow? or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast,
eix. these, and those that were thy peach-col-our'd ones? or to bear the inventory of thy shirts;
as, one for superfluity, and one other for use?—but that the tennis-court-keeper knows them better than I;
for it is a low ebb of linen with thee, when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low-countries have lately shifted to eat up thy hollander; and God knows, whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen, shall inherit his kingdom: but the midwives say, the children are not in the fault; whereaspoth would increase, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly? Tell me, how much young princes would do so, if their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?
P. Hen. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?
Poins. Yes, faith; and let it be an excellent good thing.
P. Hen. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.
Poins. Go to; I stand the punch of your one thing that you will tell.
P. Hen. Marry, I tell thee,—it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee, (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend,) I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.
P. Hen. By this hand, thou think'st me as far in the devil's book, as thou and Falstaff, for obduracy and persistency: let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly, that my father is so sick: and keeping such vile company as thou art, hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.

Poins. The reason?
P. Hen. What wouldst thou think of me, if I should weep?
Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.
P. Hen. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow, to think as every man thinks: never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine: every man would think me a hypocrite indeed. And what accolds your most worshipful thought to think so?

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewed, and so much engraft to Falstaff.
P. Hen. And to thee.
Poins. By this light, I am well spoken of; I can hear it with mine own ears: the worst that they can say of me is, that I am a second brother, and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph.
P. Hen. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: he had him from me christian; and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape.

Enter Bardolph and Page.
Bard. God save your grace!
P. Hen. And yours, most noble Bardolph!
Bard. [To the Page.] Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man at arms are you become? Is it such a matter to get a pot-tlepot's maidenhair?

Page. He called me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last, I spied his eyes; and me thought he had made two holes in the ale-wife's new petticoat, and peeped through.
P. Hen. Hath not the boy profited?
Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Page. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away?
P. Hen. Instruct us, boy: what dream, boy?
Page. Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was delivered of a fire-brand; and therefore I call him her dream.
P. Hen. A crown's worth of good interpretation:
—there it is, boy.

[Give him money.]
Poins. O, that this good blossom could be kept from cankers!—Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bard. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.
P. Hen. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?
Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town: there's a letter for you.

Poins. Delivered with good respect.—And how doth the marislemans, your master?
Bard. In bodily health, Sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dies not.
P. Hen. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog: and he holds his place; for look how he does write.

Page. [Reads.] "John Falstaff, knight."—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself: even like those that are kin to the
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

He was so suffer'd; so came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough
To raise upon remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven;
For recreation to my noble husband.

North. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with my mind,
As with the tide swell'd up unto its height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way:
Fain would I go to meet the archbishop,
But many thousand reasons hold me back.
I will resolve for Scotland: there am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company.

SCENE IV.—LONDON. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern, in Eastcheap.

Enter two Drawers.

1 Drawer. What the devil hast thou brought there?

2 Drawer. Mass, thou say'st true. The prince once set a dish of apple-Johns before him, and told them there were five more Sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said, I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights. It angered him to the heart, but he hath forgot that.

1 Drawer. Why then, cover, and set them down:
and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise; mistress Tear-sheet would fain hear some music.

De-spacht—that the room where they supped is too hot; they will come in straight.

2 Drawer. Sirrah, here will be the prince, and master Poius anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons, and Sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

1 Drawer. By the mass, here will be old uits: it will be an excellent stratagem.

2 Drawer. I'll see, if I can find out Sneak. [Exit. Enter Hostess and Doll Tear-sheet.

Host. I faith, sweetheart, methinks now, you are in an excellent good temperance: your pulchritude beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose: but, I faith, you have drunk too much canaries; and you are a most marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, What's this?

How do you now?

Doll. Better than I was:—hem.

Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Look, here comes Sir John.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. [Singing.] 'When the first in court'—Empty the jordan. [Exit 1st Drawer.—Singing.]

"And was a worthy king." How now, mistress Doll.

Host. Sick of a calm: yea, good sooth.

Fal. So is all her sect; as they be once in a calm, they are sick.

Doll. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, mistress Doll.

Doll. I make them! gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll: we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that.

Doll. Ay, marry,—our chains, and our jewels.

Fal. [Singing.] 'Your brooches, pearls, and owches:'—for to serve bravely, is to come halting off, you know: to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely; I must live amongst my neighbours; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely,—

Doll. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion; you two never meet, but you fall to some discord: you are both, in good truth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot bear with another's confirmities. What the good year! one must bear, and that must be you: you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Doll. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hoghead? there's a whole merchant's measure of Bordeaux stuff in him; you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold.—Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again, or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter 1st Drawer.

1 Drawer. Sir, ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Doll. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouth'd rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live amongst my neighbours; I'll no swaggers: I am in good name and fame with the very best:—shut the door;—there comes no swaggers here: I have not lived all this while, to have swaggers now:—shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?—

Host. Pray you, pacify yourself, Sir John: there comes no swaggers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-fally, Sir John, never tell me; your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before master Tiack, the deputy, the other day; and, as he said to me,—it was no longer ago than Wednesday last,—"Neighbour Quickly," says he;—master Dumb, our minister, was by then;—"Neighbour Quickly," says he, "receive those that are civil;"—"for," said he, "you are in an ill name:"—now, he said so, I can tell whereupon;—"for," says he, "you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive; receive," says he, "no swaggering companions."—There comes none here:—you would bless you to hear what he said:—no, I'll no swaggers.

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, his faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he will not swagger with a Barbary hien, if her feathers turn back in all show of resistance.—Call him up, drawer. [Exit 1st Drawer.

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggering; by my troth, I am the worse, when one says—swagger; feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Doll. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an I were an aspen leaf: I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter Pistol, Bardolph, and Pages.

Pist. God save you, Sir John!

Fal. Welcome, ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I
K. Hen. Are these things, then, necessities? Then let us meet them like necessities—
And that same word even now cries out on us:
They say, the bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong.

Shal. It cannot be, my lord; Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
The numbers of the few'd.—Please it your grace,
To go to bed. Upon my soul, my lord,
The powers that you already have sent forth,
Shall bring this prise in very easily.
To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance that Glenelower is dead.
Your Majesty hath been this fortnight ill;
And these unusual'd hours, perforce, must add
Unto your sickness.

K. Hen. I will take your counsel:
And were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Court before Justice Shallow's House in Gloucestershire.

Enter Shallow and Silence, meeting: Moulty, Shadow,
Wart, Furbles, Bull-calf, and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, Sir; give me your hand, Sir, give me your hand, Sir: an early stirrer, by the rood. And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow?
and your fairest daughter, and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas, a black ouzel, cousin Shallow!

Shal. By yea and nay, Sir, I dare say, my cousin William is become a good scholar: he is at Oxford, still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, Sir, to my cost.

Shal. He must, then, to the inns of court shortly:
I was once of Clement's-inn; where, I think, they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were called lusty Shallow then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called say nothing; and I would have done any thing indeed too, and roundly too. There was J, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Bare, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele a Cotswold man; you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the inns of court again:
and, I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon among soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when he was a crack, not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's-inn. O, the mad days that I have spent! and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure:
death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die.—How a good yoke of ballocks at Stamford fair?

Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain.—Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, Sir.

Shal. Dead!—See, see!—he drew a good bow;—
and dead!—he shot a fine shoot:—John of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head.
Dead!—he would have clapped in the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. —How a score of eves now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good eves may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Enter Bardolph, and one with him.

Bard. Good morrow, honest gentlemen. I beseech you, which is justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, Sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace: what is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, Sir, commends him to you;
my captain, Sir John Falstaff,—a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, Sir. I knew him a good backward man. How doth the good knight? may
I ask how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, Sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated!—it is good; yea, indeed, is it; good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated! it comes of accommoda: very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, Sir; I have heard the word.
Phrase, call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated;
or, when a man is,—being,—whereby,—he may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

Shal. It is very just.—Look, here comes good Sir
John.

Enter Falstaff.

Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand: by my troth, you look well, and bear your years very well: welcome, good Sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good master
Robert Shallow:—Master Sure-card, as I think.

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie! this is hot weather. —Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have wo, Sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Who's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll?—Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so. Yea, marry, Sir:—Ralph Mouldy!—let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so.—Let me see; where is Mouldy?

Moul. [Advancing.] Here, an't please you.
mind:—an'lt be my destiny, so; an' be not, so: no man's too good to serve his prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.
Bard. Well said; thou art a good fellow.
Fal. 'Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

Re-enter Falstaff, Shallow, and Silence.

Fal. Come, Sir, which men shall I have?
Shal. Four, of which you please.
Bard. [To Fal.] Sir, a word with you.—[Aside to him.] I have three pound to free Moulby and Bull-calf.
Fal. [Aside to Bard.] Go to; well.
Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?
Fal. Do you choose for me?
Shal. Marry, then,—Moulby, Bull-calf, Feeble, and Shadow.
Fal. Moulby, and Bull-calf;—for you, Moulby, stay at home till you are past service:—and for your part, Bull-calf, grow till you come unto it:—I will none of you.
Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong: they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.
Fal. Will you tell me, master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thews, the stature, bulk, and big assembleance of a man? Give me the spirit, master Shallow.—Here's Wart;—you see what a ragged appearance it is: he shall charge you, and discharge you, with the motion of a pewterer's hammer; come off, and on, swifter than he that giblets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow,—give me this man: he presents no mark to the enemy; the foe-man may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat,—how swiftly will this Feeble, the woman's tailor, run off! O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones.—Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.
Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.
Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So:—very well:—go to:—very good—exceeding good.—O, give me always a little, lean, old, chopped, bald shot.—Well said, i' faith, Wart; thou'rt a good scab: hold, there's a tester for thee.
Shal. He is not his craft's master, he doeth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end green, (when I lay at Clement's-inn,) I was then Sir Dagomet in Arthur's show,—there was a little quiver fellow, and he would manage you his piece thus; and he would about, and about, and you come in, and come you in: "Rah, tah, tah," would he say; "Bounce," would he say; and away again would he go, and again would he come:—I shall never see such a fellow.
Fal. These fellows will do well, master Shallow.
—God keep you, master Silence: I will not use many words with you.—Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you: I must a dozen mile to-night.
—Bardolph, give the soldiers costs.
Shal. Sir John, heaven bless you, and prosper your affairs, and send us peace! As you return, visit my house; let our old acquaintance be renewed; peradventure, I will with you to the court.
Fal. I would you would, master Shallow.
Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. Fare you well.

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen.—[Exeunt Shallow and Silence.] On, Bardolph; lead the men away. [Exeunt Bardolph, Recruits, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of justice Shallow. Lord, lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying! This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feasts he hath done about Tarnhull-street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's-inn, like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when he was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: he was so forlorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisible: he was the very genius of famine, yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whomes called him—mandrake. He came ever in the rear-ward of the fashion; and sung those tunes to the overscratched huswives that he heard the carmen whistle, and swore—they were his fancies, or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire; and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt, as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn he never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard,—and then he burst his head, for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it, and told John of Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him, and all his apparel, into an elkin; the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court:—and now has he land and beesees. Well, I will be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard, but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me: if the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason, in the law of nature, but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Forest in Yorkshire.

Enter the Archbishop of York, Mowbray, Hastings, and others.

Arch. What is this forest call'd?
Hast. 'Tis Gaulet forest, an' shall please your grace.
Arch. Here stand, my lords; and send discoverers forth,
To know the numbers of our enemies.
Hast. We have sent forth already.
Arch. My friends and brethren in these great affairs,
I must acquaint you, that I have receiv'd
New-dated letters from Northumberland;
Their cold intent, tenor, and substance, thus:—
Here doth he wish his person, with such powers
As might hold sortance with his quality,
The which he could not levy; whereupon
He is retir'd, to rise his growing fortunes,
To Scotland; and conjoined in hearty prayers,
That your attempts may overlie the hazard
And fearful meeting of their opposite.
Mowbray. Thou dost the hopes we have in him touch ground,
And dash themselves to pieces.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

You shall enjoy them,—everything set off,
That might so much as think you enemies.

Mowbray. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer;
And it proceeds from policy, not love.

West. Mowbray, you overween, to take it so.
This offer comes from mercy, not from fear:
For, lo! within a ken our army lies;
Upon mine honour, all too confident
To give admittance to a thought of fear.
Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
Our armour all as strong, our cause the best;
Then reason wills, our hearts should be as good:
Say you not, then, our offer is compell'd.

Mowbray. Well, by my will, we shall admit no parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your offence:
A rotten case abides no handling.

Hast. Hath the prince John a full commission,
In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear, and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

West. That is intended in the general's name:
I muse you make so slight a question.

Arch. Then take, my lord of Westmoreland, this schedule,
For this contains our general grievances:
Each several article herein redress'd,
All members of our cause, both here and hence,
That are insinu'd to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form,
And present execution of our wills
To us and to our purposes consign'd;
We come within our awful banks again,
And knot our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,
In sight of both our battles we may meet;
And either end in peace,—which God so frame!—
Or to the place of difference call the swords
Which must decide it.

Arch. My lord, we will do so.

Mowbray. There is a thing within my bosom tells me,
That no conditions of our peace can stand.

Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace
Upon such large terms, and so absolute,
As our conditions shall consist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowbray. Ay, but our valuation shall be such,
That every slight and false-derived cause,
Yes, every idle, nice, and wanton reason,
Shall to the king taste of this action;
That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind,
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
And good from bad find no partition.

Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this,—the king is weary
Of dainty and such picking grievances:
For he hath found, to end one doubt by death,
Revises two greater in the heirs of life;
And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
And keep no stale to his memory,
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance: for full well he knows,
He cannot so精确ly weed this land,
As his misdoubts present occasion:
His foes are so enrothed with his friends,
That, placking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so, and shake a friend.
So that this land, like an offensive wife,
That hath enraged him on to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up,
And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was employer to execution.

Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods
On late offenders, that he now doth lack
The very instruments of chastisement:
So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.

Arch. This is very true:
And therefore be assured, my good lord marshal,
If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowbray. Be it so.
Here is return'd my lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

West. The prince is here at hand: pleaseth your lordship,
To meet his grace just distance 'tween our armies?

Mowbray. Your grace of York, in God's name then,
Set forward. From the other side, Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, Officers, and Attendants.

P. John. You are well encountered here, my cousin Mowbray:
Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop;
And so to you, lord Hastings,—and to all.—
My lord of York, it better show'd with you,
When your flock, assembled by the bell,
Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text,
Than now to see you here an iron man,
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword, and life to death.
That man, that sits within a monarch's heart,
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
Would he abuse the consternation of the king,
Alack, what mischief might he set abroad,
In shadow of such greatness! With you, lord bishop,
It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken,
How deep you were within the books of God?
To us, the speaker in his parliament;
To us, th' imagin'd voice of God himself;
The very opener and intelligence
Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven,
And our dull workings. O, who shall believe,
But you misuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the consternation and grace of heaven,
As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up
Under the counterfeit seal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father;
And, both against the peace of heaven and him,
Have here up-swarm'd them.

Arch. Good my lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace;
But, as I told my lord of Westmoreland, weep for thy death: therefore, rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Col. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought you yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine; and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifference, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my womb, my womb undone me.—Here comes our general.

Enter Prince John of Lancaster, Westmoreland, and others.

I. John. The heat is past; follow no farther now:

Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.—[Exit Westmoreland.

Now, Falstaff, where have you been this while? What thing is ended, then you come: These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life, One time or other break some gallowes' back.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet, but reliefe and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility: I have foundered nine-score and odd posts: and here, travel-tasted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Colevile of the dale, a most furious knight, and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded: that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome,—I came, saw, and overcome.

P. John. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not:—here he is, and here I yield him: and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top of it, Colevile kissing my foot: to the which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I, in the clear sky of fame, o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble: therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.

P. John. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine then.

P. John. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.

P. John. Is thy name Colevile?

Col. It is, my lord.

Col. And a famous true subject took him.

Col. I am, my lord, but as my betters are, That led me hither: had they been ruled by me, You should have won them dearer than you have. See, I know not how they sold themselves, but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis; and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

P. John. Now, have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made, and execution stay'd.

P. John. Send Colevile, with his confederates, To York, to present execution:—

Blunt, lead him hence; and see you guard him sure.

[Exit Colevile guarded.

And now despatch we toward the court, my lords: I hear, the king my father is sore sick: Our news shall go before us to his majesty,— Which, cousin, you shall bear,—to comfort him; And we with sober speed will follow you.

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go through Gloshter and: and, when you come to court, stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

P. John. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition, Shall better speak of you than you deserve. [Exit.

Fal. I would, you had but the wit: 'twere better than your dukedom.—Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh;—but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never any of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches: they are generally fools and cowards:—which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends into the brain; dries me there all the foolish, and dull, and cruddy vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetful, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which deliver'd o'er to the voice, (the tongue,) which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is,—the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice; but the sherris warms it, and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme: it illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners, and inland petty spirits, muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great, and puffed up with this retinue, doth asy deed of counsel, and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learning, a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil, till sack accomplish's it, and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it, that prince Harry is valiant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like keen, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and filled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good, and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be,—to forswear thin potations, and to addict themselves to sack. [Exit Bardolph.]

How now, Bardolph!

Bard. The army is discharged all, and gone.

Fal. Let them go, I'll through Gloshter-shire; and there will I visit the gentleman Robert Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away.

[Exit.

SCENE IV.——WESTMINSTER. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Harry, Clarence, Prince Humphrey, Warwick, and others.

K. Hen. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end
To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Scene IV.]

Cla. No, no, he cannot long hold out these pangs:
Th' incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the mure, that should confine it in,
So thin, that life looks through, and will break out.

P. Humph. The people fear me! for they do ob-

Unfather'd heirs, and loathly births of nature:
The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep, and leap'd them

Cla. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between;
And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
Say, it did so, a little time before
That what goes brandish, Edward, sick'd and died.

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.

P. Humph. This apoplexy will, certain, be his end.

K. Hen. I pray you, take me up, and bear me hence
Into some other chamber: softly, pray.

[They place the King on a bed in an inner part of the room.

Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.
War. Call for the music in the other room.

K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.

Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter Prince Henry.

P. Hen. Who saw the duke of Clarence?

Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

P. Hen. How now! men in head of doors, and none abroad!

How doth the king?

P. Humph. Exceeding ill.

Tell it him.

P. Hen. Heard be the good news yet?

Without physic.

War. Not so much noise, my lords:—sweet prince, speak low;
The kingdom's father is dispos'd to sleep.

Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Will 't please your grace to go along with us?

P. Hen. No; I will sit and watch here by the king.

[Exeunt all except PRINCE HENRY.

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?
O poli'sh'd perturbation! golden care!
That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide
To many a watchful night.—Sleep with it now!
Yet not so sound, and half so deeply sweet,
As he, whose brow with homely bigga bound,
Snore's out the watch of night. O majesty!
When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath
There lies a downy feather, which stirs not:
Did he aspire, that light and weightless down
Perforce must move.—My gracious lord! my fa-

This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep,
That from this golden rigour hath divorc'd
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sobs of the blood,

Which nature, love, and filial tenderness,
Shall, O dear father, pay thee plenteously:
My due from thee is this imperial crown.
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me. Lo, here it sits,—

[Putting it on his head,

Which heaven shall guard; and put the world's whole strength
Into one giant arm, it shall not force
This lineal honour from me: this from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me.

K. Hen. Warwick! Gloster! Clarence!

Warwick and the rest.

Cla. Doth the king call?
War. What would your majesty? How fares your grace?
K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?

Cla. We left the prince, my brother, here, my liege,
Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

K. Hen. The prince of Wales! Where is he? let me see him:
He is not here.
War. This door is open; he is gone this way.

P. Humph. He came not through the chamber we were stay'd.

K. Hen. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?
War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

K. Hen. The prince hath ta'en it hence:—go, seek him out.
Is he so hasty, that he doth suppose
My sleep my death?—
Find him, my lord of Warwick; chide him hither.

[Exit Warwick.

This part of his conjoints with my disease,
And helps to end me.—See, sons, what things you are!
How quickly nature falls into revolt,
When gold becomes her object!
For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleep's with thought, their brains
With care,
Their bones with industry;
For this they have engross'd and pil'd up
The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arts, and martial exercises:
When, like the bee, tolling from every flower
The virtuous sweets,
Our thighs pack'd with wax, our mouths with honey,
We bring it to the hive; and, like the bees,
Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste
Yield his engrossments to the ending father.—

Warwick.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?
War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room
Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks;
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow,
That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.
SCENE I.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne out,
May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so,
That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
How I came by the crown, O God, forgive!
And grant it may with thee in true peace live!
P. Hen. My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
Then plain and right must my possession be:
Which I, with more than with a common pain,
'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter Prince JOHN OF LANCASTER, WARWICK, Lords, and others.

P. John. Health, peace, and happiness, to my royal father!
K. P. Hen. The spring'st me happiness and peace, my son John;
But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
From this bare wither'd trunk: upon thy sight,
My worldly business makes a period.
Where is my lord of Warwick?
P. Hen. My lord of Warwick!
K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?
War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.
K. Hen. Laud be to God!—even there my life must end.
It hath been prophesied to me many years,
I should not die but in Jerusalem;
Which vainly I suppose'd the Holy Land;
But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie;
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die.  [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—GLOSTERSHIRE. A Hall in Shallow's House.

Enter SHALLOW, FAULSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and PAGE.

Shal. By cock and pie, Sir, you shall not away in the night.—What, Davy, I say!
Ful. You must excuse me, master Robert Shallow.
Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused.—Why, Davy!
[Exit Davy.

Enter Davy.

Davy. Here, Sir.
Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy,—let me see,
Davy; let me see, Davy,—let me see:—yes, marry,
William cook, bid him come hither.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.
Davy. Sir, thus; those precepts cannot be served:
and, again, Sir,—shall we sow the headland with wheat?
Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook,—are there no young pigeons?
Davy. Yes, Sir.—Here is, now, the smith's note for shoeing, and plough iron.
Shal. Let it be cast, and paid.—Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, Sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had:—and, Sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?
Shal. He shall answer it.—Some pigeons, Davy; a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.
Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, Sir?
Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well: a friend the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.
Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, Sir;
for they have marvellous foul linen.
Shal. Well conceived, Davy. About thy business, Davy.
Davy. I beseech you, Sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincoat against Clement Perkes of the hill.
Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.
Davy. I grant your worship, that he is a knave, Sir; but yet, God forbid, Sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, Sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, Sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, Sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced.
Shal. Go to; I say, he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you, Sir
John? Come, come, come, off with your boots.—
Give me your hand, Master Bardolph.
Bard. I am glad to see your worship.
Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind master Bardolph:—[To the Page.] and welcome, my tall fellow. Come, Sir John.
Ful. I'll follow you, good master Robert Shallow.
[Exit SHALLOW.] Bardolph, look to our horses.
[Exeunt BARDOLPH and PAGE.] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermit's staves as master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing, to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his: they, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like serving-man: their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society, that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese.
If I had a suit to master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master: if to his men, I would curry with master Shallow, that no man could better command his servants. It is certain, that either wise bearing, or ignorant carriage, is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore, let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow, to keep prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions, (which is four terms, or two actions,) and he shall laugh without intervalless. O, it is much, that a lie with a slight oath, and a jest with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders! O, you shall see him laugh, till his face be like a wet cloak
'till laid up!
And not less happy, having such a son,
That would deliver up his greatness so
Into the hands of justice. — You did commit me:
For which, I do commit into your hand
Th' unstaund sword that you have us'd to bear;
With this remembrance,—that you use the same
With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit,
As you have done against me. There is my hand.
You shall be as a father to my youth:
My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear;
And I will stoop and humble my intents
To your well-practis'd wise directions.—
And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you;
My father is gone wild into his grave,
For in his tomb lie my afflictions;
And with his spirit sadly I survive,
To mock the expectation of the world,
To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
After my seeming. The tide of blood in me
Hath hardly flow'd in vanity till now:
Now doth it turn, and ebb back to the sea,
Where it shall mingle with the state of floods,
And flow henceforth in formal majesty.
Now call we our high court of parliament:
And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
That the great body of our state may go
In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;
That war, or peace, or both at once, may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us:—
[To the Lord Chief Justice.
In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.
Our coronation done, we will accite,
As I before remember'd, all our state:
And (God consigning to my good intents,) no prince, nor peer, shall have just cause to say,
God shorten Harry's happy life one day. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—GLOSTERSHIRE. The Garden of SHALLOW'S House.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Silence, Bardolph, the Page, and Davy.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard; where, in an arrow, we will eat a last year's pipin of my own grafting, with a dish of carraways, and so-forth:—
come, cousin Silence:—and then to bed.

Davy. [To Bardolph, and pointing to a sidetable.] Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon; most sweet Sir, sit.—Master page, good master page, sit.
Profance! What you want in meat, we'll have in drink: but you must bear; —the heart's all. [Exit.
Shal. Be merry, master Bardolph; —and my little soldier there, like mine. [Sings:

Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;
For women are shrews, both short and tall:
To Dave in hall when beards wag all,
And welcome shrew-shoe-side.
Be merry, be merry, &c.

Fal. I did not think master Silence had been a man of this mettle.
Sid. Who, I? I have been merry twice and once, ere now.

Re-enter Davy.

Davy. There is a dish of leather-coats for you.

[Setting them before BARDOLPH.

Shal. Davy,—

Davy. Your worship?—[To BARDOLPH.] I'll be with you straight.—[To SHALLOW.] A cup of wine, Sir?

[Setting:

A cup of wine, that's brisk and fine,
And drink unto the lemon mine;
And a merry heart lives long.-

Fal. Well said, master Silence.

Sid. And we shall be merry:—now comes in the sweet of the sport.

Fal. Health and long life to you, master Silence.

[Setting:

Fill the cup, and let it come;
I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: if thou wast anything, and wilt not call, beshew thy heart. —
Welcome, my little tiny thier; and welcome, indeed, too.—I'll drink to master Bardolph, and to all the cavaliers about London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,— Shal. By the mass, you 'll crack a quart together, —ha! will you not, master Bardolph?

Bard. Yes, Sir, in a pottle-pot.

Shal. I thank thee:—the knave will stick by thee,
I can assure thee that: he will not out; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, Sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing:
be merry. [Knocking heard.] Look who's at door

Fal. [To Silence, who drinks a bumper.] Why, now you have done me right.

[Setting:

Do me right,
And dub me knight!
Sainago.

Is't not so?

[Setting:

Is't so? Why, then, say an old man can do somewhat.

Re-enter Davy.

Davy. An't please your worship, there's one Pist come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court? let him come in.—[Enter Pistol.] How now, Pistol!
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 413

Shal. It is most certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else, putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis ever idem, for abhice hoc nihil est; 'tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver, and make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in base durance, and contagious prison; Haul'd thither by most mechanical and dirty hand:— Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell Alecto's snake, For Doll is in: Pistol speaks naught but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her.

Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds.

Enter King and his train, the Chief Justice among them.

Fal. God save thy grace, king Hal! my royal Hal! The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy!

King. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what this you speak?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart!

King. I know thee not, old man: fall to thy prayers.

How ill white hairs become a fool, and jester! I have long dream'd of such a kind of man, So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane; But, being awake, I do despise my dream. Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace; Leave gormandising; know, the grave doth gape For thee thrice wider than for other men.— Reply not to me with a fool-born jest: Presume not that I am the thing I was; For God doth know, so shall the world perceive, That I have turn'd away my former self; So will I those that kept me company. When thou dost hear I am as I have been, Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast, The tutor and the feeder of my riots: Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death, — As I have done the rest of my misleaders,— Not to come near our person by ten mile.

For competence of life I will allow you, That lack of means enforce you not to evil; And, as we hear you do reform yourselves, We will, according to your strength and qualities, Give you advancement.—[To Ch. Just.] Be it your charge, my lord, To see perform'd the tenor of our word.—

Set on.

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Ay, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this; I shall be sent for in private to him: look you, he must seem thus to the world: fear not your advancement; I will be the man yet that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot perceive how, unless you should give me your doublet, and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour, I fear, that you will die in, Sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours: go with me to dinner:— come, lieutenant Pistol;—come, Bardolph:—I shall be sent for soon at night.

Re-enter Prince John, the Chief Justice, Officers, &c.

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet: Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord,—

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak: I will hear you soon.—

Take them away.

P. John. I like this fair proceeding of the king's: He hath intent his wonted followers Shall all be very well provided for; But all are banish'd, till their conversations Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

P. John. The king hath call'd his parliament, my lord.

Ch. Just. He hath.

P. John. I will lay odds, that, ere this year expire, We bear our civil swords and native fire As far as France: I hear a bird so sing, Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king.

Come, will you hence? [Exeunt.

EPILoggue.—Spoken by a Dancer.

First, my fear; then, my court'ry; last, my speech. My fear is, your displeasure; my court'ry, my duty; and my speech, to beg your pardons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me: for what I have to say, is of mine own making; and what indeed I should say, will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture,—Be it known to you, (as it is very well,) I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it, and to promise you a better. I did mean, indeed, to pay you with this; which, if, like an ill venture, it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here, I promised you, I would be, and here I commit my body

SCENE.—In ENGLAND AND IN FRANCE.

Enter CHORUS.

CHORUS. O for a muse of fire, that would ascend The brightest heaven of invention! A kingdom for a stage, princes to act, And monarchs to behold the swelling scene! Then should the warlike Harry, like himself, Assume the port of Mars; and at his heels, Leav'd in like hounds, should famines, sword, and fire, Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentle all, The flat unrais'd spirit that hath daud'd, On this unworthy scaffold, to bring forth So great an object: can this cockpit hold The vasty fields of France? or may we cram Within this wooden O the very casques That did affright the air at Agincourt? O, pardon! since a crooked figure may Attest in little place a million; And let us, ciphers to this great account, On your imaginary forces work. Suppose, within the girdle of these walls Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies, Whose high unpearted and alighting fronts The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder: Peace out our imperfections with your thoughts; Into a thousand parts divide one man, And make imaginary prudence: Think, when we talk of horses, that you see them Printing their proud hoofs i' the receiving earth;— For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our kings, Carry them here and there; jumping o'er times, Turning th' accomplishment of many years Into an hour-glass: for the which supply, Admit mechorus to this history; Who, prologue-like, your humble patience pray, Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play.

SCENE I.—LONDON. AN ANTE-CAMBER IN THE KING'S PALACE.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the BISHOP of ELY.

CANT. My lord, I'll tell you,—that self bill is ung'd,
Which in the eleventh year of the last king's reign Was like, and Lind indeed against us pass'd,
But that the scrambling and unquiet time Did push it out of further question.
ELY. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?
CANT. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
We lose the better half of our possession:
For all the temporal lands, which men devote
By testament have given to the church,
Would they strip from us; being valued thus,—
As much as would maintain, to the king's honour,
Full fifteen earls, and fifteen hundred knights,
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;
And, to relief of Lazarus, and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil,
A hundred alms-houses, right well supplied;
And to the coffer of the king beside,
A thousand pounds by the year; thus runs the bill.
ELY. This would drink deep.
CANT. 'Twould drink the cup and all.
ELY. But what prevention?
CANT. The king is full of grace, and fair regard.
ELY. And a true lover of the holy church.
CANT. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.
The breath no sooner left his father's body,
But that his wildness, mortified in him,
Seem'd to die too; yes, at that very moment,
Scene II.]

KING HENRY V. 417

There left behind and settled certain French;
Who, holding in disdain the German women
For some dishonest manners of their life,
Establish'd then this law,—to wit, no female
Should be inheritrix in Salique land;
Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen.
Then doth it well appear, the Salique law
Was not devised for the realm of France:
Nor did the French possess the Salique land
Until four hundred one and twenty years
After defen'ment of king Pharamond,
Idly suppos'd the founder of this law;
Who died within the year of our redemption
Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the great Subdued the Saxons, and did seat the French
Beyond the river Sala, in the year
Eight hundred fifty. Besides, their writers say,
King Pepin, which depos'd Childerick,
Did, as heer general, being descended
Of Blithild, which was daughter to king Clothair,
Make claim and title to the crown of France.
Hugh Capet also,—who usurp'd the crown
Of Charles the duke of Lorain, sole heir male
Of the true line and stock of Charles the great,—
To fine his title with some show of truth,
(Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,
Convey'd himself as heir to the lady Lingare,
Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son
Of Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son
Of Charles the great. Also king Lewis the tenth,
Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied
That fair queen Isabel, his grandmother,
Was lineal of the lady Ermengare,
Daughter to Charles the fore-said duke of Lorain;
By which the marriage, the line of Charles the great
Was re-united to the crown of France.
So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female:
So do the kings of France unto this day;
Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law,
To bar your highness claiming from the female;
And rather choose to hide them in a net,
Than amply to imbar their crooked titles
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors.

K. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Canz. The sin upon my head, dreed sovereign!—
For in the Book of Numbers is it writ,—
When the sun dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord,
Stand for your own; unWind your bloody flag;
Look back into your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dreed lord, to your great grand sire's tomb,
From whom you claim; invoke his warlike spirit,
And your great uncle's, Edward the black prince,
Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France,
While his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling, to behold his lion's whelp
Forag'd in blood of French nobility.
O noble English, that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France,
And let another half stand fast at home,
All out of work, and cold for action!

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant deeds,
And with your puissant arm renew their seats;
You are their heir; you sit upon their throne;
The blood and courage, that renowned them,
Runs in your veins; and my thre-puissant liege
Is in the very May-morn of his youth,
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.

Exe. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth
Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood.

West. They know your grace hath cause and means and might:
So hath your highness; never king of England
Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects,
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England,
And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Canz. O, let their bodies follow, my dear liege,
With blood, and sword, and fire, to win your right;
In aid wherefore, we of the spirituality
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum,
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.

K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade the
But lay down our proportions to defend [French,
Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages.

Canz. They of those marches, gracious sovereign, Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our island from the pilfering borderer.

K. Hen. We do not mean the coursing snatchers
But fear the main intention of the Scot,
[only,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us;
For you shall read, that my great grandfather
Never went with his forces into France,
But that the Scot on his unfurnished kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulness of his force;
Girling with grievous siege castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shook and trembled at th' ill neighbourhood.

Canz. She hath been then more fear'd than herself, my liege.
For hear her but exampled by herself—
When all her chivalry hath been in France,
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended,
But taken, and impounded as a stray,
The king of Scots; whom she did send to France,
To fill king Edward's name with prisoner kings,
And make your chronicle as rich with praise,
As is the oze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wreck and sunless treasures.

West. But there's a saying, very old and true,—
"If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin!"

For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot,
Comes sneaking, and so sacks her princely eggs;
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat,
To spoil and havock more than she can eat.

Exe. It follows, then, the cat must stay at home;
Yet that is but a crush'd necessity,
Since we have locks to safeguard necessaries,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad,
Th' advised head defends itself at home;
For government, though high, and low, and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one concert,
Congreasing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which it is fix'd, as an aim or butt,
Obedience: for so work the honey bees;
Creatures that, by a rule in nature, teech
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king, and officers of sorts:
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home;
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad;
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
To the tent-royal of their emperor:
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold;
The civil citizens kneading up the honey;
The poor mechanic porters crowling in
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate;
The sad-ey'd justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy taverner. I this infer,—
That many things, having full reference
To one concert, may work contrariwise:
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Fly to one mark; as many ways meet in one town;
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;
As many lines close in the dial's centre;
So may a thousand actions, once afool
End in one purpose, and be all well borne Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege,
Divide your happy England into four;
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you withhold shall make all Gallia shake.
If we, with thrice such powers left at home,
Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried, and our nation lose
The name of hardiness and policy.

K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin.

Enter an Attendant.

Now are we well resolv'd; and, by God's help,
And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe,
Or break it all to pieces: or there we'll sit,
Bailing in large and ample empery,
O'er France, and all her almost kingly dukedoms,
Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
Tombless, with no remembrance over them:
Either our history shall with full mouth
Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth,
Not worship'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Embassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair cousin Dauphin; for we hear
Your greeting is from him, not from the king.

Emb. May't please your majesty to give us leave
Freely to render what we have in charge;
Or shall we sparingly show you far off
The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy?

K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian king;
Unto whose grace our passion is as subject,
As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons:
Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plainness
Tell us the Dauphin's mind.

Emb. Thus, then, in few:
Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right
Of your great predecessor, king Edward the third.
In answer of which claim, the prince our master
Says, that you savour too much of your youth;
And bids you be advis'd, 'there's naught in France
That can be with a nimble galliard won;—
You cannot revel into dukedoms there,
He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit,
This tun of treasure; and, in lieu of this,
Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim
Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks.

K. Hen. What treasure, uncle?

Exc. Tennis-balls, my liege.

K. Hen. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant
with us;
His present, and your pains, we thank you for:
When we have match'd our rackets to these balls,
We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set,
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.
Tell him, he hath made a match with such a wrangler,
That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With chases. And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them.
We never valued this poor seat of England;
And therefore, living hence, did give ourself
To barbarous licence; as 'tis ever common,
That men are merriest when they are from home.
But tell the Dauphin, I will keep my state;
Be like a king, and show my salt of greatness,
When I do rouse me in my throne of France:
For that I have laid by my majesty,
And plodded like a man for working days;
But I will rise there with so full a glory,
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,
Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us.
And tell the pleasant prince, this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones; and his soul
Shall stand sore charg'd for the wasteful vengeance
That shall fly with them: for many a thousand widows
Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands,
Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles down;
And some are yet ungotten, and unborn,
That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's scorn.
But this lies all with the will of God.
To whom I do appeal; and in whose name,
Tell you the Dauphin, I am coming on,
To venge me as I may, and to put forth
My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause.
So, get you hence in peace; and tell the Dauphin,
His jest will savour but of shallow wit,
When thousands weep, more than did laugh at it.—
Convey them with safe conduct. Fare you well.

Exc. This was a merry message.

K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it.
Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour
That may give fartherance to our expedition;
For we have now no thought in us but France,
Save those to God, that run before our business.
Therefore, let our proportions for these wars
Be soon collected, and all things thought upon,
That may with reasonable swiftness add
More feathers to our wings; for, God before,
We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door.
Therefore, let every man now task his thought,
That this fair action may on foot be brought.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

Enter Carius.

Char. Now all the youth of England are on fire,
And silken durance in the wardrobe lies:
Now thrive the armourers, and honour's thought
Reigns solely in the breast of every man.
They sell the pasture now to buy the horse;
Following the mirror of all Christian kings,
With winged hooves, as English Mercures:
For now sits Expectation in the air;
And hides a sword, from hilts unto the point.
With crowns imperial, crowns, and coronets,
Procur'd to harry, and his followers.
The French, adviz'd by good intelligence
Of this most dreadful preparation,
Shake in their fear; and with pale policy
Seek to divert the English purposes.
O England!—model to thy inward greatness,
Like little body with a mightly heart,—
What might'st thou do, that honour would the: do,
Were all thy children kind and natural!
But see thy fault!—France hath in thee found out
A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills
With treacherous crowns; and three corrupted men,—
One, Richard earl of Cambridge; and the second,
Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland,—
Have, for the gift of France, (O guilt, indeed!) Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France;
And by their hands this grace of kings must die,
(If hell and treason hold their promises,) Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton.
Linger your patience on; and well digest
Th' abuse of distance, while we force a play.
The sum is paid; the traitors are agreed,
The king is set from London; and the scene
Is now transported, gentle, to Southampton,—
There is the playhouse now, there must you sit:
And thence to France shall we convey you safe,
And bring you back, charming the narrow seas
To give you gentle pass; for, if we may,
We'll not offend one stomach with our play.
But till the king come forth, and not till then,
Unto Southampton do we shift our scene. [Exit.

SCENE I.—LONDON. Eastcheap.

Enter Nym and Bardolph, meeting.

Bard. Well met, corporal Nym.
Nym. Good morrow, lieutenant Bardolph.
Bard. What, are ancient Pistol and you friends yet?
Nym. For my part, I care not; I say little; but when time shall come, there shall be smiles—but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight; but I will wink, and hold out mine iron: it is a simple one; but what though? it will toast cheese, and it will endure cold as another man's sword will; and there's an end.

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends; and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France: let it be so, good corporal Nym.

Nym. 'Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain 41; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly: and, certainly, she did you wrong; for you were troth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell:—things must be as they may: men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time; and, some say, knives have edges. It must be as it may; though patience be a tried mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Bard. Here comes ancient Pistol, and his wife:—

Enter Pistol and Hostess.

How now, mine host Pistol! My lord, call'st thou me host?
Now, by this hand, I swear, I scorn the term;
Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Host. No, by my troth, not long; for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen, that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy-house straight. [Nym draws his sword.] O well-a-day, lady, if he be not drawn! Now we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed.

Bard. Good lieutenant,—good corporal,—offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish!

Pist. Pish for thee, Icelad dog! thou prick-eared cur of Iceland.

Host. Good corporal Nym, show thy valour, and put up your sword.

Nym. Will you shag off? I would have you solus.

Pist. Solus, egregious dog! O viper vile! The solus in thy most marvellous face; The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat, And in thy hateful lungs, yes, in thy maw, perdy, And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth! I do retort the solus in thy bowels; For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up, And flashing fire will follow. Nym. I am not Boriasaun: you cannot conjure me. I have a humour to knock you indifferently well. If you grow fowle with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my scourer, as I may, in fair terms: if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may; and that's the humour of it.

Pist. O braggart vile, and damned furious wight! The grave doth give, and doting depth is near; Therefore exhale. [Pistol and Nym draw.

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say:—he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Draws.

Pist. An oath of mickle might; and fury shall abate.—

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give: Thy spirits are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms; that is the humour of it.

Pist. Coupe le gorge.

That is the word:—I thee defy again. O bound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get? No; to the spital go; And from the powdering tub of infamy Fetch forth the lazaret kite of Creasid's kind,
Doll. Tear-sheet she by name, and her espouse:
I have, and I will hold, the _guenandam_ quickly
For the only she; and—pauca, there's enough.
Go to.

_Exit the Boy._

Bard. Away, you rogue!

Host. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days: the king has killed his heart.—Good husband, come home presently.

_Exit Hostess and Boy._

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together: why, the devil, should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pist. Let floods o'erwell, and fields for food howl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shilling I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have: that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound: push home.

[They draw.]

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him; by this sword, I will.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends: an thou wilt not, why, then, be enemies with me too. Pr'ythee, put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings, I won of you at betting?

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay;
And liquor likewise will I give to thee,
And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood:
I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me:—
Is not this just?—for I shall sutler be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue.
Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble!

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Nym. Well then, what's the humour of it.

_Re-enter Hostess._

Host. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shaken of a burning quotidian tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The king hath run bad humours on the knight, that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoken the right;
His heart is fracted, and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good king: but it must be as it may; he passes some humours, and careers.

Pist. Let us condole the knight; for, lambkins we will live.

_Exit._

SCENE II. SOUTHWAMP. A Council-chamber.

_Enter Exeter, Bedford, and Westmoreland._

Bed. 'Tis God, his grace is bold to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

Wet. How smooth and even they do bear themselves!

As if allegiance in their bosoms sat,
Crowned with faith, and constant loyalty.

Bod. The king hath note of all that they intend,
By interception which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow,
Whom he hath dauld and clow'd with gracious favours,—

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell
His sovereign's life to death and treachery!

_Transports sound. Enter King Henry, Scroop, Cambridge, Grey, Lords, and Attendants._

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard.

My lord of Cambridge,—and my kind lord of Masham,—
And you, my gentle knight,—give me your thoughts: Think you not, that the powers we bear with us Will cut their passage through the force of France, Doing the execution, and the act,
For which we have in head assembled them?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.

K. Hen. I doubt not that; since we are well persuaded,
We carry not a heart with us from hence, That grows not in a fair consent with ours;
Nor leave not one behind, that doth not wish Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd, and lov'd,
Than is your majesty: there's not, I think, a subject,
That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness
Under the sweet shade of your government.

Grey. True: those that were your father's enemies,
Have steep'd their gall's in honey, and do serve you
With hearts create of duty and of zeal.

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness;
And shall forget the office of our hand,
Sooner than quittance of desert and merit,
According to the weight and worthiness.

Scroop. So service shall with steel'd sinews toil,
And labour shall refresh itself with hope,
To do your grace incessant services.

K. Hen. We judge no less. —Uncle of Exeter,
Enlarge the man committed yesterday,
That rait against our person: we consider
It was excess of wine that set him on;
And, on his more advice, we pardon him.

Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security:
Let him be punish'd, sovereign; lest example
Breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind.

K. Hen. O, let us yet be merciful.

Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish too.

Grey. Sir, you show great mercy, if you give him life,
After the taste of much correction.

K. Hen. Alas, your too much love and care of me
Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch!
If little faults, proceeding on distemper,
Shall not be we'd at, how shall we stretch our eye
When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd, and digested,
Appear before us?—We'll yet enlargè that man,
Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear care,
And tender preservation of our person,
Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes:
Who are the late commissioners?
